KNOW YOUR CHILD

Intimate Acquaintance Will Help in its Training Says, Rev. Mr. Mathiews.

OBSERVATION IS NECESSARY.

If Proper Developement is to Be Accomplished—Address to Parent-Teacher Association at Franklin School.

Study of the child which leads to the intimacy which ought to prevail between it and the parent is the secret of proper training according to Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, who spoke to the members of the Franklin-Stillman-Whittier Parent-Teacher Association in Franklin School last evening. The proposition is that the more intimately the parent knows the child the better the physical, moral and spiritual growth of our boys and girls.

Mr. Mathiews declared that he had not come to make an address to the mothers and teachers present, but to bring a message whose import is vital to every parent as well as to every teacher of the young mind. "From acute observation," said the speaker, "a man learned that in the old way a bricklayer used twenty-three distinct motions in laying a brick. This man reduced the laying of brick to an exact science so that now it requires but five motions and instead of laying 1,000 brick a day a man can lay 2,700. Now this is the result of observation and thought. The plan of bringing up children is older than the art of laying brick, but observation and study has now reduced that to a science.

"Growth and development, beginning with the baby, through childhood to youth there are three distinct phases of life to be observed and guarded with careful study of the special needs of each child in order that the best may be developed and the worst eliminated. Nature first grows and then develops. The child between the ages of 8 and 12 is the finest specimen of an animal. At this period, just preceding adolescence, there is a wild desire to do things and to be something the child does not know what, but it is something that leads him to be exuberant, precocious and what we term 'smart.' This is merely the sign of brain development which must be carefully handled.

"The whole system of the kindergarten is based on a wrong hypothesis. The young brain should not be overtaxed and the hands which are the most delicate of of the useful members, should not be asked to do impossibilities at the tender age of five. School should not begin until the age of eight years. In this day we put too much emphasis on the man who can do things; but it is what he does not what he is that we look at and the system is all wrong. There is no problem of the boy and girl in the home. It is a problem of the parents."

Mr. Mathiews related anecdotes pointedly showing why the present system of teaching the child mind is not what it should be. He said the teachers of the public schools were doing a heroic work, but that the parent does not know as much about the child as does his teacher which makes the home training a more difficult problem than that of the school.

"Our tasks," said the speaker, "will be made easier when we know our children. Let us live with them; let us make them our companions, and from the influence they absorb from us they will bring to us joy in our lives and clean hands to the Master."

At a brief business meeting which preceded Mr. Mathiews' talk Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees presided. Reports of the officers were read and a short discussion of the Congress of Mothers, which will meet in this city next November, was had. Those who spoke on the subject were Mrs. Voorhees, Principal Miss Day, Mrs. Wm. Sanford, Jr. president of the Mothers' Association, and Mrs. G. Stuart Simmons. Mrs. Sanford urged the cooperation of the Parent-Teachers' Association with the Mothers' Association in the reception of delegates to the Congress, saying that while the speakers would all be provided free of charge, it will be necessary to provide entertainment for visiting delegates possibly to the number of 100.

Mrs. Voorhees will appoint a committee from the Parent-Teachers' Association to take the matter up and she will also appoint one member to act with Mrs. Simmons, who is chairman of the sub-committee of the mother's association on exceptional children. The meeting was attended by fifty people.

D.A.R'S LUNCHEON

MRS. WILLIAM STORY PRESENT.

Responses to Toasts by Women Prominent in Various New Jersey Chapters Follows the Luncheon.

The annual luncheon of Camp Middlebrook Chapter, Daughters American Revolution, of which there are a number of Plainfield members, was held at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon at Truell Inn on Park avenue. Covers were laid for fifty, which included members and several guests of the Camp. The dining hall was elaborately decorated with American flags, and with blue and yellow bunting, the colors of the chapter. The tables were also attractively decorated with yellow ribbon, jonquils, narcissus and mignonettes.

At the head table there were past and present regents of Camp Middlebrook; also Mrs. William Vail, regent of Jersey Blue Chapter, New Brunswick; Mrs. E. G. Read, regent of Continental Chapter, of this city, while the guest of honor was Mrs. William Cuming Story, of New York, who is past regent of the New York State Chapter, and who was a prominent candidate last year for grand regent of the order. She came here as the guest of Mrs. William J. Taylor, of Orange, who is a member of Camp Middlebrook.

Following the excellent luncheon, there were a number of interesting toasts. Mrs. William E. Rogers, of Bound Brook, was the toastmistress, and she gave all the women a hearty welcome, briefly reveiewing important events of the past year. Patriotic vocal selections were then given by Miss Helen Olendorf, of Bound Brook.

"Women of Yesterday and Today," was the toast to which Mrs. William J. Taylor responded and it was a most excellent address, in which she described vividly the women of yesterday with their characteristics and loyalty to the country, and then contrasting them with the women of today, who are rapidly learning to become more and more patriotic.

Mrs. A. L. Stillwell, of Somerville, responded to the toast: "Captain Molly at Monmouth," in which she told of the stirring incidents of that occasion. "Institution of Washington's Birthday as a Holiday," was the subject of an interesting paper by Miss Lillian Vail, of this city. The program was concluded with the singing of "America."

The committee having charge of the luncheon, which proved so delightful, comprised Mrs. William E. MacClymont, chairman; Mrs. George A. Lacas, Mrs. Frank H. Smith and Miss Lillian Vail, all of this city.

TONY SWEDO MADE CALL AT MIDNIGHT

If Tony Swedo wants to visit his sweetheart in the New Madison flats he must select a more conventional hour than he did last night or rather this morning. Swedo, according to Sam Rosenberg, came to the New Madison at 12:30 o'clock this morning and in trying to find the apartments of his girl rang all the bells in the hallway and roused the tenants, some of them angry at being disturbed from their sweet slumbers.

Swedo, who cannot speak English very fluently, said he had an engagement with the young woman (he did not mention her name) and that he did not think it was too late to call upon her. Sammy intimated that Swedo was too drunk to know what time it really was.

Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on Swedo's promise to behave and keep away from the place where his inamorata lives.

HONEYMOON SCRAP

SOUTH PLAINFIELD EXCITED.

Husband Went to Father-in-law's Home for Wife and Latter Throws Pitcher at His Head.

A bride of only four months, Mrs. August Liebel declared in court before Justice Smith at South Plainfield yesterday that her husband had threatened to shoot her and that within a few hours after the wedding ceremony and on the train which was bearing them to the place where the honeymoon was to have been spent. The quarrel thus started resulted in the arraignment of William Winges, the bride's father on a charge of assault and battery. Mr. Winges was represented by Judge VonMinden, while the groom's own interests were cared for by Robert Newton Crane.

The story as revealed in court yesterday read like this: About four months ago Miss Winges became Mrs. Liebel in the orthodox manner. The couple started on a wedding trip under the most favorable circumstances but before they had gone many miles on their way something arose to displease the groom and he, so his wife alleges, whipped out a revolver and threatened to shoot her. This little difficulty was temporarily patched up and the trip proceeded without any further untoward incident. They continued to live apparently happy until a few days ago when another and more violent quarrel occurred. Then Mrs. Liebel took her belongings and moved to the home of her parents declaring she would never again live with her spouse.

Nothing that anybody could suggest would change her mind and the breach between the young couple widened. Meanwhile Liebel grew lonesome. "What's the use of being married and have no wife?" he asked himself. With this thought in mind he selected the finest roses he could get from a nearby florist and with this approached with terpidation the door of his wife's parents' home. He knocked. No response. Again, this time with both bunches of knuckles. It was effective. Mr. Winges who was in bed ill with the grip opened the back door and Liebel pushed his way in at the same time demanding to see his wife.

Trouble followed this move. The only thing handy for use as a weapon was a water pitcher. Mr. Winges, so it is said, lifted this high above his head and let it fly. The result was disastrous for Liebel. He immediately lost all interest in his wife and turned his attention to several ugly gashes in his head caused by the broken fragments of the pitcher. He retired and sought medical aid.

Dr. Neslon, of New Market, dressed Lieble's wounds and then a warrant was sworn out for Mr. Winges' arrest, the trial coming before Justice Smith yesterday. Judge VonMinden claimed that Mr. Winges acted within his rights in defending his home from the attack by Liebel while Mr. Crane claimed that the assault ough to be brought to the attention of the grand jury. Justice Smith believed Mr. VonMinden's view of the legal side of the charge and dismissed the complaint, not however, before giving the parties to the suit a lecture. He declared that they ought to come together and behave themselves as their present attitude toward each other meant the spoiling of both the young lives. He was of the opinion that it was a case of too much mother-in-law on one side and too much father-in-law on the other.

In the meantime both young people are unhappy.

Charles E. Vail Removes.

Charles E. Vail has removed his jewelry store from Park avenue near Front street, to Park avenue, opposite North avenue, in the Boice, Runyon & Co., building, where on Saturday he will open with a large and desirable stock of new goods. Mr. Vail has engaged in business on the same avenue for the past thirty years. He was first employed by J. Hervey Doane, and a few years later bought out Asa Collier, who had one of the oldest estblished stands in the city. Mr. Vail's new store will be one of the finest in the city and he will be in a position to handle his increasing trade.

Rev. Dr. Anderson to Speak.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, will speak to the young people at the Calvary Baptist church, this evening at 8 o'clock on a special subject. Rev. G. W. Bailey, pastor, will address the young people on the subject of "Baptism."

GLEE CLUB HEARD

THE PROGRAM EXCELLENT.

Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith's Delightful Readings—Frank Smith at the Piano.

The Lotus Glee Club, of New York, assisted by Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith, reader, delighted a large audience at the Y. M. C. A., last night with a program of songs and recitations. This was the annual concert here by the club, and it proved to be as popular as ever. While some of the oldfavorite selections were given, all of which were well received by the audience. The popularity of the program may be judged by the fact that each number was given an encore, the artists being generous in this respect. Frank Smith was at the piano, and his work added not a little to the success of the affair.

The program was concluded with that favorite selection, "An Act of Up-to-date Grand Opera," which was given by request. It was well rendered and brought forth hearty applause. Mrs. Smith won her audience from the first by her clever work, her monologues being especially good. She was recalled each time and at the close was obliged to give an extra number. The program follows:

My Hero, from "The Chocolate Soldier," Lotus Glee Club; "A Legend of Service," VanDyke, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; Love the Peddler, German, Mr. Hundermyer; Love's Old Sweet Song, Malloy, Lotus Glee Club; There are None Like to Thee, Temple, Mr. Lewis; selection, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; At Dawn, Chadwick, Mr. Stricklett; King Solomon, Lotus Glee Club; selection, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; Invictis, Huhn, Mr. Boales; "An Act of Up-to-date Grand Opera," Smith, Lotus Glee Club.

QUIETLY MARRIED

ANNOUNCEMENT IS BELATED.

A letter posted at Crescent City, Fla., and received by local relatives a few days ago conveyed announcement of the marriage of Michael Quinn, the well-known blacksmith, of this city, and Miss Nellie McGuirk, of Avon Park. The ceremony was performed on January 4 but where it is not stated, although it is supposed to have been in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Quinn are now enjoying a honeymoon in Florida and will probably remain until the first of March. They will reside on the Charles Brower property, just below the Plainfield Driving Park, on Park avenue, which the groom recently purchased.

Mr. Quinn, who is about seventy years old, has conducted a blacksmith shop on East Fourth street, for many years and is the owner of considerable property. The city purchased from him the plot of ground at East Fourth and Sycamore streets where the police station is located. He resided for a long time at Avon Park, just north of the Driving park, moving into the city about two years ago after selling the place to Patrick Grennon, of New York.

The purchaser occupied the residence with his sister, Miss Catherine Grennon, and their neice, who is now Mrs. Quinn. The young woman, who is about thirty-five years old, formerly lived at Bridgeport, Conn. She with several sisters had disposed of an estate left them by their parents. She is also quite wealthy in her own right.

It was through the real estate deal that Mr. Quinn met Miss McGuirk and it was a case of love at first sight and the former became a frequent caller at the Grennon home but it was not supposed that the couple contemplated marriage. Miss McGuirk left for New York the first of the year saying she was going to visit a sister. The letters received two weeks ago conveyed the first news of the wedding and was as much of a surprise to the Grennon's as to Mr. Quinn's family.

EXPLOSION WRECKS TERMINAL; WORKMEN KILLED; SCORES HURT

Dynamite Blows Up Jersey Central Station, and Conflagration Follows at Noon Today—List of Dead and Injured Not Obtainable—Many Passengers Hurt By Falling Glass—Traffic Is Resumed.

A terrible explosion which shook the buildings in New York City as far up as the Singer building, shattering the glass windows in buildings all over the lower section of Manhattan and in Bayonne and Jersey City, occurred at noon today at Jersey City terminal of the Central Railroad. Meagre descriptions of the havoc wrought by the explosion say that no possible count at this time can be made of those killed and wounded.

Several men supposed to have been unloading the dynamite which caused the explosion are said to have been blown to bits.

The force of the explosion was felt as far north in New York city as 125th street and even on Governor's Island people were thrown to their knees in attitudes of prayer, wondering meanwhile whether the Day of Judgment had arrived or whether Manhattan had been visited with a convulsion of nature similar to the earthquake in San Francisco.

Harvey Fisk, son of former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, was a passenger on the 11.50 ferryboad from New York which arrived in the Jersey City slip a minute or so before the happening. He was thrown to his knees as were many others waiting passengers in the station, but suffered no injury. H. W. Satterfield, of this city, a clerk in the employ of the railroad company, arrived on the noon train with his face disfigured with cuts made by flying glass. He will return to his desk as soon as his wounds are dressed.

Reports from various police departments of Jersey City say that the loss of life is considerable, but nothing definate can be assertained at this moment.

According to the best information obtainable the entire station of the Jersey Central is a wreck. Trains are being despatched with promptness with a delay of approximately from ten to fifteen minutes. The cause of the accident is said to have been the explosion of a car load of dymamite which was being loaded on barges at pier 5 and 6, the new piers of the company.

Glass flew in all directions cutting and maiming perhaps a hundred people. Walter Hetfield in describing the scene immediately following the explosion said that all was confusion. Hundreds of people ran about distracted looking for a means of getting away from the awful scene. Ambulances were called from Jersey City and Bayonne and it was said that nobody was killed outright although there were several whose wounds might be fatal.

One ferryboat was blown on her beam ends and a panic ensued, but was quelled by the prompt action of the deckhands. Only one slip is in a condition to be used and the probability is that this condition of affairs will continue until late tonight or tomorrow morning.

Inquiry at the telegraph offices elicted the information that the delays in despatching trains would be only temporary and that the ordinary schedule would be resumed some time during the afternoon today.

A report from the chief of police of Jersey City just after the accident had it that there was a tremendous loss of life, but the story could not be confirmed.

The ferry boat Wilkes-Barre which was in midstream when the explosion occurred was damaged to the extent of losing every pane of glass in both cabins. Every building in the lower section of Manhattan was more or less damaged by the force of the explosion. Another Plainfielder who felt as though his last minute had come was Edmund Rushmore, of the borough. He was shaken up severely, but sustained no injury as far as can be ascertained. He went went home on his arrival on the 12:40 train. The more seriously injured were taken to hospitals in Jersey City.

John K. Large, of East Front street, Chief Claim Agent of the New Jersey Central, is among those reported to be slightly injured.

EXPOSE BIG FRAUD

SUSPICION WAS AROUSED HERE.

"Miss Mills," of Philadelphia wanted 5,000,000 Used Postage Stamps for a Hospital Ward in Australia.

One of the oldest schemes known to the postal authorities to secure names for lists of "prominent people" who later become the dupes of conscienceless and unscrupulous fakers has been discovered in this city and through the efforts of a resident for the time being has been squelched.

Several days ago the two daughters of Mrs. G. Stuart Simmons, of East Ninth street, received a letter from a friend in Chicago who was writing in the interest of an 'endless chain" concern whose offices were located on Chestnut street in Philadelphia. This letter was to be the motive of three other letters which were to be writteen by Miss Simmons to three of her friends who were in turn were to write three other letters of the same tenor, and so on ad infinitum.

Mrs. Simmons became suspicious of the correspondence and referred the letter to personal friends in the Quaker city. After an investigation the correspondence was turned over to the postal authorities of Philadelphia who in turn investigated the matter. The result has been the confiscation of all correspondence addressed to one "Miss Mills, The Carringtons, 371 Chestnut street, Philadelphia."

The persons responsible for the issuance of the endless chain of letters asked for "ten cancelled stamps" to help build a separate ward in a hospital in New South Wales. The total number of stamps asked for is five million. They do not explain how revenue is to be raised from them. Anyway the scheme is marked "fraud" by the postmaster general.

J.C. LYNCH DIES OF TYPHOID PNEUMONIA

John C. Lynch, aged thirty-two years, son of Mrs. Catherine Lynch, of West Fourth street, one of the best known cabmen of the city, died last night at his home following a two weeks' illness with typhoid pneumonia. He had been complaining before that and for a time he visited his brother-in-law, John English, at Westfield. Since returning to Plainfield he failed rapidly, having a very severe attack of the disease, it affecting both lungs.

About three years ago, Mr. Lynch had an accident at the Pennsylvania Railroad Station, Metuchen, while attempting to board a train. He had planned an extended trip. He received severe injuries about the head and for a time his recovery was doubtful. Since then he had never been strong.

Mr. Lynch succeeded his father, the late Patrick Lynch, in the cab business, fifteen years ago, and was successful. He had a large patronage among the best people of the city. He was born here and always lived in Plainfield. Five years ago his wife died. He was a fourth degree member of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus and a member of the Timbo Social Club. Beside his mother, he is survived by a daughter, Marguerite, aged five years; three sisters, Mrs. Michael D O'Keefe, Mrs. Thomas Dunphy and Mrs. T. J. Meaney, and one brother, James T. Lynch, all of this city.

The funeral service will be held from the late home, Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock and at St. Mary's church at 10 o'clock, where a solemn high mass of requiem will be offered for the repose of the soul. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Watchung House Robbed.

It was reported here today that the home of Fred Moore at Watchung, was entered by thieves, Saturday night, and $300 in money besides a large quantity of eatables were taken.

COUNCIL'S HEAD HURT BY A FALL

President Ralph I. Tolles, of the Common Council, while trying to board the 8:43 train for New York this morning at the North avenue station, slipped on the car step and fell, scratching and bruising his hands and legs, besides receiving a severe shaking up. Fortunately, the train had not started to leave the station, or the result might have been more serious.

Mr. Tolles was assisted by friends to a carriage and removed to his home on Westervelt avenue, where Dr. T. S. Davis, the family physician was summoned. An examination disclosed that Mr. Tolles was suffering a little from shock and the injuries indicated. Owing to the fact that he suffers a great deal with rheumatism, he naturally is not very spry on his feet. It is thought that the car step was possibly a little slippery from a thin coating of frost, causing Mr. Tolles to lose his balance. The injuries are not serious, however, and Mr. Tolles expects to be out in a few days.

A petition signed by many prominent borough residents has been presented to the Middlesex county court in behalf of Peter Nagle, who is to be sentenced this week on a conviction for carrying a revolver and making threats against William Pasch, of North Plainfield. Circumstances in the case that are somewhat mitigating caused the petition to be circulated.

The annual banquet of the Princeton Alumni Association of Northern New Jersey will take place at the Hamilton Club, Paterson, this evening.

The State Institution for Feeble-Minded Women at Vineland is providing a separate building, so that tuberculosis patients may be isolated from the main buildings.

Suffering from burns of the right and, caused by the upsetting of a pot of hot tea, Thomas Granada, three years old, of 306 Stevens street, Camden, was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital for treatment.

The sale of the Red Cross stamps in Trenton during the holidays raised $1,329.24. This money will be used for the visiting nurse in her work among consumptives and others in Trenton. This is $357.31 more than was raised last year.

In Jersey City a jury awarded Monday Hugh Geiger, of 12 Cliff street, $1,250 for a broken right ankle. On September 2 last, while working on a gas tank in the West Bergen district of Jersey City, Geiger fell twenty-five feet when a scaffold broke.

Mrs. J. B. Thomas, the aged mother of the late Admiral Charles M. Thomas, who was in command of the "fleet" around the world, is quite ill at the country home of her daughter, Mrs. George deB. Keim, on the Delaware, at Edgewater Park.

Public Safety Commissioner Geo. H. Hughes, of Bridgeton, has for a week been engaged in a campaign to clean up the speak-easies and pocket-sellers of liquor in that dry town. The arrests already made aggregate fourteen, and more are to follow.

Whether Point Pleasant is to have a municipal water plant or whether it will make a contract with Martin Maloney, of Philadelphia, owner of the present plant, is now the subject of controversy at the shore resort. Leading citizens have signed a petition to councils for a municipal plant.

Declaring that it is easy to sell $20 worth of cocaine in Camden a day, Leonard Murray, colored, was committed to jail in default of $500 bail from the police court Monday. He was arrested by City Detective Moffett, who succeeded in securing considerable information concerning the sale of cocaine.

The Bayonne Democratic Club held a charity ball at Opera House Hall Monday night and entertained fully fifteen hundred persons. The hall was jammed, and there was scant room for dancing. Flaggs and palms decorated the stage and a full orchestra provided the music. Every Democrat of note in the city who is in sympathy with Mathew T. Cronin, the local leader and president of the club, was there, and there were delegates from various other sections of the county.

John Collins, a negro from Florida, at one time a church sexton and later a waiter at the Passaic Club, died Monday at St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, from the effects of gas poisoning. He was found in an unconscious condition on a cot in the rear of Robert Robinson's pool-room on Main avenue, where he had laid down the night before. It is believed that during the night he turned on the gas, and then forgetting it, lay down again.

Because his wife attended a birthday anniversary party in Beverly given by Mrs. John Esworthy, and he did not receive an invitation, Jerome Horton is alleged Sunday night to have broken in the doors of the house with his fists, put all the merrymakers to flight and wrecked a piano with beer bottles which he found hidden under the instrument. John Esworthy, it is said, tried to eject Horton from his house, but the latter beat him insensible. Physicians pronounce Esworthy in a critical condition. Horton was arrested on a charge of atrocious assault and tried before Justice Stevenson, who, in default of $300 bail, committed him to the county jail.

Getting the Spotlight.

"He came to the front very rapidly."

"Yes, indeed. All he had to do was refuse to sit at the same banquet table with one of our prominent citizens and his name was on the front pages of all the papers for a week afterwards."—Detroit Free Press.

BASEBALL.

Fred Falkenberg, says Ty Cobb's one alleged weak spot in hitting is an asset. It is said Ty can't judge a low curve. Falky doubts if Cobb has just that one defect, and he knows from experience that Ty can hit a low curve just as effectively as a high ball, even though he doesn't hit it as hard.

"I played for Ty's weakness a couple of times," said Falky, "and came to the conclusion that it would be better to give him a kind of ball he hits hard, relying on outguessing him

"A batter does not hit a ball squarely when he cannot judge it. He just nips it. The balls Cobb just nips are the most dangerous ones. The ball rolls or bounds slowly, and his speed gives him dozens of hits on those slow infield taps. Cobb can hit anything and his speed does the rest.

"The same is true of Collins, only he isn't as fast to first base as Cobb. I would rather have either of them hit the ball good and hard to rolling it in the infield."

Falky says there is more in outguessing good batters than playing for their weakness.

"The good batters do not have real weak spots," he said. "The only way to fool them is to outguess them. Take Larry. He would hit close to .700 if he knew whether every ball would be over the inside or outside corner of the plate. The corners bother more than curves or speed. Larry would hit almost every ball pitched. Those that were not hits would go to the fielders. The other free hitters of the American League—Cobb, Collins, Speaker and Crawford—would bat almost if not quite as well."

Nine games, the first to be played March 31, will constitute the annual spring series between the Athletics, American League champions, as well as world's champions and the Phillies. One game will be played at Atlantic City on Sunday April 9. The others will alternate between Shibe Park, where the first contest will take place, and the Phillies yard at Broad and Huntington streets. All details for the spring series were arranged yesterday at a conference between Connie Mack, manager of the world champions, and Horace Fogel, president of the Phillies. It was agreed that the umpires should be Hank O'Day, for the National League, and Tom Connolly, for the American.

Vic Willis, the veteran pitcher, secured by the Chicago Cubs from St. Louis by the waiver route, signed his 1911 contract and forwarded it to Chicago yesterday, according to information received from Newark, Del., where Willis is wintering. He is engaged in coaching the Delaware College nine, and will remain at home until spring. He reports himself in good condition and satisfied with the trade, but would have been staisfied, equally well to go to Baltimore, as it would have been nearer home.

The New York American League Club Monday received the signed contract of Pitchers Harry Ables, who was with San Antonio last year, and of R. H. Revelle, last year with Richmond. Ables is a sonthpaw, and led the Texas League pitchers in strikeouts last season, while Revelle, a right-hander, held the record in the Virginia League for shut-out games. The New York National League Club Monday signed Pitcher Dick Rudolph who was with Toronto last year.

The old Sunday baseball bill reappeared again Monday in the New York State Legislature under the guardianship of Senator McManus. The games must be between amateurs and the hours must be between 3:30 and 6:30. Nothing is said about an admission fee.

Secretary William Gray, of the New York Giants, received the signed contract of Twirler Dick Rudolph Monday. Rudolph has been with the Maple Leafs for several seasons and has been considered one of the best boxmen in the Barrow ogamization. His home is in the Bronx. Rudolph joined the Giants after the close of the Eastern League season.

Manager Harry Wolverton, of the Oakland Pacific Coast League team, has secured Outfielder Harry Hoffman from the Providence Grays. The former manager of the Newark Indians purchased the player outright from the Grays.

The Boston American League Club Monday received the signed contracts of Pitcher Ray Collins and Second Baseman Larry Gardeu.

LABELING CHILDREN.

The next time you have a few spare moments get some tape and embroider your small son's or daughter's name on it as many times as there is room for. Then sew the tape on everything the child owns—underwear, collarbands, sleeve edges, inside of hats, everywhere. In a few convenient places add the address. Then when John or Mary gets lost you will not need to rely on a faulty memory and a possible policeman to bring the wanderer home again.

Of course, if embroidery would take too much of your time you can write the name and address on the tape and sew it on all the garments, not forgetting gloves, umbrellas and rubbers, this time for purposes of protection against loss and theft.

NEGRO GIVES DETAILS OF MURDERING TWO

"Jack" sears, the mulatto murderer of the Rev. and Mrs. Amzi L. Armstrong, at Dutch Neck, last Thanksgiving eve, was placed on the witness stand in his own defense in his trial at Trenton yesterday, and would only mumble that he had no recollection of the slaying of the white couple, who had been his benefactors all his life. Questioned by his counsel, he said he had suffered severe pains in his head at many times and could not remember what had happened at the time of the killing.

Cross-examined by Prosecutor Crossley, he finally broke down and traced step by step the incidents leading up to and following the killing, and then turning to Justice Reed on the bench, he asserted that all of these things had come back to him following his arrest. No other witnesses were called and the case will go to the jury today after summing up by both sides. It is expected that his conviction will speedily follow and that he will be put to death within a month.

Sear's confession was put in evidence yesterday in spite of the opposition of his attorney. County and city detectives recounted how the murderer had confessed without any necessity of resorting to the usual third degree methods. Sears sat unmoved during this testimony and showed little sign of feeling when he was called to the stand.

Possessed of unusual health for one of his years and retaining all his faculties, he is receiving the congratulations of relatives and friends who call to see him. THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

My best wishes rejoinder to Mr. Bergen's reply to my letter as contained in your issue last night would be to refer him to the communication of Chief Doane of our fire department to the Common Council under date of January, 1911, in which he states that the Common Council must either provide him with more water pressure or else supply him with some steam fire engines because the City is not now adequately protected from fire.

WILLIAM M. STILLMAN.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Van Horn, of Lincoln place, are the parents of a son who came to their home a few days ago.

William Mazzocco, of the F. L. C. Martin company, returned today from Bridgeport, Conn., where he inspected the Alco Auto-Truck company's factory.

Netherwood Station Robbed.

The ill lighted Netherwood station was a mark for tramps last night after it was locked up for the night and they entered through an open window appropriating $4.31 left in the agent's cash drawer and made their exit in the same way. Nothing else was disturbed.

Roup Epidemic.

Roup has become epidemic at the henneries at South Plainfield and New Market. Hundreds of chickens have died.

Next Sunday will be the regular missionary day in the First M. E. church Sunday-school. Every friend of the school is urged to help in the work.

BETTER SCHEDULE ON THE MAIN LINE

For the purpose of meeting the persistent demands of the people of Elizabeth and vicinity, the Public Service Corporation, today, inaugurated a new schedule which will give a six and seven minute headway for the trolley cars between Westfield and Newark. This change will mean that the main line cars passing through Plainfield will only go as far as Westfield Junction, where a change must be made for Elizabeth, Newark and other points east.

The same schedule will be maintained here as before, that is the cars will run every fifteen minutes, but the running time is reduced slightly in order to correspond to the new schedule at Westfield Junction and points east of that.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The regular communion service will be held at Warren chapel Sunday morning in charge of the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey.

The Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church will enjoy a special program at its meeting Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Harold Serrell will have charge of the exercises at the meeting of the Junior Mission Band at the First Baptist church, Friday afternoon. The topic will be: "Christ's Sympathy."

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, one of the chain of teas will be held in Vincent chapel, Thursday afternoon, February 9. Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. G. M. Rittenhouse and Mrs. Samuel Bingaman will be in charge.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Evangelical Lutheran church will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Taylor, 202 Westervelt avenue. The young women from this city will meet tomorrow evening at the home of Miss Hedwig Grotman, 959 Arlington avenue.

A musical resume of a proposed new hymn book for the Congregational church will occupy part of the hour of the midweek service in the church this evening. The book has been under consideration for some time and in order that the members of the congregation may get an adequate idea of the book a double quartet will sing several selections from it for their benefit tonight. A large attendance is desired.

A NEW KIND OF PARTY.

A mother who wished to entertain school children gave a guessing party that was rather out of the usual run.

Boys and girls were invited for an evening with celebrities and their haunts. Nothing more explicit was said, so the young people were eager to know what was in store.

After being received by the hostess the party was ushered into a library, across one end of which was a huge white sheet. In a few minutes the room was darkened and a figure appeared dressed to represent Mrs. Jarley, of the waxworks, and in a witty speech announced the appearance of the celebrities.

She first distributed to each guest a card with pencil attached. These were lined and numbered to correspond with the celebrities to be shown.

In a few minutes a picture of Blue beard was thrown on the sheet and thirty seconds given in guessing who he was.

The celebrities varied from heroes of fiction to monarchs, pugilists and football stars, noted actresses, poets, musicians, to well known places and buildings.

The pictures were made as different as possible, and when those that might be unfamiliar were given the showman elucidated it in a clever little speech.

At the end of the display the cards were numbered and passed in to a committee of awards. Each boy and girl having most correct guesses received a prize. There were also second and third prizes.

Such an entertainment is not hard to arrange if one can get the use of a lantern and some one to run it. It is essential to display the pictures rapidly.

The slides can be rented; or, if you have a collection of postals they can be made into slides at small cost.

HOOPS FOR CHILDREN.

The opinion is expressed by men who have made a study of exercises for health that it is a pity that the skipping rope and hoop have gone out of fashion for children.

It is suggested they are more excellent mediums for the physical development than bicycles and roller skates. The fact that small children are allowed to have bicycles and consequently make no use of nature's means of progression is offered as an objection to them.

The skipping rope and hoop require them to run and walk. Young children should be encouraged to do this as much as posssible, and always with a springy step. They need to use their feet and legs, and exercise that brings these into play is beneficial.

EASTER HAT WORK OF ART.

Not so many entire hats of flowers will be seen this year as straw models with brims or crowns buried in blossoms or foliage. The toques with high turned-up brims are well adapted to this sort of trimming. A soft, satiny straw has its vertical brim entirely hidden under a mass of velvety pansies in delicate lavender and mauve tints. A plainer model has a brim of dark green leaves through which peep here and there small clusters of the tiniest white blossoms. White lilacs cover the whole crown of another small shape and its sameness is relieved on one side by a couple of deep red roses.

Hats that allow of a generous display of the under brim are faced or partially faced, or else have folds or other flat motive. Soutache braid is well liked for this purpose, and is used in a variety of ways for trimming the spring hats, not only for adults, but children as well. The braid is usually sewn on a silk foundation and in straight rows, or it may be applied to the straw direct.

There is an effort being put forth to popularize ribbon. While other trimmings are applied flat to the hat, ribbons are often arranged to add materially to its height. A soft two-tone ribbon having a finely ribbed surface is very good for this purpose. It is, of course, necessary to wire the upstanding loops. This same ribbon is often used to make some ribbon flowers—which are much used, as are flat buttons covered with folded ribbon, or ribbon having a picot edge.

There are several novelty rosettes of ribbon and piece goods that are being used, frequently centred with a straw or floral ornament. Large bows of satin, not necessarily ribbon, are sometimes veiled with chiffon or with fine allover lace. This idea was introduced this season.

Waiter Was Wise.

One of the last times that Bishop Burgess, of Long Island, dined out was at a club where the waiters are all negroes. The head waiter bowed Bishop Burgess and his host profusely to their places. "This way, adm'ral," said he. "Tek this table You get a bettah view of the harbor heah, adm'ral."

"I am not an admiral," said Bishop Burgess, smiling.

"My mistek, suh," said the head waiter. "Ah mout er known all the time I was er talkin' to a military man. You like dis table, colonel?"

"I am not a colonel," said Bishop Burgess, smiling more broadly. "I am a bishop."

"To be suah, suh," said the head waiter. "To-o be suah! Ve'y sorry for mah mistek, suh. I got dem titles of adm'ral and colonel wrong. Ah knowed soon as Ah saw you dat you was one of the face cards of you profession, suh."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

ADVISES MARTINE AGAINST "LUNCHEON"

The Jersey City Journal advises Senator-elect Martine not to adhere to the ancient custom of successful senatorial candidates of giving "luncheons" in honor of their election. The Journal says editorially:

"Senator-elect Martine has it in his power to put an end to a very reprehensible practice at Trenton. For many years past it has been customary for men elected as United States Senators, or to other offices in which the Legislature had a voice, to invite the members of both houses and a riff-raff of State officials and high and low politicians from all corners of the State to a "luncheon" at one of the Trenton hotels.

"In the case of rich men like Senator Kean, some of these junkets are said to have cost as much as $2,500 or more. Poorer men would be taxed in accordance with their purses, or their prodigality—say $1,200 or $1,500—the damage being assessed chiefly on the number of champagne corks and empty cigar boxes that would lie around when the debris came to be cleared away.

"There should be no more of these junkets. They were undignified, demoralizing. For poor men they have been an imposition, for rich men a disagreeable "duty" forced upon them by a barbarous precedent.

"It is to be hoped that Mr. Martine will not make the mistake of getting up a gastronomic celebration in honor of his victory. We are quite sure he has too much good sense for that."

M'INTYRE CONCERT TOMORROW NIGHT

The McIntyre concert tomorrow evening at the Plainfield High School auditorium ,will be the fourth and last concert of this series for this season. The trio to be played will be the famous "Dumky" trio by Dvorak, the great Bohemian composer, who several years ago was brought over to America to head the National Conservatory of Music in New York by Mrs. Thurber. He created a sensation by his symphony the "New World," based upon themes and shymes native to America and is now one of the world's greatest symphonies. This trio, the "Dumky" is one of his most pleasing and well-known compositions.

Grafting King and Mr. McIntyre will play the G minor sonata of Grieg's for violin and piano. The assisting artist is New York's favorite tenor, John Barnes Wells, who makes his initial bow to a Plainfield audience on this occasion. To those who have not heard this artist in New York a pleasant surprise is in store.

SOMERVILLE.

Word has been received in Somerville that John W. Hardgrove and Daniel W. Davenport, Jr., of the United States Marine Corps, who have been stationed at Honolulu for the past two years, have been sent to the Philippines. John Hardgrove, who was in the quartermaster's department at Honolulu, was detailed to the quartermaster's department at the Philippines after being there but a few hours.

Edward S. Thomas, of West Main street, is a conductor between New York and Palm Beach on the Atlantic Coast Line. He spends two days each week at Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Whiteneck, of West High street, left Monday for New York where they will spend several weeks.

Mrs. David Justice,of Asbury Park, is a guest of her daughter, Mrs. O. G. Allen, on West High street.

N. O. Dunster returned yesterday from the West, where he spent two weeks.

OAK TREE.

Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale, who was called to Baltimore by the death of his wife's mother, returned home today. Mrs. Lansdale will return later.

A surprise party was tendered to W. E. VanCourt, last night, in honor of the forty-fourth anniversary of his birthday. There were about a dozen relatives and friends present. The evening was spent in playing games and enjoying a musical program, after which refreshments were served.

OFFERS TO RESIGN FROM HEALTH BOARD

Not wishing to embarass Mayor Moy's administration, William C. Kinney, president of the Board of Health, notified the executive yesterday that if he desired he would resign. The Mayor has sent in the name of a successor to Mr. Kinney but so far the Common Council has failed to confirm the appointment. It is reported that Mr. Kinney told the Mayor that he considered that his term expired on December 31. The Mayor, it is said, declared that he told Mr. Kinney he appreciated his attitude and thanked him for it.

If Mr. Kinney does resign and the others whose term ended at the same time follow his example, it is considered that the action will pave the way for the Common Council to promptly confirm the Mayor's appointments.

TO STOP PERSPIRATION.

An Astringent Lotion, Preferably Spirits of Camphor, Will Be of Great Help.

Certain astringent lotions may be used with good effect upon hands or feet that are inclined to moisture, even when the weather is cold, and in winter especially such moisture must not continue, for if it does almost inevitably chilblains will come. Also once it becomes chronic it is far more difficult to cure, and the condition itself results in ruin to gloves, hosiery and the lining of shoes.

Persons whose hands perspire, even though cold, should never wear fur gloves, and it is better to avoid those having any interlinings. The reason for this is that once the linings have become moist they induce further moisture of the hands each time the covering is put on. Giving room for free use of the fingers is highly important, for otherwise circulation will be checked and the difficulty cannot be controlled.

Spirits of camphor, rubbed either on the palms or on the soles as may be needed, is excellent for pronounced moisture. On the feet this camphor is to be rubbed in night and morning and also, when possible, just before going out of doors. Frictioning must be brisk, for on normal circulation depends improvement of the local condition.

Immediately after such application dust the surface with a powder made from one dram of oleate of zinc, two drams of subnitrate of bismuth and ten grains of betanaphthol.

An astringent lotion to correct profuse perspiration recommended by a physician is made from five grains of chromic acid and one-half ounce of distilled witch hazel. This is specially excellent for hands and is dropped on the surface several times a day, rubbing immediately that the skin shall absorb it.

That any damp material, be it kid or cotton, shall be removed from contact with the skin immediately on coming indoors is imperative.

Exercises of both feet and hands should be gone through with whenever convenient. Hands are to be shaken and fingers bent in any way which will produce a feeling of warmth. For the feet, rise on the toes, and repeat this many times before twisting the foot from the ankle.

QUICKLY MADE BLOUSE.

An Attractive Model Designed For the Woman With Little Time to Sew.

Women who like pretty clothes, but who have little time to sew, will appreciate the blouse pictured here. It has good lines and is a smart model without tucks or folds, which simplifies the making. The design is becoming to either stout or slender women.

This model can be duplicated in either sheer materials, such as voile, chiffon or marquisette, worn over silk slips, or made in soft silks. To copy this blouse for the average woman three yards of twenty-seven inch material or one and seven-eighths yards of goods thirty-six inches in width will be needed.

For use every day such a waist should be plain. For example, a soft silk that matches in color the skirt with which it is worn should be selected, and a pretty touch of color can be given in the trimming.

The imported model from which this design was copied was of black crepe de chine, and this original waist was worn in combination with a black broadcloth skirt.

A charming waist for wear with a dressy skirt of metallic green marquisette could be made from marquisette in a matching shade draped over a salmon pink lining. The trimming bands could be of satin in a shade to match the waist material and tiny stiff bows of the pink silk or buttons covered with it arranged on the front and sleeve bands to enhance the beauty.

Wash waists of linen, batiste, madras and lawn can be made like this model and elaborated with hand embroidery, insets of lace or groups of tucks. When the latter are used as decoration they must be made in the goods before the waist is cut, because in the pattern no allowance has been made for them.

APPLE DRYING FRAME.

This Method Will Leave a Lighter Color and Richer Flavor In the Fruit.

Secure light strips of boards five feet long and thirty inches wide and tack on screen netting the same as though you were making a screen door. Although these frames may be made larger, this one is of sufficient size, as it is light, easily handled and the screen does not sag down when the heavy fresh cut apples are placed on it. Plain, unpainted screen is best for this purpose and should be kept scrupulously clean to prevent rust, dirt or paint from becoming mixed with the fruit.

Attach strong cords or smooth wires to each corner of the rack thus formed, drive two posts into the ground and suspend the rack at whatever height is desired. Pare, core and cut apples in quarters and spread them on the screen, placing mosquito netting bars over and under them to prevent the flies and insects from soiling the fruit.

Where this plan is employed one must be careful that the fruit is not dried so long, as the circulation of air reaches it from beneath, and this, with both the air and sunlight above, shortens the time necessary for drying by the usual method. The rapid drying also leaves the dried product much lighter in color and richer in natural flavor than where the slices are cut thinner and exposed to the sun for a longer period in order to become thoroughly dry.

PROFITABLE ALFALFA CROP.

Farmer Near Cottonwood Falls, Kan., Raises One Amounting to Twelve Hundred Tons.

No less than forty freight cars were required to haul to market a part of the alfalfa crop which was raised on the C. M. Gregory farm, near Cottonwood Falls, Kan., last season. There were between five and six hundred tons of alfalfa hay, and as thirteen tons will fill the average box car it took a good long train to move the crop. This, however, represents only two cuttings from the 300 acres which were in alfalfa on this farm. There were four hay crops last year, so the entire output if sent to market would be nearer eighty carloads instead of forty. Two cuttings were kept on the farm to be used as feed for cattle and horses.

NEW STRAWBERRY.

Luther Burbank, the Famous Naturalist, Who Raised It, Calls It "the Patagonia."

Luther Burbank has announced the creation of a strawberry of a new type, the Patagonia, which begins to ripen first and continues to bear the longest.

It is heralded by its creator as "the first of a new race which has come to make strawberry growers rejoice. The berries are uniformly large, single berries sometimes weighing an ounce. The seeds are so small as to be almost imperceptible."

Samples have been sent to specialists in fruits, and many of them say they are the best they have ever tasted.

Knowing Capacity of Land.

A man is not master of his farm unless he has a familiarity with each acre's value and each acre's ability. It is useless in these days of high priced land to bother the average yields. It is not wise to wait until compulsion causes one to take care of the fertility of the soil.

Cowpeas Profitable.

Cowpeas are a very profitable crop for dairy cows and pigs. They are so hardy against drought and mature so quickly that there are very few crops that compete with these legumes for soiling purposes. Cowpeas should be better appreciated by farmers of the southwest.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

Winter spraying is recommended for San Jose scale. As soon as the trees shed their foliage spray with emulsion or the lime sulphur solution. Scale can be controlled easily if effective spraying is done.

Lawns on which Bermuda is to be set in the spring should be well prepared by plowing and harrowing. Sow a winter cover crop, clover or vetch. Turn the cover crop early and prepare for the Bermuda in early spring.

In laying out your orchard do not make the common mistake of setting your trees too close. With lands comparatively cheap, there is no good reason for crowding trees, but there are many reasons for giving good distance.

Lima beans and all other similar vegetables will bear till they are killed by frost if the fruit is picked green and none allowed to dry up and go to seed. The same is true of free blooming flowers. Pick the blossoms regularly and they will continue to bloom for some time.

"Are Public Service Securities at Present Prices a Good Buy?"

asks an investor. We unquestionably believe that they are. With the excellent financial and physical condition of Public Service today, it's efficient and progressive management—the natural resources and rapidly growing demands of the great territory which its activities cover, the increased prosperity of the company is a matter of certainty.

In addition to this the increasing demand for Public Service Securities from all parts of the country, with the prospect of an easier money market this year, is being reflected in a constant advance in prices.

With the conviction that this is no mere temporary condition, but an advance, which for these substantial reasons will continue in the future.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 5, 1911.

Topic.—Why do you believe in Christian Endeavor? (Christian Endeavor day)—Prov. xxii, 6; viii, 12-17, 32-36. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The Christian Endeavor movement is now thirty years old, the first society having been organized by the Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, pastor of the Willotson Congregational church, in Portland, Me., Feb. 2, 1881. Nearly a third of a century has passed by since this small beginning, and it continues today, an interdenominational and international organization, with its societies and its work worldwide in extent. Thousands were enrolled under the banner of "Christ and the church," and the thousands have been advanced to millions. Many of its first adherents in the early years of its spreading are still active in its service. The present writer was a member of the second society, organized in the state of Ohio in 1884, and has never ceased to have an active interest in its work. Beginning as a boy, having since been graduated from college and the theological seminary and having become an ordained minister in the few churches of which he has been the pastor, he has always had an interest in Christian Endeavor societies.

In a pastorate of considerable years now I have never had any friction with a Christian Endeavor society. I have largely given to the young people the full charge and responsibility, and they have nobly responded and kept within proper bounds. If the wheels creak at times a few words of caution or a suggestion—never a command, but well oiled with kindness and love—is sufficient, for the pastor's words go a long way and kindness much further, and constant active interest, which is the proof of real interest, completes the trinity that keeps the society running smoothly under the pastor's guiding hand.

In general it may be said:

1. We believe in Christian Endeavor because of the many evidences of God's hand having been in it all these years. He has given it wise leadership, especially in its president, Dr. Francis E. Clark. Deep gratitude to God is due on this thirtieth anniversary that Dr. Clark, who organized this movement, still lives and still directs it. He, under God, founded it upon great practical principles, trained it up as his child in the way that it should go, and now that it has grown to a goodly age it still, under the guiding hand of God, using Dr. Clark as His human agent, strengthens and grows in societies and in numbers. No one can doubt or deny God's hand in this movement. Nothing else could account for its history. Therefore, believing in God, we believe in Christian Endeavor, for it is of God.

2. We believe in Christian Endeavor because it filled a long need in the church and in the world. How to hold the young people in the church was once its greatest problem. Christian Endeavor solved it. It interested the young people because it gave them something definite to do. The cry soon changed. Many thought the young people were too much interested and too attentive; that they seemed destined to run the church and to overthrow the denominations and carry church affairs with a high hand. Criticism arose thick and fast, principally from pastors who did not know their young people when they met them. One moment they were a dead factor, and the next they were too active a factor. But wise pastors were overjoyed and went in for the society with deep heart interest and found it a great help in the church. Flowers were on the pulpit. The aged were visited and read to. All kinds of institutions felt the touch of Christian Endeavor—hospitals, homes for the destitute and incurables; even prisoners in jails and penitentiaries heard the songs of sweet voices, and sailors on the deep sea were not forgotten, and thousands of "comfort bags," with a cheerful note or letter, gladdened many a man before the mast. Look at the great men's movement today—brotherhoods, leagues, men's meetings, the great missionary movement among men. All came up at the moment of greatest need to hold the men in the church by arousing active personal interest. Once we preached on "Why Do Men Not Attend Church?" Today the subject is, "Why Do Men Attend Church?" It is the greatest age of men's interest and attendance upon the church services since the Christian church was founded (if we may possibly except the apostolic age of the church) that the world has ever seen. Business men are interested; rich and poor alike are interested. Let critics criticise and carpers carp, but God's church still moves on and ever will move on, because it is the church of God, and if the persecutions and opposition that have arisen against her in the last nineteen centuries have not been able even to cripple her what can? Nothing, because God is round about her, and "the gates of hell shall not prevail against her." Where is "the new theology," "the new Christianity," "the new religion," of only a few months ago? They filled the air for a day and then like air disappeared, but the church of God still stands, founded upon the Rock, Christ Jesus.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Ross did as Wetherford commanded him to do and withdrew a little way down the slope and without putting up his tent rolled himself in his blankets and went to sleep.

The ranger's first duty in the morning was to feed the faithful collie and to send him forth with the flock. His next was to build a fire and cook some breakfast for Wetherford, and as he put it down beside the tent door he heard the wild pleading of the Basque, who was struggling with his nurse, doubtless in the belief that he was being kept a prisoner. Only a few words like "go home" and "sheep" were intelligible to either the nurse or the ranger.

Cavanagh waited till a silence came, then called softly, "Here's your breakfast, Wetherford."

"Move away," retorted the man within. "Keep your distance."

Ross walked away a little space, and Wetherford came to the door. "The dago is sure sick. There's no two ways about that. How far is it to the nearest doctor?"

"I could reach one by phone from the Kettle ranch, about twenty miles below here."

"If he don't get better today I reckon we'll have to have a doctor." He looked so white and old that Cavanagh said:

"You need rest. Now, I think I've had the smallpox. I know I've been vaccinated, and if you go to bed"—

"If you're saying all that preliminary to offering to come in here you're wasting your breath. I don't intend to let you come any nearer than you are. There is work for you to do. Besides, there's my girl. You're detailed to look after her."

"Would a doctor come?" asked Ross quite huskily, moved by Wetherford's words. "It's a hard climb. Would they think the dago worth it?"

Wetherford's face darkened with a look of doubt. "It is a hard trip for a city man, but maybe he would come for you—for the government."

"I doubt it, even if I were to offer my next month's salary as a fee. These hills are very remote to the townsfolk and one dago more or less of no importance, but I'll see what I can do."

Ross was really more concerned for Wetherford himself than for the Basque. "If the fever is something malignant we must have medical aid," he said and went slowly back to his own camp to ponder his puzzling problem.

One thing could certainly be done, and that was to inform Gregg and Murphy of their herder's illness. Surely they would come to the rescue of the collie and his flock. To reach a telephone involved either a ride over into Deer Creek or a return to the Fork. He was tempted to ride all the way to the Fork, for to do so would permit another meeting with Lee. But to do this would require many hours longer, and half a day's delay might prove fatal to the Basque, and, besides, each hour of loneliness and toil rendered Wetherford just so much more open to the deadly attack of the disease.

It was hard to leave an old and broken man in such a drear and wind contested spot, and yet it had to be done; so, fastening his tent securely behind a clump of junipers, Cavanagh mounted his horse and rode away across the boundary of the forest into Deer Creek basin, which had been the bone of much contention for nearly four years. It had once been a part of the forest, but under pressure the president had permitted it to be restored to the public lands open for entry. It was not "agricultural grounds," as certain ranchers claimed, but it was excellent summer pasture, and the sheepmen and cattlemen had leaped at once into warfare to possess it. Sheep were beaten to death with clubs by hundreds, herders were hustled out of the park with ropes about their necks and their outfits destroyed, and all this within a few miles of the forest boundary, where one small sentinel kept effective watch and ward.

Cavanagh had never been over this trail but once, and he was trying to locate the cliff from which a flock of sheep had been hurled by cattlemen some years before when he perceived a thin column of smoke rising from a rocky hillside. With habitual watchfulness as to fire, he raised his glass to his eyes and studied the spot. It was evidently a campfire and smoldering dangerously, and, turning his horse's head, he rode toward it to stamp it out. It was not upon his patrol, but that did not matter. His duty was clear.

As he drew near he began to perceive signs of a broken camp. The ground was littered with utensils. It was not an ordinary campfire, and the ranger's heart quickened. "Another sheep herder has been driven out and his tent and provisions burned!" he exclaimed wrathfully.

His horse snorted and shied as he rode nearer, and then a shudder passed through the ranger's heart as he perceived in the edge of the smoldering embers a boot heel and then—a charred hand! In the smoke of that fire was the reek of human flesh.

For a long time the ranger sat on his horse, peering down into those ashes until at last it became evident to his eyes that at least two sheep herders had been sacrificed on the cattleman's altar of hate and greed.

All about on the sod the story was written all too plain. Two men, possibly three, had been murdered, cut to pieces and burned not many hours before. There stood the bloody spade with which the bodies had been dismembered, and there lay an empty can whose oil had been poured upon the mingled camp utensils, tent and wagon of the herders in the attempt to incinerate the hacked and dismembered limbs of the victims. The lawlessness of the range had culminated. The ferocity of the herder had gone beyond the savage. Here in the sweet autumn air the reek of the cattleman's vengeance rose like some hideous vapor, poisonous and obscene.

The ranger sickened as the bloody tale unfolded itself before him. Then a fierce hate of such warfare flamed in his heart. Could this enormity be committed under any other civilized flag? Would any other government intermingle so foolishly, so childishly, its state and federal authority as to permit such diabolism?

In his horror, his sense of revolt, he cursed the state of which he was a citizen. He would have resigned his commission at the moment, so intense was his resentment of the supine, careless, jovial, slattern government under which he was serving.

"By the Lord," he breathed, with solemn intensity, "if this does not shame the people of this state into revolt, if these fiends are not hounded and hung, I will myself harry them. I cannot live and do my duty here unless this crime is avenged by law."

Chilled, shaking and numb, he set spurs to his horse and rode furiously down the trail toward the nearest town, so eager to spread the alarm that he could scarcely breathe a deep breath. On the steep slopes he was forced to walk, and his horse led so badly that his agony of impatience was deepened. He had a vision of the murderers riding fast into far countries. Each hour made their apprehension progressively the more difficult.

"Who were they?" he asked himself again and again. "What kind of man did this thing? Was the leader a man like Ballard? Even so, he was hired. By whom? By ranchers covetous of the range; that was absolutely certain."

It was long after noon before he came to the end of the telephone line in a little store and postoffice at the upper falls of Deer creek. The telephone had a booth fortunately, and he soon had Redfield's ear, but his voice was so strained and unnatural that his chief did not recognize it.

"Is that you, Ross? What's the matter? Your voice sounds hoarse."

Ross composed himself and told his story briefly. "I'm at Kettle Ranch postoffice. Now listen. The limit of the cattleman's ferocity has been reached. As I rode down here to get into communication with a doctor for a sick herder I came upon the scene of another murder and burning. The fire is still smoldering. At least two bodies are in the embers."

At last, bit by bit, from hurried speech, the supervisor derived the fact, the location, the hour, and directed the herder to ride back and guard the remains till the sheriff arrived.

"Keep it all quiet," warned Ross, "and get the sheriff and a doctor to come up here as quick as you can. What is this country coming to?" he cried in despair. "Will this deed go unpunished like the rest?"

Redfield's voice had lost its optimistic ring. "I don't know; I am stunned by it all. Don't do anything rash, Ross. Wait till I come. Perhaps this is the turning point out here. I'll be up at the earliest moment."

The imbittered and disheartened ranger then called up Lee Virginia, and the sound of her sweet voice turned his thoughts to other and in a sense more important matters, for when she heard his name she cried out with such eager longing and appeal that his heart leaped. "Oh, I wish you were here! Mother has been worse today. She is asking for you. Can't you come down and see us? She wants to tell you something."

"I can't—I can't!" he stammered. "I—I—I'm a long way off, and I have important work to do. Tell her I will come tomorrow. Dear girl, there is a sick man far up on the mountain side with no one to care for him but a poor old herder who is in danger of falling sick himself. I must go back to them but believe me, I will come just as soon as my duties will let me. You understand me, don't you?"

Her voice was fainter as she said, "Yes, but I—it seems hard to wait."

"I know. Your voice has helped me. I was in a black mood when I came here. I'm going back now to do my work, and then I will come to you. Goodby."

Strangely beautiful and very subtle was the vibrant stir of that wire as it conveyed back to his ear the little sigh with which she made answer to his plea. He took his way upward in a mood which was meditative, but no longer bitter.

CHAPTER XV.

SHADOWS ON THE MIST.

THE decision which Cavanagh made between love and duty distinguished the officer from the man, the soldier from the civilian. He did not hesitate to act, and yet he suffered a mental conflict as he rode back toward the scene of that inhuman sacrifice on the altar of greed.

"It will be hours before any part of the sheriff's posse can reach the falls, even though they take to the swiftest motors, and then other long hours must intervene before I can ride down to her. Yes, at least a day and a night must drag their slow course before I can hope to be of service to her." And the thought drew a groan of anxiety from him. At such moments of mental stress the trail is a torture and the mountain side an inexorable barrier.

Halfway to the hills he was intercepted by an old man who was at work on an irrigating ditch beside the road. He seemed very nervous and very inquisitive, and as he questioned the ranger his eyes were like those of a dog that fears his master's hand. Ross wondered about this afterward, but at the moment his mind was busy with the significance of this patient toiler with a spade. He was a prophetic figure in the most picturesque and sterile land of the stockman. "Here, within twenty miles of this peaceful fruit grower," he said, "is the crowning infamy of the freebooting cowboy."

He wondered as he rode on whether the papers of the state would make a jest of this deed. "Will this be made the theme for caustic comment in the eastern press for a day and then be forgotten?"

As his hot blood cooled he lost faith in even this sacrifice. Could anything change the leopard west into the tameness and serenity of the ox? "No," he decided; "nothing but death will do that. This generation, these fierce and bloody hearts, must die. Only in that way can the tradition of violence be overcome and a new state reared."

At the foot of the toilsome, upward winding trail he dismounted and led his weary horse. Over his head and about halfway to the first hilltop lay a roof of fleecy vapor, faint purple in color and seamless in texture. Through this he must pass, and it symbolized to him the line of demarcation between the plain and the mountain, between order and violence.

Slowly he led his horse along the mountain side, grasping with eager desire at every changing aspect of the marvelous mountain scene. It was infinitely more gorgeous, more compelling, than his moonlight experience the night before.

As he led his horse out upon a projecting point of rocky ledge to rest his love for the range came back upon him with such power that tears misted his eyes and his throat ached. "Where else will I find such scenes at this?" he asked himself. "Where in all the lowlands could such splendors shine? How can I leave this high world in which these wonders come and go? I will not! Here will I bring my bride and build my home. This is my world."

But the mist grew gray, the aureole of fire faded, the sun went down behind the hills, and the chill of evening deepened on the trail, and as he reapproached the scene of man's inhumanity to man the thought of camping there beside those charred limbs called for heroic resolution. He was hungry, too, and as the air pinched he shivered.

"At the best the sheriff cannot reach here before midnight," he said, and settled down to his unsought, revolting vigil.

His one relief lay in the mental composition of a long letter to Lee Virginia, whose life at that moment was a comfort to him. "If such purity, such sweetness, can come from violence and vulgarity then surely a new and splendid state can rise even out of the ashes of these murdered men. Perhaps this is the end of the old," he mused, "perhaps this is the beginning of the new," and as he pondered the last faint crimson died out of the west. "So must the hate and violence die out of America," he said, "leaving the clear, sweet air of liberty behind."

He was near to the poet at the moment, for he was also the lover. His allegiance to the great republic stood the test. His faith in democracy was shaken, but not destroyed. "I will wait," he decided. "This shall be the sign. If this deed goes unavenged then will I put off my badge and my uniform and go back to the land where for a hundred years at least such deeds as these have been impossible."

He built a fire as night fell to serve both as a beacon and as a defense against the cold. He felt himself weirdly remote in this vigil. From his far height he looked abroad upon the tumbled plain as if upon an ocean dimly perceptible, yet august. "At this moment," he said, "curious and perhaps guilty eyes are wondering what my spark of firelight may mean."

His mind went again and again to that tall old man in the ditch. What was the meaning of his scared and sorrowful glance? Why should one so peacefully employed at such a time and in such a place wear the look of a hunted deer? What meant the tremor in his voice?

Was it possible that one so gentle should have taken part in this deed? "Preposterous suspicion, and yet he had a guilty look."

At last, far in the night, he heard the snort of a horse and the sound of voices. The law (such as it was) was creeping up the mountain side in the person of the sheriff of Chauvenet county and was about to relieve the ranger from his painful responsibility as guardian of the dead.

At last he came, this officer of the law, attended like a Cheyenne chief by a dozen lesser warriors of various conditions and kinds, but among them—indeed, second only to the sheriff—was Hugh Redfield, the forest supervisor, hot and eager with haste.

As they rode up to the fire the officer called out: "Howdy, ranger? How about it?"

Ross stated briefly, succinctly, what he had discovered, and as he talked other riders came up the hill and gathered closely around to listen in wordless silence—in guilty silence, the ranger could not help believing.

Redfield spoke. "Sheriff Van Horne, you and I have been running cattle in this country for nearly thirty years, and we've witnessed all kinds of shooting and several kinds of hanging, but when it comes to chopping and burning men I get off. I shall personally offer a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension of these miscreants, and I hope you'll make it your solemn duty to hunt them to earth."

"You won't have far to go," remarked Ross significantly.

"What do you mean?" asked the sheriff.

"I mean this slaughter, like the others that have taken place, was the work of cattlemen who claim this range. Their names are known to us all."

A silence followed—so deep a silence that the ranger was convinced of the fact that in the circle of his listeners stood those who, if they had not shared in the slaughter, at least knew the names of the guilty men.

At last the sheriff spoke, this time with a sigh. "I hope you're all wrong, Cavanagh. I'd hate to think any constituent of mine had sanctioned this job. Give me that lantern, Curtis."

The group of ranchers dismounted and followed the sheriff over to the grewsome spot, but Redfield stayed with the ranger.

"Have you any suspicion, Ross?"

"No, hardly a suspicion. However, you know as well as I that this was not a sudden outbreak. This deed was planned. It represents the feeling of many cattlemen—in everything but the extra horror of its execution. That was the work of drunken, infuriated men. But I am more deeply concerned over Miss Wetherford's distress. Did she reach you by telephone tonight?"

"No. What's the trouble?"

"Her mother is down again. I telephoned her, and she asked me to come to her, but I cannot go, for I have a case of smallpox up on the hill. Ambro, the Basque herder, is down with it, and another herder is up there alone with him. I must go back to them. But meanwhile I wish you would go to the Fork and see what you can do for her."

His voice, filled with emotion, touched Redfield, and he said, "Can't I go to the relief of the herder?"

"No; you must not think of it. You are a man with a family. But if you can find any one who has had the smallpox send him up. The old herder who is nursing the patient is not strong and may drop at any moment. Then it's up to me."

The men came back to the campfire conversing in low tones, some of them cursing in tones of awe. One or two of them were small farmers from Deer Creek, recent comers to the state, or men with bunches of milk cows, and to them this deed was awesome.

The sheriff followed, saying: "Well, there's nothing to do but wait till morning. The rest of you men better go home. You can't be of any use here."

For more than three hours the sheriff and Redfield sat with the ranger, waiting for daylight, and during this time the name of every man in the region was brought up and discussed. Among others, Ross mentioned the old man in the ditch.

"He wouldn't hurt a bumblebee," declared the sheriff. "He's got a bunch of cattle, but he's the mildest old man in the state. He's the last rancher in the country to even stand for such work. What made you mention him?"

"I passed him as I was riding back," replied Cavanagh, "and he had a scared look in his eyes."

The sheriff grunted. "You imagined all that. The old chap always has a kind of meek look."

It was nearly noon of a glorious day as Cavanagh, very tired and very hungry, rode up to the sheep herder's tent. Wetherford was sitting in the sun calmly smoking his pipe, the sheep were feeding not far away, attended by the dog, and an air of peace covered his sunlit rocky world.

"How is the Basque?" asked the ranger.

Wetherford pointed upward. "All over."

"Then it wasn't smallpox?"

"I reckon that's what it was; it sure was fierce. I judge it's a case of Injun burial—no ceremony—right here in the rocks. I'll let you dig the hole (I'm just about all in), but mind you keep to the windward all the time. I don't want you spotted."

Enthusiasm

In passing through the picture department the writer noticed a rough wooden sign, presumably a den or office decoration, upon which was printed in big, lusty letters the words: "Be enthusiastic—it's the life of trade."

What a splendid motto!

Enthusiasm IS the life of trade—the very FOUNTAIN of life, in fact. This would be a pretty dismal old world if none of us ever enthused over our efforts or expectations, and, on the other hand, the world would be a great deal better if MORE of us enthused.

We like enthusiastic people and we like to be enthusiastic ourselves. We like to contemplate what we HAVE done with enthusiasm and we like to enthuse over what we EXPECT to do.

We believe that enthusiasm enables us to perform our labor better and to work out the complex details of the modern merchandising game with greater ease and profit.

Enthusiasm is one of the most valuable assets a store or an individual can possess. No matter in what branch of human endeavor you earn your livelihood BE JUST AS ENTHUSIASTIC AS YOU POSSIBLY CAN.

OPPOSED TO A BILL.

Seventy-Five Communites Affected by Sewage Disposal Plant Measure.

PLAINFIELD IS AMONG THEM.

The City's Plant Might Be Closed If Frelinghuysen's Bill Should Become a Law.

As one of the seventy-five municipalities adversely affected by Senate bill No. 41, introduced by State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, Plainfield will work to prevent the passage of the measure as will North Plainfield, which is part of Frelinghuysen's constituetancy. In brief the bill provides that no sewage plant "shall be constructed, operated or maintained" by a municipality without the approval of the State Board of Health.

In its present shape the measure would place seventy-five communities in a position where on complaint to the State Board of Health would place their plants in jeopardy of being ordered closed. Plainfield's plant cost $350,000 and as there is much protest from Dunellen because of its location, the authorities here fear that the passage of the measure would be followed by an order to abandon it.

North Plainfield has already selected a site for a plant at Greenbrook. As the location is within two miles of Bound Brook, a fund has been gathered there to fight against it and the first step is seen in the introduction of a bill in the Legislature.

Plainfield's aim is to have the words "maintained" and "operated" stricken from the bill, while North Plainfield seeks to have it amended so as to prevent any protest where a site has already been selected.

FREE LITERATURE ON SOCIAL PURITY

A meeting which was of considerable interest to all the Mothers Associations of the State was held at the Chalfonte, Atlantic City, last Saturday by the Board of Managers of the congress who were the guests of Mrs. Sarah W. Leeds, a member of the board. Among other things committees were appointed on Child hygiene and chairman on sub-committees on infant mortality, eceptional children and physical welfare.

During the business session a vote was given to Mrs. Robert Hoe Dodd for her work on the propose new year book. Free literature on social purity is to be distributed to all clubs upon application to the literature committee of the association. This literature will be sold to other organizations. Leaflets describing the aims and purposes of the association may be obtained free by applying to the literature committee. Money was pledged to the cost of printing these leaflets.

That the Atlantic City branch of the congress has not been idle was shown by the reports of its very valuable work during the past year. A Day Nursery for colored children has been established and they own their own home. An organized charity is now in effect. The club has established mothers and teachers branches in all the schools with the assistance of Professor Boyer, of the school board and many other improvements made.

OCEAN SUICIDE NEWARK WOMAN

By leaping overboard from the Pacific mail steamship Manchuria, a woman missionary, said to be a resident of Newark, committed suicide last Friday, according to a cable dispatch received in New York Monday night.

The dispatch came from Tokio, and gave the woman's name as Miss Alice Darijee. It was declared that she had suffered a nervous breakdown from overwork and was on her way home on furlough.

When she leaped overboard, the dispatch stated, the Manchuria was steaming between Shangai and Nagasaki.

The news of the suicide, and the report that she belonged in Newark, caused some anxiety among the relatives there of Miss Alice Duryee, who, with two sisters, is engaged in missionary work in southern China. They were sent out by the Dutch Reformed church.

The anxiety regarding Miss Duryee was prompted by the similarity between her name and that of the suicide. While it was regarded as certain that no mistake had been made in the telegraphic transmission of the name, there was an opportunity to question whether or not the operator had read it correctly from the original message.

After reading the cable dispatches telling of the suicide in the China Sea, Miss Amy C. Duryee, of 30 Washington place, Newark, an aunt of Miss Duryee, went to the headquarters of the Women's Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed church, of 25 East Twentieth street, Manhattan, yesterday morning.

There had been no word received at the Washington place address, and Miss Duryee decided to go to New York to learn if any word had been sent there.

The last information to reach her came from the missionary herself, in a letter which was delivered to the young woman's aunts. In it she referred to her good health.

At the office of J. L. Amerman, treasurer of the mission board, it was said yesterday that Miss Duryee had been granted a furlough about a year ago. She was at Amoy, it was explained, and, from last accounts, in good health. If she had been ill, Mr. Amerman added, he felt sure he would have heard of it from Miss Duryee's sisters, with one of whom she resided.

Miss Duryee is a native of New Brunswick. She is a daughter of a professor in Rutgers College, who died several years ago. Previous to her entering the missionary field she made her home with her aunts.

Miss Duryee was a member of the First Reformed church, Newark, and for some time was engaged in mission work in connection with that church. On her departure for China she was given a farewell reception, which was attended by a number of the clergymen and misssion workers of the same denomination in Newark.

The Men's Association of Warren chapel will hold a regular meeting at the chapel, Friday night.

SPECIAL SERVICES IN THE CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

Appropriate services will be held in St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches tomorrow in celebration of Candlemas and St. Blaise's day, the latter falling on Friday. At St. Mary's services will be held on both days. At St. Joseph's tomorrow afternoon Father Miller will bless the throats of the children and at night a similar ceremony for the adult members of the congregation.

The custom of blessing the throats has its origin in the tradition of St. Blaise, who was put to death in 316 A. D., by order of Ayrrolus, governor of Canadosia, in Armenia, who persecuted the Christians. On his way to prison, a poor mother asked for the saint's blessing on her child, choking to death with a throat trouble. The request was complied with and the child immediately became better. The Catholic church has since honored the saint.

JARS CIRCUS MAN

Advance Agent Thunderstruck When the Mayor Refuses Passes.

NO "SKULLS" FOR OFFICIALS.

George W. V. Moy Warns the Showman, Who Says That He's Found the Circus Man's Paradise.

The elevation of George W. V. Moy to the mayoralty chair in Plainfield will result in "the City Beautiful" becoming known throughout the land as the showman's paradise. Twice within the past week has the chief executive refused to accept passes for circuses, declaring that they are a petty form of graft and that their bestowal upon any city official will result in drastic action upon his part. The advance guard of two tented aggregations which propose to exhibit here in the spring were so dumb-founded by the action of the mayor that one man believed he hadn't heard right and had a doctor examine his ears. Another sent $6 worth of telegrams to headquarters and amusement publications conveying the startling information.

Mr. Moy was seated in his office a few days ago when an agent for the Frank A.Robins' circus called to apply for a license. His request was complied with and as the executive finished writing out the necessary papers the representative tendered him a handful of paper slips.

"What are these?" asked the mayor.

The agent replied that they were passes. Then His Honor said:

"You sell tickets for a living. I grant you the permit because that is my duty. I don't think it right that you should give away your living. If I hear of you giving free tickets to any officials you will not have a license."

"Gosh," ejaculated the astonished agent, "this is the first time I ever knew this to happen and I've been in the circus business thirty years. For once I'm up against a clean game. Thank you, Mr. Mayor" and the caller backed out with the complimentaries clutched in his hands.

Yesterday the mayor received a similar call from another agent, blazing the trail for the Downey and Wheeler shows. This man also proffered passes after the license had been granted and paid for and again the executive delivered a paralytic stroke. When the mayor asserted that a distribution of complimentary tickets would mean the revocation of his permit, the showman stuttered and stammered and then asked that the remarks be repeated to make sure that he was not being fooled. Positive assurance was given him that the warning was in all sincerity and he echoed the thanks of his predecessor. He told the story to fully a score of people before taking a train, declaring in all his career he had never heard of the like.

As a matter of fact, the mayor's attitude in the matter is a body-blow at a long established custom. The pass evil is one of the greatest circus men have to contend with but they have been compelled to submit by fear of abusive official action relative to licenses for which they are willing to buy. The practice of holding up agents is nothing less than petty graft and whether he wishes it or not, Mayor Moy will be hailed by the showmen as a friend and champion.

MISS CRAMER'S FUNERAL WAS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The funeral service of Miss Margaret Cramer, the trained nurse, who died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Henry Squires, on West Eighth street, Monday morning, was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Cramer, on West Cliff street, Somerville, yesterday afternoon.

There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including many of the latter from this city. Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, rector of Grace church, assisted in the service, offering prayers. There was a large and beautiful display of floral tributes, including a number from friends here. The burial was in the family plot at Pluckemin.

COUNTY C.E. RALLY

To Celebrate Thirtieth Anniversary of the Society Tonight.

REV. MR. BROEK TO SPEAK.

Demonstration to Be Held at First Baptist Church in Rahway —Prizes to Be Awarded.

The thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavor Society will be appropriately observed under the direction of the increase campaign committee of the Union County Endeavor Union by a rally in the First Baptist church, Rahway, this evening, and there will be delegations from all parts of the county, including a large one from Plainfield.

A handsome banner and county pennants will be awarded for special effort in a campaign just closed and the entire program will be in harmony with the world-wide movement for increase which will culminate at Atlantic City in July, when the great international convention comes to New Jersey.

Pastors and leading officers in the societies will meet in the chapel of the church at 6:30 for a supper table conference. There will be a number of short responses to toasts. Rev. John Y. Broek, of this city, will speak on "Our Young Men;" State President John T. Sproull, of Arlington, will speak on "Our Young Women," and "Our Boys and Girls" is the subject assigned to Miss Nell C. Green, of Elizabeth, county Junior superintendent. Theodore N. Pockman, of New Brunswick, State district secretary for Middlesex county, will speak on "The Corresponding Secretary—A Living Link."

Two of the vice presidents of the county union are among the speakers, John D. Hood, of Summit, speaking on "Our Society Finances," and Clarence B. LaRue, of this city, on "Our Hosts." The closing speech will be by the Rev. Arthur S. Cole, pastor of the entertaining church. His topic will be: "Our Society—For Christ and the Church." Rev. Dr. John T. Kerr, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, and ex-president of the State Union, will act as toastmaster.

REV. DR. C. A. EATON TO DELIVER LECTURE

At the Park Avenue Baptist church this evening, Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, but who lives on the Valley road and is intensely interested in everything that affects this city, will deliver a lecture entitled "Widening Horizons in American Life." This lecture was delivered on November 3 last to a small audience in the First Baptist church. The audience was small because the night was a frightful one for anybody to be out. Tonight promises to be better and Rev. G. R. Maguire's church on Park avenue ought to be filled to its capacity.

The subject matter of Dr. Eaton's lecture is peculiarly applicable to present conditions. Mayor Moy's edict regarding the Sabbath observance has stirred the whole community and any enlightenment that Dr. Eaton can throw on the discussion as to the action of the mayor and the reasons for his attitude ought to interest everybody. Economic conditions are treated fully and the present day trend of the democracy and its reason for being are fully explained.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire has said that if there are any who cannot afford to buy a ticket he will gladly see that they hear the lecture free of charge if they will apply to him for the ticket of admission.

Charles Westphal Ill.

Charles Westphal, of East Third street, was taken to Muhlenberg hospital last night, to be treated for pneumonia. Mr. Westphal has been ill for some time and yesterday became delirious, injuring himself slightly by dropping from bed while no one was in the room.

Charles E. Day, of Red Bank, who was arrested yesterday for begging on the street, was allowed to go this morning by Judge William G. DeMeza on his promise to leave town.

PINTO COMPOSED THE PANTOMIME

Arrangements have been finally concluded for the Kinder Sinfonie pantomimes and dances which are to be given by Cup Bearers' Circle of the King's Daughters for the benefit of the Day Nursery on Saturday evening, February 11. Following the "Spring Symphony," by Mohr, under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, organist of Grace P. E. church, and played by the young women of the circle, a duet dance will be given by Miss Helen Stevens and Effingham Pinto.

"Flirtation," a pantomime composed by Effingham Pinto, will close the first half of the program. On the second half is the shadow dance by Miss Stevens and Mr. Pinto and the bird symphony by Romberg. This will be played by the Cup Bearers' orchestra. Light refreshments will be served at the end and there will be home made candy on sale. The entertainment will be given at the Park Club. Tickets may be procured from any member of the Circle.

LIST OF SPEAKERS FOR THE BANQUET

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce executive board last evening the list of speakers for the annual banquet on February 13 was made up. The following prominent men have accepted the invitation of the chamber to speak on that evening.

United States Senator-elect James E. Martine, whose topic will be Abraham Lincoln; George W. Perkins, formerly of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. Mr. Perkins will tell of the profit sharing scheme between employer and employee. Other speakers who have been assigned timely topics are George A. Post, former Congressman from Pennsylvania; William J. Moran, a member of the legal committee of the National Civic Federation; Col. Charles W. Fuller, former State superintendent of public instruction, and W. G. Besler, vice-president and general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

HEBREW MERCHANTS CONFER WITH MAYOR

Mayor Moy yesterday received a committee of the Jewish merchants of the city who called to protest against the alleged discrimination against that race in the Sunday closing edict. Kalman Rothberg was the spokesman for the party and asked His Honor why he had taken such an attitude.

Mayor Moy, said that he recognized the Hebrews as good citizens and respected their religion. He failed to see where he had done anything which could be possibly construed as against the Jews particularly, "but," he said, "if you can prove to me by any legal authority that I am wrong in the stand I have taken I would accept that proof. I would suggest that you consult some learned authority. I am sure of the ground I have taken in the matter and must say that it is a matter of public policy that there must be one day observed by all irrespective of creed or denomination."

The committee is said to have replied that a well known Newark lawyer would be consulted.

May See New Organ.

The Trinity Reformed church congregation will resume its services in the church edifice on Sunday morning after having worshipped in the Sunday school rooms for a month. At that time the curtain covering the handsome front of the memorial organ being erected by the Salmon Company, of Brooklyn, will be removed. The instrument will be dedicated and used for the first time probably during the latter part of the month. Mrs. Alfred Page will address the worshippers at the Sunday morning service on "Indian Work in the West."

Will Hold Cake and Candy Sale.

A cake and candy sale will be held Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. J. M. White, 815 Carlton avenue, under the auspices of the Women's Alliance of All Soul's church and for the benefit of the church. Tea will be served during the afternoon and all friends of the church are invited.

FULFILLS PLEDGE

Mayor Moy Makes Statement as to the Sunday Observance.

SIMPLY PERFORMING HIS DUTY

Complying With Request of The Daily Press He Tells Why He Has Issued the Order.

That the public may have a clear understanding as to the why and wherefore of Mayor Moy's action in instructing the police to enforce Sabbath observance, The Daily Press requested the city's executive to state the authority upon which he bases his duty to issue such instructions His Honor cheerfully complied as will be seen by his statement which follows:

The Principle.

"Sunday in law is a day set apart for the cessation of labor and business generally, in order that the physical and moral well being of society may be promoted, as it is recognized that stated intervals of rest are necessary for that purpose."—(Ency. Law, Vol. 27.)

Dictum of Law.

"According to the common judgment of civilized men public economy requires, for sanitary reasons a day of general rest from labor, and the day naturally selected is that regarded as sacred by the greatest number of citizens, as this causes the least interference with business."—(149, N. Y., 195.

The Pledge.

"(1) I made but one promise during the campaign, viz.: To act without fear or favor and enforce the law.

The Duty.

GASOLENE EXPLOSION CAUSE OF DISASTER?

Set Off the Dynamite on Lighter Says Jersey Central Manager---Prosecutor to Start Probe at Once---Twenty-eight Killed and 200 Injured---Some Plainfielders Are Hurt.

What caused the explosion of forty tons of dynamite at the Jersey Central terminal yesterday may never be accurately known, but it is altogether likely that its results will never fade from the minds of those who were in the immediate vicinity, to say nothing of the impression the accident made upon the officials of the railroad company. No attempt has yet been made to estimate the monetary loss, nor is it possible at this time to tell how many lives were sacrificed. So many of the laborers on the piers were blown to atoms that it will be necessary to examine the time-keeper's records to ascertain who they were and just where they were engaged and what they were doing. Certain it is that none of them will ever tell the story of explosion. Twenty-eight are missing.

Fortune smiled on several Plainfielders who escaped with just slight cuts on the face and hands. They were fortunate in not being killed outright. The force of the explosion was felt forty miles away from the scene and glass showers were prevalent for several moments afterwards. It was the falling plate glass that caused so many superficial wounds. It is not possible to say how many were cut, but it has been estimated that over four hundred men suffered. Many women who were in the crowds on the streets or in the ferry boats may thank prevailing fashion of hats for the protection afforded their precious complexions. The rims of scores of these broad brimmed creations were covered with bits of glass the size of a half dollar and even larger, but it is not recorded that any of them were cut badly. More women suffered from shock than anything else and a fainting one was a common sight for ten minutes after the dynamite broke loose.

Pier 7, where the giant powder exploded was about 700 feet long. Four railroad tracks feed their quota of freight cars on this outlet to the traffic of the road and several trains of partly loaded cars were standing there awaiting discharge when at precisely noon a detonation which shook the very earth rent the air and in a second what had been a scene of bustle and work was a desert of dust with here and there fragments of cars, boxes, beams and other debris mixed in with small portions of human remains. A ship which laid out perhaps 200 feet from pier 6 was denuded of rigging with the exception of one mast and up above the cross trees there dangled the arm of a man with the hand attached. The grewsome sight sickened stout hearted men and it was with difficulty that one was found who would volunteer to go aloft and release the ghastly relic.

While several people of this city were slightly cut there were none severely injured so far as is known now. However, Mrs. Howard Butler and her four-year-old daughter, Ruth, of Westfield, who were passengers on the ferryboat Somerville, were both cut on their arms. Their wounds were dressed by ambulance surgeons and they were sent home. Samuel C. Coale, also of Westfield, had his hands and face severely cut, but was able to go to his home after being attended to in the station.

Curious stories are told by persons in various places within the radius of twelve miles from the scene of the explosion. A man walking near the Battery in Manhattan was thrown to his knees and while wondering what had happened felt a breath of air which suddenly took on the force of a hurricane in his immediate neighborhood and bowled him over. Gertie Miller, an eleven-year-old Jersey City girl, while on her way home from school, had four toes cut off her right foot by a falling square of plate glass. Captain Sanders, of the Nova Scotia bark P. B. Hardwick, with his crew of five men and his twelve-year-old son were just sitting down to the mid-day meal when all seven went skyward, at least as far as the ceiling of the cabin would permit, and Captain Sanders landed in his own soup plate, while the others fell under the cabin table. The boy was the most severely bruised, but even he laughed when, after his bumps had been dressed, someone said "we never get such rides in Nova Scotia."

Another individual exclaimed "Great Scott! This must by Judgment Day," as he went to his knees, whether voluntarily or not was not learned, and began to pray with all his might. He was reassured by a passerby that it was not yet time for the blowing of the horn and he resumed the perpendicular.

George Wigginton, a newsdealer at the Central's Liberty Street station, was stretched in a barber's chair at the corner of West and Liberty streets when the explosion occurred. With the shock of the bursting dynamite, Wigginton jumped and the poised razor cut a gash across his throat from ear to ear. The wound was so bad that it was found necessary to remove the injured man to the Hudson Street hospital.

Local people besides those already mentioned as being injured included Hiram A. Woodruff, of Westervelt avenue, whose ear and face were cut by flying glass. Mr. Woodruff was with his wife who escaped without a scratch, although she shook about a pound of broken glass from the brim of her hat. Mr. Woodruff continued on his way as far as Riker's 23d street drug store, where his cuts were dressed. He bled for nearly an hour.

Marcus Hoyt, the North avenue tailor, who was aboard the Somerville, lost his new derby hat by having it sliced through the crown by a part of a flying plate glass window His wrist was so badly cut that he didn't wait for any ambulance attendance on the New York side of the river, but called a taxi and was driven to the office of a physician where his wounded wrist was dressed.

Mrs. Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, was among the passengers on the ferryboat in the slip at the time of the explosion. She suffered no injury beyond the shock.

Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven, of Hudson county, stated this afternoon that he would use all the power at his command to make the investigation into the cause of the accident thorough. It is Mr. Garven's aim to find out if possible who was responsible for the first explosion which it is now asserted set off the dynamite. The preliminary causes are said to have been the breaking of a tank of gasolene on one of the floats near dock No. 7, the fumes of the escaping fluid becoming ignited and bursting the tank with enough force to set off the dynamite. This has not yet been confirmed.

Vice President and General Manager W. G. Besler, of the Central Railroad, was quoted this morning as saying that $200,000 would easily cover the damages to the Central's property. But conservative estimates of damages to other property and the ensuing loss of life place the damage at $1,000,000.

Howard Tappscott, of 68 Willow avenue, was among the Plainfielders injured as a result of the explosion. He was aboard a Jersey Central ferryboat bound for New York, when the explosion occurred. He suffered from shock and was cut by flying glass and wood. He also stepped on a rusty nail, receiving a severe injury to his foot. He was first treated by an ambulance surgeon in New York and then sent home, where he is now under the care of a physician.

Mrs. Frederick Hillman, of New York, was also on a ferryboat, coming to Jersey City, en route for Plainfield, to visit Mrs. Thomas B. Leggett, of West Seventh street. She was thrown off her feet and received a severe shock. She was assisted to the train and she continued her journey, remaining with Mrs. Leggett until this morning, when she returned to her apartments in the Gotham Hotel, New York. Her injuries were not serious.

My Corns Don't Hurt A Bit

Tired, Aching, Swollen, Smelly, Sweaty Feet, Corns, Callouses and Bunions, TIZ Cures Right Off.

Say good-bye to your corns the very first time you use T I Z. You will never know you have a corn, bunion or callous, or sweaty, tired, swollen, aching feet any more. It's just wonderful the way the pain vanishes. Rub the corn—hammer it with your fist if you wish—no more pain after T I Z than if there had never been a blemish on your feet. Doesn't that sound good to you? Doesn't it? Then read this.

"The corns on either of my toes were as large as the tablets you make to cure them. To-day there is no sign of corns on either foot and no soreness. It's an up-to-date Godsend.—Sam. A. Hoover, Progress, N. C.

Just use T I Z. It's not like anything else for the purpose you ever heard of. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. T I Z cleans them out and keeps them clean. It works right off. You will feel better the very first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. T I Z is for sale at all druggists, 25 cents per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago. Ill

Nearly all of the 600 students at the Camden High School have supplied themselves with individual drinking cups. It is said that a fountain will be erected for their benefit as soon as possible.

Business men in the vinicity of Kaighn avenue and Fourth street, Camden, are discussing the subject of establishing an independent electric light plant. T. Edward Hollingshead and Howard Dudley are said to be back of the plan.

Mayor F. B. Stoy, of Atlantic City, Tuesday officially inspected the new wooden stave water main, recently completed, forty-eight inches in diameter, and capable of supplying the resort with twice as much water as it requires in the height of the season. He delcared it to be an engineering feat that reflects credit upon the progressiveness of the resort.

Pleading guilty to a charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons, Jas. Price, colored, was given six months in jail in the Criminal Court in Camden Tuesday. Returning home from a theatre with Ruth Ruffin, a colored actress, on October 11, the pair began skylarking at the Kaighn avenue ferry, when the woman was shot and so badly injured that she was not able to leave Cooper Hospital until a few weeks ago. The girl said that the shooting was purely accidental, but Price was held on a charge of unlawfully carrying firearms.

REAR-ADMIRAL C. S. SPERRY IS DEAD.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Rear-Admiral Charles Stillman Sperry, United States Navy, retired, who commanded the Atlantic fleet on the last leg of its round-the-world cruise, died suddenly yesterday morning at Garfield Hospital here of pneumonia.

Rear-Admiral Charles S. Sperry had long and distinguished service in the navy. He was a native of New York but was credited to Connecticut in his appointment to the Naval Academy in September, 1862. During the war with Spain, Admiral Sperry was equipment officer in the New York Navy Yard. Afterward he was given command of the gunboat Yorktown in Philippine waters, and directed the movements of the landing party on the eastern shore of Luzon, which is now regarded as one of the most thrilling incidents of the campaign against Aquinaldo.

As one of the officers under Admiral Walker, Sperry helped to make successful the picturesque voyage of the "white squadron" which visited Europe and South America in 1891-93. From the command of the New Orleans on the China station Admiral Sperry became president of the War College. His next detail was to the last Hague peace conference, where he went as one of the delegates. Returning from The Hague he was assigned to command the fourth division of the Atlantic fleet, in which capacity he has made the trip around the Horn with Admiral Evans.

BASEBALL.

The first time Cy Young got a good hard beating it was almost a tragedy for him," says Ed McKean. "It was in Chicago and they beat us 14 to 1. It was one of those beatings that don't hurt, because we had no chance to win.

"On the way to the hotel Cy sat in the carriage the picture of woe. You would think he'd lost everything in the world. Pat Tabeau sat facing the big fellow, and about a mile from the park he jumped up and pounced upon Cy.

"'Laugh, you big farmer, or I'll strangle you,' he said. 'I'm glad you were hit. I'm glad we were beaten. I wish they'd made a hundred runs. I'm captain of this team, and I'm glad we lost.

"'I've sat here looking at that face of yours until I'm almost frozen to death.'

"Finally a broad smile broke over Cy's face. 'Feel that way?' he asked, sort of relieved.

"Yes,' yelled Patsy, 'and tomorrow you'll have a chance to be hit again.' But the next day Cy had something to smile about, for he stood Anson and his crowd on their heads and that night he didn't have to be pounded into smiles."

Frank Laporte forwarded his signed contract to the Yankees Tuesday. In a brief letter he declared that he was feeling well and was ready for the season to open most any time. Laporte was a valuable member of the Yankees last season securing many a run with his timely hitting. His average was .264, but two home runs, six triplets and fourteen doubles were included in the record. As a second baseman he ranked third to Collins and Lajoie, with a fielding average of .956 for seventy-nine games. His work in the outfield was not so good. He played only twenty-four games in the garden, fielding at .881.

Charley Ebbets, of the Superbas, returned Tuesday on board the steamship Coamo from a month's vacation in Porto Rico. He looked the picture of health and said he had enjoyed a good rest and felt ready to do the work of two men. When asked about the spring training plans for his team, he smiled and said: "Go and see Bill Dahlen. I have been out of touch with baseball affairs for five weeks or so, and must pick up the loose ends before I can talk on that subject. Mr. Ebbets said that Porto Rico would be an ideal place for a spring training camp if it was not so far away, and added that the natives were keen for baseball and understood the game.

John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, announced Tesday that C. L. Hansel would accompany his team to Marlin Springs, Tex., to act as umpire in preliminary and exhibition games during the training trip of the city champions. Hansell will sail with the first squad of Giants on the Proteus, leaving New York for New Orleans at noon, February 11. Until seven years ago Hansell was a well known player and manager of minor league teams. He is an old pitcher. He played with McGraw on the Cedar Rapid club. Hansell made a hit with the Giants, by his work in exhibition games, at the Polo grounds last spring. Hansell called the balls and strikes when the Indians tackled the Giants at the Polo grounds last spring. The arbiter did nothing wonderful on that occasion.

The erratic Fred Beck signed a Boston National contract Tuesday. Beck was a holdout and during the time all kinds of rumors were afloat that Beck was to go to some Eastern League club. Both Pittsburg and St. Louis, however, wanted him and so did Tenney, and now that the hardest hitter on the team has signed all rumors about release and trades have quietly dropped.

Two veteran ball players may have places on the Chicago American team this season. President C. A. Comiskey announced yesterday that he will take "Jiggs" Donahue and James J. Callahan on the training trip to Mineral Wells, Tex., February 28. If the two veterans develop sufficiently they will be added to the list of regulars on the team.

The list of pitchers on the Philadelphia Athletics was increased Tuesday, when Manager Mack signed Herman Werner, of Jeannette, Pa. Werner is a right-hander who played last season on the team at Jeannette, which was managed by "Socks" Seybold, formerly of the Athletics. "Socks" tipped Manager Mack off to Werner, who will be taken South for a trial

GOLF.

Tried and true officials were once again chosen to guide the destiny of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association at the annual meeting of the organization, held at the residence of Mrs. M. D. Paterson, No. 51 West 87th street, New York, on Tuesday. Mrs. Paterson remains as president, Mrs. Howard F. Whitney, of Nasau, as vice-president, and Mrs. E. F. Sanford, of the Essex County Country Club, as secretary. The treasurer is Mrs. H. R. Stockton, of Plainfield; and Mrs. F. E. Donohoe, of Montclair, was elected as fifth member of the executive committee.

That the clubs are keen for an active competitive season was shown by the prompt manner in which one day tournament dates were decided upon. These were as follows: At Baltusrol, fourth Thursday in April; at Englewood, second Thursday in May; at Fox Hills, third Monday in May; at Baltusrol, fourth Thursday in September. Mrs. M. D. Paterson offered a prize for the fixture at Baltusrol; Mrs. Frank Enos, for the Englewood meeting; Mrs. H. L. Paterson for the Fox Hills tournament, and Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, for the second Baltusrol gathering. The association also voted to give a gross score prize at each of the one day tournaments.

An unofficial offer was received from the Hackensack Golf Club for the next championship tournament. This is a matter that is always left to the executive committee. It was stated at the meeting, however, that a majority of the women preferred to travel in another direction the next time. Not a few favored the Scarsdale Golf Club. While Mrs. J. A. Moore, the delegate from that club, had no instructions, she gave it as her opinion that Scarsdale would be pleased to take the tournament provided the association so wished. Some time ago the Wykagyl Country Club was spoken of as a championship possibility, but the only offer received from the New Rochelle body was a professional one for a one-day meeting.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were favorable. So far as members are concerned, the association has never been as large as at present, twenty-nine clubs being on the roll. The handicap list contains 126 names.

It was decided that in the future the selection of a ticket should be left to a nominating committee to be appointed by the executive body. Heretofore, the labor of nominating has fallen upon the executive committee.

The following clubs were represented at yesterday's meeting: Montclair Golf Club, Mrs. R. O. Smith and Mrs. F. E. Donohoe; Essex County Country Club, Mrs. E. F. Sanford; Englewood Country Club, Mrs. Frank Enos; Scarsdale Golf Club, Mrs. J. A. Moore; Nassau Country Club, Mrs. Howard F. Whitney; Baltusrol Golf Club, Mrs. M. D. Paterson and Mrs. H. L. Paterson; Plainfield Country Club, Miss Alice Titus and Miss Marie Roberts; Richmond County Country Club, Mrs. Lorenzo Daniels; Midland Golf Club, Mrs. F. T. Hayes; Hackensack Golf Club, Mrs. James Barclay and Mrs. Thomas; Wykagyl Country Club, Mrs. W. J. Faith and Mrs. F. B. McClain.

Plainfield, N. J., February 2, 1910.

THE MAYOR IS RIGHT.

In these days when we hear so much about patriotism and civic pride, it appears rather strange to hear men who are good citizens criticize Mayor Moy for his edict regarding the Sabbath observance law. What, pray, is the sum of the mayor's offending? It is simply that he takes a firm stand for the enforcement of the law; not the interpretation of the law as he gives, but the letter of the law as he finds it. The worst of it all is that in order to heap ridicule on the mayor, who is doing his full duty, some are inclined to distort and exaggerate both the letter and the spirit of the executive order.

Now that those who do not apprehend the real truth of the matter, it should be stated that the statute and the ordinance prohibit general business being done on the day commonly called Sunday unless the merchant by religious conviction chooses to observe Saturday as his Sabbath. In that event he is free to carry on his business on Sunday provided he does not do so on Saturday. The mayor, it appears, is working under the local ordinance. This measure specifically provides that milk, medicine and necessities may be sold on Sunday. Necessities is a very broad term and includes many things which today are considered as essentials to life and its enjoyment which were not so considered at the time of the enactment of either the ordinance or the statute. There is provision too, by law whereby vehicles for the transportation of passengers may not be interfered with. There is no disposition on the mayor's part, it appears, to interfere with the religious proclivities of any merchant. And it is unfortunate, it is unjust, that his attutude should be so represented or rather misrepresented.

It was General Grant who said that the best way to bring about the repeal of a bad law was to rigidly enforce it. That is precisely what the mayor is doing. He personally, however, does not consider it a bad law. Opinion in this respect is naturally much divided. Many of us consider that times have changed and that the measure enacted years ago for the observance of the Sabbath are not fitted for this age. Nothing better could happen for those who would see the statute and ordinance taken off the books than to make the enforcement so odious as to bring about that end.

We might recall right here that when Mr. Moy was campaigning for the mayoralty he repeatedly emphasized the fact, that he stood for the enforcement of the law and, moreover, that he meant all the laws. It is not material to the issue that perhaps he has not enforced all the laws. He has only been in office a month and the super-human should not be expected of him. Give him time. The people elected him mayor. They knew very well where he stood and what he would do. His opponent made it all very plain and after listening to both sides, the majority of the citizens voted in favor of him and his policies. Why, then all this protest?

THE FORUM.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

Editor, The Daily Press:

As a property owner in this city, I decidedly protest against the arbitrary, unreasonable and unjust measures adopted by his honor the mayor. I have just as much respect for Sunday as his honor, but will give my first experience showing results of the plans he has advanced for making this a model city in his opinion. I would prefer expressing the real reason in my opinion for his carrying out the old ordinances, that no reasonable man or any one with interest of the city at heart should insist upon, but do not consider it policy to put it in print.

Last Sunday I arranged for four couples to visit our city with an idea of locating here. Two of the gentlemen were considering factory plants. After dining here they happened to not have cigars and wished to smoke were informed they could not be supplied with any in this city, and also advised of the other unreasonable blue law ordinances which his honor proposed to enforce. The plan of the visitors was to hire an automobile and look our city over particularly as a place of residence. The result. They returned to New York and Brooklyn by first train, where they reside. As one of the party remarked he didn't propose to locate in a city governed and controlled as we were; but furthermore said he did not object to our mayor's orders, as a whole, but there was no knowing where this thing would end. He asked: Are Sunday papers to be delivered? What about garages, will they be open for our automobiles? Just find out how far this is going before you ask us to come out again.

It is not to be expected that out of town people will locate here under present or possible future conditions. My friends admitted they seldom if ever bought cigars, candy, soda or happened to visit the bootblack Sunday, and I know from their high standing that they have no reason to, but free people do not like to be governed by an iron hand. This is not Russia.

FORTY-SEVEN BIRTHS IN CITY IN JANUARY

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health was held last evening in the board rooms in the Smalley building. Reports of the various inspections made during the month showed that the city is comparatively free from contagious diseases, only twenty-five of the dangerous diseases being reported. These were chicken pox, 2; diphtheria, 3; scarlet fever, 9; tuberculosis, 8; and typhoid fever, 3. Two additional cases of typhoid were received at Muhlenberg hospital during the month, one of which proved fatal. These came from out of town.

There were 16 marriages, 47 births, and 33 deaths. Two still births were recorded. Of the 33 deaths five were of non-residents.

Inspections of milk supply and daries showed a better condition than for the month of December. The milk was found to be generally of a better quality and freer from bacteria than usual. The highest bacterial count being 49,500 per cubic centimeter.

One butcher shop was found to be in such a condition that it was closed up until thoroughly sanitary conditions were installed. In cooperation with Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, a thorough inspection of the dumping grounds was made. Ashmen were summoned to the board rooms and specific instructions given to each. This resulted in closing up of several dumps of which complaints had been made to the board.

Renewal bonds were filed by three plumbers: N. Cody, A. Rosenthal and Arthur Newman. J. H. Snowden's application for a milk permit was laid on the table for a month and that of Mark Morris was refused. One application for a barber's license was referred to the Health Officer with power. Fourteen houses, with 51 rooms, were disinfected as was the isolation ward of Muhlenberg hospital. One family which was living in unsanitary surroundings was forced to vacate their premises. The total number of inspections made during the month were 829, as follows: Plumbing, 68; milk supply, 102; general, 659.

Motoring in Germany.

On this coming Sunday evening, at Carnegie Hall, and on the following Monday and Tuesday afternoon at the Lyceum theatre, Burton Holmes will give the fourth Travelogue in his present series, the subject being "Motoring in Germany." Starting with Bohemian Carlsbad, he crosses the German frontier in his motor car and tours through the lovely rural districts of Germany, visiting en route such historical and interesting cities as Nuremberg, Rothenburg, Heidelberg, and smaller cities of interest to every tourist, and thence motors through the Black Forest visiting the falls of the Rhine, once more crosses the German border, ending his delightful "Personally Conducted Motor Tour" in Swiss Lucerne. Owing to the enormous demand for seats at his recent Travelogu on the "Passion Play of Oberammergau," it is announced that he will repeat his Passion Play Travelogue on Sunday evening, February 19, at Carnegie Hall and also at a special matinee at the Lyceum theatre on Tuesday afternoon, February 21.

GETS MILLIONS.

Former Town Clerk of Hardwick, Mass., Inherits $4,000,000.

Also Was a Hardworking Farmer Until Uncle, a "Forty Niner," Died and Left Him His Fortune.

Boston.—After courting fortune as a humble Hardwick farmer and town clerk for years Timothy Paige, a former Massachusetts representative, has suddenly fallen heir to $4,000,000. A forgotten uncle left him the money.

Paige has had to give up his town clerkship now. He finds that his millions are trouble enough.

In the face of his good fortune Paige, being named as coheir of an undivided portion with his sister, Mrs. Lydia Paige Monteagle of San Francisco, has been forced to pay not only a $65,000 inheritance tax in New York state, the residence of his uncle benefactor, Calvin D. Paige, but he has also had to pay to the state of California an additional $65,000. These little trifles and a few others are giving him fully as much worry as did his town clerk duties.

The legacy left him by his uncle, who while a forty-niner won his immense fortune as a trader rather than by direct gold discovery, came as a great surprise.

Calvin D. Paige was also a benefactor of and much interested in beautifying Hardwick. Realizing that there was not likely to be any one to take up his work immediately after his demise, he provided for the continuance of what he had already begun by giving the town a library and in sundry other ways.

He left the sum of $155,000 to the town, $100,000 to be used in building and preparing a fair grounds, $50,000 for the beautifying of the cemetery and adjacent highways and the remainder for the common schools. He also left $25,000 to the church. Both the church and the town find themselves in something like a quandary as just how to expend the money thus opportunely left them.

Timothy Paige.

Until his recent stroke of good luck Paige managed by dint of continuous labor to prove that farming paid.

The Paige homestead, on which he lived, was the birthplace also of his Uncle Calvin, who left with two brothers to join in the pilgrimage to the golden Mecca with the forty-niners of nearly threescore years ago.

Timothy only toiled on at home, sticking to the old farm. He tilled and redeemed section after section of barren land. He saved the woodland, which finally became the chief asset of his erstwhile fortune.

When his father-in-law, A. E. Knight, who had held the office of town clerk in Hardwick for thirty-one years, decided to resign Mr. Paige got the job. He was also made an assessor of taxes. In the Universalist church he was a member of the parish committee for three decades, also being its collector and treasurer. In 1901 and 1902 he was sent to represent the town in the legislature.

He was so busy with other duties and the task of farming that he finally gave up the homestead farm, which was accordingly sold.

This place will now probably be sold once more, and it is not improbable in view of his recent good fortune that Mr. Paige may himself become the purchaser, although if so he would be a summer resident, as he purposes removing from Hardwick to be near his new business interests.

Find Gun Hid In War Days.

Exeter, Mo.—A much sought after old cannon captured from Kansas troops by General Sterling Price's Confederate raiders in 1864 was found in a deep hole in Flat creek, near here.

A party headed by E. F. Heisler, secretary of the Kansas Soldiers' Memorial association, found the gun, which will be placed in the rooms of the Kansas State Historical society at Topeka.

The cannon was a part of the equipment of a force of Kansans under Colonel G. W. Veal of Topeka on a march from Springfield, Mo., to Fort Smith, Ark. Attacked by General Price's command and driven back toward Springfield, the Kansans lost the gun, but rallied and pursued Price's men so closely that they, rather than lose the cannon, threw it down a deep hole, where it has remained forty-six years.

NEWEST TELEPHONE.

Permits Ten Different People to Speak Over One Wire.

Invention of Major Squier, Who Has Dedicated It to the People of the United States.

Washington.—Patents have just been issued covering an important discovery in telephony made by an army officer, who dedicates his invention to the people of the United States so that any one can make use of it free of all royalty, license or rent. The patentee is Major George O. Squier of the signal corps, who for years has been a student of electrical science.

The discovery may be described broadly as wireless telephony guided by a wire. As many as ten conversations or more, it is said, may be held over one wire. The theory is that the vibrations of the ether surrounding the wire become the vehicle by which conversation is held, not by the wire, as in ordinary telephony. The instruments to be employed are those now commonly used in ordinary wireless telephony and may be bought of almost any electrical supply establishment. There is, as in wireless telephony, a use of "tunes" for each conversation.

Major Squier believes that general use will soon be made of his discovery by private individuals and by telephone companies. He expects that one result will be a general reduction of the cost of telephone service and possibly its more widely distributed use. The machine is regarded as of special value for long distances. It gives a clear and audible tone.

The experiments between the construction laboratory of the signal corps and its laboratory at the bureau of standards have been witnessed by many local scientists. One feature of the new telephone is its success in transmitting music over the wires. The strains of a band, violin or an organ are distinctly heard. It is believed that long distance transmission of opera music, sermons and lectures is possible by this means.

The new system of multiplex telephony, it is said, may be applied to all local telephone exchanges without any modification of the present installation.

RED CROSS SCHOOL CAR.

Going About the Country to Give Instruction In First Aid to Injured to Workingmen.

New York.—The American Red Cross has now in operation a first aid car. This car was donated by the Pullman company and has been fully equipped by the Red Cross with all sorts of first aid material. It is in direct charge of Dr. M. Whitfield Glasgow of Birmingham, Ala., who was employed for this special work by the first aid department of the Red Cross.

The car was outfitted at the Pullman shops in Buffalo and is now on the road in Illinois. Its work evidently appeals to the various railway officials, as the railways are hauling it free of charge.

The car will proceed from place to place, stopping at railway, manufacturing and mining centers where the best opportunities present themselves for organizing first aid classes. Just as has been done by the Red Cross in the mining field, an attempt will be made to interest employers, employees and local physicians alike, so that first aid to the injured instruction will have general support and countenance after the car has visited a place.

Though the Red Cross car is primarily designed for instruction purposes, it will also always be available when needed for rescue work and care of injured in case of disaster, as it is fully equipped for this purpose.

A Barrel of Balzac Letters.

Paris.—The French academy has received from the Comte de Lovenjoul a priceless collection of letters written by Balzac. The story of his acquisition of these letters is as follows: One day he saw a cobbler light his pipe with a twisted letter. The ink on the paper thereof was faded, but the handwriting interested the collector. He had recognized the great novelist's script and straightway bought the letter for a napoleon. The cobbler then informed the count that he had bought a barrel of these letters as waste paper, which he used for wrapping shoes when he was not lighting his pipe. And that is the history of the academy's Balzac letters, fonds Lovenjoul.

Refuses $40,000 Job.

Washington.—Charles Dyer Norton, secretary to President Taft, likes politics so well that he refused to quit and go back to the humdrum of a $40,000 job with an insurance company.

When Mr. Norton came to Washington a little more than a year ago to take up the assistant secretaryship of the treasury he procured a leave of absence from the insurance company which employed him. This leave has expired, and Mr. Norton's old lucrative place will be filled by a new man. He likes politics too well to give up. He will remain with President Taft.

Arts and Crafts Furniture

SUCH AS THE STICKLEY BROS. CO. MAKE IS UNSURPASSED IN BEAUTY.

Doubtless the chief reason for designating the product of the Stickley Bros. Co. factories "Arts and Crafts" was to set it apart from what is commonly classed as "Mission" furniture. The true mission type is, for the most part, clumsy and heavy and is not liked by a great many because of this. The "Arts and Crafts" pieces are lighter and more graceful and still lend that quiet simplicity that has brought to mission furniture generally its great popularity and has caused it to become a part of the furnishing of so many American homes

This tremendous purchase embraces furniture for all sorts of rooms, so that one may furnish an entire home, an office, club or cafe, and have it in perfect harmony at one-third off usual cost.

Halls, Dens, Libraries, Dining-Rooms, Bedrooms, Living Rooms, Offices, Clubs, Cafes, Taprooms—all may be furnished from this surpassingly large collection of quaint mission pieces, which combine utility, comfort and art.

A MARK TWAIN STORY

Showing What May Be Achieved by Nerve and Reiteration.

A LESSON IN PERSEVERANCE.

Going to Prove That Repetition Will Work Wonders if a Man Has Only the Necessary Amount of Cheek to Stand Up and Keep on Talking.

Mark Twain once told a reporter that if a man says the same thing often enough people will begin to listen to him.

"Now," said the great humorist, "there was that story about Hank Monk. That was the oldest, stalest, driest, deadest bit of alleged humor that any man ever heard. It had been circulated around Nevada and California until there wasn't a man left who would even listen to it. I had heard it so many times that I knew it by heart. It told how Hank Monk got Horace Greeley over the Glennbrook grade to Placerville.

"I was about to deliver my second lecture at Platt's hall in San Francisco—the second one I had ever delivered. It occurred to me that I might begin that lecture with the worst story I had ever heard and by telling it often enough start the lecture with a big laugh. I took that story and memorized it so that it would not vary in the telling, and I made it just as pointless and just as dull and just as dry as I could.

"When it came time for me to talk I stood up and with a few introductory remarks began that story. If I remember it went something like this:

"'Horace Greeley once went over the Glennbrook grade to Placerville. When he was leaving Carson City he told the driver, Hank Monk, that he had an engagement to lecture at Placerville and was very anxious to go through quick. Hank Monk cracked his whip and started off at an awful pace. The stage bounced up and down in such a terrific way that it jolted the buttons all off Horace's coat and finally shot his head clean through the roof of the stage, and then he yelled to Hank Monk and begged him to go easier—said he warn't in as much of a hurry as he had been awhile ago. But Hank Monk said, "Keep your seat, Horace, and I'll get you there on time!" And he did, too—what was left of him.'

"Now, that was all there was to the story. It was bad enough to begin with, but I made it worse in the telling. I droned it out in a flat, monotonous tone, without a gesture to mar its depressing effect. The people received it in dead silence. I had insulted every man in the audience—I had 'graveled' them with a story that was not only stale and pointless, but one which they had heard at least a thousand times. I waited a few seconds for the laughter, and then I began to hem and haw and shift my feet. I tried to appear just as embarrassed as I could, and after floundering about helplessly for a few sentences I cheered up a little and said that I would tell a funny anecdote which might be new to them. It began:

"'Horace Greeley went over the Glennbrook grade to Placerville'—

"I told it in exactly the same miserable, pointless way that I had told it before, and when I got through I waited a longer time for the applause, but there wasn't any applause. I could see that several men in the house were growing quite indignant. They had paid money to hear a humorous lecture. I took a long breath and plunged in a third time, more embarrassed and flustered and worried than ever, and by and by I worked around again to the time when Horace Greeley went over Glennbrook grade to Placerville.

"This time some of the smarter ones began to laugh, and this encouraged me so much that I thanked them and started right in to tell the story over again, never varying the delivery so much as a pause to take breath. The fourth time fetched 'em, and at the end of the story they stood up and whooped and yelled and cheered for some time.

"You see, I thought that if a man had sand enough to stand up before an audience and tell the oldest, stalest and most uninteresting story in the world he could make people laugh if he had the nerve to tell the story often enough. The rest of my lecture went very well. They were willing to laugh at my anecdotes the first time I told them. Maybe they were afraid I would tell them a second time.

"I felt so sure that I had discovered a new phase in human character that I tried the same thing in New York years afterward. There was an authors' reading bee one afternoon, and most of the authors read selections from their works. I sat on the platform beside James Russell Lowell. He asked me what I was going to read. I said that I wasn't going to read anything. I intended to tell an anecdote.

"'Is it a funny one?' he asked.

"I said it would be if I lasted long enough.

"I started out without any preamble, and I told the Hank Monk anecdote. There was an awful silence at the end. I took a drink of water, mopped my forehead and told the story again. Same effect. Young man, I told that story five times before I landed 'em. When I sat down at last Mr. Lowell whispered to me:

"'You have cost me dear. I have been sitting here and wasting sympathy on you.'

"That's the point, young man. Repetition will do anything if a man has the sand to stand up and keep on talking."—New York American.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Cavanagh understood the necessity for these precautions, but first of all came his own need of food and rest. Turning his tired horse to grass, he stretched himself along a grassy, sunny cranny between the rocks and there ate and afterward slept, while all about him the lambs called and the conies whined.

He was awakened by a pebble tossed upon him, and when he arose, stiff and sore, but feeling stronger and in better temper, the sun was wearing low. Setting to work at his task, he threw the loose rock out of a hollow in the ledge near by, and to this rude sepulcher Wetherford dragged the dead man, refusing all aid, and there piled a cairn of rocks above his grave.

The ranger took a hand at the end and rolled some huge bowlders upon the grave to insure the wolves' defeat.

"Now burn the bedding," he commanded. "The whole camp has got to go, and your clothing, too, after we get down the hill."

"What will we do with the sheep?"

"Drive them over the divide and leave them."

All these things Wetherford did, and, leaving the camp in ashes behind him, Cavanagh drove the sheep before him on his homeward way. As night fell the dog, at his command, rounded them up and put them to bed, and the men went on down the valley, leaving the brave brute on guard, pathetic figure of faithful guardianship.

"It hurts me to desert you, old fellow," called the ranger, looking back, "but there's no help for it. I'll come up in the morning and bring you some biscuit."

It was long after dark when they entered the canyon just above the cabin, and Wetherford was shivering from cold and weakness.

"Now, you pull up just outside the gate and wait there till I bring out some blankets. Then you've got to strip to the skin and start the world all over again," said Cavanagh. "I'll build a fire here, and we'll cremate your past. How about it?"

"I'm willing," responded Wetherford. "You can burn everything that belongs to me but my wife and my girl."

All through the ceremony which followed ran this self banter. "I'll be all ranger, barring a commission," he said, with a grin as he put on the olive yellow shirt and a pair of dusty green trousers. "And here goes my past!" he added as he tossed his contaminated rags upon the fire.

"What a corking opportunity to make a fresh start," commented Cavanagh. "I hope you see it."

"I see it, but it's hard to live up to your mark."

When every precaution had been taken the ranger led the freshly scrubbed, scoured and transformed fugitive to his cabin.

"Why, man, you're fit for the state legislature," he exclaimed as they came into the full light. "My clothes don't precisely meet every demand you make upon them, but they give you an air of command. I wish your wife could see you now." Then, seeing that Wetherford was really in earnest, he added: "You can stay with me as long as you wish. Perhaps in time you might be able to work into the service as a guard, although the chief is getting more and more insistent on real foresters."

There were tears in Wetherford's eyes as he said: "You cannot realize what this clean, warm uniform means to me. For nine years I wore the prison stripes. It is ten years since I was dressed like a man."

"You need not worry about food or shelter for the present," replied Cavanagh gently. "Grub is not costly here, and house rent is less than nominal, so make yourself at home and get strong."

Wetherford lifted his head. "But I want to do something. I want to redeem myself in some way. I don't want my girl to know who I am, but I'd like to win her respect. I can't be what you say [illegible] but if I had a chance I might show myself a man again. I wouldn't mind Lize knowing that I am alive. It might be a comfort to her. But I don't want even her to be told till I can go to her in my own duds."

"She's pretty sick," said Cavanagh. "I telephoned Lee Virginia last night, and if you wish you may ride down with me tomorrow and see her."

The old man fell a-tremble. "I daren't do that. I can't bear to tell her where I've been."

"She needn't know. I will tell her you've been out of your mind. I'll say anything you wish. You can go to her in the clothes you have on if you like. She will not recognize you as the prisoner I held the other night. You can have your beard trimmed, and not even the justice will know you."

All reserve had vanished out of the convict's heart, and with choking voice he thanked his young host. "I'll never be a burden to you," he declared in a firmer voice. "And if my lung holds out I'll show you I'm not the total loco that I 'pear to be."

CHAPTER XVI.

CAVANAGH FOLLOWS HIS CHIEF.

At breakfast next morning Cavanagh said: "I must ride back and take some bread to the dog. I can't go away and leave him there without saying hello."

"Let me do that," suggested Wetherford. "I'm afraid to go down to the Fork. I reckon I'd better go back and tend the sheep till Gregg sends some one up to take my place."

"That might be too late to see Lize, Lee's voice showed great anxiety. She may be on her deathbed. No; you'd better go down with me today," he urged. And at last the old man consented.

Putting some bread in his pockets, Ross rode off up the trail to see how the dog and his flock were faring. He had not gone far when he heard the tinkle of the bells and the murmur of the lambs, and a few moments later the collie came toward him with the air of a boy who, having assumed to disregard the orders of his master, expects a scolding. He plainly said: "I've brought my sheep to you because I was lonesome. Please forgive me."

Cavanagh called to him cheerily and tossed him a piece of bread, which he caught in his teeth, but did not swallow. On the contrary, he held it while leaping for joy of the praise he heard in his new found master's voice.

Turning the flock upward toward the higher peaks, the ranger commanded the collie to their heels and so, having redeemed his promise, rode back to the cabin, where he found Wetherford saddled and ready for his momentous trip to the valley. He had shaved away his gray beard, and had Ross been unprepared for these changes he would have been puzzled to account for this decidedly military figure sitting statuesquely on his pony before the door.

"You can prove an alibi," he called as he drew near. "Gregg himself would never recognize you now."

Wetherford was in no mood for joking. "Lize will. I wore a mustache in the old days, and there's a scar on my chin."

As he rode he confided this strange thing to Cavanagh. "I know," said he, "that Lize is old and wrinkled, for I've seen her, but all the same I can't realize it. That heavy set woman down there is not Lize. My Lize is slim and straight. This woman whom you know has stolen her name and face, that's all. I can't explain exactly what I feel, but Lee Virginia means more to me now than Lize."

"I think I understand you," said Cavanagh, with sympathy in his voice.

The nearer Wetherford came to the actual meeting with his wife the more he shook. At last he stopped in the road. "I don't believe I can do it," he declared. "I'll be like a ghost to her. What's the use of it? She'll only be worried by my story. I reckon I'd better keep dark to everybody. Let me go back. I'm plum scared cold."

While still he argued two men on horseback rounded a sharp turn in the trail and came face to face with the ranger. Wetherford's face went suddenly gray. "There's the deputy!"

"Keep quiet. I'll do the talking," commanded Cavanagh, who was instant in his determination to shield the man. "Good morning, gentlemen," he called cheerily. "You're abroad early!"

The man in front was the deputy sheriff of the county; his companion was a stranger.

"That was a horrible mess you stumbled on over on Deer creek," the deputy remarked.

"It certainly was. Have any arrests been made?"

"Not yet, but we're on a clew. This is Marshal Haines of Dallas, Mr. Cavanagh," pursued the deputy. The two men nodded in token of the introduction, and the deputy went on, "You remember that old cuss that used to work for Gregg?"

Again Cavanagh nodded.

"Well, that chap is wanted by the Texas authorities. Mr. Haines here wants to see him mighty bad. He's an escaped convict with a bad record."

"Is that so?" exclaimed Cavanagh. "I thought he seemed a bit gun shy."

"The last seen of him was when Sam Gregg sent him up to herd sheep. I think he was mixed up in that killing myself—him and Ballard—and we're going up to get some track of him. Didn't turn up at your station, did he?"

"Yes; he came by some days ago, on his way, so he said, to relieve that sick Basque, Ambro. I went up a couple of days ago and found the Basque dead and the old man gone. I buried the herder the best I could, and I'm on my way down to report the case."

The deputy mused: "He may be ranging 'round some of the lumber camps. I reckon we had better go up and look the ground over anyhow. We might just chance to overhaul him."

"He may have pulled out over the range," suggested the ranger. "Anyhow, it's a long way up there, and you'll probably have to camp at my place tonight. You'll find the key hanging over the door. Go in and make yourself comfortable."

The deputy thanked him and was about to ride on when Cavanagh added: "I burned that Basque's tent and bedding for fear of contagion. His outfit was worthless anyhow. You'll find the sheep just above my cabin and the horse in my corral."

"The old man didn't take the horse, eh? Well, that settles it; he's sure at one of the camps. Much obliged. Good day."

As the two officers rode away Wetherford leaned heavily on his pommel and stared at the ranger with wide eyes. His face was drawn and his lips dry. "They'll get me! They'll get me!" he said.

"Oh, no, they won't," rejoined Cavanagh. "You're all right yet. They suspect nothing. How could they, with you in uniform and in my company?"

"All the same, I'm scared. That man Haines had his eyes on me every minute. He saw right through me. They'll get me, and they'll charge me up with that killing."

"No, they won't, I tell you," insisted the ranger. "Haines suspected nothing. I had his eye. He never saw you before and has nothing but a description to go by, so cheer up. Your uniform and your position with me will make you safe—perfectly safe. They'll find the Basque's camp burned and the sheep in charge of the dog, and they'll fancy that you have skipped across the range. But see here, old man," and he turned on him sharply, "you didn't tell me the whole truth. You said you were out on parole."

"I couldn't tell you the whole truth," replied the fugitive. "But I will now. I was in for a life sentence. I was desperate for the open air and homesick for the mountains, and I struck down one of the guards. I was willing to do anything to get out. I thought if I could get back to this country and my wife and child I'd be safe. I said I'd be willing to go back to the pen if necessary, but I'm not. I can't do it. I'd die there. You must save me for my girl's sake."

His voice and eyes were wild with a kind of desperate fury of fear, and Cavanagh, moved to pity, assured him of his aid. "Now, listen," he said. "I'm going to shield you on account of your work for that poor shepherd and for your daughter's sake. It's my duty to apprehend you, of course, but I'm going to protect you. The safest thing for you to do is to go back to my cabin. Ride slow, so as not to get there till they're gone. They'll ride over to the sawmill without doubt. If they come back this way remember that the deputy saw you only as a ragged old man with a long beard and that Haines has nothing but a printed description to go by. There's no use trying to flee. You are a marked man in that uniform, and you are safer right here with me than anywhere else this side of Chicago. Haines is likely to cross the divide in the belief that you have gone that way, and if he does you have no one but the deputy to deal with."

He succeeded at last in completely rousing the older man's courage.

Wetherford rose to meet his opportunity. "I'll do it," he said firmly.

"That's the talk!" exclaimed Cavanagh to encourage him. "You can throw them off the track this time, and when I come back tomorrow I'll bring some other clothing for you, and then we'll plan some kind of scheme that will get you out of the country. I'll not let them make a scapegoat of you."

The ranger watched the fugitive as he started back over the trail in this desperate defiance of his pursuers with far less confidence in the outcome than he had put into words.

"All depends on Wetherford himself. If his nerve does not fail him, if they take the uniform for granted and do not carry the matter to the supervisor, we will pull the plan through." And in this hope he rode away down the trail with bent head, for all this bore heavily upon his relationship to the girl waiting for him in the valley. He had thought Lize a burden, a social disability, but a convict father now made the mother's faults of small account.

The nearer he drew to the meeting with Lee Virginia the more important that meeting became. Cavanagh had seen Virginia hardly more than a score of times, and yet she filled his thought, confused his plans, making of his brain a place of doubt and hesitation. For her sake he had entered upon a plan to shield a criminal, to harbor an escaped convict. It was of no avail to argue that he was moved to shield Wetherford because of his heroic action on the peak. He knew perfectly well that it was because he could not see that fair, brave girl further disgraced by the discovery of her father's identity, for in the searching inquiry which would surely follow his secret would develop.

To marry her, knowing the character of her father and her mother, was madness, and the voice within him warned him of his folly. "Pure water cannot be drawn from corrupt sources," it is said. Nevertheless the thought of having the girl with him in the wilderness filled him with divine recklessness. While still he debated, alternately flushed with resolve to be happy and chilled by some strange dejection, he met Swenson, the young guard who guarded the forest on the South Fork.

As he rode up Cavanagh perceived in the other man's face something profoundly serious. He did not smile in greeting, as was usual with him, and, taking some letters from his pocket, passed them over in ominous silence. He had a face of such bitterness that it broke through even the absorbed and selfish meditation into which Cavanagh had been thrown.

"What's the matter, Swenson? You look as if you had lost a friend."

"I have," answered the guard shortly, "and so have you. The chief is out."

"What?"

"They've got him!" he exclaimed. "He's out."

Cavanagh sprang up. "I don't believe it! For what reason? Why?"

"Don't that letter tell you? The whole town is chuckling. Every criminal and plug ugly in the country is spitting in our faces this morning. Yes, sir, the president has fired the chief—the man that built up this forestry service. The whole works is going to h—, that's what it is. We'll have all the coal thieves, water power thieves, poachers and free grass pirates piling in on us in mobs. They'll eat up the forest. I see the finish of the whole business. They'll put some western man in—somebody they can work. Then where will we be?"

Cavanagh's young heart burned with indignation, but he tried to check the other man's torrent of protest.

"I can't believe it. There's some mistake. Maybe they've made him the secretary of the department or something."

"No, they haven't. They've thrown him out. They've downed him because he tried to head off some thievery of coal mines in Alaska." The man was ready to weep with chagrin and indignant sorrow. His voice choked, and he turned away to conceal his emotion.

Cavanagh put the letter back into his pocket and mounted his horse. "Well, go on back to your work, Swenson. I'm going to town to get the supervisor on the wire and find out what it all means."

He was almost as badly stunned by the significance of Swenson's news as Swenson himself. Could it be possible that the man who had built up the field service of the bureau—the man whose clean handed patriotism had held the boys together, making them every year more clearly a unit, a little army of enthusiasts—could it be possible that the originator, the organizer of this great plan, had been stricken down just when his influence was of most account? He refused to believe it of an administration pledged to the cause of conservation.

As he entered the town he was struck instantly by the change in the faces turned toward him, in the jocular greetings hurled at him. "Hello, Mr. Cossack! What do you think of your chief now?"

"This will put an end to your infernal nonsense," said another. "We'll have a man in there now who knows the western ways and who's willing to boom things along. The cork is out of your forest bottle."

Gregg was most offensive of all. "This means throwing open the forest to anybody that wants to use it—means an entire reversal of this fool policy."

"Wait and see," replied Cavanagh. But his face was rigid with the expression of the fear and anger he felt. With hands that trembled he opened the door to the telephone booth, closed it carefully behind him and called for the supervisor's office. As soon as Redfield replied he burst forth in question. "Is it true that the chief is out?"

Redfield's voice was husky as he replied, "Yes, lad; they've got him."

"Good Lord, what a blow to the service!" exclaimed Cavanagh with a groan of sorrow and rage. "What is the president thinking of to throw out the only man who stood for the future—the man who had built up this corps, who was its inspiration?" Then after a pause he added, with bitter resolution: "This ends it for me. Here's where I get off."

"Don't say that, boy. We need you now more than ever."

GASOLENE EXPLOSION

John K. Large, chief claim agent for the New Jersey Central in this division, was severely cut about the face, head and hands, and suffered greatly from the loss of blood, through the severing of an artery. After temporary treatment he was hurried to his home on East Front street, where he is now under the care of a physician.

Mrs. Franklin L. Groff, of Prospect avenue, was also a passenger on a ferryboat crossing the river at the time and she suffered greatly from the shock.

E. A. Overton, of Rockview avenue, was in the Custom House, at the time, and he also received a severe shock. In describing the incident, he said that he thought the building would topple over.

Edmund Rushmore, of Park avenue, was on the New York side in the downtown district, and he received slight cuts by the flying glass and wood.

Other Plainfielders who were on the ferryboats were Charles L. Moffett, Howard George, of Duer street, and John Backman, of Fairview avenue. Mr. Backman was slightly cut.

Glee Club Concert.

Under the auspices of the Netherwood Reformed church and for the benefit of the parsonage fund, the Rutgers College Glee and Mandolin Clubs will give a concert at the Hartridge Auditorium, Thursday night, February 9. The announcement has caused great interest among the alumni in this city and former graduates are planning to attend. Tickets will be on sale at Armstrong's drug store on and after Monday.

COUNCIL'S INACTIVITY IS REVOLUTIONARY

Declarjng that its "inaction is unconstitutional and revolutionary," A. H. Atterbury, in the following communication, arraigns the Common Council for its failure to confirm the appoints made by Mayor Moy:

"Editor, The Daily Press:

"It seems to me that the members of the Common Council owe it to themselves as well as to the public to act on Mr. Moy's appointments and either reject them or confirm them. It is a clear violation of law to hold them up, and allow the present incumbents to remain in office by not confirming their successors. The law vests the appointment of officers in the Mayor and Council and it is the duty of each to do his or their part according to their best judgment. It may be that the Council can keep the present incumbents in office for a few months by refusing to act, but such inaction is unconstitutional and revolutionary. If they persist in it, they will only hasten the day when the Legislature will abolish the whole wretched, antiquated system of a mayor and Common Council. If it has worked fairly well in the past, it is because they have been one big harmonious family, only too anxious to cover up each others' shortcomings. But as soon as anything like criticism or discussion arises, and it is apt to increase in future rather than to diminish, we see the weakness and inefficiency of the whole system.

"ALBERT H. ATTERBURY."

BIBLE CLASS WILL PRESENT A SKETCH

Dr. Norman H. Probasco's Bible class at the First Baptist church will give an entertainment at the Y. M. C. A., tomorrow evening, including a short sketch, entitled, "Box Is Cox," in which Messrs. William Flanders, Charles Lee and Arthur Perrine will take the leading parts. A feature of the affair will be a one-act play called "A Regular Fix," and the endeavors of the hero, "De Brass" to extricate himself from one "Regular Fix" only to find himself in a worse one. Francis K. Anderson, a graduate of P. H. S., who has had considerable experience in dramatic events, is the coach, and he has picked the following excellent cast:

Between the sketches the class quartet, comprising Mr. Leadbitter, Gideon Fountain, Athol Neuman and Hollis Cubberly, will render selections. Harold Robins and Sidney Mackey are the business managers.

'POOR WHITES' TALK BY AN ARCHDEACON

State officers of the Junnor auxiliary to the Episcopal Board of Missions will meet with members of the local branches at Holy Cross church Saturday afternoon, when Archdeacon Claiborne, of Sewanee, Tennessee, will tell of his work among the "poor whites" of the Kentucky and Tennessee mountains. The address will be given at the special service to be held in the church at 2:30 o'clock, and it is announced that Mrs. Francis Weaver, president of the auxiliary, and Miss Mary Reed Wood, State secretary and treasurer, will be the other speakers.

Representatives and officers from the local branches will attend and following the addresses, members of the Holy Cross branch will serve tea in the parish house. Miss Katherine R. Curtis, of St. Stephen's church, and Miss Zella Kelly, of New Market, are State officers of the Auxiliary, which, through the work of children and young people is carrying on a valuable mission work in domestic and foreign fields. The local branches have been especially active in work in the "John Fox" country, and have regularly sent money and Christmas boxes to the children in that section of the South which that novelist has made known in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

SAILOR, A HUMAN KITE, TAKES PICTURES ALOFT.

Lieutenant John Rodgers was lifted 400 feet from the deck of the cruiser Pennsylvania at San Francisco Tuesday by man-raising kites. The warship was steaming twelve knots against an eight-hour breeze at the time, and Rodgers, suspended from the kite cable 100 feet astern, made observations and camera views for fifteen minutes. He signaled the results of his observations to the officers of the ship.

The altitude attained by Rodgers is said to be a record for man-lifting kites.

To Enforce Ordinance.

So many complaints have been received by the police within the past few days of bicyclists using the sidewalks that Chief Kiely has instructed his men to arrest any violator of the ordinance against this practice. The fact that the offenders take opportunities of riding when a patrolman is not in sight has stirred the chief to greater activity. Offenders have been arrested as often as caught, but the thing is to catch him. Special measures are to be taken to break up the habit and it will go hard with those caught.

Merchants' Black List Voted Down —Delegate to State Boards of Trade Gathering—Talk of $10,000 Fund.

The Board of Trade of New Brunswick wishing the co-operation of similar bodies of the State in fostering agitation favorable to a satisfactory public utilities bill that will meet with general approbation has arranged to hold a conference at New Brunswick on Monday afternoon, February 20, at 1 o'clock. Invitations have been sent to all boards of trade in the State to send one representative, and the Chamber of Commerce at its February meeting, last night, acted favorably on the request. President George L. Babcock will select a delegate.

For the purpose of increasing the membership of the Chamber of Commerce, endorsement was given to a plan suggested by George M. Christian, chairman of the membership committee, that a dinner be held once a month at one of the hotels, for which a nominal charge will be made, the members being privileged to invite those who they think are likely to join the body or be helpful to it in any way. This plan is in successful operation in Syracuse and Buffalo. The committee will adopt the plan here.

N. Meyer & Son, in a communication wanted the Chamber of Commerce to establish a "blacklist" to include those merchants who do not pay their bills, so that credit could be refused. The matter came up in the form of a resolution, but it failed to pass, being referred to the committee on merchants.

Endorsement was withheld of the movement to abolish the printing of private or business addresses on envelopes by the Government. David J. Carney stated that although he is a printer and such a law would affect him, he opposed it on the ground that it would mean a big advance in the cost of such printing to individuals or concerns.

Judge Ulrich, secretary, reported on some correspondence relative to the possibility of several plants locating here. One referred to a letter from Herman Kerberg, of New York, who wants to establish a plant here for the manufacture of telephone instrunents. It was through W. C. Garrison, chief of the bureau of statistics of New Jersey, that the chamber was put in touch with Mr. Kerberg. The concern is looking for a site and employs about one hundred men. The communication was referred to the committee on manufactures.

C. Francis Nolan, of New York, is seeking a four-acre site to build a shop for the manufacture of light machinery. He desired speedy action as a change has to be made soon. The Russell Sage Foundation, through its secretary, Lee Hammond, in a letter, sought information relative to promoting a better observance of July 4, and referring to Plainfield's Charter Day celebration of two years ago. It was explained that any desirable information or pictures would be used in advancing the interest of this annual celebration.

Another communication was received from the National League for American Freedom, regarding public health matters, and the American Embassy Association requestion the Chamber of Commerce to either approve or disapprove the plan to erect an American Embassy building, according to plans underway.

Judge Ulrich reported progress in the matter of the possibility of the Harris Typewriter Company, of Philadelphia, locating its plant here and he believed the prospects to be good. He said that officials of the company were pleased with a site on South avenue and the fact that one of them is looking for a residence here, would strongly indicate that the company intends to bring its plant to this city. This matter has been pending for several weeks.

Having the idea that the Chamber of Commerce is not doing all that it should, the fact being due to a lack of funds, Jacob Sachar addressed the members at length on the subject. He said that the body should raise a large sum of money and advertise the city for the general good of everybody. He thought that in this way factories could be brought here and business conditions improved. His remarks led William Jeffery to make a motion that Mr. Sachar be made chairman of a committee of ten to raise $10,000 to advertise the city. This provoked a lively discussion, in which Mr. Sachar, although not anxious to raise the amount named, said he would do his share. The discussion

THE FINAL RECITAL

M'Intyre Trio Gives Last of Series of Six for the Season.

LARGE AUDIENCE APPLAUDS.

Music Lovers Reluctant to Say Au Revoir to Artists Who Have Provided the Season's Pleasure.

The last of the series of concerts of the McIntyre Trio given last evening at the High School auditorium delighted a large and sympathetic audience who again proclaimed by the strict attention to the offerings that the public worships good music. All the numbers were rendered in masterly fashion especially was this so in the novelty offered in Dvorak's trio, for violin, piano and 'cello. The trio has played this sort of chamber music before, but it is doubtful if ever they played with greater understanding or more competent appreciation of the beauty of real musical expression than last night.

The sentiment of those whose privilege it was to listen to last night's treat was, "It was the best of the series." There is no room for criticizing the personnel of the trio from a musical standpoint, rather may it be said that with Britt and Mr. King, Mr. McIntyre has associated with himself artists of ability and character. It is to be hoped that in another season the same three interpreters of charmber music may be heard together again. Their work has been appreciated by all music lovers and a distinct void will exist until the opening of the next series.

Of last night's program there is little to say beyond that it was satisfying. The added artist, John Barnes Wells, a tenor of the robust class, delighted the audience in two groups of songs responding to encores at the end of each. Mr. King's violin spoke as ever with endearing resonance and brought to him repeated salvos of applause.

Of Mr. Britt's playing there has already been said all that may be said. He has endeared himself to all by his splendid mastery of the 'cello. Mr. McIntyre, as always, happy in his interpretation of noble works, was at his best and enjoyed with the other members of the trio the satisfaction of pleasure given. All must want to join in the au revoir extended to the trio last evening.

LITTLE BOY LOST ON WAY TO SCHOOL

Master August Sessler, of 720 West Fourth street, became lost this morning when he attempted to get to the Washington School kindergarten class all alone. His brother, who is now in Muhlenberg hospital, has been in the habit of taking August to and from school every day and this morning because he could not have the company of his sick brother the little fellow started out by himself.

August got as far as the residence of Mrs. F. B. Newhall, 836 Sherman avenue, when he began to cry. He was lost and didn't even know who he was or where he lived. Mrs. Newhall's little daughter ran out of the house and coaxed the little fellow in. He was glad to get in out of the cold, but could not be induced to tell anything about himself. Miss Millicent Humpston, principal of Washington School, was appealed to and in short order the lost youngster was identified and taken care of.

THROWN FROM WAGON WHEN TROLLEY HIT IT.

While driving his milk delivery wagon into the driveway on Watchung avenue near Front street, yesterday afternoon shortly before 6 o'clock John Gjetleson, driver for the Brokaw creamery, was knocked from his seat by the impact of a Fourth street trolley car and badly bruised.

Gjetleson said the motorman William Josephs, did not sound the gong and that he was unaware of the approach of the car. The wagon was overturned and badly damaged. Martin Haven was the conductor.

QUOTE THE MAYOR

Hebrew Committee's Statement as to Their Conferecce Witn Him.

ON SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

Say He Suggested That Kalish's Opinion Be Sought and That He Said Other Things, Too.

Representing the Hebrew congregation and co-religionists, Kalmen Rottberg and Samuel Kline today make a statement concerning their recent interview with Mayor Moy on the question of the enforcement of the Sabbath observance law. Space is cheerfully given the statement. It should be stated that the Mayor did not say that the interview took place on Wednesday and not on Monday; neither was any reference made to the introduction of Samuel Kalish into the controversy.

Mayor Moy was quoted yesterday as saying to the committee that if it could be proven to him by legal authority that he was wrong in the stand he had taken he would accept the proof. It was also stated that the mayor said that he was quite sure of the ground he had taken in the matter and that as a matter of public policy that there be one day of the week observed by all irrespective of creed or denomination. He was also quoted as saying that he recognized that the Hebrews were good citizens.

The statement follows:

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of yesterday under the caption of "Hebrew Merchants Confer With Mayor," appeared an article purporting to give a synopsis of the interview between the undersigned who were the committee referred to in the said article and his honor, the mayor,, and as the said article is inaccurate in almost every particular, we avail ourselves of the opportunity of using your columns for the purpose of relating just what actually transpired between the committee and his honor, the mayor, at the interview held at his office on Monday last.

The committee acting under the instructions of the Hebrew congregation and in behalf of their co-religionists called upon his honor and advised him that under his instructions they had been compelled to close their places of business on Sunday and in view of the fact that they religiously observed the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath and abstained from following their business upon that day, that they were exempted from the operation of the law prohibiting the sale of commodities on Sunday and were advised by his honor that under his construction of the law Saturday started at midnight and ended at midnight and if they did any business on Saturday night they would not be permitted to keep their places open on Sunday, to which the chairman of the committee responded that the beginning and the ending of the Sabbath was fixed by Divine law beginning at sunset on Friday evening and ending at sunset on Saturday, and that had been the custom from time immemorial. His honor then suggested that the committee consult Samuel Kalish, a lawyer, and obtain his opinion as to the construction of the law and when advised that such opinion had been obtained from Mr. Kalish he would then take it up with him and go into the matter. The chairman of the committee then stated to his honor that he was loathe to take Plainfield money and pay it to Newark lawyers and offered to get the opinion of any lawyer in the city of Plainfield that his honor might designate, upon which announcement he threw himself back in the chair and said: "My mind is as great as the mind of any lawyer in the city of Plainfield, if not greater," upon which the interview ended except that before leaving his honor announced that he would obtain the opinion of one of the judges of the Supreme Court upon the law in question and took the name and address of Mr. Rottberg to communicate with him the result.

The above is literally what transpired at this interview with the exception that instead of as stated in your inspired article of yesterday in which he says that he respected their religion, etc., he called the attention of Hebrew merchants doing business on Saturday naming them, and did not see any reason why they all could not do the same, which was met by the reply that that was no reason why the same majority of the faith should violate and stifle their own religious principles by following the examples of others.

In view of the fact that the mayor's account of the interview which he alleges took place on Wednesday, but which actually took place on Monday was placed conspic-

DR. EATON'S TALK

THE DUTY OF CITIZENS.

Problems of the Times Call for Sober Thought—Must Be on Our Guard Declares Minister.

A large audience greeted Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton last evening in the Park Avenue Baptist church. Dr. Eaton was introduced by Mayor Geo. W. V. Moy and those who had expected to hear something regarding municipal affairs or some reference to the mayor's attitude on the Sunday closing ordinance were not altogether disappointed. Dr. Eaton in his peroration declared that it is the duty of every public official to serve the people just as much as it it his duty to enforce the law. "If the law is wrong," he said, "then repeal it. If it is a good law uphold it, and remember that those in power are public servants and must live up to their oaths."

Dr. Eaton's subject, "Widening Horizons in American Life," leaves the unmistakeable impression that present conditions of society, politics and economics are due for a change and a change for the better, all along the line. He said in part: "Life is like a journey which begins with the the gray dawn at the bottom of a mountain. As the sun climbs the sky we travel upward through childhood and youth to mature manhood. This period is the high noon of life's little day when we have reached the top of the way and look off upon our widened view.

"This method of progress, from light to light, from horizon to horizon is a central experience of human nature, as true of nations and races as of men. And such has been the experience of American life. There are those who hold that we have reached the top; that already indeed we have begun the downward way. A superficial view lends some countenance to this contention. The specific characteristic of modern life, according to Rudolph Henkel is its interest in the present world. The spread of extravagance, the stupid vices of luxury, the glaring contrasts between wealth and poverty; the shallow, trivial life reflected in dead or dying churches; a mechanical education; a vulgar and putrid press; the ominous shadow of widespread dishonesty; the feeble force of moral obligation; the racial and social fluidity, amidst whose filthy eddies all that has been revered is swallowed out of sight. These and a thousand other thoughts give food for sober reflection.

"For two reasons I cannot subscribe to these sombre conclusions. First, because the political development of America is distinguished by unique considerations. The fabric of the government is based upon equality from its very inception. And second, in the economic development of the nation we have risen from horizon to horizon with incredible swiftness. We began firm adherents of the principle of untrammelled individualism. Then came the flood of scientific knowledge applied to business. The supreme test put upon our institutions by the Civil War. The people were tougher fibred after this cataclysm. That war was the greatest test of the organization of our government.

"The formation of corporations for the improvements along business lines led up to the great combinations now sometimes called trusts. Great mountains of money have become controlled by a few individuals to the detriment of the many, but all this suddenly acquired wealth will go back to its source, the people, not perhaps in this generation, but it will find its proper level and the inequality of today will give way to the equality of the past. I believe the American people particularly the young ought to keep away from dime musemums, moving picture shows and the like and devote themselves to serious matters.

"Today we are a world-wide nation. Our influence among the nations of the world is something to be figured with and I believe the English speaking nations will become the dominant nations of the world which will tend to the establishment of universal peace. Canada our great and growing neighbor, under the influence of the new nationalism is better off than this country. It is not new with them, but with us. There a thief is a thief in every part of the country. Here he must be forty-eight thieves in order to be convicted in every part of the United States. Canada and the United States are growing into closer relationship every day and who can forsee the future? I predict a still closer relationship; one that would almost seem to be the desire

ST. JOHN'S SAD END

HE FORMERLY LIVED HERE.

A sufferer from insomnia, Edward St. John, formerly of this city, ended his life in the ocean at Coney Island some time between Wednesday afternoon and yesterday. That his malady had caused a temporary mental derangement is the belief of his friends and associates who held him in high esteem. When the police notified his wife at their residence in Flatbush, of her husband's sad end, she communcated with her uncle, Samuel St. John McCutchen, of North Plainfield, at his law office in New York. Mr. McCutchen identified the body which was removed to the Flatbush home.

Mr. St. John was assistant treasurer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. Vice-President Terry, of that concern, in speaking of Mr. St. John, said:

"I feel certain that everybody connected with the company shares the sorrow I feel personally for the sad end which has befallen Mr. St. John. He had been with the company many years and had endeared himself to all of us by his kindly and unassuming manner.

"All of us believe he lived an exemplary life, and there is no reason to believe otherwise now. His habits were of the best, he was attentive to his work and always on hand promptly. I am absolutely satisfied that Mr. St. John's death was the result of aberration, and I am sorry for him and his family."

Mr. St. John resided in North Plainfield more than a decade ago. At that time he was a deacon of the First Presbyterian church and active in the local Y. M. C. A.. He was employed by Fisk & Hatch, New York bankers, and later by Colis P. Huntington. Then he became identified with the Westinghouse Company.

WARING UNDERGOES SERIOUS OPEATION

Orville T. Waring, of Park avenue, a director of the Standard Oil Company, and president of the Plainfield Trust Company underwent a serious operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, at noon, today. The operation, which was performed by Dr. Hartley, of New York, assisted by Dr. Halsey, also of New York, and Drs. G. W. Endicott and N. H. Probasco, of this city, was an exceedingly delicate one, and so far as known about the first one of the kind on record here. The operation was at the outlet of the stomach and required the greatest possible skill.

Mr. Waring was on the operation table about one hour and according to the physicians the operation was successful. The chances for an early recovery are considered excellent.

Must Repair Sidewalk.

Morris Isreal, of 635 West Fourth street, was charged by Street Commissioner Andrew Gavett, this morning with neglecting to repair the sidewalk in front of his home after being duly notified that it was in a dangerous condition. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on Isreal's promise to repair the walk.

Several retail merchants, Greeks and Italians, appeared in the City court this morning requesting from Judge DeMeza an opinion as to whether they might open their stores on Sunday after observing the Sabbath on Saturday. The court advised them to consult some of the legal lights of the city.

WARRANTS ISSUED

PROSECUTOR GETS BUSY.

Alleged That Railroad Had no Permit to Transport Dynamite Which Caused Terminal Disaster.

That County Prosecutor Pierre Garven intends to get at the bottom of things in his investigation of the responsibility for the great dynamite explosion on Wednesday at the Jersey Central terminal at Jersey City is attested by the action taken by him last evening, when warrants for the arrest of seven officers and employes of the Jersey Central and the DuPont Powder Company and James Healing, owner of the lighter upon which it is alleged the preliminary explosion took place. The warrants charge manslaughter. A charge of criminal negligence will also be made, according to Mr. Garven.

The warrants were issued just before midnight last night by Justice of the Peace Edward A. Ransom on the complaint of Detective Sergeants James F. Rooney and William B. Prescott on information applied by detectives from the police department of Jersey City. The warrants will be served as soon as possible and are for the following men: A. Hamilton, geneal freight agent of the railroad; J. M. Morris, the freight agent at Communipaw; Louis F. Gallidetta, dockmaster at pier 7, who lives in Elizabeth; Charles Ridder, a checker, who lives in Newark; Frederick Peters, manager of the Du Pont Powder Works; R. G. Morse, assistant manager of the powder company; Captain Burr St. John, superintendent of transportation for the powder company, and James Healing, owner of the Katharine W.

Allegations have been made that the storage of the explosive was contrary to the law and the railroad is to be brought to account for permitting the powder company to dump the tons of dynamite upon its property in direct violation of the law of 1907. It was discovered yesterday that the Katharine W. was an old offender in the matter of running dynamite through New York harbor without having a license. The fact that the vessel was not licensed was admitted by the owner. It was decided yesterday that it would be useless to dive for any bodies of men supposed to have been aboard the lighters at the time of the explosion as it has been demonstrated they must have been blown to atoms.

Of the eight men in the Jersey City hospitals suffering from injuries sustained in the explosion only two are thought to be in immediate danger. Both these men have fractured skulls and the doctors say they are in a critical condition. Up to last night the total number of those injured and treated by public medical men and private practitioners and in drug stores was 726, but it is not believed that this represents all those who were cut by flying glass.

A resolution introduced into the New York Chamber of Commerce at its meeting last evening authorizes the executive committee to make a rigid investigation into the matter of transportation of explosives in the harbor.

All the local wounded are reported to be doing nicely.

Assistant General Counsel G. H. Holmes, of the New Jersey Central, told Judge Queen in the Second District Court this morning that the four men of his company for whom warrants had been issued would be on hand when wanted. No further efforts were made to serve the warrants.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT JOHN LYNCH'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of John C. Lynch, whose death occurred Tuesday morning, was held this morning in the home of his mother on West Fourth street, and later in St. Mary's church, where a solemn requiem mass was said in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Rev. Father Hogan was celebrant, Father Bogan deacon and Father Sciolla sub-deacon. The floral tributes were numerous and included handsome set pieces from the Knights of Columbus and Timbo Social Club, of which the young man was a member.

Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall bearers being John C. Powers, William Callahan, Owen McNalley, Henry Hansen and Frank Day.

THINK OF FURNISHING YOUR HOME
AT RULING CASH PRICES,
YET MAKING PAYMENTS THEREFOR
AT YOUR OWN CONVENIENCE
WITH NO CHARGES FOR INTEREST!

That's the Story in a Nutshell.

It means much when a great store of this kind, an important development of the greatest retail organization in the world, adopts a policy so revolutionizing and broad in scope as the extending of deferred payment privileges to its clientele.

It is through the Club Plan, which has proved so successful here, that you have the privilege of buying Home Furnishings on essentially your Own Terms. This, if YOU ARE A NEW CUSTOMER, or desirous of becoming one, is important, and, to cap it all, you should bear in mind that by taking advantage of this departure

YOU BUY AT OUR LOWEST CASH PRICES.

It is the best trade in the city and suburbs that avails itself of this Deferred Payment privilege, and we only ask that those responding shall be people of an integrity that generates confidence from a moral standpoint. Numberless people of ample financial means avail themselves regularly of the Club Plan, and many are the flourishing and happy homes that got their first start through the liberal privileges extended here.

WHAT THE CLUB HOME FURNISHING PLAN MEANS—MERELY A CHARGE ACCOUNT.

There's a deal of satisfaction to be experienced in purchasing merchandise under circumstances above reproach—at a store where you are regarded as a charge customer—and at a store where the prices are always REGULAR—not the two-sided kind that embodies one price to one class of trade and another price to another. The prices on Home Furnishing and all other lines are low as the lowest, and in most instances lower than elsewhere. Thus you are assured of a double benefit when you consider you also have the privilege of selecting

Everything has been done to make this plan a success—mutually satisfactory alike to the purchaser and the store. You may take advantage of bargain sales if you desire. We want every transaction to endure—to be of the same intrinsic merit as the merchandise itself. On this we have built, and the best evidence of stability of the architecture is to ask those who have participated.

REGARDING PAYMENTS—THESE ARE REGULATED TO NEVER BE BURDENSOME.

The aim of this department has been to encourage the home-building spirit in every possible manner. Following a small payment the merchandise will be promptly delivered to you, and you have every assurance that you will not be troubled by collectors. Instead you may make your payments by check or in person at the store. Thus every turn of the transaction will have

Neck Fittments.

A blouse of thick cream crepe de chine, made collarless and in simple fashion, is useful as a week-end blouse.

In the morning, when spending a week-end, and you have to economize in the matter of luggage, wear this with a neat collar and tie, but in the afternoon transform it into something a little more fluffy in this way.

Make yourself a selection of detached collar bands, in lace, fine muslin or embroidery.

These you fasten to the blouse by a number of hooks sewn on upside down to the base of the collar. At the base of the wee collarband on the blouse work a number of eyes to exactly correspond with these hooks.

The hooks are easily slipped into the eyes provided for them, and it is then quite impossible for the collar and blouse to part company.

The untidy, if sometimes necessary, pin and safety pin are thus dispensed with, and the whole thing is as neat and trim as anything.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A couple of late home-goers Wednesday night discovered two men prowling about the residence of Dr. P. W. Brakeley. They informed Policeman Davenport and the latter hurried to the scene, but was unable to locate anyone, although he made a thorough search of the neighborhood. It is possible the prowlers noticed the informants going back for the officer.

The custom of the Public Service employes in stopping its cars just east of the Washington avenue crosswalks when going east, is not the least bit appreciated by borough residents in wet weather. Yesterday was a good example and the comments of people who had to wade through mud six inches deep to get to the curb were anything but pleasant.

BRITISH TO BUILD RAILWAY ACROSS DARIEN ISTHMUS.

Ratification of a contract between the Panama Government and the Balboa and Pacific Estates, Limited, of London, is expected at an early date of the Panama Assembly. It will provide for a railroad from end to end of the republic.

This is the project long considered under the title of the "Darien Line." It is to open up the virgin country on the Pacific slope and will parallel that coast. One day it will be an important link in the inevitable railroad linking North and South America.

The United States is watching with anxious eye this English invasion. Ratification of the contract will give Great Britain a foothold on the Isthmus at the very brink of the canal and the right to assert a "sphere of influence." Once having attained this no one expects England to loosen its grip.

The government is to be allowed to purchase the road at an appraised valuation at the end of seventy-five years. Taxes will be ¼ per cent. of the gross receipts for fifteen years, ½ per cent. for fifteen, one per cent. for fifteen, and 1½ per cent. for thirty years. Panaman labor is to be employed where possible and differences are not to be taken up through diplomatic channels, but through arbitration.

The line will begin at David and will be extended eastward toward the Columbian border. At present there is practically no agriculture in this region, but there are splendid lands.

THE FORUM.

Sabbath Observance.

Editor, The Daily Press:

There seems to be one phase of the Sunday opening question which has not received much attention; namely, the disorderly crowds which congregate around the small stores, especially in residential districts, where the presence of the police is scarcely noticeable.

Leaving aside all quibbling about the space of time designated as the Sabbath, and the ethics of doing business on that day, we cannot deny the fact that on Sunday nearly all our male population is idle. On that day the saloons are closed, that the idle ones may be kept out of mischief, and a proposal to open them would meet with indignant protest. But stores selling tobacco, candy, ice cream, etc., can and do, in certain localities, draw a crowd nearly as objectionable as would an open saloon.

The cases I name here are from observation. They are not fancy sketches or second hand tales. In front of a certain store at any part of Sunday might be found gathered a crowd of from ten to thirty young men and boys, playing ball, marbles, shouting, swearing and using vile language. Through this gang ladies or children on the way to Sunday school have to pass, or take the other side of the street. Once their actions culminated in a street brawl which resulted in the bodily injury of the participants and their appearance before the city judge. But all this made a busy Sunday for the storekeeper.

This place was closed on Saturday, but as lawlessness begets lawlessness, another establishment began to keep open every day in the week only on Sunday entrance was made by the side door.

Truly such incidents are a credit to Plainfield, an inspiration to our young men, and a moral uplift to our children. Let us uphold our Mayor in his efforts to make this a clean city to live in, and to remove as far as possible the places which draw together profane and disorderly crowds on the Christian Sabbath.

X-Science Not From India.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of January 26, I note Rev. A. S. Perrin's comment on Christian Science in which he is quoted as saying that "Christian Science originated in India." Evidently the gentleman made his decision without a due knowledge of Christian Science, whatever may have been his understanding of Hindooism. Possibly like the Hindoo pandita who came to this country sometime ago, he may have received a wrong explanation of Christian Science and thereby arrived at wrong conclusions concerning it. Be that as it may, Christian Science has no kinship whatever with the peculiar teachings which come from India.

Yours respectfully,
H. COULSON FAIRCHILD.

Sabbath Observance.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The proper object of government is to protect all persons in the enjoyment of their religious as well as civil rights and not to determine for any whether they shall esteem one day above another, or esteem all days alike holy.

Our government is a civil and not a religious institution. Our constitution recognizes in every person the right to choose his own religion and to enjoy it freely without molestation. Whatever may be the religious sentiment of citizens, and however varient, they are alike entitled to protection from the government so long as they do not invade the rights of others. Why should the claim of one be more respected than those of the other, (The Jew and the Sabbatarian) unless it be admitted that the consciences of the minority are less sacred than those of the majority.

Let the professors of Christianity commend their religion by deeds of benevolence, by lives of temperance and holiness. Let them combine their efforts to instruct the ignorant, to relieve the widow and the orphan. Government will find its legitimate object in protecting them. It can not oppose them and they will not need its aid. Their moral influence will then do more to advanco the true interests of religion than any measures which affect those that observe Sabbath.

Plainfield's Dependable Store

During the early part of January we told you that we would place on sale all of our winter stock, at prices never before heard of.

Those who have patronized our store since can testify that we more than fulfilled every expectation, and as a result our January sales have been unprecedented.

BUT—We still have a large assortment of Women's and Misses' Coats, Suits, etc., which we must sell for two reasons as follows:

First—We need the room for spring stock.

Second—Because our next winter season will see us in our new location, and when we go there we do not want to move one garment, every piece of goods will be absolutely new, and in order to do this we will positively almost give away the remainder of our winter stock.

Remember—These goods are not unseasonable, the winter is not yet over, and even if it were, you can save money buying now for next season.

18.00 Coats, ... 6.00
15.00 and 18.00 Suits, at 7.50
10.00 Lingerie Dresses, in white, blue and pink, special at 4.75
Pure Silk Net Dresses, over colored slips, regular 30.00, special at 14.50

We have hundreds of other bargains in the store, consisting of furs, waists, skirts, raincoats, capes and petticoats.

COME TOMORROW AND YOU WILL SAVE MONEY.

ON THE JUMP

MOST boys are like jack rabbits anyway—continually on the jump. If it isn't coasting down hill and steering with his toes, it's skating, or what is worse, sliding on a half iced sidewalk. Then there is the regular wear that frozen ground is sure to give. So that all in all an ordinary boy is pretty rough on his footwear, particularly at this season of the year.

Introduce him to a pair of

that are built for this sort of wear—not so dainty as some mothers would like to have them, but they'll stay with the boy. These shoes are led Judge Ulrich to remark that he hoped that such a movement should not end in a travesty. He believed that the chamber was fulfilling its requirements and thus far had done its duty and thought that the matter proposed by Mr. Sachar should be given wise and not hasty consideration. The matter was finally referred to the publicity committee.

Acting upon the suggestion of A. E. Force, President Babcock said that he would appoint a committee of three on street lighting to take up the work of the committee which served in that capacity last year for the Board of Trade. Mr. Force also called the attention of the chamber to the condition of the business streets caused by papers and refuse of all kinds being blown about these thoroughfares. He suggested that the matter be taken up with the Common Council with the idea of having an ordinance covering the matter adopted. It was agreed, however, that it was a matter either for the health or street departments, this idea being offered by W. S. Angleman. As a matter of fact there is an ordinance covering the matter. No further action was taken.

of God and which probably, He intends to bring about in the proper way at the proper time. With great wealth has come great poverty and they are produced by two great evils —land values, because of congestion, and swollen fortunes, the colossal aggregation of money by individuals.

"Let me implore you to be on your guard. The spiritual and moral widening is the most needed at the present time. One of the greatest absurdities of our life is the Christian church. It is not yet able to adjust itself to modern conditions. What have I to show for standing over half a 'million dollars' worth of real estate within an edifice that is only open twice in seven days? The problem of our great cities lies in our churches. There is room for more missionaries there. Can't you send us a few? You send an army of bread winners to Manhattan every day why not missionaries?

"The plain patriotic duty of this hour is for every man to learn what is right and do it. Let the rich turn from luxury and vulgar display and grasping greed and discharge the moral obligations to their age. Let us begin a new age of simplicity, honor, frugality industry and spiritual health by each one striving to be his best in the name and by the power of God. Then and not till then shall we behold the far-flung sky line of our destiny ablaze with the splendor of national peace, permanence and prosperity."

Violated Ordinance.

Three bicycle riders were arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza, this morning charged with violating the ordinance which prohibits riding on the sidewalks of the city. They were Rudolph Heinold, Gustave Tietz and Gregory Trekosk. All three were warned against repeating the offense and sentence was suspended.

ANDREE TALE UNVERIFIED.

Prince Albert, Sask., Feb. 3.—Rev. Father Turquetil, of Reindeer Lake, one of the famous missionaries of the far North, has reached Prince Albert, after a journey which occupied twenty-one days till he reached the railway at Lepas. A story told by Father Turquetil about a year ago caused a commotion all over the world. It was to the effect that while on a trip 300 miles north of Reindeer Lake he had heard from natives that an enormous white ship had come down out of the clouds and that two men who were in it had been killed by Eskimos. He reported this story to Bishop Pascal, at Prince Albert, and the latter told it to newspapers in the East. It was inferred that it must be the ill-fated Andree balloon, lost in 1897, and Father Turquetil has received many letters from all parts of Europe asking for particulars of the event.

Father Turquetil says that the stories which were printed at that time were much exaggerated, and that he has been unable since to confirm by tangible proof the narrative, which was first given him by some Indians who had been trading with the northern Eskimos. He states that this winter has been severe in the North and that he had a most difficult journey out by dog train.

Funeral of Mrs. Kelty.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen M. Kelty, wife of Thomas Kelty, was held in St. Mary's church this morning. A solemn requiem mass was said by Rev. Father Sciolla with Father Bogan as deacon and Father Hogan sub-deacon. A large gathering of relatives and friends was in attendance. The floral tributes included a large set piece from the Ladies' Auxiliary, No. 1, A. O. H. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Michael and Patrick Harrington, Peter Kelley, Patrick Moran and Michael Kelley.

CHARLES WESTPHAL DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Charles Westphal, aged sixty-nine years, of 320 East Third street, died this morning at 10:30 o'clock at Muhlenberg Hospital, following a short illness with pneumonia and an accident at his home on Saturday night. While in a state of delirium he left his bed and fell down stairs, receiving a severe cut on the head. His condition became such that on Wednesday it was decided to remove him to the hospital.

Mr. Westphal was born in Germany and had resided in Plainfield about forty years. Prior to that he lived in New York and served during the Civil War as a member of a New York company of volunteers. He was a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., also Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias. He was a carpenter by trade, working for various contractors about the city. For many years he resided at South Second street and Monroe avenue.

Mr. Westphal is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Fred Schomp and Mrs. George Gray; a son, Charles Westphal, all of this city, and a brother, Fred Westphal, Sr., formerly a well-known grocer at Liberty and West Fourth streets, but now of Newark. Notice of funeral will be given later.

THE COST OF EDUCATION.

"How much did it cost you to get your education?" asked Jones.

"Well,' said Smith, "let's see. My primary education was cheap—say $500. My secondary training was about twice as much, while my college course amounted to something like a thousand a year, or four thousand in all. Then I had three years at a technical school, at about the same rate—so, all in all, my education came to about eight thousand five hundred, or nine thousand at the outside. What do you figure yours cost?"

"Well," replied Jones, reflectively, "I guess mine was rather more expensive. I went through college, but I didn't have any technical training. Up to that point we are about equal. Then I went West and got interested in a gold mine. That bit of knowledge cost considerable. Next I tried stock raising and found that a pretty expensive school. Before I was finally graduated from that I took a hand at the theatrical business and learned a lot at fairly high rates. There was a little girl in the company, though, seemed to think I hadn't got all the knowledge that was coming to me, so she put me in the matrimonial school. Not having graduated from that yet I can't give any final figures, but I can tell you this: the higher up you get the more it costs. After a while the kids came along and they taught me a whole heap, but the bills were very high.

"For twenty years or so I worried along on this kind of schooling, and then my eldest girl got married. Her husband thought he'd like to try farming, and I learned a lot about that in the next few years, at a cost of about $5,000 a year. Then pretty soon they had a couple of kids, and what my own children ain't taught me they did. The fact is—Hey, there! where are you going? I've only just begun to tell you about my education."

But already Smith was far down the street, with his fingers in his ears, fleeing as though from the wrath to come.—Success Magazine.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

To know whether the oven is of the right heat for pastry, a piece of paper should be placed on the shelf on which the pies or cakes are to stand. If it turns a light brown after a few moments the heat is correct. Should the paper become a deep yellow, a confectioner would know that the temperature was right for cakes of a solid description, a pale yellow denoting the proper heat for such items as sponge cake and light buns and biscuits.

If water be of little use when cleaning lamp chimneys which have become very much blackened with smoke, the experiment should be tried of mixing a little spirit of wine with the water. This will remove the grease which is contained in the lampblack.

Quite Another Thing.

"Whom are you going to give those cigars to?"

"To the janitor, so that he will give us more heat."

"Why, I thought I heard you abusing him terribly this morning."

"My dear woman, you don't think I dare address the janitor like that. I was talking to the landlord."—Lippincott's.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Mrs. Benjamin Gill, of Paulsboro, fell from the back step of her home and badly injured herself. Her husband is lying very low, also.

The fishing sloop Alberta, seized for debt, was sold at North Wildwood Tuesday by United States Marshal Alcott to Richard Larcombe for $525.

The sale for delinquent taxes for West Deptford Township, Gloucester county, has been called off because delinquents saw their names in print and paid up.

Falling from a scaffold at the New York Shipyard in Camden Wednesday, George Hastings, thirty-one years old, of Gloucester, sustained only body bruises and was soon able to leave Cooper Hospital.

Control of the Merchantville postoffice was assumed Wednesday by Postmaster Barber, of Camden, and Merchantville ceases to be a postoffice except in name. The change follows that made a year ago that affected the postoffice at Collingswood and presumably will affect still more small offices near Camden.

Stepping on a match, Mrs. Laura Moore, forty-four years old, of Lindenwold, set fire to her dress Wednesday night, and was burned about the face, body and arms. Harry Gallagher, forty-four years old, sustained burns of the hands in an effort to extinguish the flames on Mrs. Moore's dress. They were taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Matthew McDaniels, twenty-five years old, who in a rage Tuesday night fired a bullet at his sister-in-law, Miss Della Martin, with whom he had some words, was held in $3,000 bail in Atlantic City yesterday by Recorder Martin Keffer for the grand jury, the charge being assault with intent to kill. When the police arrested McDaniels he had two revolvers in his pockets and another was found in his room.

Arrested in Chicago, John F. McGovern was taken to Camden Wednesday to answer a charge of bigamy. He said to County Detective Carroll that he wanted to do right, but could not help himself. He has been arrested on charges of larceny and burglary, and has only recently been paroled from State prison after serving a five-year term for atrocious assault and battery. If he escapes jail on the bigamy charge McGovern says he is going to South America.

Citizens, property owners, hotel keepers and business men from all sections of the island, forming one of the most representative gatherings ever assembled on Five-Mile Beach, Tuesday evening attended a meeting in the borough hall, Wildwood, and heartily applauded the sentiments expressed by J. Thompson Baker, one of the founders of Wildwood, when he said that "the people should be big enough to abandon the present plan of small boroughs with one railroad and aspire to greater accomplishments by cooperating to make the entire island one large seashore city, under the commission form of government, and give their support to the new railroad that is being constructed to this resort."

G. O. P. SENATOR'S BILL OFFERED BY DEMOCRAT

The curious path which legislation sometimes takes was exemplified in the explana Tuesday of a mysterious bill introduced early last week by Senator Fielder, of Hudson county.

The bill is known as Senate 48, and its title conveyed the impresssion that it was designed to give any mutual fire insurance company the right to extend its corporate existence for a period of ninety-nine years. Newspaper correspondents besieged Mr. Fielder with questions as to the source of the bill and the concern it was designed to benefit. To all these questions Mr. Fielder gave evasive answers. But yesterday the whole story came out.

Down in Salem county there is a mutual fire insurance company known as the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Salem county. It is one of the oldest and most prosperous companies of the sort in the State and its policies cover $6,000,000 of insurance. A week or two ago some one of the company's officers happened to be rummaging through some of the musty papers in the concern's archives and inadvertantly discovered that the corporate existence of the concern would end March 6 of this year unless something strenuous were done to prevent.

An examination of the insurance law showed that though the old insurance laws made it possible for mutual companies to extend their coroporate existence by a vote of the board of directors, the new insurance laws had changed this and required that mutual companies, just as stock companies, must secure the consent of two-thirds of the stockholders—who are, in mutual companies, the policyholders—to such extension. The Farmers' company has fully 3,000 policy holders, and the futility of getting so many signatures in so short a time became apparent.

Accordingly a bill was drafted and turned over to Senator Plummer, of Salem county, for introduction in the Legislature. Senator Plummer is a Republican, and he had serious fears that his measure might be wrecked in the House, so he invoked the good offices of his Democratic colleague, Senator Fielder, and the bill was introduced under the Hudson man's name. It has already been favorably reported and will probably be put on its passage next week.

A NOVEL BEADED EFFECT.

But there isn't a bead in the whole scheme of decoration which is the burden of my song. Have you seen the exquisite blouse models in some cases with an unmistakable mark of "Paris" all over them?

They look as if they were beaded, but if you are interested you will admire at close range and will discover that French knots are responsible.

On satin this easy and effective work can be applied. Revers can be trimmed at the points in motifs either round or square. Yokes can be defined or outlined. If you are doing this on chiffon or any similar transparent fabric it is advisable to sketch out a yoke design on tissue paper and sew through the paper on the material. After the whole yoke is finished tear away the thin tissue paper. Indeed, the tissue-paper method is used very widely by the French and cannot be too highly recommended to Americans.

French knots are effective in black and white combinations. When in clusters the effect is charming on blue, green or old rose. Black allied with any vivid shade is another easy idea on materials of neutral colors, such as gray, tan or mauve.

On the scarfs and muffs of fabric this idea is much used. It can be taken into any decorative field with much success. And the best part about the beaded effect is the ease with which an attractive decoration can be given to any part of your costume.

BASEBALL.

Jimmy Burke, manager of the Indianapolis American Association Club, is of the opinion that the sacrifice hit has outlived its usefulness; Burke says he will not tolerate such obsolete stuff this season except on rare occasions. Burke thinks the sacrifice is useful only so far as to keep the opposition puzzled over the hit-and-run play.

Frank Chance, the husky bear who leads the Cubs, is getting the winter kinks out of his arm in a most novel fashion. Chance superintends the work of culling the bad fruit from his orange groves, and these he pelts at trees by the hour. Some of the Thespian athletes have it on the Peerless Leader in being the target for ripe fruit—of the hen variety.

Fred Clarke predicts a good year for Kirb White, his young pitcher, who sent in his signed contract a few days ago. Kirb looked quite promising last year for a first year man. He won half the games that he finished.

Clark Griffith is evidently more than willing to meet Eddie Grant more than half way. The leader of the Reds has announced that he will take a trip to Boston in the near future for a heart-to-heart talk with his newly acquired third sacker. Griffith says he will put his ultimatum up to the sulking ex-Phillie, and that if Grant fails to listen to reason he will be heavily fined.

President Noyes, of the Washington Club, has let out contracts for concrete steel and cement bleachers in right and centre fields. The work will be completed in time for spring exhibition games and will be part of the new plant which the club expects to have in operation a year from this spring.

Washington scribes declare that Bob Unglaub, first baseman of the Senators, will be unconditionally released so that he may accept the management of the Lincoln (Neb.) team.

The Three-I League has a hot war on its hands. At the annual meeting in Chicago, Waterloo was dropped from the circuit and Quincy substituted. Waterloo's representative was not allowed to vote, and the club was disfranchised by a 4 to 3 vote. Waterloo has secured an injunction from the Supreme Court and threatens to tie up the league. In the meantime all the Waterloo players have been declared the property of the league, and a merry scrap will be started for their distribution. Many of the playes declare that they will ask the National Association to declare them free agents, as they feel relieved from all obligations of the reserve clause.

HOLD THEIR ANNUAL BANQUET.

President Sproull Tells of State Convention When Delegates Will Not Stop at Hotels Having Bars.

The thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavor Society, arranged by the increase campaign committee of the Union County Endeavor Union, was held in the First Baptist church, Rahway, last night. There were large delegations present from all parts of the county, including nearly one hundred Endeavorers from this city. The program as announced in yesterday's Daily Press was followed.

There were about one hundred at the banquet-conference held at 6:30 o'clock, prior to the larger meeting, and among those responding to toasts were Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and Clarence B. LaRue, of this city.

Robert Chipman Hull, of Summit, representing Union county, reported concerning the formation of a State Church Federation in New Jersey, explaining the movement. He said that the federation is composed of all evangelical churches the purpose being to fight against the evils of the day—social, political and moral. Upon his suggestion, the county Endeavor Union will take the initiative in forming a county inter-church federation, the plan being heartily endorsed.

The Saybrook Society received the pennant for having made the greatest increase in membership, having 100 per cent. Union county is the first in the State to gain the quota of societies set by State President J. T. Sproull, having gained fourteen new societies. Of this number four are in Plainfield: The Juniors of the First Presbyterian church; Netherwood Reformed church; Juniors of Hope chapel and West End Tabernacle.

State President Sproull made a report on the forthcoming international convention to be held at Atlantic City, which is expected to be the greatest in the history of the society. The convention will be held in an auditorium seating 25,000 people. One of the big steel piers has been engaged for a week and the "quiet hour" services will be held on the end of this pier, 1,700 feet out into the sea.

Mr. Sproull stated that none of the delegates would be entertained at hotels where there are bars or cafes. There will be three large chorus choirs, one with a membership of 2,500.

PREFERS PENNSYLVANIA TO UNION COUNTY JAIL.

Charged with shooting a revolver near the poolroom of William F. Walters, at 19 Somerset street, yesterday, Harry Mollenson, a nineteen-year-old youth, had a fine of $100 and a sentence of 59 days in the county jail suspended over his head this morning by Judge DeMeza in the city court. Mollenson has been arrested time and time again on various charges but according to the records he fails to be impressed with the results of his misbehavior.

Mollenson was given the option of returning to his work in a Pennsylvania town. He accepted the opportunity of escaping the serving of his sentence.

GOLF.

A well known golfer at present travelling through the South writes that the game is booming below the Mason and Dixon line. He says that the Richmond Golf Club has a fine new course and home and that it is planning to hold an open professional tournament there early in April. On his way South the golfer visited Pinehurst, where he lingered for two weeks. In his opinion the No. 2 course is one of the best trapped eighteen-hole circuits in the country.

A match that attracted considerable attention recently had the professionals Alec Ross and Jock Jolly arrayed as partners against the pick of Pinehurst, consisting of George Crocker and L. C. Becker, of Boston; C. N. Phillips, of Atlantic City; W. C. Fownes, of Pittsburg, and J. P. Gardner, of Chicago. The "pros" managed to finish one up on the quintet of amateurs.

At Wilmington, N. C., where Isaac Mackie, the sturdy Fox Hills professional, is temporarily located, golf is played over an extremely narrow course. The visitor says its as good as a show to see Mackie, who, like all long drivers, occasionally gets off the line, chopping out of the pine trees. It is also said that Isaac is astonishing the natives by the great length of his tee shots. They regard him as the longest driver in the world.

As a result of his many experiences among the pines Mackie declares he is at last learning how to drive straight. The Camden, S. C., course has been greatly improved and so has the one at the Ridgemoor Club, at Columbia, where large numbers play daily.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

"I'm through. I'm done with America—with the States. I shall write my resignation at once. Send down another man to take my place."

Redfield's pleadings were of no avail. Cavanagh went directly from the booth to the postoffice, and there, surrounded by jeering and exultant citizens, he penned his resignation and mailed it. Then, with stern and contemptuous face, he left the place, making no reply to the jeers of his enemies, and, mounting his horse, mechanically rode away out upon the plains, seeking the quiet, open places in order to regain calmness and decision. He did not deliberately ride away from Lee Virginia, but as he entered upon the open country he knew that he was leaving her as he was leaving the forests. He had cut himself off from her as he had cut himself off from the work he loved. His heart was swollen big within his breast. He longed for the return of "the colonel" to the White House. "What manner of ruler is this who is ready to strike down the man whose very name means conservation and who in a few years would have made this body of forest rangers the most effective corps of its size in the world?" He groaned again, and his throat ached with the fury of his indignation.

"Dismissed for insubordination," the report said. "In what way? Only in making war on greed, in checking graft, in preserving the heritage of the people."

The lash that cut deepest was the open exultation of the very men whose persistent attempt to appropriate public property the chief had helped to thwart. "Redfield will go next. The influence that got the chief will get Hugh. He's too good a man to escape. Then, as Swenson says, the thieves will roll in upon us to slash and burn and corrupt. What a country! What a country!"

As he reached the end of this line of despairing thought he came back to the question of his remaining personal obligations. Wetherford must be cared for, and then—and then—there was Virginia waiting for him at this moment. "For her sake, to save her from humiliation, I will help her father to freedom."

This brought him back to the hideous tragedy of the heights, and with that thought the last shred of faith in the sense of justice in the state vanished.

"They will never discover those murderers. They will permit this outrage to pass unpunished, like the others. It will be merely another 'dramatic incident' in the history of the range."

His pony of its own accord turned and by a circuitous route headed at last for the home canyon as if it knew its master's wavering mind. Cavanagh observed what he was doing, but his lax hand did not intervene. Helpless to make the decision himself, he welcomed the intervention of the homing instinct of his horse. With bent head and brooding face he returned to the silence of the trail and the loneliness of the hills.

CHAPTER XVII.

CAVANAGH'S LAST VIGIL BEGINS.

On his solitary ride upward and homeward the ranger searched his heart and found it bitter and disloyal. Love had interfered with duty, and pride had checked and defeated love. His path, no longer clear and definite, looped away aimlessly, lost in vague, obscure meanderings. His world had suddenly grown gray. He had no trade, no business, no special skill save in the ways of the mountaineer, and to return to his ancestral home in England at the moment seemed a woeful confession of failure.

It was again dusk as he rode up to his own hitching pole and slipped from the saddle.

Wetherford came out, indicating by his manner that he had recovered his confidence once more. "How did you find things in the valley?" he inquired as they walked away toward the corral.

"Bad," responded the ranger.

"In what way?"

"The chief has been dismissed, and all the rascals are chuckling with glee. I've resigned from the service."

Wetherford was aghast. "What for?"

"I will not serve under any other chief. The best thing for you to do is to go out when I do. I think by keeping on that uniform you can get to the train with me."

"Did you see Lize and my girl?"

"No; I only remained in town a minute. It was too hot for me. I'm done with it. Wetherford, I'm going back to civilization. No more wild west for me." The bitterness of his voice touched the older man's heart, but he considered it merely a mood.

"Don't lose your nerve. Mebbe this ends the reign of terror."

"Nothing will end the moral shiftlessness of this country but the death of the freebooter. That job was done by men who hated the ... —hated 'em because they were rival claimants for the range. It's nonsense to attempt to fasten it on men like Neill Ballard. The men who did that piece of work are well known stock owners."

"I reckon that's so."

"Well, now, who's going to convict them? I can't do it. I'm going to pull out as soon as I can put my books in shape, and you'd better go too."

They were standing at the gate of the corral, and the roar of the mountain stream enveloped them in a cloud of sound.

Wetherford spoke slowly: "I hate to lose my girl now that I've seen her, but I guess you're right. And Lize, poor old critter! It's a shame the way I've queered her life, and I'd give my right arm to be where I was twelve years ago, but with a price on my head and old age coming on I don't see myself ever again getting up to par. It's a losing game for me now."

There was resignation as well as despair in his voice, and Cavanagh felt it, but he said: "There's one other question that may come up for decision. If that Basque died of smallpox you may possibly take it."

"I've figured on that, but it will take a day or two to show on me. I don't feel any ache in my bones yet. If I do come down you keep away from me. You've got to live and take care of Virginia."

"She should never have returned to this accursed country," Cavanagh harshly replied, starting back toward the cabin.

The constable, smoking his pipe beside the fireplace, did not present an anxious face. On the contrary, he seemed plumply content as he replied to the ranger's greeting. He represented very well the type of officer which these disorderly communities produce. Brave and tireless when working along the line of his prejudices, he could be most laxly inefficient when his duties cut across his own or his neighbor's interests. Being a cattleman by training, he was glad of the red herring which the Texas officer had trailed across the line of his pursuit.

This attitude still further inflamed Cavanagh's indignant hate of the country. The theory which the deputy developed was transparent folly. "It was just a case of plain robbery," he argued. "One of them dagoes had money, and Neill Ballard and that man Edwards just naturally follered him and killed the whole bunch and scooted. That's my guess."

An hour later the sound of a horse's hoofs on the bridge gave warning of a visitor, and as Cavanagh went to the door Gregg rode up, seeking particulars as to the death of the herder and the whereabouts of the sheep.

The ranger was not in a mood to invite the sheepman in, and, besides, he perceived the danger to which Wetherford was exposed; therefore his answers were short. Gregg, on his part, did not appear anxious to enter.

"What happened to that old hobo I sent up?" he asked.

Cavanagh briefly retold his story, and at the end of it Gregg grunted. "You say you burned the tent and all the bedding?"

"Every thread of it. It wasn't safe to leave it."

"What ailed the man?"

"I don't know, but it looked and smelled like smallpox."

The deputy rose with a spring. "Smallpox! You didn't handle the cuss?"

Cavanagh did not spare him. "Somebody had to lend a hand. I couldn't see him die there alone, and he had to be buried, so I did the job."

Gregg recoiled a step or two, but the deputy stood staring, the implication of all this sinking deep. "Were you wearing the same clothes you've got on?"

"Yes, but I used a slicker while working around the body."

"Keep off!" shouted the sheriff.

Ross smiled, then became very serious. "I took every precaution, Mr. Deputy. I destroyed everything that could possibly carry the disease. I burned every utensil, including the saddle—everything but the man's horse and his dog."

The officer caught up his hat and coat and started for the door. "It's me for the open air," said he.

As the men withdrew Ross followed them and, standing in his door, delivered his final volley. "If this state does not punish those fiends every decent man should emigrate out of it, turning the land over to the wolves, the wildcats and other beasts of prey."

Gregg as he retreated called back: "That's all right, Mr. Ranger, but you'd better keep to the hills for a few weeks. The settlers down below won't enjoy having a man with smallpox chassaying around town. They might rope and tie you."

Wetherford came out of his hiding place with a grave face.

Wetherford now that the danger of arrest was over was disposed to be grimly humorous. "There's no great loss without some small gain. I don't think we'll be troubled by any more visitors, not even by sheriffs or doctors. I reckon you and I are in for a couple of months of the quiet life—the kind we read about."

If you do, you certainly owe it to yourself to look into the merits of the famous "Free." We are sole agents for this machine in Newark and we can state unhesitatingly that it is the best machine at the price on the market. There are many other makes, but only one "Free." All of our machines (small hand machines excepted) are sold on the club plan, $2.00 down and $1.00 a week, or $4.00 a month thereafter. Your original $2.00 applies directly on the cost of the machine, however, and it is not in any sense of the word a so-called "club fee."

OUR "ELBECO"—We have sold carload after carload of these machines, and to the best of our knowledge every machine is giving positive satisfaction. The name "Elbeco" spells perfection, and an "Elbeco" machine is an addition to any home. When we tell you that it is the best machine on the market today at the price, we are speaking the truth. This machine is made especially for us by one of the largest manufacturers, and it embodies all the latest improvements. Ball bearing, head and stand, handsome golden oak finish woodwork, colonial style, five drawers, full set of attachments $22.50

"ELBECO, JR."—Our "Elbeco Jr." at $14.50 must not be confounded with $14.50 machines. Disregard the price entirely and inspect it with the same critical eye that you would a $25.00 article. Examine its parts—examine its finish—examine its general appearance. When you get through you will be forced to admit, as many others have, that the "Elbeco Jr." is a $25.00 machine. New high arm head; finely finished; woodwork of golden oak; two side and one centre drawers; automatic lift; ball bearing stand. Equal to many $25.00 machines, at ... $14.50

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"Baby Mine" has not only become accustomed to its new up-town home at the Nazimova, but the accessibility of the theatre has also aided the popularity of Margaret Mayo's merry play to attract increasingly large crowds. From present indications "Baby Mine" will continue in New York until the close of the season. Marguerite Clark, Ivy Troutman, Ernest Glendinning, Walter Jones and the other clever members of the cast remain.

The second month of "Over Night" at the Hackett begins Monday night. Philip H. Bartholomae's farcicial comedy has undoubtedly caught the fancy of the laugh-loving element among theatre-goers. The merry misadventures of the divided honeymooners, Mrs. and Mr. Darling and Mr. and Mrs. Kettle, create situations that are ludicrously funny. Margaret Lawrence, Jean Newcombe, Norma Winslow, Herbert A. Yost, Robt. Kelly, A. P. Alysworth and others clevrly contribute to the merrymaking.

Miss Elsie Janis has again scored the greatest kind of a laughing hit at the Globe Theatre, New York, where she is appearing to crowded houses in Charles Dillingham's newest musical comedy production, "The Slim Princess." Miss Janis is seen in a role entirely different from anything she has hitherto attempted, and has discarded the madcap roles of previous years to assume the gorgeous gowns and stately air of an Oriental princess. She is seen first as the Princess Kalora, daughter of a Turkish Prince, who finds little favor in the eastern land because she is too thin. The Turkish gentlemen, we are told, like their ladies fat—a quaint conceit well worked out in a rollicking song by Joseph Cawthorne, the principal comedian, in a song with four fat chorus girls called "I Like 'Em Plump." "The Slim Princess" has scored such a pronounced hit at the Globe Theatre that Miss Janis and her merry cohorts will no doubt remain there the entire season. Matinees are given on Wednesday (at popular prices) and on Saturday.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. Wilton Lackaye in C. T. Dazey's newest and best play, "The Stranger," will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow afternoon and night. Seats are now on sale. Had the play been written for Mr. Lackaye, he could not have secured a more congenial role than that of the "poorhouse boy" who is driven from his Southern home by the jibes and jeers of some of the narrow-minded aristocrats of Georgia's old families. Nameless and alone he begins life in the wonder city of the North, New York, and agter attaining success, returns to the place of his nativity to discover his lineage, and prove to early detractors that there are other things in the world besides established traditions. Mr. Lackaye is the finished actor at all times, and in "The Stranger" is making additional friends by his masterly portrayal of a likeable character. The scene of the play lends itself to attractive stage settings, and the producer, L. S. Sire, has taken full advantage of this opportunity. The company supporting Mr. Lackaye is an excellent one, and includes Muriel Starr, Edna Conroy, Frank Burbeck, H. S. Northrup and others.

JAIL AND FINE FOR LEADING DUAL LIFE.

Once a respected Sunday school teacher, but recently discovered leading a dual life, George Gray, a former saloon keeper, of 321 Federal street, Camden, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and serve three months in jail by Judge Joline in Camden Tuesday. Adele Jetter, "the woman in the case," was fined $50, and after paying the money left the courthouse in tears.

Gray was a temperance saloonkeeper. When he was invited by a customer to take a drink he always refused, often declaring that he was opposed to the treating habit. Miss Jetter was known as "Mrs. Gray" at the cafe until a few months ago, when officers entered a room occupied by the pair and placed them under arrest.

Present at the time of the arrest of the pair was the saloon-keeper's son-in-law, who declared that Gray was believed to have been living an exemplary life until a few days before the warrant was issued for his arrest.

For about a year the only time Gray would visit his wife and family at Bryn Mawr, Pa., would be about twice a month to spend Saturday night and Sunday. According to his son-in-law, he always told his wife that he was a very busy man traveling around the country for a prominent firm. He became bolder and bolder until he aroused the suspicions of his wife and children. They detailed special detectives to trail him.

NATION'S PROBLEM

DISCUSSES TAFT POLICIES.

Progressive ..Republican ..League Scheme Explained in Her Fourth Talk on Current History.

Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, D. C., gave her fourth talk on Current History before a large and attentive audience in the Hartridge auditorium Thursday afternoon. In commenting on Current History in Europe Miss Richards said that the recent "Battle of Mile End Road," in which the London police and a company of British soldiers were engaged in an attempt to rout out armed anarchists from a certain house in the Mile End Road had taught England a very significant lesson.

Since the assassination of President McKinley anarchists have been classed amongst those undesirable aliens which the law excludes from our shores, but England has until the present time given shelter to all anarchists in the mistaken belief that she in consequence would be free from all anarchical outrages. The British people now thoroughly aroused to the importance of the matter are demanding of the newly assembled Parliament a measure to restrain the landing of such anarchists in Great Britain.

Miss Richards also drew the attention of her audience to the fact that besides those pests to society who believed that the world owed them a living there was a very large class who believed the world owed them a chance to make a living and it was well to examine the economic causes which drive such people as the latter class to the extremity of anarchy.

Turning to home current events Miss Richards spoke on the development in the line of leadership made by President Taft in the last three months as evidenced by his important special messages to Congress.

His special message recommending the fortification of the Panama Canal did not as is sometimes stated suggest the fortification of the entire fifty miles but planned for the erection of forts at both ends of the canal in order that the ships of the navy should in the event of war be left free for coast defence. One of the most important in its relation to public welfare of the President's special messages is that relating to the Tariff Commission by which a commission of six men three from each party be appointed to collect data regarding the cost of production in various froeign countries with a view to regulating the duty on imported articles so that the ultimate consumer may in future pay on imported goods only the difference of cost of production plus transportation.

The commission is also, if possible, to solve for us such mysteries as why steel rails can be manufactured in America, shipped to the other side of the globe and yet sold for less than the American consumer can buy them for in the country of their production. Inquisitorial rights on the books of the great manufacturing concerns of this country would be necessary to the solution of these puzzles and the great monied interests are determined that such inquisitorial rights shall never be made law and the Senate in accordance with their wishes is pledged to hold up this bill which has already passed the House. The Tariff Commission bill may in a modified form yet become law as a rider to the Sundry Civil bill.

The Taft reciprocity treaty is another measure which will, if successful, bring great relief to the American housekeeper, who finds the struggle to make both ends meet grow harder as every year brings its rise in the cost of living. By this treaty many Canadian foodstuffs would be admitted duty free and a welcome reduction in the prices of fresh meat, vegetables, fruit, butter and eggs would ensue.

A movement of great importance is that for the reform of the Republican party under the title of the National Progressive Republican League, which has drawn up provisions by which the Republican party may be freed from certain abuses, made stronger and more efficient thereby, and that through these provisions the people may be educated to rule themselves. Nine Senators, thirteen Representatives and six Governors of States have signed this League's membership roll, and many politicians of the progressive ranks are giving it their support. The League hopes to nominate a progressive candidate for the next Presidential election. Its aims are: First, to provide for the election of United

FRANK DANIELS IN 'GIRL IN THE TRAIN'

Frank Daniels will come to the Plainfield Theatre for one night only, Saturday, February 11, in the funniest role of his entire career, when he appears as Judge of the Divorce Court in Charles Dillingham's big musical comedy production, "The Girl in the Train." This production, by Lee Fall, has been the rage of all Europe for the past year, and has been playing in every big city of Europe with unvarying success. Charles Dillingham bought the American rights last spring, and engaged Harry B. Smith to make the American adaption from the original German of Victor Loon, who ,by the way, first attained fame as the author of "The Merry Widow." The story of "The Girl in the Train," relates to an adventure on a sleeping car, when a young husband gives up his sleeping compartment to an actress traveling alone. This incident leads to the first act, a divorce court scene in Holland, where the young man's wife sues for divorce, and the actress appears to defend herself. Mr. Daniels appears as the Judge and is screemingly funny. The company is a large one and includes Miss Sallie Fisher and Miss Vera Michelson, with a chorus of sixty and an enlarged orchestra. The three acts are picturesque scenes in modern Holland.

BIBLE CLASS IN COMIC SKETCHES

"Box and Cox" a short sketch, and "A Regular Fix," a one-act play, were given at the Y. M. C. A., last evening before a large audience by the members of Dr. Norman H. Probasco's Bible class of young men of the First Baptist church. Both the sketch and the one- act play provoked much laughter.

The cast for "Box and Cox" was as follows: "Mr. Box," Charles Lee; "Mr. Cox," Arthur Perrin; "Aunty Bouncer," William Flanders. The scene was a bedroom in Aunty Bouncer's lodging house which both Box and Cox rented. The incidents which followed were very amusing.

The greater part of the evening was devoted to the one-act play, which depicted "Hugh DeBrass," impersonated by Harold Robins, getting in the worng house and then having no end of trouble in explaining the situation. The cast follows:

"Mr. Surplus," a lawyer, Sidney Mackey; "Charles Surplus, Jr.," his nephew, Arthur Dunning; "Abel Quick," head clerk, N. J. Randolph Chandler; "Smiler," a detective, Joseph Lohsen; porter, Leslie Powlison; "Hugh DeBrass," Harold Robins; "Mrs. Surplus," Leland Manning; "Mrs. Deborah Carter," housekeeper, Gideon Fountain; "Emily," Atholl Newman; "Matilda Jane," maid, Leland Manning. Leslie Pomlison was the property manager; Sidney Mackey and Harold Robins, business managers, while credit is due Francis K. Anderson, the coach, under whose direction the sketch and one-act were put on by the young men.

During the intermission, the class quartet, comprising Harold Leadbitter, first tenor; Atholl Newman, second tenor; Gideon Fountain, first bass and Hollis Cubberly, second bass, sang a number of selections. The quartet was encored several times.

Bowman-Reynolds.

Miss Olar Bowman, formerly of Monroe, N. C., and Cornell C. Reynolds, of Virginia, were married last night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Brinkley, 410 East Third street, Rev. G. W. Bailey, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her sister, Mrs. Minnie Pinkston, of East Orange, who wore a gown of white satin trimmed with oriental lace and carried a bouquet of flowers. Miss Josephine P. Madison, of this city, was maid of honor and William A. Jones was the best man. An informal reception was held for the relatives and a few friends.

A Great Showing.

The State Trust Company has opened, during the past month, sixty new accounts and more than 250 accounts since it began business the latter part of September or about two new accounts on every business day since it opened its doors. This is splendid evidence of the public's confidence that the company is enjoying and argues well for its present and future success.

Wedding Reception.

Rev. and Mrs. Royal A. Stout, who were married a few months ago, will give a reception at the parsonage of the Netherwood Reformed church, Wednesday evening, February 8, to the members of the church and the bridal party.

ADVISES MOTHERS

Mrs M. A. Comstock Dwells on "The Value of Literature for Children.

BIBLE SHOULD BE READ.

In Address Before Mothers' Association She Urges That Question Concerning Life be Related to the Young.

Mrs. Margaret Alice Comstock, of New York, read an intensely interesting paper on "The Value of Literature for Children," covering every phose of the question, at a largely attended meeting of the Mothers' Association held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, 423 East Seventh street. Light refreshments were served by the hostess at the conclusion and a discussion of the State Congress of Mothers next November followed.

Mrs. Comstock is a charming speaker and her ideas as set forth in a lengthy paper were endorsed by the entire assemblage. She divided the literature suitable for the child into three classes, religious, culled or diluted and English and other classics. Contrary to the general belief, Mrs. Comstock declared her faith in the thorough reading of the Bible. In it the young mind is taught to absorb a literary taste and this Book makes ethical culture possible in the youngest minds; it teaches the child to form ideas and by all means should be given to them just as it stands.

Referring to what she termed "culled' literature Mrs. Comstock declared that those books from which the real essence had been eliminated were unsatisfactory to the child They do not satisfy the natural longings.

"Turn a child loose in a well selected library," she said, "if you haven't time to give your personal attention to the books you would like to have it read. This will be found helpful rather than harmful. To the pure child all things are pure and only the pure of the volumes read by them would remain. I earnestly ask you mothers to watch the effect of this sort of proceeding on your boy or girl. Note carefully the effect the books have on them. The entire range of literature ought to be the child's field and if you doubt it just ask some of the boys and girls of today what books they are reading."

Mrs. Comstock also urged the mothers to not evade the questions of children as to life. It is a mistake to withhold from them the knowledge which they will acquire sooner or later and in many instances the knowledge they ought to be given comes to them too late. "Be brave," she said, "and tell them all they ought to know."

REV. CHARLES FISKE TO CONDUCT MISSION

Rev. Charles Fiske, of Baltimore, Md., will conduct a Religious Conference at Grace church, Sunday, February 19, to Sunday, February 26, inclusive. The undertaking has been previously announced as a mission, but the name has been dropped in order that the congregation may be more fully aware of the purpose. A Mission is a large affair, requiring the services of several clergymen, but it is the same idea that will be followed in the Religious Conference. It is an undertaking to revive latent spiritual forces and to stir up fresh spiritual interests.

The Sunday services will take place at 11 in the morning and 4 in the afternoon while on week days they will be held at 10 in the morning and 8 o'clock at night. Rev. Mr. Fiske was formerly rector of St. John's church, Somerville, and is now rector of St. Michael's and All Angels, Baltimore.

EXPLOSION VICTIM FOUND IN RIVER

Eight men for whom warrants had been issued on charges of manslaughter and criminal carelessness were arraigned this morning before Judge Queen in the Second Criminal Court in Jersey City, and bonds were furnished for their appearance when wanted, by the National Surety Company. Ralph G. Morse, of Hillside avenue, assistant manager of the Dupont-Nemours Powder Co., was among those whom George G. Tennant, counsel for the Surety Company was prepared to take care of.

Twenty or more men, employees of various concerns in the neighborhood of the explosion, were interviewed and some detained as witnesses by the Jersey City detectives.

Notwithstanding the alleged protests of the Central's officials that recovery of bodies would be impossible, a diver yesterday recovered the body of Captain James A. Anderson, of the tug Whistler. The wounds on the victim's head showed conclusively that the force of the explosion had fractured his skull and that death was instantaneous. It is believed now that other bodies will be brought to the surface this afternoon.

Yesterday Job Lippincott, of the Jersey City police board, issued a statement in which he said that the explosives were brought into Jersey City, without a permit which makes both the railroad company and the Dupont concern responsible for the accident.

Many expert opinions have been sought and many given for the terrific explosion at Communipaw on Wednesday and it seems needless to say that the opinions differ. But County Prosecutor Garven says: "No matter why the stuff exploded, we will fix the responsibility regardless of how high up we have to reach." The investigation is going forward vigorously today.

Barn Dance and Masquerade.

A barn dance and masquerade will be given by Mrs. Martin Whelan, of Brook avenue, Wednesday, February 15, at Debele's Hall, for the benefit of St. Joseph's church.

HOSPITAL'S NEEDS

Treasurer E. N. Erickson of Muhlenberg Issues Statement and Appeal.

OPERATING EXPENSES $37,000.

Individual Contributions Urged to Carry on Work Which is Largely Charitable.

E. N. Erickson, treasurer of the institution, has issued the following statement setting forth the needs of Muhlenberg Hospital:

"Although the appeal of the finance committee of the hospital for new subsscribers was sent out only about three weeks ago, the treasurer reports that quite a number have already sent subscriptions, or signified their intention of subscribing, but there are still a large number from whom no response has as yet been received.

"When it is considered that the annual individual contributions toward the support of this work is less than $7,000 one might think that the people of Plainfield do not appreciate the importance of this work, but we do not believe this to be the case because it is a charity that every citizen of our city should be interested in to the extent of supporting.

"Few realize the great amount of time and labor expended by many of the men having in charge the administration of the affairs of this institution. They need and deserve the co-operation of every citizen interested in the welfare of the city in carrying on a work which does so much toward the care and relief of the sick and suffering. It is your work and should receive your support. Last year the operating or running expenses were approximately $37,000. To some this may seem a large amount. In fact some may say "I don't see why it should cost so much." But don't say that you know something about the work and the cost of supporting hospitals, but instead go out to the hospital and simply say "I'm from Missouri." I want to be shown.

"There is no doubt but that the affairs of Muhlenberg Hospital are conducted on a better, sound, business basis than ever before in the history of the institution and we believe it is the object of those in charge to cast aside all personal feeling and consider only what is for the best interests of the hospital.

"As a large percentage of this work is of necessity charitable work, it must of necessity be supported by individual contributions. Of the total amount of work less than twenty per cent. is private room, and of the other eighty per cent., which is in the wards and isolation building, over one-half is absolutely free. It must also be taken into consideration that where ward patients do pay it is only $1 a day, which, of course, does not begin to cover the cost of caring for them. The average cost per patient, per day, last year, was about $2.80.

"Everyone who can possibly do so should send a subscription, no matter how small, to the treasurer, Julius E. Erickson, 826 Hillside avenue. In order that you may not forget it, why not put up that familiar sign "Do It Now" and then don't take it down until you have sent your subscription.

Baptist Ministers' Conference.

A ministers confernce of the East New Jersey Baptist Association will be held Monday afternoon at the East Baptist church, Elizabeth. At 1:30 o'clock there will be a consideration of the topic: "Evangelism," and at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. H. H. Brown, of Orange, will present a paper. The local Baptist Clergymen will attend.

"The Duty of Fault Finding."

"The Duty of Fault-Finding," will be the subject of the sermon by Rev. Gabriel Maguire at the Park Avenue Baptist church, tomorrow morning. In the evening he will preach on the subject: "Saul of Tarsus," and the right-hand of fellowship will be given to new members.

To Attend Performance.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell will not appear in the production of "The King's Garden" and "The Kid Faun" to be presented at the Plainfield theatre on Thursday night. She will, however, attend the performance.

Stockholders to Meet.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club will take place at 202 Park avenue, Tuesday night, when plans for the coming year will also be discussed.

A series of revival meetings will begin in the Shiloh Baptist church next week, in charge of the pastor, Rev. E. W. Roberts.

ROUTINE BUSINESS IN THE BOROUGH COUNCIL

In the regular order of business at the Borough Council meeting, last night, the following applications for building permits were granted:

G. O. Keller, addition to house on Jackson avenue, 16x16 feet; William V. Kirchman, addition to house on Duer street; N. K. Barnes, new house, Brook avenue, 24x30 feet, two and a half stories; L. W. Randolph, garage, Myrtle avenue.

Two applications were held up, the nature of the buildings as planned not being desirable. Mayor Smalley said he was apposed to allowing any building to be erected in a neighborhood where it was going to depreciate property values or prove detrimental in any way. When asked by Councilman Milne on what grounds a permit would be refused, the executive replied, "danger from fire."

The report of Recorder Dolliver for January showed seventeen arrests and $26 in fines collected. The collectors report showed a balance of $6,765.10.

Resolutions introduced by Mr. Waldron authorized the laying of flagging on the easterly side of Rockview terrace from Stony brook to Greenbrook road, and crosswalks at Greenbrook road and Harrison avenue.

TROLLEY LINE FOR SOUTH PLAINFIELD

South Plainfielders are getting stirred up again over the trolley question and are beginning to talk about what might have been if only some one had taken the initiative when the project was first proposed.

It has been learned during the past few days that the consent of property owners has been obtained for a route through private property, starting from Arlington avenue to the Ohl's property, the A. Manning estate, Van Nest farm, the property of Peter McDonough and William Smith to a terminus near the Lehigh Valley Railroad station.

None of those directly interested in the proposed trolley line have come forward with promises of building it, but the property owners who have willingly given the right of way through their farms and other tracts are becoming inquisitive as to why the scheme ended in getting the consent. This morning one of the vitally interested people said that hopes had been revived in them by the presence of surveyors along the proposed route and it is within the possibilities that the original scheme for a continuation of the Arlington avenue line to South Plainfield will be carried out. He also said "I hope so."

Chess Tournament On.

The chess club of the Plainfield High School has completed arrangements for a tournament the first contest having taken place yesterday afternoon. There are about twenty-five members all chess enthusiasts. Preliminary games have been going on for some time in preparation for this tournament and some interesting developments are looked for. A medal will be awarded the winner of the tournament and honorable mention given to second and third respectively.

Seventh-Day Baptist Services.

"There is That Scattereth and Yet Increaseth," was the subject of the sermon by Rev. Edwin Shaw at the Seventh-Day Baptist church this morning. The February consecration meeting of the senior and junior Endeavor societies was held at the usual hour. The quarterly church meeting will be held tomorrow night. This will be the thirty-fifth anniversary of the ordination as deacons of J. Denison Spicer and Dr. T. H Tomlinson and the fact will be recognized.

An Organ Recital.

The forty-third of the series of Sunday afternoon organ recitals will be given by S. Frederick Smith, organist and choir director of Grace P. E. church, at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The program includes introduction to third act of Lakme, Delibes; Allegro Cantabile, symphony 5, Widor; War March of the Priests, Mendlessohn and Cantilene in D by Matthiews.

Dr. Halsey to Preach.

Rev. Dr. A. W. Halsey,of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, will preach at both services in the Presbyterian church tomorrow. He is one of the best speakers in the denomination and no doubt a large congregation will want to hear him. The morning subject will be: "The General Field," and the evening topic: "Africa."

BORO'S COUNCIL OPPOSES MERGER

Consolidation and sewage disposal talk occupied the greater part of the sesion at the borough Council's regular monthly meeting, last night. As a result the members as a whole placed themselves upon record as being opposed at this time to any action toward consolidation until the project to install sewers is underway and cannot be interfered with. Two resolutions were introduced and passed bearing on this phase of the question, one introduced by Councilman Milne, and the other by Councilman Smalley Aside from members of the Council, the matter was discussed pro and con by W. J. Buttfield, Edwin S. Hooley and William L. Saunders. At one time the remarks of the three became quite warm and as Mr. Hooley expressed it, simply went to show how far the consolidation question could go.

In the early part of the meeting Mr. Buttfield, as a member of the sewage commission gave a most excellent resume of the work of this body during the past year. He related concisely the opposition by Bound Brook to the location of the proposed disposal beds, dwelling upon the appeal made to the State Board of Health. When the matter was called for argument, Sherrard Depue representing the commision advanced the statement that the complaining parties had no right to contest this plan inasmuch as the law declares objection must be made within thirty days after permission is granted for the beds by the municipality in which they are to be placed. This was not done. The question was referred to the Attorney General and upheld, furthermore, eliciting the information that the State Board of Health had no jurisdiction in the matter of location, simply the method of disposal. The next move, Mr. Buttfield said after the hearing at Trenton last week, when the facts were brought was the drafting of Senate bill 41, introduced by Senator Frelinghuysen, making it necessary for a municipality to first secure the consent of the State Board before it can build a disposal plant. This bill has been referred to a committee and a meeting will be held next Tuesday to decide upon its merits.

Continuing, Mr. Buttfield said that the members of the commission had given much valuable time to the sewage question and they did not take kindly to the consolidation talk that has arisen, a subject that tends to divert the minds of the people after all the labor and money that has been expended and may perhaps keep North Plainfield from getting the absolutely needed improvement for years to come. In conclusion he raised the question whether it is not better to devote attention to the project in hand than to continue shillyshallying after the will-o'-the-wisp of consolidation

As a result of this talk, Mr. Milne introduced the following resolution:

Whereas—There has recently been some agitation in favor of consolidating the city and the borough; and

Whereas—A discussion of "consolidation" at this time is calculated to hinder the consummation of a system of sewerage in the borough, for which there has been an urgent and practically unanimous demand from its voters and property owners;

Now, therefore, be it resolved—That this Council, being committed to a policy in furtherance of an early installation of a sewerage system upon which much work has been expended is opposed to any revival of the question af consolidation at the present time and until said improvement shall have been finally contracted for and otherwise assured.

The clerk of the borough is hereby instructed to forward certified copies of these resolutions to our representatives in the Legislature at Trenton, and to the honorable mayor and Common Council of the city of Plainfield.

The introduction of this resolution led to the rather warm discussion in the lobby, in which Mr. Saunders was on one side and Mr. Buttfield and Mr. Hooley on the other. Mr. Buttfield made the assertian that Mr. Saunders was the Chamber of Commerce of Plainfield and that the consolidation meeting it conducted was a pre-arranged affair although certain reputable men had spoken adversely against it saying that any talk of consolidation now would interrupt the plans for sewers.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Second and third class traffic along the German railway in Shan-Tung has been suspended, owing to the plague, which is also spreading in Peking.

At the request of President Davila, President Taft proffered the good offices of the United States toward the restoration of peace in Honduras.

It was announced at Washington that the United States was ready to assist China in combating the plague should the government of that country request it.

Mexico City reported that the attack of insurgents on Juarez had begun; the United States sent twelve more troops of cavalry to maintain neutrality on the border.

The Philippine Assembly adjourned without having enacted important legislation, including an appropriation bill and one appointing resident commissioners in Washington.

It was learned that a young woman, resembling Miss Dorothy Arnold, sailed for Europe on the Cincinnati, on January 5, giving a name and address obviously fictitious.

With a memorial meeting in the City Hall, New York, and exercises in the public schools the city paid its tribute to the memory of Horace Greeley on the centenary of his birth.

A $50,000 blaze on Gold street, New York which alarmed the patients in St. Gregory's Hospital, afforded returning Brooklynites a spectacle which blocked the bridge promenade for a time.

MAY ASK THAT GAS BILLS TELL ABOUT GAS METERS.

Trenton, Feb. 4.—To prevent misunderstanding between consumers of gas, water and electricity and the corporations supplying such commodities, the Board of Public Utility Commissioners has asked the co-operation of the companies in sending out bills that will be intelligible to the public. The board suggested that every bill rendered for metered service shall have printed thereon a brief but clear description of the method of reading meters or that some equally effective means be employed to make such knowledge general. It is also suggested that every such bill show the reading of the meter upon which the charge is based and the last preceding reading.

In its investigation of complaints of charges for metered service the board found that in some instances these were based upon misreading of meters by consumers. In requesting that the charges in the bills be made the board has asked the corporations to advise it within ten days if they have any reason for objecting to the suggestions.

Failure to advise the board definitely with respect to the acceptance or rejection of the recommendations within ten days will be deemed a rejection. The board will then take such other action as may be deemed proper.

Completeing the Offer.

There is a light side, even to electioneering—would it were seen often. One fervent candidate for political prefetment recently assured his audience that he was prepared to offer "his life, his home, his children, his country and his empire to the free and unfettered judgment of a free and unfettered people!" It was high-sounding, but the whole effect was spoiled by a vioce from the back of the hall crying 'Won't you throw in the missus, govnor?"—Gentlewoman.

Distinguished Visitors.

In case we entertain a man,
A stranger of renown,
We've nothing more to offer than
The freedom of the town.

But when a woman comes our way
And in upon us drops,
We hand her on a silver tray
The freedom of the shops.

JERSEY VOTED FOR THE SUBSIDY BILL

The Senate has passed the ocean mail subsidy bill, which authorizes the Postmaster General to enter into contracts for carrying the mails to South American ports and to the Philippines, Japan, China and Australia at a rate of $4 a mile on the outward voyage to vessels of the second class and $2 a mile on the outward voyage to vessels of the third class.

The amount of the subsidy to be paid in any one year is limited to $4,000,000, and under no circumstances shall exceed the amount of money received on account of foreign mails. This is the first important administration measure to be passed by the Senate this session.

The bill went through yesterday under conditions that give very little encouragement to its friends. On two separate roll calls on the passage of the measure the vote was a tie, 39 to 39. The Vice-President exercised his prerogative of voting and thus saved the measure from defeat. Even then the bill would have failed but for the absence of the new Democratic Senator from West Virginia, Clarence Watson, who took the oath of office yesterday at the urgent request of his Democratic colleagues who were anxious to get rid of one Republican vote, and, as they supposed, add one Democratic vote in opposition to the measure.

The final vote was as follows on the passage of the bill:

Noes—Democrats, Bacon, Bankhead, Chamberlain, Clark, (of Arkansas), Culberson, Fletcher, Foster, Frazier, Johnston, Martin, Newlands, Overman, Owen, Paynter, Percy, Smith, (of South Carolina), Stone Swanson, Taliaferro, Taylor, Terrell, Thornton and Tillman—26; Repbulicans, Beveridge, Borah, Bourne, Bristow, Brown, Burton, Crawford, Cummins,Gronna, Gamble, La Follette, McCumber and Smith, (of Michigan)—13.

The passage of the ocean mail subsidy bill by Vice-President Sherman's vote is said to have been the first time since 1898 that the Vice-President has cast a deciding vote upon an important measure. In 1898 Vice-President Hobart cast the vote against the Bacon resolution, which provided that the United States should not retain the Philippine Islands

Salem county contributed to the State about $2,000 in gunners' license fees the past season.

The Gloucester Council Thursday night decided to donate $600 to the Cooper Hospital, Camden, which care for many residents of the city.

Blood-poisoning, caused by dye getting into a small cut in his hand several months ago, necessitated the amputation of an arm of Thomas Horner, at Beverly.

Mrs. Frances M. Erven, with a two-year-old child in her arms, fell down-stairs at her home in Bordentown and was severely injured. The child escaped with a bruise of the nose.

Burned about the face by an explosion of gas caused by lighting a cigarette while moving a stove with the jet open, Norman Ballinger, twenty-four years old, of 209 Arch street, Camden, was treated at Cooper Hospital.

Damages to the amount of $7,000 are asked by John A. Wylie and his wife Mary, in a suit instituted Thursday in Camden against the Howell Realty Company. Mrs. Wylie alleges she sustained injury by falling down a gully on the property of the company.

Falling downstairs at his home at Woodstown, Wednesday night, Isaac Robinson, seventy-four years old, is in the Homeopathic Hospital, Camden, in a critical condition. Besides internal injuries, he has a compound fracture of the nose, lacerations of the face and abrasion of the right wrist.

As a result of a free fight at Mt. Laurel, in which razors were flashed, five men were so badly cut as to need medical attention. One had an ear almost severed and the fight stopped only when the men were hors de combat. Drs. Richie and Stroud, of Moorestown, sewed up the wounds of four of the men. No arrests were made.

While all of Haddonfield was sleeping Wednesday night billposters invaded the town and violated a borought ordinance by placing on the large trees in the town posters announcing a sale to be held in Moorestown. Mayor Brown Thursday issued summons for the person whose name appears on the bill as conducting the sale.

In the guise of gas-meter inspectors, twe men entered the cellar at the home of Michael Crane, on Haddon avenue, Collingswood, Thursday, broke open the slot box, stole the contents of $3 and made their escape, leaving Mrs. Crane and her five-month-old baby in danger of death by asphyxiation. In breaking the meter the thieves left a flow of gas from a one-inch pipe, and the house filled up with gas so rapidly that the woman and her child were overcome before help could be summoned. Contractor C. F. Taylor, who was passing the home, detected the odor of gas and rescued the mother and child.

"Try a broom; that's a pretty good thing to use on drunken men," said Judge Horner to Mary Clinton, of Jacksonville, Thursday, when she was arraigned charged with stealing a watch from Albert Jobes, a boarder. She said that Jobes and her husband had become intoxicated and she relieved the boarder of his watch in lieu of his indebtedness to her. She complained to the court that there was too much drunkenness about her house and she did not known how to stop it. The court decided that the taking of the watch under the circumstances was not a very serious offense and sentence was suspended, after which the broom advice was given.

—No. 4 Hose Company from the Netherwood house was called out at 6 o'clock Thursday night for a chimney fire in a house at St. Mary's avenue and Hill street, occupied by a Hungarian family. Two hand extinguishers were used in putting out the blaze.

NEED MORE MONEY FOR RAISING THE MAINE.

"I told you so," was the attitude of the War Department officials yesterday upon the announcement from Havana that the work of raising the Maine must stop in a few days because of the exhaustion of the money appropriated for that purpose.

It was pointed out that Secretary Dickinson has repeatedly informed Congress that at least $300,000 is needed in addition to the $150,000 appropriated last session if the work is to be completed.

In none of these appeals there is not even a bill providing for such an appropriation before Congress.

The department officials declared yesterday they were helpless in the present situation. They cannot exceed the appropriation, yet it is declared that considerable loss will result if the work is stopped at this time.

"The Star Bout," Taylor Granville's melodramatic vaudeville offering, and William Courtleigh, the dramatic actor, in "Peaches," will divide headline honors at the Plaza Music Hall. Juliet, the young mimic, in an entirely new act will be an important feature of the bill, together with Violiniski; The Roberty Dancers; Brown and Cooper; Harry Brown & Co., will present "A Case of Divorce." May Ward is an added attraction, while others on the bill will include Rivoli, The Carpos Brothers, Musical Thor, and Larola.

Henry Miller's remarkable play, "The Havoc," begins its second month at the Bijou Theatre in New York next Monday night. This intensely interesting and superbly acted play is one of the few emphatic hits of the present season and is drawing capacity audiences to every performance at the Bijou Theatre. A heavy advance sale for six weeks ahead justifies the prediction that Mr. Miller's new success will enjoy the longest run the Bijou Theatre has had since David Warfield in "The Music Master" left Broadway for his two years tour of the United States.

PENSION BILL IS OF INTEREST TO "FANS."

United States Senator Frank O. Briggs has introduced a bill in the Senate which will have the moral support of every baseball fan in the national capital. It is a private pension bill, and provides for increasing to $30 a month the pension drawn by John Conroy, of Moorestown.

Mr. Conroy is sixty-six years old and a prey to increasing disability by reason of rheumatism. He served for three years in Company K, of the Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania, and then completed his Civil War service with a year on the U. S. S. Walusing. His chief aim to distinction in the eyes of the Washington fans, however, lies in the fact that he is the father of Wid Conroy, who alternates with Elberfeld, better known as the "Tobasco Kid," in holding down the port sack of the Washington infield. Wid is as great favorite with the fans as the scrappy Elberfeld. Conroy is as seasoned a veteran on the diamond as his sire was on the battlefield and gun deck.

It is asserted that the bill will have the moral support of the Vice-President and the secretary of the Senate, Charles G. Bennett, backed by Senators Scott, Burkett, Brandegee, Depew, Flint, Gamble and Smith, of Michigan, all of whom follow the fortunes of the Washington American League team.

BRYAN HIGHLY LAUDS WILSON.

That Governor Wodrow Wilson of New Jersey may be the choice of William J. Bryan for the Democratic nomination for President in 1912, despite the bitter opposition that has existed between the two men since 1896, was made manifest yesterday in a page editorial in The Commoner, in which the silver-tongued orator lauds Wilson for his stand in the New Jersey Senatorial fight.

In part, he says:

"In the name of every lover of popular government, The Commoner thanks Governor Wilson for his patriotic efforts. It congratulates New Jersey on sending such a man as James E. Martine to the United States Senate, and it expresses the hope that from now on the fine efforts of which New Jersey's Governor is so capable may be given on the side of those Democrats who insist that the way to win a Democratic victory worth having is to keep the party free from corporation influences."

Biplane's Speed Record.

Forty miles in thirty-two minutes was the new aeroplane speed record established yesterday by M. Fay, at Issy, a Paris suburb. Fay flew in a biplane, and the record was made in competition for the Aerial League's prize. Fay flew at an average speed of seventy-five miles an hour. On October 1, 1910, Hubert Latham, at Bucy, France, in an Antoinette monoplane, flew at the rate of seventy-four and one-half miles an hour.

GOLF.

Fred H. Thomas, of the Morris County Golf Club, president of the New Jersey State Golf Association, has appointed his associates for the ensuing season. Morgan K. Smith, a clubmate of the chief executive, has been selected as secretary-treasurer, while L. M. Richmond, of Englewood, will head the handicap committee. Others on the board consist of H. V. Keep, of Englewood, former president of the association; Max Behr, of Morris county, the State champion, and C. J. Sullivan, of Baltusrol.

The selection of a chairman for the tournament committee has yet to be made. It is customary in this organization not to decide upon this official until the board has definitely determined upon the course for the championship. When that is done the naming of the chairman will be left to the pleasure of the club holding the attraction.

The feeling among the State officials seems to be that Morris county will be the scene of this year's tournament. When the fixture was held there several years ago Archibald Graham, of the North Jersey Country Club, won the title for the second time.

Miss Lillian B. Hyde, of Brooklyn, champion of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, has left for Florida. The title holder is accompanied by James B. Hyde, her brother, who is also a golfer of no mean ability. Miss Hyde has hopes of winning the Florida championship at Palm Beach. She was runner-up in this tournament a year ago. On her return North it is not unlikely that a short stop will be made at Pinehurst.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Mrs. Alfred R. Page will speak on "The American Indian," at Trinity Reformed church, tomorrow morning.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, gave an excellent talk at the Calvary Baptist church, Thursday night.

Rev. E. R. Brown, of Dunellen, spoke at the Plainfield Rescue Mission, last night and Mr. Cameron and Miss Cameron sang.

Rev. Dr. C. B. Mitchell, of Chicago, will preach at the First M. E. church tomorrow, the occasion being the twenty-third anniversary of Vincent chapel.

Charles F. Neagle, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church C. E. Society, was among those who received society pennants at the rally in Rahway Thursday night, for securing the largest number of new members.

Mrs. Henry Thomas, superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion, this city, attended an institute of the legion held at Passaic on Thursday. There were fifty-four delegates in all at the meeting which was called to discuss plans for greater work.

GOVERNOR MAY ACT ON DYNAMITE EXPLOSION.

If, as seems to be the case, there is no adequate law to regulate the storing and handling of combustibles, Governor Wilson will send a special message to the Legislature urging the prompt enactment of legislation designed to prevent a repetition of the Communipaw horror.

As a preliminary to the preparation of such a message, the Governor yesterday requested Assistant Attorney-General Nelson B. Gaskill to look up the present satutes bearing upon the subject and to inform him of the result. This was followed by a conference between Mr. Gaskill and Joseph P. Tumulty, the Governor's private secretary, at which the information received by the Governor as to the circumstances surrounding the disaster were considered.

It is the wish of Governor Wilson that the Legislature should give the subject its most careful consideration to the end that the proposed legislation shall be made as effective as possible. He will probably outline in his special message his own ideas as to what general features the law should include.

Not Again.

A farmer going over his land the other day caught a village loafer, accompanied by his dog, trespassing in a field and after threatening him with certain prosecution in case he caught him trespassing again hurried away expecting that the offender would at once quit the field after the severe warning given him.

Returning, however, through the same field an hour afterward he was surprised to meet the man in another part of it, and exclaimed in a very warning tone:

"What! Trespassing again?"

"No, no," answered Georgie, "It's still the same trespass. Fair play, sor, fair play noo."—Ideas.

Second, direct primaries for all elective officials.

Third, direct election of delegates to the National conventions, the voters' choice for President being expressed on his ballot for delegate.

Fourth, the introduction of the initiative referendum and recall.

Fifth, to provide a corrupt practices act in elections.

It is much hoped to make such a law as drastic as that in force at English parliamentary elections, where a member is deprived of his seat if it can be proved that even one of his agents against his wishes and instructions offered a bribe to a voter. By this law even the using of an automobile to convey voters to the polls is in the case where an opposing candidate is unable to afford a similar attraction construed as offering a bribe. Miss Richards touched on the case of Philippine Commissioner Worcester, who is in Washington on a charge of selling illegal amounts of land to various big sugar firms who wish to establish themselves in the Philippines. That Commissioner Worcester was well within his rights in selling this land is proved by the fact that although the United States government prohibited the amount sold, since the Philippines were given self government three years ago they had passed a measure to enlarge the acreage of land which might be sold to one person. Mr. Worcester has in addition to the confidence and good wishes of President Taft the warm appreciation of all who know of the fine work done by him in the Philippines.

Miss Richards was most heartily applauded at the close of her interesting talk.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Of special interest to theatregoers is the announcement that David Belasco will present Frances Starr at thePlainfield theatre, Monday evening February 6, in Eugene Walter's notable play, "The Easiest Way." This play, which ran for one year at the Belasco Theatre in New York, will be seen in Plainfield with the original cast and production. "The Easiest Way," depicts the tragedy of those women who are so wedded to luxury that they will pay any price for its enjoyment. In view of the fact that the production is by Mr. Belasco there is little need to dwell upon the artistry of the setting. The company supporting Miss Starr includes Joseph Kilgour, Edward H. Robbins, William Sampson, Beatrice Morgan and Violet Rand.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The invitation dance of the Dunellen Athletic Club in Junior Hall, last night, was largely attended and proved a social success. The guests were from Plainfield, New Market and other places as well as from the borough. Squiers' orchestra furnished the music. The committee in charge was composed of John Loughlin, chairman; Edgar Starker and Earl Ising.

Borough young men who are interested in bowling have formed a team and will regularly engage in tourneys and individual games. A series was played in Plainfield Thursday night, with the Pond Tool Works five and the locals made a good showing. The team is composed of George Apgar, Ralph Eisbrook, Jack Dineen, Clifford Smith and Russell Garretson.

George Apgar and John Conklin, residents of Dunellen, who are employed by the Jersey Central, received slight hurts in the Communipaw explosion Wednesday. They were cut by the flying bits of glass as they stood in the railroad yards. The wounds were dressed by a physician.

Assault Charges Dismissed.

In the borough court last night, Mayor Smalley dismissed the assault charge by Adam Seader against Mrs. John Stevens, declaring the evidence was not sufficient to hold the defendant. Seader claimed that Mrs. Stevens had beaten him over the head with a broom and knocked him downstairs at the Stevens' place on Race street. The controversy grew out of the woman's assertion that the plaintiff had moved out of rooms rented from her without first giving notice.

Mr. Saunders retorted that he was not the Chamber of Commerce neither was any action of the meeting prearranged, as to the men who had spoken adversely, he said Charles W. McCutchen and Alexander Gilbert had passed their opinion to him in this respect but neither apepared at the meeting to say so in public. Mr. Gilbert was there early in the evening but disappeared before the business commenced.

These opening remarks led to a cross fire of statements in which the question of veracity was raised. Mr. Hooley acted somewhat in the nature of a peacemaker and hit the nail on the head by saying he now believed in consolidation but as far as he is concerned personally it will not make a great deal of difference if it never comes but the borough does need sewers and they should be installed in preference to seeking any other improvement. Anyone who doubts that they are urgently needed, he continued, could have easy conviction by visiting his premises and noting the soap-suds on the surface of the little pond back of his house after any wash day in that part of the borough. They come from cesspools in the vicinity of Stony brook by percolating through a short intervening space. It is by such menas that public health is impaired and he for one, wanted a change of conditions. If the people of North Plainfield want consolidation, he concluded, let them first put it in good shape before making the swap.

There were a number of other statements between the three men mentioned until the question was raised and Cuncilman Smalley said he would introduce a resolution that would take the matter from their hands and end it as far as the Council is concerned. The resolution was put to a vote and passed unanimously. It was as follows:

Be it resolved—That this body does hereby record itself as adverse to any action, legislative or otherwise, looking to consolidation until there shall be manifested a strong sentiment in favor of same on the part of the City, and until the advisability and terms of "consolidation" shall have been carefully considered and determined upon by a full representation from the city and borough.

Furthermore—This Council deprecates any premature and ill-considered attempt to commit our entire community in the matter, as provocative of oppostion and not conducive to an agreement upon the subject or to an ultimate union between the two municipalities. We believe that any further movement in thie matter should be initiated by concurrent actions on the part of the mayor and Council of the city of Plainfield, and the mayor and Council of the borough of North Plainfield, acting upon the report heretofore made by the joint consolidation commission previously apopinted by the governing body of each municipality.

No comment was made after action had been taken and adjournment followed.

When Mr. Saunders was asked today what move would be made next in the campaign for consolidation, he said:

"The action of the borough Council last night, indefinitely postpones this highly important matter. I shall report to the Chamber of Commerce and shall recommend that no further steps be taken at present. Personally I deeply deplore it. To my mind, I believe the Council's action will eventually retard progress toward a sewage disposal plant. Bound Brook has raised a big fund and is intrenching for a stubborn fight against North Plainfield. Yes, I believe it will be at least ten years before we will have sewers in the borough."

Despite the action of the borough Council, it is said to be a serious question whether the agitation will be dropped.

Approve Bond Issue.

The issuance of $110,000 of bonds by the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company has been approved by the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners. The application for approval was made by the Union and Middlesex Lighting Company, which figured in the merger of gas companies in that vicinity.

Senator Declines Invitation.

United States Senator-elect Martine today declined an invitation to address the Florida State Bar Association at Pensacola, Fla., February 24. Mr. Martine is able to be about the house and said today that he hoped soon to be again "the fortunate possessor of very good health."

BOROUGH'S FINANCES IN SPLENDID CONDITION

In a communication to the Borough Council at the February meeting last night, E. L. Suffern & Son, experts accountants, reported that they had completed the examination of the collector and treasurer's accounts and found them in satisfactory condition. In a lengthy review of the financial state of the borough it was mentioned that there are now but $10,000 in bonds outstanding, all of which are against the fire headquarters building. An additional bond of $1,000 on the Watchung avenue extension series was paid last night, making the last one of this indebtedness. The school bonds come under a separate heading and the amount has its equivalent in negotiable property.

The report induced Mayor Smalley to express commendation at the excellent state of the borough's finances. His honor declared it to be a condition of which the officials might will be proud. The report was accepted and placed on file.

FARMERS DIG GOLD.

Precious Metal Discovered In Dutchess County, N. Y.

News of Vein Found on One Farm Causes Rush to File Claims. Many Disputes Arise Over Mines.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Over in the Pawling mountains, in eastern Dutchess county, where they used to make moonshine whisky and have a dynamiters' league to settle neighborhood grudges, gold has been discovered. It is real gold, says James E. Southall, an assayist of 53 Ann street, New York. Mr. Southall has examined several samples, which he says are rich in the precious metal.

The first find was made by Everett R. Davis, a Pawling farmer, who after getting a report on the golden ore rushed into Poughkeepsie and engaged the services of Allison Butts, a leading lawyer. Mr. Butts was so much impressed with the merits of Davis' claim that he has taken the necessary steps to protect his client's rights by filing the legal notice with the secretary of state at Albany.

The bitter winter's cold has not abated the heat of the gold fever. Prospectors are roaming the rugged hills and poking around in snow covered crannies, looking for samples of gold-bearing rock. Following quickly in the steps of the original claimant, another Pawling farmer traveled posthaste to Poughkeepsie and retained District Attorney Mack to protect his claim. Hot on his trail came eight others who have engaged attorneys and are spending real money to back up their opinions. So the lawyers at any rate find it a bonanza.

There was no Democratic hegira from Pawling to see Governor Dix inaugurated at Albany. All the Democrats in that section were out in the woods in the Harlem valley, burrowing in the rocks in search of the gleam of precious metals. Pickaxes, spades and sledges are being wielded vigorously, and enough rock has been broken already to build stone fences on the valley farms for the next two years.

The old familiar "Don't Trespass" and "No Hunting" signboards have been plastered over with fresh printed placards posted by strangers on a dozen farms. The New York state law provides that gold mines shall belong to the discoverer for twenty-one years, but after that shall revert to the state, so prospectors are roaming around everywhere and sticking up discovery notices wherever they please. Several men are disputing with the original claimant, Davis, over discoveries on his own farm and are preparing to fight his claim to the gold.

One of the newly discovered veins which show indications of containing gold and silver is located a mile south of Whaley pond. It runs through the farms of James E. Bullard, Deborah Kent and the estate of Riley Turner. This vein crosses the line into Putnam county. Davis' claim, filed with the secretary of state, covers his own farm and fifty rods through adjoining farms in Pawling. The first lot of Davis' ore sent to the assayist contained $26 of gold and $10 of silver to the ton. The second lot of selected ore showed a value of $186 to the ton.

Davis made his discovery while engaged in collecting stones to rebuild a fence. Several pieces of rock showed traces of minerals, and he consulted with a neighbor who is a metallurgist and who advised him to have the rock tested. The news that the rock contained gold got out after Davis had filed his claim, and since then the army of prospectors has grown until the Pawling ranges are overrun. Now Poughkeepsie lawyers are besieged by telegraph and telephone to file claims.

Sixty years ago there was a gold craze in Dutchess county. The records in the county clerk's office show scores of claims. Many companies were formed to work mines, and large blocks of stock were issued. In some instances actual gold and silver were produced, but not in paying quantities.

SPECTACLES FOR CHICKENS.

Invention of a Tennesseean to Protect Fowls From Pecking at One Another's Eyes.

Nashville, Tenn.—Perhaps the most remarkable patent yet granted is the one to Andrew Jackson, Jr., of Munich, Tenn. Many of the blessings of humanity have been adapted and transferred to animals, but it took the junior Jackson to see the urgent need of spectacles for chickens. These spectacles are designed not to cure stigmatism and near sight in the hen, but rather to protect the eyes in encounters with other chickens. As the patentee himself says, "This invention relates to eye protectors, and more particularly to eye protectors designed for fowls, so that they may be protected from other fowls that might attempt to peck them."

NOT A LAW CASE.

Thought She Was Being Discriminated Against and Wanted to Lodge a Complaint.

In Washington some years ago there was a colored woman who demanded all that was due her. On one occasion, at a period when less care was given to the water supply than is now the case, the colored woman accosted a man who was just leaving the District government buildings. "Mistuh," she said, "I wants ter state a case."

"I am not a lawyer, aunty."

"Tain't no law case. I ain't gwine to sue nobody. I jes' wants to know what my rights is an' how to git 'em."

"You see any of the clerks here if it's government business."

"I ain't got no piece o' paper to shove in at de window so's to get noticed. But I's bein' 'scriminated against."

"What's the trouble?" was the kindly inquiry.

"I ain' gittin' proper 'tention. Ev'y once in awhile I hyahs it read out o' de paper dat somebody has got a eel out'n his hydrant."

"Well, an eel is a very cleanly sort of creature. It doesn't do any harm."

"You didn' fink I was a-skyaht of 'em, did you? De case I wants to lay befo' de gover'ment is dis: I pays extra rent to kiver de water tax. I's had a hydrant in my back yahd foh fohteen years an' I ain' nebber got no eel yit.

"What I wants to know is how does dey 'stribute dem eels? Is dey prizes or is dey favoritisms or what is dey? If dar's any eels comin' to me I's hyah wif my basket, ready to take dem home right now, 'case we ain't got no money to buy meat, an' we's kin' of hongry foh feesh anyhow."—Youth's Companion.

ENTIRELY TOO CAREFUL.

Fate of the Flowers the Master Placed In Water.

A certain good natured doctor whose doorbell rang late one Saturday night, supposing that the summons was from some one who needed his services, rose from bed, put on his dressing gown and went to the door.

A workingman stood there, holding a huge paper package, from which buds and leaves were protruding.

"Is Miss Caroline Ward in?" he asked.

"She has retired," returned the doctor. Miss Caroline Ward was his cook.

"I'm sorry, sir, to call so late. Something went wrong with the tramcar I was in. I'll leave this for her, sir, if you will kindly give it to her in the morning.

"Certainly," said the doctor. He took the flowers into the kitchen, placed a dishpan in the sink, drew a few inches of water in it, carefully pressed the base of the package into the water and went back to bed, thinking how pleased the cook would be.

The next morning he found the cook holding a dripping bundle. She was angry.

"If I 'ad the pussons 'ere wot did this," said she, "I'd empty the kettle on 'em! I'd let 'em see if they could put the 'at what my young man bought me in a dishpan, I would!"

The doctor left the kitchen somewhat hurriedly.—London Scraps.

Might Change His Mind.

Sir Frank Lockwood was defending a man accused of swindling and in an eloquent peroration talked of his much injured client as an angel of light. When Sir Frank had finished his speech his client whispered that he wanted to shake hands with him. "When first my solicitor told me what he was paying you," said the client, "I grumbled, but since I have been listening to you I have come to the conviction that the money was well spent, and I apologize. That half hour talk of yours about me has done me good. It is many years since I have experienced the luxury of self respect, and it is worth the money."

"Oh, that's all right," said Sir Frank genially, "but you take my advice and go out of court. Sir Edward Clarke, the lawyer on the other side, is just going to speak."

Poorly Paid Toymakers.

The toymakers of Sonneberg are among the worst paid work people in Germany. It often happens that the earnings of a Sonneberg workman and his family, working sixteen hours a day, do not exceed $2.40 a week. About three years ago there was an exhibition of home industries in Berlin where articles from Sonneberg were displayed, the making of which was paid for at the rate of 4 cents an hour. Numerous instances are on record of children after school hours working six hours at a stretch coloring and polishing the heads of dolls for a pittance of 1½ cents an hour. —Chicago News.

The Kings of Denmark.

The dust of the Danish kings is kept in a great cathedral at Roskilde, an old town twenty miles from Copenhagen. Every year the entire royal family always pay a visit to Roskilde in obedience to an ancient custom. On one of the pillars are marks showing the height of Peter the Great, Nicholas the Iron Czar, Alexander III. of Russia, the king of England and many other kings. The cathedral was built in the eleventh century. It has two mighty towers, which can be seen at a long distance. The oldest grave is that of King Harold I., who died in 987.

Do You Really Love Dogs?

Perhaps the final test of anybody's love of dogs is willingness to permit them to make a camping ground of the bed. There is no other place in the world that suits the dog quite so well. On the bed he is safe from being stepped upon, he is out of the way of drafts, he has a commanding position from which to survey what goes on in the world, and, above all, the surface is soft and yielding to his outstretched limbs. No mere man can ever be so comfortable as a dog looks. Some persons object to having a dog on the bed at night, and it must be admitted that he lies a little heavily upon one's limbs, but why be so base as to prefer comfort to companionship? To wake up in the dark night and put your hand on that warm, soft body, to feel the beating of that faithful heart—is not this better than undisturbed sloth? The best night's rest I ever had was once when a cocker spaniel puppy, who had just recovered from stomach ache (dose one to two soda mints) and was a little frightened by the strange experience, curled up on my shoulder like a fur tippet, gently pushed his cold, soft nose into my neck and there slept sweetly and soundly until morning.—H. C. Merwin in Atlantic.

Absentminded Dyer.

Charles Lamb had a friend named George Dyer who was perhaps the most absentminded man on record. It was Dyer who, leaving Lamb's Islington home at broad noonday, walked straight into the New river. He was known to take up a coal scuttle instead of his hat, to walk home with a footman's cockaded hat on and even to leave one of his shoes under the table and get well on his homeward way before discovering his loss. He called at a friend's one morning, heard that the family was away in the country, left his name in the visitors' book, and a few hours later called again, asked for the book again and was astonished to see his own freshly written name. Once, when Proctor breakfasted with him, Dyer forgot the tea. The omission being noted, he filled the teapot with ginger. Proctor left as soon as he could to get a better breakfast at a coffee tavern, and there Dyer strolled in and asked him how he did, quite unconscious of having seen him earlier.

Lawyers' Wills.

A remarkable specimen of a lawyer's invalid will was that of Sir Joseph Jeckyll, master of the rolls, who died in 1738 and bequeathed his fortune after his wife's death to pay off the national debt. "Sir Joseph was a good man and a good lawyer," was Lord Mansfield's comment, "but his bequest was a very foolish one. He might as well have attempted to stop the middle arch of London bridge with his full bottomed wig." The testator's patriotic intentions were therefore treated as proof of mental weakness, and his will was promptly set aside. Among the many blundering wills that lawyers have made for their clients, if not for themselves, the strangest on record was that of a Dublin gentleman who left all his money to the elder son of his brother and, if he had no elder son, to the second.—London Chronicle.

Raindrops.

Drops of rain vary in their size perhaps from a twenty-fifth to a quarter of an inch in diameter. In parting from the clouds they precipitate their descent till the increasing resistance opposed by the air becomes equal to their weight, when they continue to fall with uniform velocity. This velocity is therefore in a certain ratio to the diameter of the drops; hence thunder and other showers in which the drops are large pour down faster than a drizzling rain. A drop of the twenty-fifth part of an inch in falling through the air would, when it had arrived at its uniform velocity, acquire a celerity of only eleven and a half feet per second, while one of a quarter of an inch would have a velocity of thirty-three and a half feet.

A Peacemaker.

It is a commonly accepted belief that nothing short of being pried loose will induce a bulldog to give up his grip on another dog or on an intruder, but this is a mistake. A little household ammonia poured on him as near his nose as circumstances will allow will make him let go immediately. The fumes of ammonia are so overpowering that a dog cannot possibly maintain his grip and his breath at the same time.—Country Life In America.

A Word to Parents.

Never amuse your children at the expense of other people; never allow your children to ridicule other people. Neglect this advice and the time will assuredly come when these children will amuse themselves with your foibles and ridicule your authority.—Exchange.

Which Was the Worse?

"My wife looked at me, too, and I don't believe that a word was unspoken."—Houston Post.

"I imagine from your speech that you are a taxidermist."

"What makes you think so?"

"Principally because you tell me I am as wise as an owl and then try to stuff me."—Exchange.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

A well known and popular Los Angeles physician upon the occasion of a recent visit to a professional friend at Fresno (the physician in charge of the state institution for the deaf and dumb) was invited to attend one of the periodical "hops" given the inmates. All the unfortunates and a goodly sprinkling of guests were present.

Before the function had progressed very far the Fresno physician approached his Los Angeles medical friend with, "Get busy, doctor!" The doctor got busy. Although tipping the scales at 210, he is an easy and graceful dancer and much enjoys the exercise. Approaching a young lady of singular sweetness and beauty, he indicated his desire to dance with her. She proved to be as witching with her feet as with her eyes, and our Los Angeles friend, in contempt of all convention, danced two or three numbers with her.

At the close of the last one a gentleman approached his charming partner and asked for the next dance. "I should be delighted to favor you, my friedn," said she in a voice no less sweet than her face, "but I've promised to dance the next number with this dummy here!"

Each had taken the other for an inmate!—Los Angeles Times.

ANCIENT LONDON.

When Danger and Lanthorns Were Abroad After Dark.

Less than 200 years ago the watchmen of London town, carrying horn lanthorns and halberds, dressed in long coats and knee breeches, walked up and down the cobbled streets of the world's largest city chanting the following verse:

A light there, maids! Hang out your light
And see your horns be clear and bright,
That so your candle clear may shine,
Continuing from six to nine,
That honest men that walk along
May see to pass safe without wrong.

It is beyond our comprehension and imagination in these days of flaming arc lamps and brilliantly lighted streets to picture the streets of London in the lawless age when only a candle with a cotton wick was hung out here and there on dark nights. It was an age of lanthorns, of flambeaux and linkboys, when every one made his will and prepared for death when he ventured out at night.

It is so written that it was a common practice in that city for a company of a hundred or more to make nightly invasions upon houses of the wealthy to kill and rob, and it is recorded "that when night was come no man durst venture to walk in the streets."—Springfield Union.

A Rattlesnake Story.

In "Life and Sport on the Pacific Coast" Horace A. Vachell relates one of his narrow escapes from a friend's bullet. "My cousin and I had been camping and hunting for several days in a sort of paradise valley. One day during a long ride on horseback we had seen a great many rattlesnakes and killed a few, an exceptional experience. That night my cousin woke up and saw by the light of the moon a big rattler crawling across my chest. He lay for a moment fascinated, horror struck, watching the sinuous curves of the reptile. Then he quietly reached for his six shooter, but he could not see the reptile's head, and he moved nearer, noiselessly, yet quickly, dreading some movement on my part that should precipitate the very thing he dreaded, and then he saw that it was not a snake at all—only the black and yellow stripe of my blanket, which gently rose and fell as I breathed. Had he fired—well, it might have been bad for me, for he confessed that his hand shook."

And They Didn't Exercise.

William M. Evarts, who lived until he was nearly ninety, said he kept his health by never taking exercise. The celebrated Dr. William George Mead, who lived to the surprising age of 148 years, spent nearly all of his time in the open air and played a little golf. Dr. Mead used to drink two or three quarts of water every day, and perhaps there is a suggestion in that. Old Dubois, who lived in Canada for the better part of 119 years on the north shore of Lake Erie, never worked and never took exercise. He spent seventy-five years of his life fishing with hook and line and ate nothing but baked apples and milk and brown bread and unsalted butter. Perhaps you can live that long if you do nothing but fish and eat what old Dubois did. But take notice that these long livers never exercised.—New York Telegraph.

He Didn't Know It.

"What are you doing here?"

"Waitin' on prosperity."

"Why, prosperity passed this way two months ago!"

"You don't say! That accounts for the twitchin' in my j'ints. I had a idee that somethin' or other had run over me."—Atlanta Constitution.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Cavanagh now that he was definitely out of the forest service perceived the weight of every objection which his friends and relatives had made against his going into it. It was a lonely life and must ever be so. It was all very well for a young unmarried man who loved the woods and hills beyond all things else and who could wait for advancement, but it was a sad place for one who desired a wife. The ranger's place was on the trail and in the hills, and to bring a woman into these high silences, into these lone reaches of forest and fell, would be cruel. To bring children into them would be criminal.

All the next day, while Wetherford pottered about the cabin or the yard, Cavanagh toiled at his papers, resolved to leave everything in the perfect order which he loved. Whenever he looked round upon his belongings, each and all so redolent of the wilderness, he found them very dear. His chairs, which he had rived out of slabs; his guns, his robes, his saddles and their accouterments—all meant much to him. "Some of them must go with me," he said, "and when I am settled down in the old home I'll have one room to myself which shall be so completely of the mountain America that when I am within it I can fancy myself back in the camp."

He thought of South Africa as a possibility and put it aside, knowing well that no other place could have the same indefinable charm that the Rocky mountains possessed for the reason that he had come to them at his most impressionable age. Then, too, the United States, for all its faults, seemed merely an extension of the English form of government.

Wetherford was also moving in deep thought and at last put his perplexity into a question. "What am I to do? I'm beginning to feel queer. I reckon the chances for my having smallpox are purty fair. Maybe I'd better drop down to Sulphur and report to the authorities. I've got a day or two before the blossoms will begin to show on me."

Cavanagh studied him closely. "Now, don't get to thinking you've got it. I don't see how you could attach a germ. The high altitude and the winds up there ought to prevent infection. I'm not afraid for myself, but if you're able perhaps we'd better pull out tomorrow."

Later in the day Wetherford expressed deeper dejection. "I don't see anything ahead of me anyhow," he confessed. "If I go back to the 'pen' I'll die of lung trouble, and I don't know how I'm going to earn a living in the city. Mebbe the best thing I could do would be to take the pox and go under. I'm afraid of big towns," he continued. "I always was, even when I had money. Now that I am old and broke I daren't go. No city for me."

Cavanagh's patience gave way. "But, man, you can't stay here! I'm packing up to leave. Your only chance of getting out of the country is to go when I go and in my company." His voice was harsh and keen, and the old man felt its edge, but he made no reply, and this sad silence moved Cavanagh to repentance. His irritability warned him of something deeply changing in his own nature.

Approaching the brooding felon, he spoke gently and sadly. "I'm sorry for you, Wetherford, I sure am, but it's up to you to get clear away so that Lee will never by any possible chance find out that you are alive. She has a romantic notion of you as a representative of the old time west, and it would be a dreadful shock to her if she knew you as you are. It's hard to leave her, I know, now that you've seen her, but that's the manly thing to do—the only thing to do."

"Oh, you're right—of course you're right. But I wish I could be of some use to her. I wish I could kind of keep watch over her. I'd be glad enough to play the scullion in her kitchen. But if you're going to take her"—

Wetherford looked at him with steady eyes, into which a keen light leaped. "Don't you intend to marry her?"

Ross turned away. "No; I don't. I mean it is impossible."

"Why not? Don't tell me you're already married?" He said this with menacing tone.

"No; I'm not married, but"— He stopped without making his meaning plain. "I'm going to leave the country and"—

Wetherford caught him up. "I reckon I understand what you mean. You consider Lize and me undesirable parents—not just the kind you'd cut out of the herd of your own free will. Well, that's all right. I don't blame you so far as I'm concerned. But you can forget me—consider me a dead one. I'll never bother her nor you."

Cavanagh threw out an impatient hand. "It is impossible," he protested. "It's better for her and better for me that I should do so. I'm going back to my own people."

Wetherford was thoroughly roused now. Some part of his old time fire seemed to return to him. He rose from his chair and approached the ranger firmly. "I've seen you act like a man, Ross Cavanagh. You've been a good partner these last few days—a son couldn't have treated me better—and I hate to think ill of you. But my girl loves you—I could see that. I could see her lean to you."

Ross said slowly: "It will be hard for you to understand when I tell you that I care a great deal for your daughter, but a man like me—an Englishman—cannot marry, or he ought not to marry—for himself alone. There are so many others to consider—his friends, his sisters"—

Wetherford dropped his hand. "I see!" His tone was despairing. "When I was young we married the girls we loved in defiance of everything. But you are not that kind. You may be right. I'm nothing but a debilitated old cowpuncher branded by the state—a man who threw away his chance—but I can tell you straight I've learned that nothing but the love of a woman counts."

In the meantime Lee Virginia waited with increasing impatience for Ross Cavanagh's return, expecting each noon to see him appear at the door. But when three days passed without word or sign from him her uneasiness deepened into alarm. The whole town was profoundly excited over the murder, that she knew, and she began to fear that some of the ranger's enemies had worked their evil will upon him.

With this vague fear in her heart, she went forth into the street to inquire. One of the first men she met was Sifton, who was sitting, as usual, outside the livery barn door, smiling, inefficient, content. Of him she asked, "Have you seen Mr. Cavanagh?"

"Yes," he answered; "I saw him yesterday, just after dinner, down at the postoffice. He was writing a letter at the desk. Almost immediately afterward he mounted and rode away. He was much cut up over his chief's dismissal."

"Why has he not written to me," she asked herself, "and why should he have gone away without a word of greeting, explanation or goodby? It would have taken but a moment's time to call at the door."

The more she dwelt upon this neglect the more significant it became. After the tender look in his eyes, after the ardent clasp of his hand, the thought that he could be so indifferent was at once a source of pain and self reproach.

With childish frankness she went to Lize and told her what she had learned, her eyes dim with hot tears. "Ross came to town and went away back to his cabin without coming to see me."

"Are you sure he's been here?"

"Yes. He came in, got some letters at the postoffice and then rode away"— Her voice broke as her disappointment and grief overcame her.

Lize struggled to a sitting position. "There's some mistake about this. Ross Cavanagh never was the whiffling kind of man. You've got to remember he's on duty. Probably the letter was some order that carried him right back to his work."

"But if he had really cared he could have ridden by to say just a word. But he didn't. He went away without a sign after promising to come." She buried her face in the coverlet of her mother's bed and wept in childish grief and despair.

Lize was forced to acknowledge that the ranger's action was inexplicable, but she did her best to make light of it. "He may have hurried to town on some errand and hadn't a moment to spare. These are exciting days for him, remember. He'll be in tomorrow sure."

With a faint hope of this the girl rose and went about her daily tasks, but the day passed and another without word or sign of the recreant lover, and each day brought a deeper sense of loss, but her pride would not permit her to show her grief.

Young Gregg, without knowing in the least the cause of her troubled face, took this occasion to offer comfort. His manner toward her had changed since she no longer had a part in the management of the eating house, and for that reason she did not repulse him as sharply as she had been wont to do. He really bore Cavanagh no ill will and was, indeed, shrewd enough to understand that Lee admired the ranger and that his own courtship was rather hopeless. Nevertheless he persisted, his respect for her growing as he found her steadfast in her refusal to permit any familiarity.

"See here, Miss Virginia," he cried as she was passing him in the hall, "I can see you're worried about Lize—I mean your mother—and if I can be of any use I hope you'll call on me." As she thanked him without enthusiasm he added, "How is she tonight?"

"I think she's better."

"Can I see her?"

His tone was so earnest that the girl was moved to say, "I'll ask her."

"I wish you would. I want to say something to her."

He accepted her invitation rather awkwardly, but his face was impassive as he looked down upon her.

"Well, how about it?" she asked. "What's doing in the town?"

"Not much of anything except talk. The whole country is buzzing over this dismissal of the chief forester.

"They'd better be doing something about that murder."

"They are. They're going up there in streams to see where the work was done. The coroner's inquest was held yesterday." He grinned. "'Parties came to their death by persons unknown.'"

Lize scowled. "It's a wonder they don't charge it up to Ross Cavanagh or some other ranger."

"That would be a little too raw, even for this country. They're all feeling gay over this change in the forestry head. But, see here, don't you want to get out for a ride? I've got my new machine out here. It rides like silk."

"I reckon a hearse is about my kind," she replied darkly. "If you could take me up to Cavanagh's cabin I'd go," she added. "I want to see him."

"I can take you part way," he instantly declared. "But you'd have to ride a horse the last ten miles."

"Couldn't do it, Joe," she sighed. "These last few days I've been about as boneless as an eel. Funny the way a fellow keeps going when he's got something to do that has to be done. I'll tell you what, if you want to take me and Lee up to Sulphur I'll go you."

"Sure thing. What day?"

"Not for a day or two. I'm not quite up to it just now, but by Saturday I'll be saddlewise again."

Joe turned joyously to Lee. "That will be great! Won't you come out for a spin this minute?"

For a moment Lee was tempted. Anything to get away from this horrible little den and the people who infested it was her feeling, but she distrusted Gregg, and she knew that every eye in the town would be upon her if she went, and, besides, Ross might return while she was away. "No; not today," she replied finally, but her voice was gentler than it had ever been to him.

The young fellow was moved to explain his position to Lize. "You don't think much of me, and I don't blame you. I haven't been much use so far, but I'm going to reform. If I had a girl like Lee Virginia to live up to I'd make a great citizen. I don't lay my arrest up against Cavanagh. I'm ready to pass that by. And as for this other business—this free range war in which the old man is mixed up—I want you to know that I'm against it. Dad knows his day is short; that's what makes him so hot. But he's a bluff—just a fussy old bluff. He knows he has no more right to the government grass than anybody else, but he's going to get ahead of the cattlemen if he can."

"Does he know who burned them sheep herders?"

"Of course he knows, but ain't going to say so. You see, that old Basque who was killed was a monopolist too. He went after that grass without asking anybody's leave. Moreover, he belonged to that Mexican-dago outfit that everybody hates. The old man isn't crying over that job; it's money in his pocket. All the same, it's too good a chance to put the hooks into the cattlemen; hence his offering a reward, and it looks as if something would really be done this time. They say Neill Ballard was mixed up in it and that old guy that showed me the sheep. But I don't take much stock in that. Whoever did it was paid by the cattlemen, sure thing." The young fellow's tone and bearing made a favorable impression upon Lize. She had never seen this side of him, for the reason that he had hitherto treated her as a bartender. She was acute enough to understand that her social status had changed along with her release from the cash register, and she was slightly more reconciled, although she could not see her way to providing a living for herself and Lee. For all these reasons she was unwontedly civil to Joe and sent him away highly elated with the success of his interview.

"I'm going to let him take us up to Sulphur," she said to Lee. "I want to go to town."

Lee was silent, but a keen pang ran through her heart, for she perceived in this remark by her mother a tacit acknowledgment of Ross Cavanagh's desertion of them both. His invitation to them to come and camp with him was only a polite momentary impulse. "I'm ready to go," she announced at last. "I'm tired of this place. Let us go tomorrow."

CHAPTER XVIII.

A CALL FOR HELP.

On the following morning, while they were busy packing for the journey to Sulphur, Redfield rolled up to the door in company with a young man in the uniform of a forester.

"Go ask Reddy to come in," commanded Lize. "I want to see him."

Redfield met the girl at the door and presented his companion as "Mr. Dalton, district forester." Dalton was a tall young fellow with a marked southern accent. "Is Cavanagh, the ranger, in town?" he asked.

"No," Lee replied, with effort; "he was here a few days ago, but he's gone back to the forest."

Redfield studied the girl with keen gaze, perceiving a passionate restraint in her face.

"How is your mother?" he asked politely.

Lee smiled faintly. "She's able to sit up. Won't you come in and see her?"

"With pleasure," assented Redfield, "but I want to see you alone. I have something to say to you." He turned to his superior. "Just go into the cafe, Dalton. I'll see you in a moment."

Lee Virginia, hitherto ashamed of the house, the furniture, the bed—everything—led the way without a word of apology. It was all detached now—something about to be left behind, like a bad garment borrowed in a time of stress. Nothing mattered since Ross did not return.

Lize, looking unwontedly refined and gentle, was sitting in a big rocking chair with her feet on a stool, her eyes fixed on the mountains, which showed through the open window. All the morning a sense of profound change, of something passing, had oppressed her. Now that she was about to leave the valley its charm appealed to her. She was tearing up a multitude of tiny roots of whose existence she had hitherto remained unaware. "I belong here," she acknowledged silently. "I'd be homesick anywhere else on God's earth. It's rough and fly bit and all that, but so am I. I wouldn't fit in anywhere that Lee belonged."

She acknowledged an especial liking for Redfield, and she had penetration enough, wordly wisdom enough, to know that Lee belonged more to his world than to her own and that his guidance and friendship were worth more, much more, than that of all the rest of the country, her own included. Therefore she said: "I'm mighty glad to see you, Reddy. Sit down. You've got to hear my little spiel this time."

Redfield, perched on the edge of a tawdry chair, looked about (like the charity visitor in a slum kitchen) without intending to express disgust, but it was a dismal room in which to be sick, and he pitied the woman the more profoundly as he remembered her in the days when "all outdoors" was none too wide for her.

Lize began abruptly: "I'm down, but not out. In fact, I was coming up to see you this afternoon. Lee and I are just about pulling out for good."

"Indeed! Why not go back with me?"

"You can take the girl back if you want to, but now that I'm getting my chance at you I may not go."

Redfield's tone was entirely cordial as he turned to Lee. "I came hoping to carry you away. Will you come?"

"I'm afraid I can't unless mother goes," she replied sadly.

Lize waved an imperative hand. "Fade away, child. I want to talk with Mr. Redfield alone. Go—see!"

Thus dismissed, Lee went back to the restaurant, where she found the forester just sitting down to his luncheon. "Mr. Redfield will be out in a few minutes," she explained.

"Won't you join me?" he asked in the frank accent of one to whom women are comrades. "The supervisor has been telling me about you."

She took a seat facing him, feeling something refined in his long, smoothly shaven, boyish face. He seemed very young to be district forester, and his eyes were a soft brown, with small wrinkles of laughter playing round their corners.

He began at once on the subject of his visit. "Redfield tells me you are a friend of Mr. Cavanagh's. Did you know that he had resigned?"

She faced him with startled eyes. "No, indeed. Has he done so?"

"Yes. The supervisor got a letter yesterday inclosing his resignation and asking to be relieved at once. And when I heard of it I asked the supervisor to bring me down to see him. He's too good a man to lose."

"Why did he resign?"

"He seemed very bitter over the chief's dismissal. But I hope to persuade him to stay in the service. He's too valuable a man to lose just now, when the war is so hot. I realize that his salary is too small. But there are other places for him. Perhaps when he knows that I have a special note to him from the chief he will reconsider. He's quite capable of the supervisor's position, and Mr. Redfield is willing to resign in his favor. I'm telling you all this because Mr. Redfield has told me of your interest in Mr. Cavanagh, or, rather, his interest in you."

Sam Gregg, entering the door at this moment, came directly to the forester's table. He was followed by the sheriff, a bearded old man with a soiled collar and a dim eye.

Gregg growled out, "You'd better keep your man Cavanagh in the hills, Mr. Forester, or somebody will take a pot shot at him."

"Why, what's new?"

"His assistant is down with smallpox."

"Smallpox!" exclaimed Dalton.

Every jaw was fixed and every eye turned upon the speaker.

"Smallpox!" gasped Lee.

"For what reason?"

ELIZABETH'S FIVE DEFEATS LOCALS

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basketball team went down to Elizabeth last night, and met defeat at the hands of the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A., by the score of 85 to 29. Although the local team put up a stiff game, the Elizabeth boys were accustomed to the baskets and the court and easily defeated the Plainfield team. In the first session of play the local lads managed to hold their end with the Elizabeth boys and the half wound up with the score standing 36 to 22 in favor of the home "bunch." In the second period of play, the Elizabethans managed to creep away from their opponents and before long had gained such a lead that it was impossible for the Plainfield team to head them off.

Although the local lads brought a good crowd of rooters, they were unable with their assistance to beat their opponents. The score and team lineup follows:

TO CONVERT INDIAN

FOR APACHES LIBERATION.

Mrs. Albert R. Page Delivers an Instructive Discourse at Trinity Reformed Church.

The Cheyenne, Arapahoe, Apache and Winnebago tribes of American Indians were the subject of an address from Mrs. Albert R. Page, a missionary, yesterday morning at Trinity Reformed church and a congregation of large numbers was present to hear her. Mrs. Page is the field secretary of the Board of Home Missions and is spending much of her time among the aborigines of this country, teaching the Gospel and trying to reach the uncounted millions of Indians in Mexico and South and Central America.

Mrs. Page spoke favorably of a bill now before the Legislature at Washington, which has for its purpose the liberation of the Apache prisoners at Fort Sill. She declared that those of the prisoners now in durance are guiltless of any participation in the crimes for which their parents were imprisoned and that they ought to be set free. But they will be sent to the Mescalero mountains in Arizona, where after twenty-four years of labor a church for Indians has been established, and there will not be enough missionaries to look after their spiritual welfare. She described the place as unattractive for humans and now, 7,000 feet above sea level, they have had but one church service in four years.

The difficulty missionaries find among the tribes is to break down the superstitions of centuries. They worship snakes and turtles, and the medicine men contrive with the help of a drug, Mescal, to influence the ignorant Indian against the teachings of Christianity. Among the Winnebagos the penalty for an Indian acknowledging Christ is death. According to Mrs. Page Mescal when properly prepared will cause the brain to perform prodigies in eloquence and will bring back to the mind each event in the life of the user and it is through these remarkable performances that the Indian is influenced.

The big medicine men claim this to be literally as good as the Christian religion and take for their authority John 14:26, which is a promise to "bring all things to your remembrance." Since July, 1909, three missionaries and an Indian interpreter have done wonderful work among these tribes in the Mescalero mountains, having built up a congregation numbering 216 souls in that short time. Mrs. Page declared that there were 50,000 Indians in this country and from twenty to thirty millions in Mexico and South America, who must in some way be reached with the Gospel. She made an appeal for funds to carry on the work.

The congregation had its first glimpse of the new memorial organ and pulpit furnishings yesterday morning. The splendid instrument which is being installed by The Tallman Organ Co., of Brooklyn, is imposing in its simplicity. Forty-five plain old gold pipes form a charming contrast to the panelled quartered oak trimmings and solid appearing organ rail and pulpit. The whole scheme is of the solid substantial class and displays excellent taste. It is thoroughly in keeping with the other interior furnishings of the church.

PATERSON COACH FOR MONEY SPINNER.

"The Money Spinner," to be given by the Park Comedy Club at the Park Club, Saturday evening, February 25, is presented for general patronage and not for the club members exclusively. Rehearsals for the play are being held under the direction of Fred C. Patterson, of New York, who, it will be remembered staged "Trelawney of the Wells," at the Plainfield theatre last spring.

A number of this cast will also appear in "The Money Spinner," and a successful presentation is assured. Walter M. McGee is the fun-maker of the play and it is said that his portrayal of "Croodle," the old French gambler, will be one of the best bits of character acting given at the Park Club. Tickets are on sale today at the club.

A Lecture on Japan.

The Dutch Arms, Men's Association of Trinity Reformed church, will meet Monday evening, February 20, when John M. Whiton, of this city, will give his lecture on Japan with 125 colored views. It will be "ladies' night" and all the women of the congregation will be invited.

CALLED AS PASTOR

TAKES CHARGE ON MARCH 1.

He Comes From Sherman, N. Y., and Has Been In Ministry For Seven Years.

Rev. Frederick L. Green, of Sherman, N. Y., has been secured as the successor of Rev. L. R. Howard, as pastor of Hope chapel, and he will enter upon the pastorate on March 1. Announcement of this was made at the close of the morning service at the chapel yesterday by G. Herbert Condict, secertary of the committee.

Mr. Green is a graduate of Union College, of Schnectady, N. Y., and Auburn Seminary. He has been in pastoral work about seven years. Mr. Green is married, his wife being greatly interested in his work. He has no children. Mr. Green preached at Trinity Reformed church a week ago yesterday, when he was heard by many members of Hope chapel and the Crescent avenue church. He made a favorable impression.

Mr. Green is a native of Albany, N. Y. After his graduation from the high school in that city he entered upon a business career, in which he was very successful. So much so, that when he announced his purpose of entering the ministry, his friends and relatives tried to persuade him not to do so. In 1894 he entered Union College, being then twenty-four years of age. He was graduated in 1898, after which he immediately entered Auburn Seminary. Upon his graduation there in 1902 he was engaged in pastoral work in Baltimore, Md., for two and a half year.

Leaving Baltimore he went to the Westminster House, Buffalo, N. Y., remaining there two and a half years, when he went to Sherman, N. Y., a town of about one thousand inhabitants. While in Buffalo he met his wife, who was a co-worker at the Westminister House. Mr. Green is about 38 years old. He will preach his first sermon as pastor of Hope chapel, Sunday, March 5.

The committee which had charge of the work of securing a successor to Rev. L. R. Howard, comprised Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, G. Herbert Condict and John Leal, of the Crescent Avenue church; J. Frank Lindsley, Willard H. Cook and Walter I. Firstbrook, of Hope chapel. The chapel has been vacant about four months Mr. Howard resigning the pastorate on account of ill health.

THIRTY-FIFTH YEAR AS CHURCH DEACONS

During the past seventy-three years of the history of the Seventh-Day Baptist church here, the church has been fortunate in long term services of its different officers. Asa F. Randolph is only the third person to hold the office of clerk and last evening at the regular quarterly meeting of the church, the thirty-fifth anniversary of the ordination as deacons of J. Dennison Spicer and Dr. Thomas H. Tomlinson, was recognized by suitable resolutions and remarks by several persons.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor, introduced the subject with a few words and called upon Deacon Spicer, who responded and read a brief historical statement concerning the ordination.

On behalf of the other deacons of the church, Nathan H. Randolph had something to say, while Joseph A. Hubbard responded for those who could easily remember the occasion, and Charles F. Neagle spoke for the younger generation. Several others made appropriate remarks and the exercises closed with a response by Dr. Tomlinson.

During the evening the following committee was appointed to make arangements for the annual meeting and supper in April: Frank J. Hubbard, chairman; Rev. Edwin Shaw, Mrs. Orra S. Rogers, Franklin A. Langworthy and Miss Ethel O. Rogers. Mrs. T.H. Tomlinson was elected chairman for the annual meeting.

Two Stars Coming.

Effingham Pinto and Anne Swinbourne, late stars of the Climax, will appear at the Plainfield theatre in two plays by Amelie Rives (Princess Troubetskoy) on Thursday evening, February 9, at 8:45. Music will be furnished from New York. The plays to be given are "The Kid Faun," a pastoral, with music by DeBussy, and "The King's Garden," both plays written especially for Mr. Pinto and Miss Swinbourne. The seats are now selling at the theatre box office.

HEAR ARCHDEACON

AT THE HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

Miss Mary Wood, Secretary and Treasurer, Also Addressed Gathering—A Tea Followed the Service.

A neighborhood meeting of the Junior Auxiliary of the Episcopal church was held at Holy Cross church, Saturday afternoon, there being a large attendance of members from Elizabeth, Metuchen, Roselle, Cranford, South Plainfield, Dunellen, while a goodly delegation from St. Stephen's church.

The vested choir of the church took part in the service, the principal feature of which was an address by Archdeacon Claiborne, of Sewanee, Tenn., who told in an interesting manner of his great work among the poor whites of the mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee, and especially at his school in Tennessee. He described the conditions of these people and told of the wonderful transformation after they are taught the Bible and given an education. The archdeacon is now on a trip for the purpose of raising funds for his school and is said to be meeting with great success.

Following his talk, Miss Mary Wood, secretary and treasurer of the State Junior Auxiliary, addressed the gathering, telling what the auxiliary is doing in the State and of the numerous attractions used to get the young people into the organization. Both addresses were listened to with great interest. There were about thirty-five members of the local auxiliary present.

After the service all adjourned to the parish house, where tea was served by the local auxiliary. Miss Claire Kenworthy poured tea and Miss Marguerite Shotwell poured chocolate, and other members assisted as waitresses. They wore white caps with red ribbbons, upon which were the letters "H. C. J. A" Holy Cross Junior Auxiliary. Those comprising the committee of arrangements were Mrs. George A. Warner, Miss Muriel Ashwell, Miss Carman, Miss Burt, Mrs. Frank Allen, Miss Iola Moore, Miss Sue Bennett, Mrs. Robert Western, Miss Mildred St. Clair, Miss Lena Rilling, Mrs. Brandt and Miss Agnes VanOrden.

ENDEAVORERS HEAR A SPECIAL SERMON

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, delivered a special sermon last evening to the Christian Endeavor Society of the church, the members of the society attending in a body. Mr. Broek took his text from John 12-26: "If any serve me, him will my Father Honor." In part Mr. Broek said:

"Jesus was about to leave His disciples. They were to win back the world to God, one of the most colossal enterprises which had entered the heart of man to conceive. What the disciples needed for their undertaking was power. Before we can have power, it is necessary to have a right starting point in service.

"The starting point of all service is a vision of the Son of God. It is a blessed thing when we begin to see. When Paul was converted on the Damascus road 'he saw the Lord.' When the Lord gets our eye He will get our ear and we will listen to His voice.

"The motive for all service is gratitude to Christ. The power for service is the new life in Him. For Christ's sake, men have done more, endured more and suffered more than any other man. The ideals of service which Christ presents are different from those of the world. This age is entranced in big things. The spirit of the age says we must do something big to be useful to our fellowmen. The great thing which Jesus did was to take a towel and wash His disciple's feet. That towel has ever since presented ideals of what is really true and worth while in service.

"Another ideal of service which the world presents is that we are apt to get wrong ideas as to the real worth of a man. A man is rated more often by material things than by his character. The glory of the lower world is favored in possession and authority, but the glory of the higher world in which Jesus reigns is giving and serving. The place where God has put you is the place where we can serve Him best. Live your life for God and every day send up some material for your mansion in Heaven."

JR. O. U. A. M. BAZAR

PRIZE CATS ON EXHIBITION.

Dancing Every Night—J. Y. Martin General Chairman of Undertaking, Which Ends Next Saturday Night.

A brilliant beginning marked the opening night of the Jr. O. U. A. M., fair Saturday night Before 9 o'clock the spacious dancing floor of Sebring's Hall was alive with young couples dancing to the music of Military Band, and before 10 o'clock the hall was filled. The fair which is under the auspices of Franklin, Benevolent, Somerset and Plainfield Councils promises to be a success.

Several of the elading merchants have contributed articles which are to be sold in the various handsomely decorated booths which are in charge of J. Y. Martin, general chairman, assisted by G. E. Thomas, J. D. Moon, D. B. Martin, H. Van Pelt and J. Coller.

The fair is being conducted under the general chairmanship of I. M. Wyckoff with A. H. Peck, treasurer, and W. H. I. Cubberly, secretary. The music is in charge of L. D. Hall, chairman; D. Patterson and A. Hoffman. Charles Wilson is floor manager and has these assistants: Joseph Pennington, A. Perret, Charles Doeringer, Fred G. Walsh and W. H. I. Cubberly. There is a general committee composed of Clark Lowrie, J. H. Adams, Joseph Moon and F. W. Downs.

Not the least interesting among the attractions are the two prize winning imported cats, the property of Mrs. Guy Thomas, of Dupont street. These two felines monopolized the attentions of the young women during the evening and it was well they were safely caged, as all expressed desires to snuggle them "just once."

The fair will continue for the rest of the week ending next Saturday night.

JACKSON'S OFF NIGHT CAUSED A WORDY ROW

Lewis Jackson, a colored resident of Race street, ordinarily returns home promptly with his pay at the week-end but failed in his custom, Saturday night. His wife, Maggie Jackson, waited patiently until 10 o'clock and when he still remained in the land of the missing, she sallied out on a soft-shoe hunt. The recreant husband was located on the Somerset street bridge, so badly intoxicated he would have been unable to navigate but for the enfolding arms of Ella Jackson, a young woman not related to him, not even a cousin.

The sight angered Mrs. Jackson and she broke loose in a tirade on Ella. The latter handed everything back with interest, finally accepting the wife's invitation to cross over the borough line and have it out. The three moved up to Craig place when Thomas Neblit took a hand in the squabble, helping Ella. All kinds of bad words were being exchanged in the presence of a big crowd when Chief Weiss and Marshal Keller called a halt by arresting the quartet.

Following a hearing before Recorder Dolliver in the borough court, Neblit and Lewis and Ella Jackson were fined $5 each. He declared Maggie Jackson equally guilty but suspended sentence, explaining that she had a right to her husband and had extreme provocation.

DR. MITCHELL HERE

DWELLS ON THE HOLY LIFE.

Every Heart Should Be Christ-ruled, Declares Noted Divine From Chicago—Two Eloquent Discourses.

Rev. Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, of Chicago, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church, occupied the pulpit of the local church, yesterday morning and evening, delivering two strong and interesting sermons to large congregations. The doctor is one of the leading preachers in Chicago and has always been popular among Plainfielders.

At the morning service, yesterday, Dr. Mitchell preached on the subject: "The Kingdom of God Is Within You,' and he gave an interesting exposition of the text. He declared that man is master of the material forces, that God had left something for man to accomplish, notably the development of the rose, apples, as well as horses, and God had given man dominion over these things. He said that it was the duty of man to lay hold of these forces of nature.

The speaker said that man is what he is of his own choosing, whether good or bad. Worldly success was described as a personal willing on the part of man. He emphasized the fact that the law of inheritance must be recognized. No matter how beautiful a person is, in the opinion of Dr. Mitchell, he is naturally bent toward evil. It is the tendency of people to be married to the beast beneath them no matter how strong they may be linked to the good above.

The speaker did not think it necsary for a woman or man to become a nun to be sanctified or to enter a monastery to lead a good life. He said that a man could live in the world with other people and yet live a holy life. He declared that God wants every heart Christ-ruled. A man who recognizes Jesus as Lord and Master is a Christian, said the preacher. In conclusion he emphasized the importance of his text. In the evening Dr. Mitchell again spoke to a large congregation.

The topic was "Going Up to Jerusalem," and the preacher held the close attention of his large audience throughout.

POST OFFICE MEN ENJOY A BANQUET

The letter-carriers and clerks attached to the local postoffice held their monthly meeting and banquet Saturday night in Columbus Hall on East Front street. After a short business meeting an adjournment was taken to the banquet hall, where a fine menu was served by J. McCormick, assisted by J. J. Hines and William Demarest. Superintendent of Carriers E. T. VanWinkle was the guest of honor, and following the feast was among those who made speeches.

The hall was appropriately decorated for the occasion by the committee. President E. E. Ripley and former president, James Bailey, together with Superintendent VanWinkle occupied seats at the head of the table.

Among those who spoke was C. B. Stephens, dean of the carrier force. George Apgar and George Keen were awarded the first and second prizes for eating the greatest number of raw and fried oysters. The affair was concluded just before midnight, when everyone joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne." Maurice River cove oysters were served, having been shipped direct from the oyster beds at Bivalve for the occasion.

COUNCIL CONFERS

Adverse Action Tonight Likely as to Both Ellis and Fitch.

SEND MESSAGE TO THE MAYOR.

Request That He Appoint Board of Assessors — Conference Held On Friday Night.

That the Common Council at its regular monthly meeting tonight will neither confirm Mayor Moy's appointment of Rev. St. John Fitch as Overseer of the Poor, nor that of Leroy J. Ellis as a member of the Board of Health is learned on good authority. This appears to be the result of a conference among some of the councilmen on Friday night. At that time there was a general discussion of the matter of appointments.

The objection of some of the city fathers to the confirmation of the minister's name is that they consider him not so well qualified as the present incumbent, Alexander Ayres. Ayres, they say, has shown his capabilities and they declare that the mayor's objection to him is a purely personal one. Personal reasons, they add, will not be given weight.

As to Ellis, the objection seems to be that based on an incident ten years ago. The newspapers at that time published fully the report that a member of Mr. Ellis' household was a Christian Scientist and that the Fanwood borough authorities had placed a guard about the residence to prevent the spread of scarlet fever with which Mr. Ellis' children were afflicted. For this reason some of the Common Councilmen are opposed to his selection as a member of the Health Board.

What will be done with the other appointments made by Mayor Moy is a matter of conjecture. Some say that they will be laid over, while others declare that they will be ratified.

At the Councilmanic conference on Friday a committee was appointed to wait on the Mayor and to inform him that the Common Council would not exercise its right to organize an assessors' board of three members as provided by staute. The information was also to be conveyed to the city's executive that the Common Council would be pleased to receive his nominations for a board of four members to succeed the present body. When seen today the Mayor said that he was glad to get the message from the city fathers but that he would not have the time to transmit his appointments for the assessors' board in time for tonight's meeting.

FINED WOMAN $20 RAN A 'SPEAKEASY'

For selling beer without a license, Mary Yano, of 337 Cottage place, was arraigned before Judge William G. De Meza, this morning, in the city court and fined $20 and warned.

Yesterday afternoon, it is alleged, Andrew Mango, an Italian, attempted to assault Annie Sabino, of 339 Cottage place. She complained to the police and Patrolmen Frank Sweeney and George Dobson were sent to investigate. Meantime Miss Sabino had come to headquarters and complained that Mrs. Yano was selling beer next door and that her assailant, Mango, was drunk and had procured his drinks in the Yano woman's house.

The investigations of the two patrolmen led them to the cellar of the Mango house, where they found a couple of dozen empty beer bottles and three kegs which had evidently contained beer. She denied the selling both when arrested and this morning, but the evidence of several customers who had purchased the beverage was enough to convict.

Mango, who was arraigned on a charge of intoxication, was discharged with a suspended sentence, because of his good reputation and previous good behaviour.

NOT A CONSPIRACY

WAS ONLY A FAMILY AFFAIR.

Max Schwartzman's Clerk Not Believed—Famous Fur Case Ends In Favor of Accused Men.

One of the longest drawn out cases ever heard in the local police court was tried this morning before Judge William G. DeMeza, the hearing lasting from 9 o'clock until shortly before 1 this afternoon. Max Schwartzman, the complainant, charged Abraham Schwartzman, his brother, and Charles Kurzman, a cousin, of conspiring to defraud him of $418.50 worth of goods by bribing a young salesman, Isaac Silver.

Max Schwartzman claimed that on January 29 Kurtzman took the goods from his store in a dress suit case for which he had paid Silver $70 and that in doing so he had taken advantage of the youth of Silver who was only an attendant at the store and not a salesman and who had no authority to sell the goods.

Both A. Schwartzman and Kurtzman denied these allegations, declaring that the goods had been duly purchased after Silver had conferred with Max Schwartzman at his store in Trenton. It was also brought out that neither Abraham Schwartzman nor the other defendant had at any time attempted to bribe the youthful salesman with gifts or money although this was also charged by the complainant.

Two letters, alleged to have been written by the complainant and acknowledged by him as his handwriting, were offered in evidence. These epistles were written to one Davis, whom Schwartzman has since had indicted by the grand jury for alleged embezzlement and their purport was "kill Kurtzman," meaning "put Kurtzman out of business." In paying for the goods Kurtzman handed Silver twenty dollars in bills and a check drawn to the order of M. Schwartzman for $50. These were also offered as evidence of good faith on the part of Kurtzman.

Judge DeMeza patiently heard the several witnesses all of whom are related and finally decided that Silver had lied in his testimony and dismissed the case. William R. Coddington, counsel for Max Schwartzman claimed that by reason of having asked Sergeant Overbaugh where the police station was on the night he was removing the furs in question that he knew he was doing something wrong and that he was afraid that he was "caught with the goods on" and there was no escape. Kurtzman explained this action by saying he was afraid of a conspiracy against himself and wanted the police to see the goods.

Both Detective Sergeant Flynn and Sergeant Overbaugh testified as to the truth of Kurtzman's testimony so far as it related to what happened on the night of the arrest. The goods in question were turned over to Max Schwartzman by order of the court and the money was refunded to Kurtzman thus ending a case which has been holding fire for the past two weeks.

Robert Newton Crane and W. R. Coddington appeared for Max Schwartzman while Kurtzman and A. Schwartzman were defended by Judge William Newcorn.

LITERARY.

In the February Strand Dr. Conan Doyle brings to a conclusion his latest "Reminiscence of Sherlock Holmes"—"The Adventure of the Devil's Foot"—which is as surprising in its denouement as any of the adventures which have gone before. Another "Adventure" is promised for the April issue. Other fiction is contributed by Frankfort Moore, Richard Marsh, C. H. Bovill, etc., and the articles are interesting and topical.

With a gayety rather unusual for the difinified National Magazine, with its strong masculine covers and lusty spirit, the current issue of Joe Chapple's Boston magazine appears with a shy and sweet sixteen head—and hair arranged in the very latest coiffure. The effect is positively stunning. Announcement is made that William Hodge, the "Man From Home," is to be presented as an author.

The February number of "Success Magazine" contains some timely articles both on political and social questions. Robert Sloss's article "Why is an Express Company?" is an inquiry into the methods of the express business, and the figures it contains are designed to show that the country needs a Parcels Post service to rid itself of the express octopus. In "The Twilight of Cannonism" Robert Wickliffe Woolley brings Champ Clark, our next Speaker, into a friendly and familiar light and makes us acquainted with the personnel of the several important legislative committees.

In the Metropolitan Magazine for February M. E. Stone, Jr., the editor, publishes the second installment of "Theodore Roosevelt—Please Answers," a series of articles reviewing Roosevelt's career as a reformer. The current article is entitled "When is a Governor Not a Governor?" A new adventure series which should prove popular is called "Romances of Buried Treasure." It is by Ralph D. Paine, and the first article in the February issue relates the true history of Captain Kidd.

The February number of Woman's Home Companion is a delightful St. Valentine number. There is a special valentine song, valentine ideas, and a valentine book-list. The fiction inclergyman's attempt at revenge upon miral's Niece," a story by Kate Douglas Wiggins and her collaborators, which is making a big hit; "In the Land of Tomorrow," by Maude Radford Warren is now in its second part and is proving most exciting. Short stories in this number are contributed by such well-known authors as Alice Brown, Hulbert Footner, Owen Oliver and Mary Heaton Vorse.

Champ Clark, in the Speaker's chair, will be the exponent of the new purpose of democratizing the House. The place he will take in history will largely depend on the success with which he shall carry forward the purpo e of restoring the House to its proper participation in legislation. In proportion as he shall be willing to be shorn of the petty powers of parliamentary dictatorship, he will gather to himself the vastly greater and more effective authority of big, broad, true leadership—The Munsey.

As Congress now approaches the problem once more, the vital question is that of the ratio to be adopted for the coming ten years. To maintain the present ratio means to increase the membership of the House upward of 470; to raise it to something like 215,000 means a membership of 425; only by stretching it to 233,000 can a membership of the present figure be preserved. No such sweeping increase has ever been made, nor is it now probable.—From "The Reapportionment of the House," by Frederic Austin Ogg, in the American Review of Reviews for February.

The Red Book Magazine for February is another exceptionally interesting issue of this deservedly successful publication. The leading story, "Cyrus Oitken's Clear Chair,' by Edward Price Bell, is as impressive a bit of drama as one recalls having recently read. It concerns an old clergyman' attempt at revenge upon a youth who had lead his son into evil ways.

The mere fact that is contains George Randolph Chester's latest novel would be enough to interest most people in the February Lippincott's, yet the said novel is only one item—though it is perhaps the most important—in a long and imposing table of contents. Mr. Chester's new story is called, "The Forty-Third Pumpkin"—an unusual title, but then it is an unusual story. It is a tale of rural life, a bit farcical perhaps, yet full of shrewd character delineation. Rustic superstitions play a considerable part in the plot, and there are many uncanny happenings, all of which, however, are satisfactorily explained in the end.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will meet tomorrow night and muster in a candidate, with full ritual.

BASEBALL.

Charles Comiskey announces that his White Sox will be sent to the new training camp at Mineral Wells, Tex., a day earlier than at first proposed. The White Sox special will leave Chicago on February 27. The waters of Mineral Wells are declared every bit as healthful as those of Marlin Springs, where the Giants train.

Mineral Wells, the spring home of the White Sox, is not far from Marlin, and Comiskey is trying to arrange a series of exhibition games with the Giants. Manager McGraw, who will leave New York about February 15, will visit John T. Brush at San Antonio to talk over the proposition. It would make some battle if Christy Mathewson and Ed Walsh happened to hook up.

A story has just been sprung in Detroit to the effect that five teams of the American League are using signal tipping apparatus, the same sort of device which Detroit accused George Stallings of working at the Hilltop in 1909. Ban Johnson says that the statement is too much of a joke to demand a denial.

Howard Camnitz, the Pittsburg pitcher, called on Barney Dreyfuss Saturday to try to straighten out his claim on that club for $1,200, which he alleges is due. The argument is the result of a bonus contract. Dreyfuss maintains his pitcher did not live up to his obligations and, consequently held out $1,200. Camnitz says that if Dreyfuss does not settle he will put his case in the hands of the board of directors of the National League at the spring meeting, February 14.

President Navin, of the Tigers, says the former champions will be thoroughly overhauled. He has just asked waivers on three veterans, the names of whom he refuses to disclose. None of the three will get out of the American League, Navin declares, as already two rivals have refused to pass the men to the minors. Detroit is now in a position to talk trade with those to whom the three athletes look good.

Eddie Grant, prize holdout of the Cincinnati Reds, is just about ready to cave. In Boston the other day he came forth with a big boost for Johnny Bates, and said that Dooin had the wool pulled over his eyes by the Old Fox in that celebrated trade of last fall.

Manager Frank, of the New Orleans club, says that he lost just $10,000 by keeping faith with Connie Mack. Charles Murphy offered Frank that sum for the release of Joe Jackson. The leader of the Athletics had turned Jackson over to New Orleans with the understanding that if he fully recovered from injuries he had previously sustained Connie would be able to recall the player. Frank claims he did not get a cent from the Athletics for Jackson.

Joe Tinker says that Jesse Baker, signed by Comiskey's White Sox, will prove a sensation in the American League before two years. Baker comes from the coast, and with Spokane last season made a most enviable record. He is a youngster who can well afford further seasoning in the minor leagues if necessary.

MASTER BUILDERS OPPOSE INCREASES.

New Brunswick, Feb. 6.—The principal topic of conversation at the annual banquet of the Master Builders' Association, of this city, at the Mansion House, Friday night was a demand which members of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union made yesterday for an increase in wages. Masons are now receiving $4.40 for an eight-hour day here and they demand a new scale giving them $4.80 a day. They want the new scale to go into effect May 1.

Some of the master builders declared last night that they are not in favor of the increase, claiming that the high cost of labor causes a slump in building operations. Unless the increase is signed the masons will go on strike May 1.

The banquet last night was an enjoyable affair. Several builders from Perth Amboy were guests of the local association. William E. Leary, president of the local association, presided. The reception committee consisted of John TenBroeck, C. A. Long, H. L. Bartholomew, C. C. Van Doren and C. J. Bergen.

MORE PROTECTION FROM FIRE ASKED.

Elizabeth, Feb. 6.—At a meeting of the fire board next Tuesday evening it is likely that some action will be taken in the matter of providing a fire engine for the North End section of the city. This matter has been under advisement for some time but the necessary funds have not been provided.

Residents in the section, which is one of the most fashionable in the city, have petitioned the cuncil for the improvement and an effort will be made by the fire board to bet an appropriation. The city extends northerly two miles from Broad street and there is not a single fire fighting apparatus within that territory.

An ordinance providing an appropriation for an engine house for this section was passed some time ago, but no action was taken, although the National Board of Fire Underwriters recommended extra fire protection for this section.

ELIZABETH TALKS MUNICIPAL WATER.

Elizabeth, Feb. 6.—Steps are being now taken by council members to learn whether or not the city has the right to erect or purchase a water plant of its own. This is in line with the Democratic platform which pledged itself to a municipal plant. Recently the contract with the Elizabethtown Water Company was renewed, but it contained a proviso that the contract could be cancelled within a short period of time if due notice was given. Concessions were also made in the contract.

Members of the councilmanic committee having the matter in charge have learned from City Attorney Connolly that council has power to purchase or construct a plant, provided this step is favored by a majority vote cast at an election to be called by the council.

HOLDS TWO STUDENTS.

Trenton, Feb. 6.—On a charge of attempted arson, Morris Stanley Boyer, of East Orange, and J. E. Jenkins, of Chicago, members of the freshmen class of Princeton University, were arraigned before Justice Harris in the Central Police Court Friday.

The complaint against the young men was sworn to by Montgomery Moses, manager of the Trent Theatre, which it was charged, the young men attempted to burn Thursday night just before the close of the vaudeville performance.

The students pleaded not guilty to wilfully attempting to set fire to the building but were held without bail.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will hold a regular conclave in Masonic Hall, this evening.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

Gentlemen will you please give me space in your paper and ask why should we allow people to come from other countries and violate our laws and why we as citizens of the United States should allow any one to violate our Sunday laws? If we should go to their country they would expect us to observe their laws and not our laws, as we do in our country. They would soon tell us what we were doing, why should they not observe our Sunday according to our Constitution of the United States.

FIND BOAT'S BOILER DID NOT EXPLODE

The police of Jersey City yesterday prevented the removal from the jurisdiction of the New Jersey authorities of the sunken power launch Whistler which some one was attempting to raise from its muddy bed at Communipaw. The Whistler it is thought will furnish the clew to the explosion of last Wednesday when seevral tons of dynamite shattered glass for miles around and also sent about twenty-five men into eternity without warning.

When the policemen on guard at pier 7 of the New Jersey Central Railroad saw that attempts were being made to raise the sunken boat they notified County Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven, who in turn notified Police Commissioner Job H. Lippincott. The police were told to stop any attempt at the removal of the boat. It has been discovered by the divers sent down to fix chains about the boat's hull that the boilers are intact and that it was not from a boiler explosion that the big blowup occurred.

Commissioner Lippincott said yesterday that the investigation had so far progressed that responsibility for the accident will be fixed shortly, but, he did not say who had been found specially to be responsible. Testimony of witnesses from the bark Sigurd was taken and a great mass of testimony is now in the hands of Prosecutor Garven, who will proceed when he has the case ready.

CITY FIRE DEPARTMENT RESPONDS TO TWO ALARMS.

The burlap wrappings on a quantity of machinery standing on a car in a railroad siding near Washington street, caught fire in some way early this morning. An alarm was turned in from box 25 at 5:55 and the firemen extinguished the flames with chemicals. There was practically no damage.

The West End company went out at 12:35 this noon on a still alarm for a blaze in a workshop in the rear of James L. Perry's residence, 1130 West Seventh street. It was caused by spontaneous combustion. The loss is placed at about $50.

COLLECT EVIDENCE ON SUNDAY SELLING

Acting under instructions for Chief Kiely, the police yesterday collected evidence against a large number of Hebrews and Italians who were doing business after having opened their stores at sunset on Saturday. This was in compliance with Mayor Moy's written order to the chief citing the laws and ordinances regarding Sunday selling and Sabbath observance.

No warrants have been issued and no arrests made. It is reported that the chief will serve the warrants as soon as ordered to do so by the Mayor. Although they have a legal right to do so, many of the newsdealers refused to sell papers yesterday. At the drug stores, restaurants and other shops in the heart of the business section it was well nigh impossible to buy a cigar.

Two Intoxicated.

Only two cases of drunkenness were brought before Judge De Meza in the city court this morning. W. J. Sanderson, colored, and Peter Kessler, fifty-five, white, of the west end. Sanderson was fined $5 and sentence was suspended in Kessler's case.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

In "The Easiest Way," which Mr. Belasco will produce in the Plainfield theatre tonight, the author does not seek to argue. He merely presents a given case. He leaves the audience to draw its own conclusions. And without any effort to create sympathy for his heroine, or to ameliorate her wrongs, or to soften even the language, he brazenly proclaims his story. And the moral effect is unquestionable. To the most callous men in the audience it brings disgust for such women as Laura Murdock or Elfie St. Clair; to the inexperienced young man it destroys all illusions about stage folk of that caliber and the so-called "gay" life; to women it strikingly and bitterly points out the inevitable results of following any but the best way. Is there any sermon that can more effectively bring home these points?

"There is great satisfaction to be got out of 'The Easiest Way' by the student of the theatre in its dramatic value, its fine construction, and its splendid character drawing. There is a real conflict at hand. There are powerfully constructed scenes which issue naturally from the theme and there is an absolute disregard of the conventional tricks of the trade. The dialogue is sharp and to the point, there is no 'worked-up' entrance for the star, there is no irrelevant 'comedy relief.' Those who are willing to accept anything that is worth while on the stage, be it drama or minstrel show, have the right to ask for productions of the merits of 'The Easiest Way.' And as our education extends with regard to the theatre plays of its caliber will be more frequent."

Frank Daniels in the newest musical comedy success imported from Vienna, "The Girl in the Train," will be seen at the Plainfield theatre, for one night only, Saturday, February 11, under the management of Chas. Dillingham. "The Girl in the Train," is now being played in most of the capitals of Europe, and has been the rage of musical centres for the past year. It was written by Leo Fall, the famous composer of "The Dollar Princess," and the entertaining book was written by Victor Loon, who gained fame as the author of "The Merry Widow," the American adaption has been made by Henry B. Smith.

Milk Purloiners Apprehended.

The intermediate leader will be Theodosia Vail and the Junior leader, Helen Foster. An important meeting will be held next week.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has been requested to start a special fund for the payment for the new pulpit furniture and choir rail. The amount needed is $200. PLAN MORE STATE ROAD IMPROVEMENT

A joint meeting of the boards of freeholders of Middlesex and Somerset counties will be held at Somerville on Thursday to approve of plans for the macadamizing of the line road from Franklin Park to Kingston. The two bodies, at a meeting in New Brunswick, Thursday, decided to go ahead with this work and instructed Frederick S. Simmons, the Middlesex county engineer, to prepare plans.

The building of this road will give automobilists a shorter route to Princeton and Trenton. The two boards got together about two years ago with the idea of building the road from New Brunswick to the Mercer county line, and at that time they macadamized the road from New Brunswick to Franklin Park and also a section at Rocky Hill. The present work will complete a direct line of good roads across the State, the present route of automobiles being the circuitous one from New Brunswick to Cranbury and then across to Princeton via Monmouth Junction.

The board also decided to seek a joint meeting with the Union county freeholders in an endeavor to have the road from Roosevelt to Elizabethport macadamized. There is now a wagon road between these two places, but it is ten and three-quarter miles long. The new road is a direct one and but five miles long, four miles of which is in Union county and one mile in Middlesex. Roosevelt is willing to pay a portion of the expense. Mayor Joseph A. Hermann, of Roosevelt, is seeking to get the two boards together.

THE CABMEN OF PARIS

Hailing One Is the Same as a Declaration of War.

THEY ARE INSOLENT ROGUES

Sneers and Caustic Advice Are Showered Upon Those Who Engage Them. On Wet or Festal Days the Cabbies Spurn Those Who Want to Ride.

Among Anglo-Saxons there is a general and instinctive desire to do business on the basis of an entente cordiale. In Paris the hailing of a cabman is looked on by both parties to the transaction as an implied declaration of war. The cabman takes your measure, and you take his number if you are wise. At once he will give you a reason to remark that he has a rooted and premeditated objection to drive you where you wish to go. Perhaps he prefers the opera quarter because it is central, or should the weather be fine his heart is probably set upon driving in the Bois, while you may have business at the bourse. He explains his views on the subject selfishly and rudely.

A foreigner alighted recently from the Calais train at the Northern railway station in Paris and ordered a typical Parisian cabman, bloated, pale and absinth soaked, to drive him to the Rue Blomet, which is a street in the relatively distant Vaugirard quarter. "Peut on habiter la Rue Blomet?" ("Is it possible to inhabit the Rue Blomet?") exclaimed the ragged ruffian in an epigrammatic note of disdain which would have done honor to Beau Brummel.

But it is when the Paris cabman has once started on his "course," a warpath in the strict sense of the term, that he proves to what a limitless extent he is the enemy of mankind. His hatred of the "bourgeois," the "man in the street," in spite of and indeed because of his being a potential client, is expressed at every yard. He constantly tries to run him down, which makes strangers to Paris accuse the Paris cabman of driving badly, while in point of fact he is not driving at all, but playing with miraculous skill a game of his own which suggests cannon billiards in the hands of a world's champion.

But it is not with the public alone that he is at war. On all other cabmen whose path he crosses, on omnibus drivers, motorcar men, bicyclists, private coachmen, costermongers with barrows and (sotto voce) the police he heaps deadly insults, the least outrageous of which are "Ours!" ("Bear!") and "Fourneau!" ("Oven!"), the latter containing a subtle double meaning, intelligible only to those who have Paris "argot" or slang at their finger ends and too long to explain.

The cabman's wild career through the streets, the constant wavering and slashing of his pitiless whip, his madcap hurtlements and collisions, the frenzied gesticulations which he exchanges with his "fare," the panic stricken flight of the agonized women whose lives he has endangered, the ugly rushes which the public occasionally makes at him with a view to lynching him, the sprawlings and fallings of his maddened, hysterical, starving horse, contribute as much as anything to the spasmodic intensity, the electric blue fire diablerie, which are characteristic of the general movement of Paris.

All that can be said in mitigation of the Paris cabman's method is that "he has them in the blood." Every Parisian (and the cabman is no exception) has the soul of a dictator and the spirit of an artist. To exercise autocratic power and, failing this, to enjoy the maximum of personal freedom from all restraint, moral or social, is the goal at which he is ever aiming, openly or secretly.

Watch a Paris cabman, for instance, on a wet day or on some festival occasion, such as the New Year, when there is a big demand for his services. With what haughty disdain does he drive along the streets, deaf to every appeal, refusing every fare, rejoicing in the discomfort and inconvenience he is causing, triumphant in the thought that at last he has "the bourgeois" at his feet; that the clientele which he detests and which detests him is now a humiliated, bemuddled or bedraggled mob of supplicants waiting on his will, whom he can enrage to boiling point with his sneers and his silence or lash with his sarcasms as cruelly as he beats his horse.

Cheerfully does he sacrifice half a day's earnings to the enjoyment of this exquisite revenge, for at least he can say to his hungry wife and children when he gets home, "J'ai vecu." They may not have dined, but he has lived.

It is because the Parisian recognizes in himself a certain community of sentiment with the cabman in this attitude toward life that he tolerates him; though he does not forgive him. —Harper's Weekly.

Her Only Course.

Lady Anne Lindsay, the author of the old poem "Auld Robin Gray," was not only a delightful conversationalist, but she was a great story teller.

This gift made her not only a welcome guest abroad, but a valuable member of the home circle, for it is related in "A Group of Scottish Women" that at a dinner party which she was giving to some friends an old manservant caused some amusement by saying in a perfectly audible undertone:

"My lady, you must tell another story. The second course won't be ready for five minutes."

Temples of Siam.

Once a year all the Buddhist temples in Siam are visited by the king or his deputies, bearing the phra kathin (yellow robes), in conformity with an ancient custom by which the priests were made to seek their apparel for the ensuing year. During the lifetime of Buddha monks and priests were sent out to beg for old castoff garments, which were afterward dyed yellow and patched together to form the required robes. This ancient mendicant custom gradually gave place to the present one of making the garments from a new cloth of a bright canary yellow, provided by joint contributions of king, princes, nobles and commoners. When the king goes in the royal throne barge to present the robes in person he does so with great pomp and ceremony. The priestly garments, folded in bundles, are carried to the door of the temple to await the appearance of his majesty and his suit. The king on arriving takes a priestly robe and places it on a decorated altar. The chief priest then lays his hands on the garment and chants an acknowledgment.—Wide World Magazine.

Won by His Wit.

A story is told of an English clergyman who owed his appointment to a rich living to a lucky pun. He was tutor to the son of a nobleman and had not long taken orders when he attended the funeral of the rector of the parish in which the nobleman's seat was situated. The father of his pupil was patron of the living and was also present at the funeral of the deceased rector. There was a young clergyman present also whose grief was so demonstrative that the noble patron was much affected by the sight and asked if the young man was a son of the deceased gentleman.

"Oh, dear, no, my lord—no relation at all," said the tutor.

"No relation!" exclaimed the nobleman in a surprised tone.

"None, my lord. He is the curate, and I think he is not weeping for the dead, but for the living."

His lordship, who was something of a wit and a cynic himself, was so delighted with the bonmot that he conferred the living upon the ready punster.

Through a Big Telescope.

The first look through a great telescope is disappointing, but the novice soons sees that the flat appearance which the heavens present to the naked eye is replaced by a curious concavity; the moon and stars seem to be hung in space rather than spread out on a flat surface. For a moment one feels at the telescope like a child watching the swift moving balls kept in the air by a juggler and expecting to see one of those great, bright bodies fall. Then comes the thought, What keeps them there, apparently suspended in space with absolutely nothing to hold them firm? The explanation of the learned astronomer causes the brain of the layman to whirl, and he sees himself, perhaps for the first time, as a child gathering pebbles on the great shores of the sea of knowledge or as "an infant in the night, an infant crying for the light, and with no language but a cry."—National Magazine.

The New Hen.

"Mr. Blight was amused by the antics of the militant suffragettes. At a luncheon at the Bellevue he once sat next to a lady with suffragette notions. Plovers' eggs, hard boiled, formed one course, and the lady called Mr. Blight's attention to the high cost of plovers' eggs that year.

"'Even though,' she said, 'they have to be shipped from England, I don't see why their price should have nearly doubled, do you?'

"'Well—er—not exactly,' murmured Mr. Blight, 'though they do say the hen plovers have taken to acting very oddly of late—strutting around, and growing topknots and spurs, and even trying to learn to crow.'"—Exchange

Court Dress of Laureate.

Tennyson's court dress when he received the laureateship did not cost him much, for it was the same court dress worn by Wordsworth, who in turn had it from the old poet Rogers, and it is still in the Wordsworth family. It is a wonder how Tennyson and Wordsworth got into it, for Rogers was a little fellow. Tennyson had no passion for courts, and so he went in second hand to save cost. —New York Press.

Hot Air Rates.

Benham—I wish you wouldn't use the telephone so much for out of town calls.

Mrs. Benham—I like to talk to mother.

Benham—That's what I object to; I'm tired of paying gas bills.—New York Press.

A Careless Man.

Father—Why have you quarreled with Harry? Daughter—Because he proposed to me last night. Father—Well, there was no harm in that, was there? Daughter—But I had accepted him the night before.—Illustrated Bits.

Perseverance.

Perseverance is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.

Strict Obedience.

Salesman—Shirt, sir. Will you have a negligee or a stiff bosom? Customer—Negligee, I guess. The doctor said I must avoid starchy things.—Boston Transcript.

AFTER THE COLLISION.

The Effect It Has on the Nerves Leads to Some Very Humorous Acts.

A wreck sometimes upsets even the most iron nerved. Once the wreck master on his arrival noticed a bareheaded man in overalls, covered with coal dust and blood, sitting beside his engine with tears running down his face. He recognized him as the engineer, who had been hauled out a few minutes before from under the mass of twisted, battered steel that had once been a locomotive. Singularly enough, beyond a few cuts and bruises he was unhurt. He was crying because he could not find his cap that he had bought new that day and begged the wreck master to help him hunt for it.

A passenger conductor of a train that was derailed and had plunged down an embankment crawled out of the confusion and rendered cool and efficient help during the half hour before the wreck train arrived. A little later the wreck master chanced to look around and saw the conductor standing beside him holding a matchbox to his ear and shaking it. Presently he put it back in his pocket, but took it out again in a moment and repeated his action.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the wreck master.

"My watch has stopped. I can't get it to going, and I don't know what time it is," answered the conductor, still listening to his matchbox.

The wreck master took the conductor by the shoulders and shook him roughly. Then he "came to."—Thaddeus S. Dayton in Harper's Weekly.

MADE SURE OF IT.

The Gift Was Delayed, but the Groom Got the Bird.

A wealthy patron of the turf in New York told an amusing story of a favorite groom and a turkey.

"I had once promised this groom," he said, "a Christmas turkey, but somehow in the rush and flurry of December I forgot it. It was some days after Christmas when I remembered how I had overlooked my faithful old friend.

"Meeting him in the paddock one morning and intending to make good my forgetfulness, I said to the groom by way of a joke:

"'Well, Jenkins, how did you like that turkey I sent you?'

"'It was a very fine bird, sir,' said the groom. 'I came very near losing it, though.'

"'How so?' said I, astonished.

"'Well, sir,' said Jenkins, 'Christmas morning came, and your turkey hadn't reached me, so I rushed right off to the express company and asked the manager what he meant by not sending the bird up. The manager apologized, sir, very politely, and he took me into a back room, where there were ten or fifteen turkeys hanging, and he said the labels had been lost off them and I'd just better take my choice. So I chose the largest, sir, knowing your generosity, and it was fine. It ate grand. Thank you very much indeed, sir.'"—Washington Star.

Commas.

The French do not, as a rule, employ inverted commas to indicate a dialogue, but they employ the dash to indicate a change of speakers, which is just as bad. Certainly many punctuation marks are sadly misused or overused. Dickens flung unnecessary commas all over his pages—whole battalions of them. Walter Pater also employed them with extraordinary prodigality, frequently before the word "and" where the conjunction rendered them superfluous. Pater was also overfond of the mark of exclamation, so that when he drops a "Yes" into his measured style it must needs appear as "Yes!" But, though the Bible does without inverted commas, there is real art in its punctuation. How admirably it marks the cadence and helps the drama in that great story of the prodigal son!—London Chronicle.

Culpeper's Remedies.

Old time physicians prescribed even more unsavory remedies than rancid butter, which was Emperor Menelik's cure for malarial fever. In "Culpeper's Herbal," published originally in 1656 and reprinted as recently as 1820, are such prescriptions as "oil wherein frogs have been sodden till all the flesh is off from their bones," "horse leeches burned into powder" and "black soap and beaten ginger." Some of Culpeper's remedies are of a more practical nature. "If redhot gold be quenched in wine," he says, "and the wine drunk it cheers the vitals and cures the plague. Outwardly used it takes away spots and leprosis."

Making It Pleasant For Her.

Mrs. Goodsole (removing her wraps) —I've owed you a call for a long time you know. I hate to be in debt, and I just felt that I couldn't rest easy until I had discharged my obligations by coming to see you. Mrs. Sliptung —Why, my dear Mrs. Goodsole, you shouldn't have felt that way at all.—Chicago Tribune.

Paid Him Back.

The Mean Thing—You're so conceited, Connie, that I believe when you get into heaven the first question you'll ask will be, "Are my wings on straight?" Connie—Yes, dear, and I shall be sorry that you won't be there to tell me.—Illustrated Bits.

Now They Don't Speak.

Belle—How silly men act when they propose! Why, my husband acted like a perfect fool. Nelle—That's what everybody thought when your engagement was announced.—Cleveland Leader.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Gregg resumed, enjoying the sensation he was creating. "Yes, that Basque herder of mine, the one up near Black Tooth, sent word he was sick, so I hunted up an old tramp by the name of Edwards to take his place Edwards found the dago dying of pox and skipped out over the range, leaving him to die alone. Cavanagh went up and found the dago dead and took care of him. Result is he's full of germs and has brought his apprentice down with it, and both of 'em must be quarantined right where they are."

"Good heavens, man," exclaimed Dalton, "this is serious business! Are you sure it's smallpox?"

"One of my men came from there last night. I was there myself on Monday; so was the deputy. The sheriff missed Tom this morning, but I reached him by phone, and Cavanagh admitted to us that the Basque died of smallpox and that he buried him with his own hands."

The sheriff spoke up. "The criminal part of it is this, Mr. Dalton—Cavanagh didn't report the case when he came down here, just when about leaving a trail of poison. Why didn't he report it? He should be arrested."

"Wait a moment," said Dalton. "Perhaps it wasn't pox; perhaps it was only mountain fever. Cavanagh is not the kind of man to involve others in a pestilence. I reckon he knew it was nothing but a fever, and, not wishing to alarm his friends, he just slid into town and out again."

A flash of light, of heat, of joy, went through Lee's heart as she listened to Dalton's defense of Cavanagh. "That was the reason why he rode away," she thought. "He was afraid of bringing harm to us." And this conviction lighted her face with a smile even while the forester continued his supposition by saying, "Of course proper precautions should be taken, and as we are going up there the supervisor and I will see that a quarantine is established if we find it necessary."

Gregg was not satisfied. "Cavanagh admitted to the deputy and to me that he believed the case to be smallpox and said that he had destroyed the camp and everything connected with it except the horse and the dog, and yet he comes down here, infecting everybody he meets." He turned to Lee. "You'd better burn the bed he slept on. He's left a trail of germs wherever he went. I say the man is criminally liable and should be jailed if he lives to get back to town."

Lee's mind was off now on another tangent. "Suppose it is true?" she asked herself. "Suppose he has fallen sick away up there, miles and miles from any nurse or doctor"—

"There's something queer about the whole business," pursued Gregg. "For instance, who is this assistant he's got? Johnson said there was an old man in ranger uniform pottering round. Why didn't he send word by him? Why did he let me come to the door? He might have involved me in the disease. I tell you, if you don't take care of him the people of the county will."

The forester looked grave. "If he knew it was smallpox and failed to report it he did wrong, but you say he took care of this poor shepherd—nursed him till he died and buried him, taking all precautions." You can't complain of that, can you? That's the act of a good ranger and a brave man. You wouldn't have done it," he ended, addressing Gregg. "Sickness up there two full miles above sea level is quite a different proposition from sickness in Sulphur City or the Fork. I shall not condemn Mr. Cavanagh till I hear his side of the story."

Lee turned a grateful glance upon him. "You must be right. I don't believe Mr. Cavanagh would deceive any one."

"Well, we'll soon know the truth," said Dalton, "for I'm going up there. If the ranger has been exposed he must not be left alone."

"He ain't alone," declared the sheriff. "Tom phoned me that he had an assistant."

"Swenson, I suppose," said Redfield, who entered at this moment. "Swenson is his assistant."

"I didn't see him myself," Gregg continued, "but I understood the deputy to say that he was an old man."

"Swenson is a young man," corrected Redfield.

The sheriff insisted. "Tom said it was an old man—a stranger to him—tall, smooth shaven, not very strong, he said—'peared to be a cook. He had helped nurse the dago, so Tom said."

"That's very curious," mused Redfield. "There isn't an old man in the service of this forest. There's a mistake somewhere."

"Well," concluded Gregg, "that's what he said. I thought at first it might be that old hobo Edwards, but this feller being in uniform and smooth shaven"— His face changed; his voice deepened. "Say, I believe it was Edwards, and, furthermore, Edwards is the convict that Texas marshal was after the other day, and this man Cavanagh—your prize ranger—is harboring him."

"What nonsense!" exclaimed Redfield.

The sheriff banged his hand upon the table. "That's the whole mystery. I see it all now. He's up there concealing this man. He's given out this smallpox scare just to keep the officers away from him. Now you've got it!"

The thunder in his voice drew toward him all those who remained in the dining room, and Lee found herself ringed about by a dozen excited men, but she did not flinch. She was too deeply concerned over Cavanagh's fate to be afraid, and, besides, Redfield and the forester were beside her.

The supervisor was staggered by Gregg's accusation and by certain confirmatory facts in his own possession, but he defended Cavanagh bravely. "You're crazy," he replied. "Why should Ross do such a foolish thing? What is his motive? What interest would he have in this man Edwards, whom you call a tramp? He can't be a relative and certainly not a friend of Cavanagh's, for you say he is a convict. Come, now, your hatred of Cavanagh has gone too far."

Gregg was somewhat cooled by this dash of reason, but replied: "I don't know what relation he is, but these are facts. He's concealing an escaped convict, and he knows it."

Dalton put in a quiet word. "What is the use of shouting a judgment against a man like Cavanagh before you know the facts? He's one of the best and ablest rangers on this forest. I don't know why he has resigned, but I'm sure"—

"Has he resigned?" asked Gregg eagerly.

"He has."

"A good job for him. I was about to circulate a petition to have him removed."

"If all the stockmen in the valley had signed a petition against him it wouldn't have done any good," replied Dalton. "We know a good man when we see him. I'm here to offer him promotion, not to punish him."

Lee, looking about at the faces of these men and seeing disappointment in their faces, lost the keen sting of her own humiliation. "In the midst of such a fight as this how can he give time or thought to me?" Painful as the admission was, she was forced to admit that she was a very humble factor in a very large campaign. "But suppose he falls ill!" Her face grew white and set and her lips bitter. "That would be the final tragic touch," she thought, "to have him come down of a plague from nursing one of Sam Gregg's sheep herders." Aloud she said: "His resignation comes just in time, doesn't it? He can now be sick without loss to the service."

Dalton answered her. "The supervisor has not accepted his resignation. On the contrary, I shall offer him a higher position. His career as a forester is only beginning. He would be foolish to give up the work now, when the avenues of promotion are just opening. I can offer him very soon the supervision of a forest."

As they talked Lee felt herself sinking the while her lover rose. It was all true. The forester was right. Ross was capable of any work they might demand of him. He was too skilled, too intelligent, too manly, to remain in the forest, heroic as its duties seemed.

Upon this discussion Lize, hobbling painfully, appeared. With a cry of surprise Lee rose to meet her.

"Mother, you must not do this!"

She waved her away. "I'm all right," she said, "barring the big marbles in my slippers." Then she turned to Dalton. "Now, what's it all about? Is it true that Ross is down?"

"No. So far as we know, he is well."

"Well, I'm going to find out. I don't intend to set here and have him up there without a cook or a nurse."

At this moment a tall, fair young fellow, dressed in a ranger's uniform, entered the room and made his way directly to the spot where Lee, her mother and Redfield were standing. "Mr. Supervisor, Cavanagh has sent me to tell you that he needs a doctor. He's got a sick man up at the station, and he's afraid it's a case of smallpox." He turned to Lee. "He told me to tell you that he would have written, only he was afraid to even send a letter out."

"What does he need?" asked Redfield.

"He needs medicine and food, a doctor, and he ought to have a nurse."

"That's my job," said Lize.

"Nonsense!" said Redfield. "You're not fit to ride a mile. I won't hear of your going."

"You wait and see. I'm going, and you can't stop me."

"Who is the man with him?" asked the forester.

"I don't know—an old herder, he said. He said he could take care of him all right for the present, but that if he were taken down himself"—

Lee's mounting emotion broke from her in a little cry. "Oh, Mr. Redfield, please let me go too! I want to help! I must help!"

Redfield said: "I'll telephone to Sulphur City and ask Brooks to get a nurse and come down as soon as possible. Meanwhile I'll go out to see what the conditions are."

"I'm going, too, I tell you," announced Lize. "I've had the cussed disease, and I'm not afraid of it. We had three sieges of it in my family. You get me up there, and I'll do the rest."

"But you are ill."

"I was, but I'm not now." Her voice was firmer than it had been for days. "All I needed was something to do. Ross Cavanagh has been like a son to me for two years. He's the one man in this country I'd turn my hand over for—barring yourself, Reddy—and it's my job to see him through this pinch."

In spite of all opposition she had her way. Returning to her room to get such clothing as she needed for her stay in the hills, she waited for Redfield to send a carriage to her. "I can't ride a horse no more," she sorrowfully admitted.

Lee's secret was no secret to any one there. Her wide eyes and heaving breast testified to the profound stir in her heart. She was in an anguish of fear lest Ross should already be in the grip of his loathsome enemy. That it had come to him by way of a brave and noble act made the situation only the more tragic.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE PESTHOUSE.

CAVANAGH had kept a keen watch over Wetherford, and when one night the old man began to complain of the ache in his bones his decision was instant.

"You've got it," he said. "It's up to us to move down the valley tomorrow."

Wetherford protested that he would as soon die in the hills as in the valley. "I don't want Lee Virginia to know, but if I seem liable to fade out I'd like Lize to be told that I didn't forget her and that I came back to find out how she was. I hate to be a nuisance to you, and so I'll go down the valley if you say so."

As he was about to turn in that night Ross heard a horse cross the bridge and, with intent to warn the rider of his danger, went to the door and called out: "Halt! Who's there?"

"A friend," replied the stranger in a weak voice.

Ross permitted the visitor to ride up to the pole. "I can't ask you in," he explained. "I've a sick man inside. Who are you, and what can I do for you?"

Notwithstanding this warning the rider dropped from his saddle and came into the light which streamed from the door.

"My name is Dunn," he began. "I'm from Deer Creek."

"I know you," responded the ranger. "You're that rancher I saw working in the ditch the day I went to telephone, and you've come to tell me something about that murder."

The other man broke into a whimper. "I'm a law abiding man, Mr. Cavanagh," he began tremulously. "I've always kept the law and never intended to have anything to do with that business. I was dragged into it against my will. I've come to you because you're an officer of the federal law. You don't belong here. I trust you. You represent the president, and I want to tell you what I know, only I want you to promise not to bring me into it. I'm a man with a family, and I can't bear to have them know the truth."

There were deep agitation and complete sincerity in the rancher's choked and hesitant utterance, and Cavanagh turned cold with a premonition of what he was about to disclose. "I am not an officer of the law, Mr. Dunn, not in the sense you mean, but I will respect your wishes."

"I know that you are not an officer of the county law, but you're not a cattleman. It is your business to keep the peace in the wild country, and you do it. Everybody knows that. But I can't trust the officers of this country; they're all afraid of the cowboys. You are not afraid, and you represent the United States, and I'll tell you. I can't bear it any longer!" he wailed. "I must tell somebody. I can't sleep, and I can't eat. I've been like a man in a nightmare ever since. I had no hand in the killing—I didn't even see it done—but I knew it was going to happen. I saw the committee appointed. The meeting that decided it was held in my barn, but I didn't know what they intended to do. You believe me, don't you?" He peered up at Cavanagh with white face and wild eyes. "I'm over seventy years of age, Mr. Cavanagh, and I've been a law abiding citizen all my life."

His mind, shattered by the weight of his ghastly secret, was in confusion, and, perceiving this, Cavanagh began to question him gently. One by one he procured the names of those who voted to "deal with" the herders. One by one he obtained also the list of those named on "the committee of reprisal," and as the broken man delivered himself of these accusing facts he grew calmer. "I didn't know—I couldn't believe—that the men on that committee could chop and burn"— His utterance failed him again, and he fell silent abruptly.

"They must have been drunk—mad drunk," retorted Cavanagh. "And yet who would believe that even drink could inflame white men to such devil's work? When did you first know what had been done?"

"That night after it was done one of the men, my neighbor, who was drawn on the committee, came to my house and asked me to give him a bed. He was afraid to go home. 'I can't face my wife and children,' he said. He told me what he'd seen, and then when I remembered that it had all been decided in my stable and the committee appointed there I began to tremble. You believe I'm telling the truth, don't you?" he again asked, with piteous accent.

"Yes, I believe you. You must tell this story to the judge. It will end the reign of the cattlemen."

"Oh, no; I can't do that."

"You must do that. It is your duty as a Christian man and citizen."

"No, no; I'll stay and help you—I'll do anything but that. I'm afraid to tell what I know. They would burn me alive. I'm not a western man. I've never been in a criminal court. I don't belong to this wild country. I came out here because my daughter is not strong, and now"— He broke down altogether and, leaning against his horse's side, sobbed pitifully.

Cavanagh, convinced that the old man's mind was too deeply affected to enable him to find his way back over the rough trail that night, spoke to him gently. "I'll get you something to eat," he said. "Sit down here and rest and compose yourself."

Wetherford turned a wild eye on the ranger as he re-entered. "Who's out there?" he asked. "Is it the marshal?"

"No; it's only one of the ranchers from below. He's tired and hungry, and I'm going to feed him." Ross replied, filled with a vivid sense of the diverse characters of the two men he was serving.

Dunn received the food with an eager hand, and after he had finished his refreshment Cavanagh remarked: "The whole country should be obliged to you for your visit to me. I shall send your information to Supervisor Redfield."

"Don't use my name," he begged. "They will kill me if they find out that I have told. We were all sworn to secrecy, and if I had not seen that fire, that pile of bodies"—

"I know, I know! It horrified me. It made me doubt humanity," responded Cavanagh. "We of the north cry out against the south for its lynchings, but here under our eyes goes on an equally horrible display of rage over the mere question of temporary advantage, over the appropriation of free grass, which is a federal resource—something which belongs neither to one claimant nor to the other, but to the people, and should be of value to the people. You must bring these men to punishment."

Dunn could only shiver in his horror and repeat his fear. "They'll kill me if I do."

Cavanagh at last said: "You must not attempt to ride back tonight. I can't give you lodging in the cabin because my patient is sick of smallpox, but you can camp in the barn till morning, then ride straight back to my friend Redfield and tell him what you've told me. He will see that you are protected. Make your deposition and leave the country if you are afraid to remain."

In the end the rancher promised to do this, but his tone was that of a broken and distraught dotard. All the landmarks of his life seemed suddenly shifted.

Meanwhile the sufferings of Wetherford were increasing, and Cavanagh was forced to give up all hope of getting him down the trail next morning, and when Swenson, the forest guard from the South Fork, knocked at the door to say that he had been to the valley and that the doctor was coming up with Redfield and the district forester Ross thanked him, but ordered him to go into camp across the river and to warn everybody to keep clear of the cabin. "Put your packages down outside the door," he added, "and take charge of the situation on the outside. I'll take care of the business inside."

Wetherford was in great pain, but the poison of the disease had misted his brain, and he no longer worried over the possible disclosure of his identity. At times he lost the sense of his surroundings and talked of his prison life or of the long ride northward. Once he rose in his bed to beat off the wolves which he said were attacking his pony.

He was a piteous figure as he struggled thus, and it needed neither his relationship to Lee nor his bravery in caring for the Basque herder to fill the ranger's heart with a desire to relieve his suffering. "Perhaps I should have sent for Lize at once," he mused as the light brought out the red signatures of the plague.

Once the old man looked up with wide, dark, unseeing eyes and murmured, "I don't seem to know you."

"I'm a friend. My name is Cavanagh."

"I can't place you," he sadly admitted. "I feel pretty bad. If I ever get out of this place I'm going back to the Fork. I'll get a gold mine; then I'll go back and make up for what Lize has gone through. I'm afraid to go back now."

"All right," Ross soothingly agreed. "But you'll have to keep quiet till you get over this fever you're suffering from."

HE DISCOURSES ON THE FAULT-FINDER

"The Duty of Fault-Finding," was the subject of a discourse by Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire at the Park Avenue Baptist church, yesterday morning. The text was "Brother let me pull the mote out of thine eye." In part Mr. Maguire said:

"What we see in others we have the germs of in ourselves. The best way of judging another is by narrowly examining our own hearts. The fault-finders, like the poor, are always with us. We are commanded under the law and under the Gospel to reprove and rebuke with all long-suffering. A preparation is necessary to perform this task.

"First we must pull the beam out of our own eye before we can see clearly to take the mote out of our brother's. We should not take the platform and preach prohibition when we keep a barrel of beer in the cellar and a whiskey flask on our sideboard. No use in prating on political economy if we stayed away from the polls last election day. No use telling your boys not to smoke cigarettes while you are using a corn-cob pipe, a meerschaum or a briar root. No use in preaching social purity, when your own lips are blistered with impure stories.

"The second preparation is to put on the garment of charity. Charity suffereth long and is kind. The words of Abraham Lincoln will live as long as the nation exists and long after, 'with malice toward none and charity for all, and an ability to do the right as God has given us to see the right.'"

OBSERVE SABBATH URGES PREACHER

"Is it Business to do Business on Sunday," was the subject of the sermon by Rev. F. St. John Fitch at Hope chapel yesterday morning, before a large congregation, a majority of which were also present to hear the announcement of the successor to Rev. L. R. Howard as pastor of the chapel. Mr. Fitch is Mayor Moy's appointeee for the position of oversser of the poor to succeed Alexander D. Ayers, and his sermon was of unusual interest in consequence.

The divine took his text from Exodus 20:8: "Remember the Sabbath Day and keep it holy." At the outset Mr. Fitch said that it was not his intention to differ or enter into any controversy with others regarding the legal status of Sunday, but his purpose was to give a message of instruction and inspiration as the Holy Spirit would be pleased to grant it. Continuing Mr. Fitch said in part:

"There are two aspects of the command found in our text—the civil and Scriptural. Consider the civil. I have adopted purposely a singular expression of the theme; obviously an economical or business, namely, 'Is it Business to do Business on Sunday?' That is a question for you and me to answer. With the exception of the lazy, wealthy or Weary Willies," we are all in business, the object of which is to make money enough for comfort, convenience and competence for ourselves and dependants to be secured in an honest manner and approved business methods.

"Now for the Sunday proposition. Science, labor and nature have one and all have clamored loudly for a moment's pause, a cessation of action to rest and recuperate to regain spent energy. More than all-man. The busy man, the business man, crowded and cramped for time —overburdened with the weight of hard labor and keen competition cries out for relief.

"It his right and he will secure it. Unable alone he calls to his aid the strong right arm of the law. In time that is obtained. The police guard his treasure and for it he gratefully pays the price, appreciatively he upholds the Mayor in his efforts for law enfrocement which is an asset to his business enterprise. The merchant, mechanic, farmer or whoever he is, is the better physically and mentally to pursue his business to a prosperous and successful issue.

"Turning from the law of necessity we find the civil law made and operated by man. A law older than New Jersey, older than America, older than Europe, as old as Moses, back in the organization of the Theocracy of Israel, we read God spake all these words, saying: 'Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it Holy.' Our memory takes us to those days when our ancestors and forbears rejoiced to see the dawn of the weekly Sabbath and they have left us a rich legacy in the influence of their virtuous lives and the wholesome advice they gave when so often they said: 'Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it Holy.'

"Let us remember those early days; also those who have in recent years come to our shores and others later, leaving behind parents and friends, who observed this hallowed day of rest and worship and who are solicitious of their children's welfare. Shall it be that here in our land and our beautiful city of Plainfield they forget God and His laws—no never. Let us hold inviolate these sacred precepts moreover should others come to our country, made free and glorious by virtuous patriotism and consecrated loyalty to God, our eternal Father and Jesus Christ our blessed Saviour, and tear from us the treasure we hold dear. No! No! We are a Christian nation. We live in a Christian city and we have a Christian hope. It is surely a bad business to do business on Sunday, therefore, let us remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy."

ASK STATE AID IN POULTRY INDUSTRY

Senator Gaunt, of Gloucester county, who is master of the State Grange, at the request of the New Jersey branch of the American Poultry Association, will introduce a bill to provide for the establishment of a department of poultry husbandry as a part of the regular equipment of the State Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick.

The measure will call for an appropriation of $25,000 and an annual maintenance fund of $3,000. The bill is urged upon the ground that, while the poultry industry is an important one in New Jersey, representing an investment of $10,00,000 and an annual value of products of about $8,000,000, only $500 is expended by the State in aid of it. New York, on the other hand, appropriated $9,000 last year for this work, while Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island and Connecticut also gave liberally.

In support of the bill it will be stated that New Jersey is the most intensive poultry State in the Union having more capital invested per square mile than any other State; that nowhere are soil, climate and market conditions more favorable for the development of the poultry industry, and that the rapid growth of the industry as compared with other lines of agriculture demand more attention on the part of the State.

Money invested in equipment on the farms of the State is estimated as follows: Dairy, $22,000,000; horticulture, $24,000,000, and poultry, $10,000,000.

23RD ANNIVERSARY OF VINCENT CHAPEL

The twenty-third anniversary of Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church was appropriately observed at the Sunday school session yesterday afternoon, when there was a large gathering of members and friends. The program, which was of an informal character, was in charge of James R. Joy, superintendent. Congratulatory letters were read from former pastors, Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, of Jersey City; Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of Paterson; Rev. Dr. VanMeter and Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, formerly of Jersey City.

There were also several short interesting addresses by Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, of this city, who is president emeritus of Centenary Collegiate Institute, Hackettstown; Rev. Dr. Charles B. Mitchell, former pastor, now of Chicago, who occupied the pulpit of the church morning and evening, and James R. Jackson, a former superintendent. All recalled former days, and the work whic has been accomplished by the church and Sunday school.

The chapel was erected twenty-three years ago and named for Bishop Vincent, a former resident of this city and pastor of the church, but who has since become one of the leading and most influential members of the denomination. It is the only edifice of the kind in the city, erected exclusively for Sunday school work. During the past year the Ladies' Aid Society raised funds with which to refurnish the chapel and make needed repairs and it is now one of the most attractive places of worship here.

Livingston Barbour Coming.

Livingston Barbour, professor of elocution and oratory at Rutgers College, will appear at Trinity Reformed church, Monday evening, March 20, presenting Ralph Connor's famous story, "The Sky Pilot." The affair will be under the auspices of the Dutch Arms, Men's Association of the church. Prof. Barbour has an established reputation as an orator and will doubtless be heard by a large audience upon his apeparance here.

Dr. Paul W. Harrison, missionary from Trinty Reformed church, requests the prayers of the congregation of the above church that ten Arabs in Muscat may be won for Christ this year.

Among the speakers will be Lloyd Griscom, New York Republican State chairman and formerly ambassador to Italy; Judge Galbraith Ward and S. Mallet Provost, all of New York. Many Jerseymen including some Plainfield graduates will be present.

A number of Plainfield graduates will also attend the university day dinner to be held at Scottish Rite Hall, in Philadelphia, on Washington's birthdaly, February 22. This year the dinner will be in honor of Dr. Harrison and Provost Smith. Among those who will speak is Count vonBernstorff, the German ambassador. George Wharton Pepper, LL. D., of Philadelphia, will act as toastmaster.

NATURALIST'S TALK ON TAMING THE LION

Zoology, as studied through the carnivores and most powerful wild animals in captivity will be a special study at the High School, Wednesday morning at 10:15 o'clock. The pupils, and probably as many of the general public as can be accommodated, will enjoy a characteristic stereopticon lecture by Allen Samuel Williams, a New York naturalist.

The lecturer has made a life-long study of wild animals in captivity and nature and has had his own experiences as an amateur instructor in the lion's den. In some of his tours Mr. Williams has been accompanied by Captain Jack Bonavita, the greatest lion tamer, Mr. Williams declares, who ever lived or in all probability ever will live. Captain Conavita has volunteered to add to the interest of the occasion by his presence and the lecturer, after his exposition of the subject, will introduce Bonavita, who, wearing the specially designed khaki uniform in which he tamed and educated twenty-seven desert-bred male lions to perform in a group, will relate bits of his personal experiences to the students.

That there is danger in his vocation is attested by the absence of Bonavita's right arm, which is but one of many injuries he owes to his career of daring. In Bonavita's appearances on the platform there is nothing of the tricks of public talking; one of the most modest and diffident of men he acknowledges that he is more afraid of an audience than of a score of lions or tigers.

St. Stephen's Church Growing.

Rev. Elory G. Bowers, rector of St. Stephen's church, at the 11 o'clock service, yesterday morning, stated to his congregation that he was much encouraged with the hearty response, enthusiasm and co-operation on the part of his parishioners. Since he has become rector several new church organizations have been formed and all are working in harmony. Mr. Bowers commented upon the increasing membership and attendance at services; also upon the fact that several new families have identified themselves with the parish.

MRS. JOSEPHINE DUNHAM DIES AT HER SON'S HOME.

Mrs. Josephine Dunham, widow of Jeremiah Dunham, died Saturday afternoon at 5:30 at the home of her son, William Dunham, of East Second street. She was a resident of Dunellen and came here a week ago for a visit, being somewhat enfeebled by the infirmities of age. The following day she suffered a stroke of paralysis that resulted in her death.

Mrs. Dunham was born in New York State seventy years ago but had lived in New Jersey nearly all her life. She had resided in Dunellen for about thirty-six years. Her husband was one of the best known and most competent engineers on the Central Railroad. Her son, William Dunham, who is the only surviving relative, holds a similar position with the company. Mrs. Dunham was a member of the Dunellen Presbyterian church and a teacher in its Sunday school.

The funeral service will be held at Mr. Dunham's home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

SEEK BETTER PAY

Higher Salaries Sought by Teachers in the Local Public Schools.

IT MEETS WITH APPROVAL.

The Mayor, the School Superintendent and Parent-Teachers Association Favor Making Maximum Wage $1,000.

At the monthly meeting of the city Board of Education last night, Walter I. Firstbrook was received and in behalf of the four Junior O. U. A. M. councils in the city, presented a beautiful flag and Bible for the new Jefferson School. The presentation speech was directed to President L. N. Lovell, who responded fittingly. He expressed the thanks of the board for the gifts and commended the purpose of the Junior order in seeking to instill a love of patriotism and the Bible into the hearts of the school children.

In the regular order of business the board passed a resolution authorizing Superintendent Henry M. Maxson to attend the annual convention of the National Superintendents' Association at Mobile, Ala., at the expense of the city.

The monthly reports submitted showed the following: Pupils examined by medical inspectors, 98; by dental inspectors, pupils examined at Jefferson School, 232; at Irving School, 347; tax collector, $2,802.87; school money collected; custodian, $63,944.15 remaining to credit of the board. The bills amounted to $1,400.

Permission was granted the Public Library to open one room in the Jefferson building one night each week for the distribution of books. The use of the High School auditorium for two days in November was granted the Mothers' Congress for the annual meeting. It was reported that D. W. Armstrong would give a lecture at the Washington School on February 16, subject, "Songs of the Nations."

At the meeting of the board last night, the following petition for a revision of the salary schedule was presented to the board:

"To the Board of Education:

"In view of the largely increased cost of living at the present time, the salaries paid the grade teachers of this city do not represent in purchasing power what they did a few years ago.

"Therefore, we, the undersigned grade teachers of the public schools of Plainfield, do respectfully petition you that our maximum salary be raised from eight hundred dollars to one thousand dollars, and that the yearly increase be made fifty dollars instead of twenty-five dollars and fifty dollars as at present.

The petition was signed by all the grade teachers and endorsed by the principals. It was also strongly supported by the Parent-Teachers Association of the Franklin-Stillman-Whittier and Irving Schools in the following letter:

"The Board of Education:

"Having learned that the teachers of the Plainfield Public Schools have sent the Board of Education a petition for an increase in the salary schedule, we would, on behalf of the Parent-Teacher Association, respectfully urge the Board to grant their request.

"As taxpayers, and particularly as parents with children in the care of these teachers, we feel that the Plainfield schools should have the best teachers attainable, and that these teachers should be paid salaries that will permit them to live in an environment suitable to their culture, that will keep them in the best physical and mental condition to do high grade work.

"Realizing that the question of securing the additional amount in the budget, when it is considered by the Board of Estimate, has an important bearing on the matter, we have, from Mayor Moy, the assurance that, as member of the Board of Estimate, he will favor the addition of the amount necessary for this purpose.

"As a side light on the petition of the teachers, we submit the accompanying data. It is to be assumed that the teacher must have food that is appetizing and nourishing, that she may retain her strength; she must have agreeable lodging conditions, that she may rest and relieve the tension from the nervous strain of the school room, for no parent wishes her child under a nervous teacher; she should also have quiet for preparing her next day's work, which means that she should room alone; and all this necessarily results in a high board rate. In Plainfield, the teacher must dress well and must be immaculate in all her appointments, that she may not lose caste in the community. As she has no time to do her own dressmaking and

TWO TURNED DOWN

Common Council Refuses to to Confirm Appointments of Ellis and Fitch.

THE OTHERS GO THROUGH.

Resolution Increasing Salary of City Stenographer is Passed Over the Veto of Mayor Moy.

LeRoy J. Ellis, the appointee of Mayor G. W. V. Moy to membership on the Board of Health, and Rev. F. St., John Fitch, who was named by the city executive to succeed A. D. Ayers, as overseer of the poor, were not confirmed at the February meeting of the Common Council, last night, as exclusively predicted in this paper yesterday. The other recent appointments of the Mayor were confirmed without a dissenting vote.

There were nine members present, President Tolles and Councilman Dunn were absent. Mr. Montgomery moved that the appointment of Mr. Fitch be taken from the table, and after explaining that he believed Mr. Ayers to be a competent official, stated that he would vote against the Mayor's appointment. On the roll call Messrs. Buxton, Clay, Gloak, Montgomery, C. C. Randolph, Taylor and Wilson voted against confirmation, while Messrs. Holt and Mygatt supported the Mayor's appointment.

This action was followed by a motion by Councilman F. E. Mygatt that the Mayor's appointments of LeRoy J. Ellis, A. E. Force and Dr. W. H. Murray as members of the Board of Health be taken from the table. Dr. Murray, who succeeds Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and A. E. Force, who succeeds William C. Kinney were confirmed, but Mr. Ellis was turned down by a full vote after Mr. Mygatt explained why he opposed confirmation in the case of Mr. Ellis. He recalled the time when Mr. Ellis lived in Fanwood and his children were ill with a contagious disease. He said that according to information which came to him, Mr. Ellis defied the Board of Health of Fanwood, and he did not believe it to be wise to make him a member of the Plainfield Board of Health at this time. At the time of the illness at the home of Mr. Ellis, Christian Scientists were permitted to enter the home, against the orders of the Board of Health. One of Mr. Ellis' children died at that time.

Mr. Mygatt then moved that the Mayor's appointments of commissioners of assessment, Howard C. Tracy, Edward A. Laing and Harry B. MacDonald be taken from the table. This was done and all three were confirmed. Mr. Tracy succeeds Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, Mr. Laing succeeds Robert A. Meeker and Mr. MacDonald succeeds himself.

Mayor Moy also appointed Charles Sheldon, colored; John O'Brien and William Addis, Sr., as special policeman and they were confirmed in accordance with a resolution offered by Councilman C. C. Randolph. Mr. Sheldon, it is understood, will succeed Thomas O'Gorman as driver of the patrol wagon and be used as janitor at police headquarters. The other appointees are connected with the Board of Health.

Mr. Mygatt reported back the action of the Council in increasing George B. Wean's salary as city stenographer from $500 to $600, together with the Mayor's veto and moved that the original action of the Council be confirmed.

Turkey Supper a Great Success.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church held its regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon in the parlors Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, chairman, reported a net profit of $320 as the result of the recent turkey supper and the hearty thanks of the society was tendered to the chairman and her assistants for the magnificent success of the supper. The society voted to give the consistory the same amount as last year toward the support of the choir. A donation was also made for the purchase of a vacuum cleaner for the church and a donation was also made toward the new pulpit furniture recently purchased.

Ibsen, Spirit of His Plays.

A paper of exceptional interest on "Ibsen and the Spirit of His Works as Shown in His Plays," was presented by Mrs. Irving H. Brown at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held yesterday at the Hartridge School auditorium. Brief discussion followed. The paper was preceded by an amimated discussion on the subject, "Should Children Attend the Theatre?"

Ballington Booth Coming.

WAS HE KIDNAPPED

STRAYED FROM NEW YORK.

Picked Up at Watchung and Returned to His Anxious Father—His Story Not Believed.

Whether little Rocco Sicco is a monumental prevaricator or whether he really was kidnapped by a bold, bad man in New York city yesterday is a moot question, in any event he gave his father a bad couple of hours when he did not return from school at the usual hour yesterday.

The father believes the boy's story that he was kidnapped and brought here by a Sicilian and when he came here last night to recover his lost boy fell upon him and hugged him as if he had, like the prodical, been away spending his substance in riotous living.

Little Rocco, probably is a romancer. He went to school yesterday at the usual hour and instead of going home after the morning session he took the ferry boat from Liberty street and made his way to the home of a friend of his father's at Watchung avenue where he had spent his summer vacation last year.

When the boy failed to show up at his home, 178 Bleecker street, Rocco, Sr., telephoned New York Police headquarters and a search by them was immediately begun. In the meantime, Tony Cararo, of Watchung, had seen the boy and knowing that he ought not to be here at this time of the year got into communication with New York and Lieut. Deligi, of the Italian squad of sleuths, came here with the boy's father and the reunion followed. Lieut. Deligi scouts the idea of kidnapping, saying the boy was romancing.

The boy declared that while on his way home from school a smooth faced Italian inveigled him aboard the boat and afterwards doped him so that he did not remember anything until he came to near the ice houses at Watchung minus one shoe his overcoat and shirt. He could not explain how he had recovered these articles of apparel which he still wore, nor how the "dope" was administered. Anyway the father seemed to be satisfied at recovering his boy and went away delighted.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR HOPE MINSTRELS

According to their annual custom the young men of Hope chapel are planning to hold a minstrel show during the coming spring. A committee composed of Benjamin Evans, Harry Kartscher and James Penny, has been appointed to complete all arrangements and are now at work. The presentation will be made three nights during the latter part of April.

The Hope shows in the past have always been criterions and the coming production will maintain the standard. The first entertainment of this kind was given at the chapel in 1902 and attained such great success that it has since been the popular form of amateur attempt in Plainfield. The initial show and its successors have introduced John H. Cose, Alexander Muir and Benjamin Evans as interlocutors and such end men as Thomas M. Muir, M. D Sweeney, B. C. Firstbrook, George B. Cose, John H. Cose, W. J. Firstbrook, Fred Dixon, "Teddy" Shortman, Leonce Texier and several others. Former City Judge William N. Runyon always acted as coach and his musical ability and topical songs were big factors in the West End successes.

For this year's show the committee proproses to have many of the old time soloists and comedians. Ben Evans will be in the center and Tom Muir, William Firstbrook, George Rittenhouse and "Shaky" Clark are among the ends already signed. The chorus will be one of the regular singing kind, the specialties first class and altogether the Hope minstrels for 1911 will establish a new record.

Gun Bearer Fined $100.

Peter Nagel, of Dunellen, was fined $100 by Judge Lyons in New Brunswick, yesterday for carrying concealed weapons. He bought a revolver to shoot William G. Pasch, foreman of the Hall Printing Company, who had discharged him. With several others Pasch signed a petition asking the court to be lenient.

STEAL MAIL POUCH

Sack Containing Registered Matter Stolen From C. R. R. Station.

WAS BOUND FOR NEW YORK.

A registered mail pouch containing nine pieces of valuable mail matter disappeared under peculiar circumstances last night at about 9:30 o'clock from in front of the baggage room of the east bound station and nothing but the manilla jacket used for wrapping registered mail has since been seen. This was found rent apart in the lobby of the Elizabeth postoffice this morning. Postmaster Elias Bird is not able to state the actual value of the missing letters.

According to the police reports on the matter, Verona Marcellus, the colored mail carrier, who has the contract for delivering and receiving the mail pouches at the Railroad station, took two pouches of mail from the postoffice last night to catch the 9:27 train for New York and another for the 9:43 going west. He drove his wagon to the east bound station depositing the registered pouch in front of the baggage room door, corssing over to the west bound station to leave another for the 9:43 train. At the time, he declares Patrolman Baeder and several citizens were awaiting the arrival of the train for New York, but the patrolman declares he saw no pouch while waiting to see the departure of passengers.

This morning Postmaster Charlock, of Elizabeth, telephoned the finding of the registry jacket in the lobby of his postoffice and there the clue ends. Postmaster Bird believes that a search of the streets along the railroad or trolley tracks will reveal the stolen sack ripped open with none of its contents left. There is a theory that the thief finding other mail in the pouch than registered stuff had the nerve to go to Elizabeth office and deposit the letters there for their destination, reserving only the valuable letters for a more leisurely inspection.

Postmaster Bird has wired the occurance to Washington asking that inspectors be sent at once to be put on the case. They will probably arrive during the day. Several of those who were at the east bound station last night are known to the police and will be questioned during the day.

RESORT TO LAW TO EXTEND AVE

It being impossible for the Common Council to agree with the affected property owners in the matter of the proposed extension of Kensington avenue, Mr. Gloak, at the February meeting of the council, last night, offered a resolution authorizing the city to proceed to appoint commissioners to treat with the property owners. Elliot T. Barrows, W. A. Garrigues and J. F. McDonald were appointed as such commissioners and they will meet at once and report back to the council upon the completion of their work. Mr. Clay voted against the resolution and Mr. Holt, who was out of the room, was excused from voting.

According to previous plans discussed, with a view to undertaking the improvement of the city sewage beds and increasing their efficiency, Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the employment of Hering & Fuller, engineers, at an expense not to exceed $250, to secure advice as to the best way to improve and increase the efficiency of the beds. This does not include detailed plans.

Through a resolution offered by Mr. Gloak, Monday evening, March 6, was fixed as the time when the council will treat with property-owners relative to the opening up and laying out of Astor place

License Renewals.

Twelve applications for liquor licenses, the usual number, were presented to the Common Council at the February meeting, last night. There is only one new applicant and that is Peter Floersch, of Perth Amboy, for the hotel now occupied by Jerome W. Leary, but who is soon to vacate. The property is now under extensive repairs.

TO BUILD ADDITION

Fred Endress Will Greatly Increase Size of the Jackson Building.

WORK TO COMMENCE SOON.

Present Frame House on the Ground to Be Demolished—Was Erected in 1850 as Methodist Parsonage.

Plans have practically been completed by Fred Endress, owner of the Jackson building at Front street and Madison avenue, to add an extension to the rear of the structure that will greatly increase its size. The proposed addition will be forty feet in width on Madison avenue and extend back about fifty feet. It is to be four stories in height to conform with the present architecture and fitted with all the up to date appliances now installed in all first class buildings.

The first floor is to contain one store and an office while the upper part will comprise six modern apartments, two on each floor. The present alleyway leading to the rear will be kept open as the plans proposed by Architect William H. Clum call for a truss archway. Work on the addition will start in the spring and it will be the most important piece of construction work in the business part of the city during the coming year.

The site for the new building is now encumbered by a frame house occupied at present by Mrs. Louise Geier. This structure is to be torn down and it will remove one of the landmarks in that part of town. The structure was erected by the First M. E. church in 1850 as a parsonage, the first occupant being Rev. W. E. Perry. It continued to be used for this purpose until the completion of Rev. J. R. Bryant's pastorate in 1874. The property was purchased later by J. W. Jackson and was sold by him to Mr. Endress in connection with the deal for the Jackson building. Since the parsonage was erected, the Methodist church has been rebuilt, the edifice standing in 1850 having been destroyed by fire in 1869.

The property extends along Madison avenue to William Mills' tinning shop and when the addition is complete the new Jackson building will practically occupy three-fourths of the block between Front and Second streets.

COUNSEL FOR CITY MAY BE ENGAGED

The councilmanic finance committee was authorized, through a resolution offered by Councilman Mygatt last night, to engage legal counsel whenever it is deemed necessary. This action is doubtless because Mayor Moy has failed to appoint a corporation counsel and the Council wants authority for employing legal counsel whenever it is deemed necessary. It was said to be a question today whether the Council has power in such matters, inasmuch as the right to appoint a corporation counsel is vested in the Mayor.

The Board of Health is about to remove its offices from 149 North avenue to 104 East Front street, third floor of the City National Bank building. This fact became known last night, when a resolution was offered and adopted, authorizing the New York Telephone Company to transfer the telephone, No. 646, from 149 North avenue to 104 East Front street. The Board of Health has the right to make such change, but the purpose was not made clear last night. It is said that in the new quarters there is additional room, which is needed for the work of the board.

Minister's Lecture.

Rev. Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, former pastor of "Brimstone Corner" otherwise known as the Smithfield M. E. church, of Meadville, Pa., and now pastor of St. James M. E. church, Chicago, delivered his well known lecture, "The Original Idiot," in the First M. E. church last evening before an audience of large proportions considering the weather. The original idiot is one of the doctor's best lectures and he held the attention of those present for over two hours.

Junior Fair a Success.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. fair which opened Saturday night in Sebring's Hall, was continued last night with great success. There was a large attendance and liberal patronage was accorded the various attractions, while the dancing was a big feature. The prize-winning cats were also the object of much curiosity. The fair will continue the rest of the week.

FAVOR CONDEMNATION OF THE WATER PLANT

Investigation Commission in Exhaustive Report Decides That City's Interests Demands That Proceedings be Brought to Acquire Control of Supply —Public Hearing Friday Night, February 17.

In an exhaustive report, the Councilmanic water commission, making a final report to the Common Council summed up its findings by favoring the condemnation of the Plainfield-Union Water company's plant and equipment. The majority of the commission agreed that it seems unwise to install an independent plant until it is definitely established that the necessary rights and property of the water company cannot be acquired by purchase or condemnation and therefore report that proceedings should be instituted at once to acquire the plant and distributing system of the company together with its rights, powers and franchises as may be necessary to accomplish the purpose in view. In a dissenting opinion, Councilman Holt urges that test wells be sunk in the southern section of the city and that if a supply is found an independent municipal plant be built there. Friday night, February 17, was set as a date for a public hearing on the report.

The decision reached by the Councilmanic commission is directly opposed to the finding of the New York expert, James H. Fuertes, whose report, costing the city $5,000, was filed a short time ago. Mr. Fuertes was inclined towards the erection of an independent plant and opposed condemnation or purchase of the private company's system. "Should the result of condemnation proceedings prove that the cost of the desired result is within the city's means, the course is plain," says the commission. It is estimated roughly that the cost of acquiring by condemnation would be considerably less than one million dollars. It is common report, however, that the company of which Frank Bergen is president, values its business at $2,000,000. The scheme for a new plant is opposed on the ground, among others, that at the best it would only be a temporary makeshift and that the time is coming when Plainfield will have to have a plant of its own to insure a supply.

As a part of the condemnation plan it is proposed to prevent Plainfield water being shipped to the towns along the line of the Jersey Central, including Fanwood, Scotch Plains, Cranford, Westfield, Roselle and El-Mora, which are supplied at present from the Netherwood wells by the company. This would mean that all these towns may have to look elsewhere for water if Plainfield gets control of the Plainfield-Union company's plant. In the report it is stated that the sentiment here is strongly in favor of a municipal plant.

"At the present time there exists in Plainfield," says the majority report, "a strong sentiment against the making of a new contract with the water company and while your committee appreciates the weight of that sentiment, they believe that the question as to whether or not a new contract should be made, should not be decided on sentiment, but that the city should decline to enter into a new contract only if it be determined that the interests of the city would not be properly advanced and protected thereby or that the advantages of a new contract are outweighed by the advantages of municipal ownership of a water system."

The permanance of the contract is discussed at some length and the wisdom of one is seriously questioned, in fact, it is opposed. There follows a statement as to the company's relation with its other consumers, the assertion being made that the concern proposes to continue its contracts outside of the city. Reference is made to the action of the company in stopping the use of hose for garden and lawn and the fact is noted that Plainfield wants water for other purposes than drinking and for domestic and business uses. The enforceability of the contract obligations is dwelt upon and the statement is made that no contract can be drawn that will prevent ligitation.

These fundamental requirements are considered in turn:

"First, Plainfield should be continued to be supplied from the present source; second, the permanance of a supply should be guaranteed to Plainfield, to the exclusion, if necessary, of other communities; third, the rates should not be increased."

"It should be borne in mind," it is asserted, "that no money damages would be adequate" in case of a violation of the contract. As to the offer of the company to agree on arbitrators if the city chould consider its supply threatened, the report says that "no contract should be made whereby the opinion of Plainfield should be subordinated to that of a board of arbitration." If Plainfield should deem that its supply was being threatened it is argued that Plainfield should have the right to conserve the supply of its own right.

"Considerable doubt has always existed as to the right of the company to supply water from the Netherwood wells," it is stated, "to places other than those mentioned in the charter of the company." The conclusion is drawn that "the permanent preservation to the city and its inhabitants of a pure and wholesome water supply cannot be assured by the making of a new contract with the water company and we are thus brought to the second question, would it be better for the city to own and operate a water supply system?"

Agreeing with the conclusions reached in previous investigations, the commission says that "to make sure that Plainfield's water supply shall be permanently conserved for Plainfield, the city must control the supply" and that "it should now and for all time be secured." "Your committee," it is stated, "is unanimously of the opinion that it would be better for the city to own and operate a water supply system; that a new contract should not be made with the water company, but that immediate steps should be taken for the acquiring of a municipal supply." This leads up to to a discussion of the question as to the best source of supply.

The present source of supply is preferable to a surface supply is noted at the outset. Previous reports are quoted in basing the unanimous opinion that the present source is the only desirable one.

It is "exceedingly probable that there is water enough within the limits of the city of Plainfield to supply all the needs of the inhabitants thereof, for all time to come, provided that this supply can be conserved for the inhabitants of the territory beneath wich the water lies." Therefore, the underground local supply is agreed upon.

How the supply should be acquired is dwelt upon at length. This supply would seem to be assured, it is stated if the city can acquire at a reasonable cost not only the pumping station, wells and distributing system of the company but also its right to pump from any point which the Plainfield supply could be depleted. As the company is not willing to sell, condemnation proceedings must be instituted. This applies equally if any independent plant is to be installed. The condemnation of the private system, however, has its advantages inasmuch as it would forever end litigation.

The cost of the works and property is gone into at length. It is asserted that four years ago the value was placed at $420,000 by the company itself. There is some discussion as to the value of the franchise and to ascertain their rights of the company in the premises a judicial opinion is necessary. "The physical value can be ascertained; also the cost of operation and the income to be derived there from. Plainfield will not necessarily have to purchase if condemnation proceedings are carried out.

To this report are affixed the signitures of the majority of the special commission, namely, Messrs. Mygatt,

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks closed heavy after early strength yesterday

The contest of the will of General Thomas T. Eckert was begun.

A physician returning from Bermuda with a patient disappeared from the ship.

Governor Dix said at Albany that he had not changed his position regarding the wiping out of the present State Highway Commission.

Honduran forces are gathering near Pimiente, where a decisive battle may be fought if the insurgent forces refuse peace proposals.

Lord Landsdowne and A. J. Balfour denounced the reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States as a menace to imperial trade. Minister Carter, who is acting as American Ambassador to Turkey, forced the Foreign Minister to order a cessation of the boycott against American vessels.

The Republicans in the Assembly at Albany forced the Democrats to place themselves on record as being against the reciprocity agreement between this country and Canada.

The government filed a libel for the forfeiture of pictures imported by Oehme, and sold at auction recently for more than $50,000, alleging that they were undervalued in importation.

The Park Commissioner, of New York, announced that buildings that could be used in winter as well as summer would soon be put up in a number of the playgrounds in Manhattan.

Unionists confirmed the report that King Edward has given guarantees for the creation of peers, but expressed the belief that the Lords would force a conference between the houss.

House: The Hobson bill for the punishment of foreign spies was passed; an investigation was ordered into charges made by Mr. Macon that newspaper men had endeavored to intimidate him.

SENATE ON POPULAR VOTE FOR SENATORS.

A vote taken in the Senate at Washington, Friday, indicates that the advocates of the Constitutional amendment providing for the election of Senators by direct vote are in control and will succeed in passing this important legislation at this session. The test came in the afternoon on a motion by Senator Penrose that the Senate proceed to executive session. This was designed to head off an attempt on the part of the advocates of the resolution to bring it immediately before the Senate for consideration. Senator Penrose's motion was voted down, 40 to 36.

The controversy between the opponents of the direct election method and its supporters for the legislative right of way in the Senate began Thursday and was resumed at the first opportunity Friday. Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill authorizing the leasing of coal lands in Alaska. Senator Borah, of Idaho, moved to lay this motion on the table, but on a roll call the Idaho Senator was defeated by a 36 to 41 vote.

After this motion had been voted down, Senator Hale, of Maine, said it was evident that the Senate was in a mood to displace the Alaskan coal lands bill and make the resolution providing for the popular election of Senators the unfinished business. He asked Senator Borah for assurance that ample time would be given for speeches on the question.

Senator Borah acceeded, and then, at the suggestion of Mr. Hale, the roll call on Senator Borah's motion to take up the popular election question was dispensed with and the Senate by a viva voce vote displaced the Alaska bill and gave the popular election resolution the right of way.

DIVORCE IS WORSE THAN MORMONISM

"There is a social scourge more blighting and more destructive of family life than Mormonism. It is the fearfully increasing number of divorce mills throughout the United States. These mills, like the mills of the gods, are slowly, but surely, grinding to powder the domestic altars of the nation."

The above declaration was made by Cardinal Gibbons in his sermon delivered at the late mass in Baltimore, Sunday in the cathedral. The sermon was one of the strongest preached by the cardinal on social evils, and while he did not directly preach on the evil of divorce, he alluded to it in the most convincing manner.

The cardinal said in part:

"Husband and wife are separated on the most flimsy pretext. And as if the different States of the Union were not sufficiently accommodating in this respect, one State has the unenviable distinction of granting a bill of divorce for the mere asking of it, on the sole condition of a brief sojourn within her borders.

"I can conceive no scene more pathetic nor one that appeals more touchingly to our sympathies than the contemplation of a child emerging into years of discretion seeing its father and mother estranged from each other. Its little heart is yearning to love. It longs to embrace both parents, but finds that it cannot give its affection to the one without exciding the resentment or displeasure of the other.

"A lady prominent in social life once said to me in Newport: 'I do not recoginze any law, human or divine, that can deprive a husband or wife of the right to separate and to enter fresh espousals when they do not live in harmony together.'

"'You speak,' I replied, 'of your rights, your privileges, but you have not a word to say for your duties and obligations.' Ah, my brethren, if men and women had due consideration for their duties ad responsibilities their rights would take care of themselves. There can be no rights where there are no corresponding obligations. There are no rights against the law of God

"If Christianity is the highest type of civiliaztion—and who can deny it—then it is not true we are retrograding, instead of advancing on certain lines? We glory in our system of universal education in our enormous wealth and in our territorial expansion. But these advantages are not evidence of Christian progress. Two thousand years ago pagan Rome had all these temporal advantages. And yet while she was in the zenith of her material and intellectual splendor she was in a state of moral and political decay; in fact, she was lapsing into barbarism."

BASEBALL.

Manager "Win" Clark, of the Norfolk (Va.) team, tells the latest umpire story. It is on J. Ira Davis, better known as "Slats," who once upon a time played first base for the Giants.

Davis has been an umpire for ten years in various minor leagues. He has been noted for his eccentricities.

"'Slats' was umpiring a game for us at the latter part of the season," says Clark. "He didn't stand any too well with the fans and didn't seem to care. He began umpiring behind the bat and then worked behind the pitcher. The crowd kicked on a second-base decision, and he took his stand behind second base. Finally there was a dispute about a foul ball hit down the right field line, and Davis took his position in right field. Then the bleacherites went at him.

"'Why don't you stand where you can judge the balls and strikes, you stiff?' yelled one.

"'Well,' said Davis, 'you guys can umpire a game from the right field seats and never make a mistake. Why can't I umpire as well in right field?'

"The belacherites chased him after the game and Davis beat it through the back gates. He never came back to the Norfolk grounds."

GOLF.

Since the meeting of the Western Golf Association, which closely followed the annual session of the parent organization in Chicago, many followers of the game have been asking the question, why did the Western body extend its boundary line so as to include Canada? Some surprise has also been expressed that the aggressive element contented itself with only going so far as to embrace the Dominion. Commenting editorially on the subject, the current number of "Golf" says in part, as follows:

"The United States Golf Association must view these proceedings with somewhat ruffled feelings. It had gone far in its attempt to appease the Western men by holding the annual meeting in Chicago and selecting a Western man as president. Naturally, under these circumstances, it might have been expected that nothing would have been heard of the American Golf Association and that all would be peace and brotherly love. Both these qualities apeared to be at a discount. Enough was said and done to show that a determined fight is to be made to oust the United States Golf Association from its position as the ruling body in American golf. The supporters of the new order of things after the meeting, said that what they had done would last them till next year, and some patronizing remarks were heard to the effect that they would allow the United States Golf Association to retain its jurisdiction over the Eastern clubs Now it would be presumed that there must be some grave reasons why an independent and conflicting ruling body should be organized. Yet a careful reading of Western golf literature on the subject entirely fails to bring to light even a minor reason. To take a charitable view of the case, let it be assumed that the malcontents have only the good of the game at heart. But, even so, they must show that the game as supervised by the United States Golf Association is in an unhealthy, unsatisfactory and declining condition. But every one except a golf politician knows that nothing of the sort has occurred and that golf in this country was never on a higher plane or a more solid basis than it is today. It is perfectly safe to assert that at least 98 per cent. of our golfers are satisfied with things as they are and will not look willingly upon a proposition to displace a body which has served them well merely to hand over affairs to seekers of place and power. If they have any other motive why not tell what it is?"

washing, this entails large expense.

"That she may be fresh and vigorous in mind and body, and interest and stimulate her pupils, she must spend her vacation in recreation, under conditions that will give her a change of scene and will bring her in contact with new scenes and new people. She must see new places and get new ideas.

"As Plainfield demands the best teachers, wherever they may be found, many of our teachers come from a distance, which involves much expense for car fares.

"All these things which our high standard demands, combined with the high cost here, leave the teachers a very small balance at the end of the year; much less than most people know.

"To get some light as to this balance, 55 grade teachers were asked how much money they had left from the year's salary on returning to work in September. Out of the 55, only 26 had anything left from their year's wages, while 17 not only saved nothing, but ran behind. Those receiving the maximum salary averaged a saving of $34; those receiving $700 to $800 averaged $12; but those receiving $600 to $700 averaged a deficit of $4, and those receiving $550 averaged a loss of $12 for the year. On teacher reports a balance of $175, but she lived at home during the summer and paid no board. Others are helped by their parents in the matter of clothing.

"The price for board and lodging, especially for teachers, has largely increased since the salary schedule was revised, and many desirable homes will not take teachers in at the prices they can afford to pay. In very many cases, during the past year, the increase in board and lodging has eaten up the increase in salary that the teacher has received according to the schedule.

"While some teachers have made a saving, the results as a whole seem to show that if our teachers meet the conditions that we expect, the present salary schedule gives them no assurance for the future, if they depend on themselves.

"HELEN TRACY VOORHEES,

The petition was listened to with much interest by the Board of Education and was referred to the committee on teachers for careful consideration to report at the March meeting.

Supt. Maxson, when asked by the Board for his opinion regarding it, said that there was certainly great need of relief for the teachers, that the cost of living in Plainfield had risen so much since the last revision of the salaries, that the teachers were practically no better off than they were ten years ago. He had been appalled at the result of the investigation of the Parent-Teacher Association showing how little was lef of the teachers' salaries at the end of the year. We have one of the finest corps of teachers that there is in the State of New Jersey or anywhere, refined, cultured women, devoted to their work, and the fact that half of them have nothing left at the end of the year's service, while some of the younger ones actually have to depend on their parents for partial support,is deplorable. A teacher should have salary sufficient for her to live as Plainfield conditions require and also to save a little each year for the future rainy day, for the teacher is especially subject to a physical breakdown involving heavy doctor's bills and hospital expenses.

Superintendent Maxson read a report concerning the unvaccinated children in the public schools showing that 23 per cent. were still unvaccinated. The percentages in the various schools which had not yet submitted to the operation were: High School, 16 per cent.: Stillman, 11 per cent.: Whittier, 12 per cent.: Washington, 20 per cent.; Franklin, 18 per cent: Irving, 27 per cent.; Jefferson, 27 per cent.; Bryant, 33 per cent.; Lincoln, 43 per cent.

A second notice will be sent to the parents of these children notifying them that they must have their children vaccinated at once.

Abandoned the Horse.

Stanley Stroke, of the West End, is caring for a horse which was abandoned cruelly on Sunday afternoon by an unknown person apparently in a dying condition. With the horse, which was found at the old Dunellen dump at Compton avenue, was a delivery wagon which is in good condition. Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen, the special agent of the S. P. C. A. is investigating the case.

Lost Overcoat on Train.

A valuable Winton overcoat was stolen from Carlos C. Gallup, of 541 West Front street, last evening and it is believed the garment was taken by a man who got off at the Netherwood station. Mr. Gallup was on his way home on the 6:20 train and did not miss his overcoat until his arrival here. A fellow passenger informed Mr. Gallup that he thought he saw a man get off at Netherwood with two coats over his arm.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE

Aside from the business of greater importance taken up at the February meeting of the Common Council, last night, there were numerous petitions received and disposed of. Residents of Denmark road and Fern avenue asked for a fire hydrant and fire-alarm box which was referred to the fire committee. William A. Schorb sought an auctioneer's license, which the license committee moved be granted after the fee is paid.

A. L. VanCuddy, of 330 Liberty street, petitioned for permission to erect a barber pole in front of his shop. This was referred as was also a petition from Charles A. Peterson and others for three lights on Terrill road near East Second street.

Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, in a letter, thanked the Council for the beautiful testimonial and resolution presented to her in connection with the death of her husband, the late corporation counsel. This was filed.

The Board of Education informed the council that L. N. Lovell and W. S. Tyler were on January 3, appointed members of the board of school estimate.

Residents of Cameron and Lenox avenues and Laramie road petitioned to have those streets accepted by the city, improved, also that a fire-alarm box be placed on Cameron avenue. These were referred to the proper committees. The deeds from Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Elliott transferring property at Fourth street and Monroe avenue to the city, which will be used for sewer purposes, were filed.

The International Distributors' Corporation, owners of the Chelsea Park section, petitioned to install sewers, the work to be done under the direction of the street department. This was referred. A. L. C. Marsh, representing A. C. Vail, was granted a petition to remove a house and barn from 221 West Eighth street to 301-311 West Eighth street, Mr. Vail furnishing the necessary bond protecting the city against damage of any kind. Similar action was taken regarding the petition of J. C. Anderson, who wants to remove a building from 327 Berckman street to 727 St. Mary avenue. A petition for three lights on Randolph road and vicinity was referred.

H. F. Rohback, of Trenton, who has been furnishing the city two copies of every bill introduced in the Legislature, informed the committee that he could not do that work this year for the old price, $25 a year. He desired $40, but as arrangements have been made with the bill clerk at Trenton for this service at $25, Mr. Rohbach's communication was filed.

H. E. Parker, secretary of the Playground Commission, in a letter asked the Council when the terms of the commissioners expire; also whether the Stillman field had been formally accepted. This was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances.

The petition of the Public Service Corporation for permission to close the other end of Church street, was referred. Sometime ago one end was closed and the company is now desirous of closing up this thoroughfare entirely to protect its property interests there.

In a communication, Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen, agent for the S. P. C. A., requested the council to establish a suitable dog pound and suggested the city farm as a desirable place for it. She asked that a committee be appointed to confer with her in the matter. The petition was referred to the committee on public affairs.

The Shade Tree commission reported that it would require a general appropriation of $2,420 and $300 for the care of the city park during the coming year.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported the granting of twelve sewer permits last month, and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of nineteen permits during the same period. District court clerk H. G. Adams, reported receipts of $139.29 for the past month and expenditures of $41.89, leaving a balance of $97.40.

In accordance with resolutions offered by Mr. Mygatt and adopted, $5,000 was transferred from the general fund to the fire fund and a like amount from the same fund put to the credit of the poor fund and $1,000 appropriated for sewer extension work. By the same method, the tax collector was authorized to cancel the snow and ice charge against the Board of Education, amounting to $152.

Other resolutions by the same member authorized the tax collector to return to J. W. Fenton $1.65 paid in error and to return $1 poll tax, paid twice by Mr. Nelson.

Mr. Mygatt stated that on January 23, the Third National Bank, of Jersey City, mailed coupon bonds dated July 1, 1910 and 1911, due in 1916, but they had failed to reach the city treasurer, evidently being lost in the mail. Mr. Mygatt's resolution stopping payment and providing that the bank shall furnish an indemnity bond in the sum of $100 to protect the city was adopted.

Sealed proposals for crushed stone, culverts, etc., were called for in a resolution offered by Mr. Gloak. They will be received March 6. Mr. Gloak also offered maps and profiles for the establishment of the grade and curb line on East Seventh street, Central and Leland avenues and West Fifth and Sixth streets. An ordinance covering this matter was passed on first and second readings and ordered advertised and a public hearing will be granted on March 6.

Mr. Taylor, chairman of the fire and building committee, offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling for bids for furnishing coal, hay, straw and oats for the fire department, the same to be received March 6.

Charles C. Randolph reported back the petition of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association asking for an increase in salary, and stated that the police board does not recommend an increase.

On motion of Mr. Clay an electric light was ordered placed on Spooner avenue, between West Seventh and Eighth street. An ordinance providing for the laying out and opening up of West Fifth and Sixth streets from Monroe avenue to Clinton avenue was offered by Mr. Gloak, passed on two readings and March 6 was fixed as the time for a public hearing.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Benjamin Elliott, Jr., while skating on the Feltville back pond yesterday, had a narrow escape from drowning. Ben skated too near the dam and broke through, taking an involuntary bath, at a spot where the water is over 15 feet deep. Prompt action on the part of Ben's companions, who pressed into service a handy plank, rescued him from his perilous position.

MORE ORDINANCES

Several ordinances, some new and others amendments, were offered by Councilman Holt at the February meeting of the Council, last night. One ordinance amended, abolished the office of veterinary surgeon in the fire department. Dr. L. S. Pocock held this position at an annual salary of $165. The ordinance was passed on two readings and ordered advertised.

Mr. Holt again brought up the ordinance providing for more strict supervision of the operation of the street railway here. This ordinance was presented last year, but did not pass for some reason. Last night the ordinance was read for information and copies will be sent to each member. It is Mr. Holt's intention to press its final adoption at another date. It provides among other things that the street commissioner shall inspect the local trolley equipment at least once every three months; also imposes fines for violations of the ordinance, such as flat wheels, defective motors, etc.

Mr. Holt also introduced the safe and sane Fourth of July ordinance, which was read for information. Copies will be sent to the members and later Mr. Holt will move its adoption. He explained that he desired to bring this matter up early so that local fireworks' dealers would have plenty of notice. The ordinance is identical with the one presented last year and prohibits the sale of all fireworks, except firecrackers two and a half inches in length and torpedoes three-quarters of an inch in size.

Another amendment to an ordinance was offered by Mr. Holt, providing that in the case of members of the police department being ill they shall be given full pay the first two weeks off, half pay for the next two weeks, but that further remuneration must be made through a resolution of the Council. This amendment was passed on two readings and ordered advertised.

When the Council adjourned last night, it was decided to meet again on Wednesday, February 15, at which time the new building code will be read for general information. It is the purpose of the Council to act on this code sometime in March. It will require one whole evening to read the lengthy document.

SNEEZED—NOW THE CITY GOVERNMENT IS TIED UP.

A sneeze has tied up the city government, and interferred with the up-keep of the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal at Jersey City. The sneezer is Edward Burt, president of the New Brunswick Council, and general custodian of the terminal.

He leaned against a chair for support when he felt the sneeze coming. When it came the chair gave way, and Mr. Burt broke a rib. He is laid up as the result, the council, which, with him, has a Democratic majority of one, is dealocked by a vote of six to six, and when it meets is not likely to do much more than pass resolutions of condolence.

THE WISE JUDGE

By JOHN JOYCE

In 1863 I was with the cavalry in the Army of the Potomac. I confess I never made a good soldier. I was too fond of an irregular life. I could never be disciplined. When the command was asleep I would be off on some adventure. There was a southern girl south of us, her home being most of the time within the southern lines, who captivated my youthful fancy, and I was constantly absent without leave visiting her.

On one occasion I would surely have been captured by some Confederates who called at the house had she not put me upstairs in one of the bedrooms. There I found some citizen's clothing and, putting it on, went down and mingled with the soldiers.

I gained some very important information from them about the enemy's movements, for I passed myself off for a redhot Confederate. They belonged to Jubal Early's command and told me that they were the advance of his force, intending to sweep around in our rear.

As soon as they had gone I rode away to my general and told him what I had heard. He sent out orders with a view to defeat their purpose, then said to me:

"I've been wondering for some time where I could get a man like you. I want some one for secret service work. I can get plenty of hired spies, but I dare not trust them. They will take my money to bring me information and take the Confederates' money to bring them information. But from what you have told me you're just the man for secret service work. Most men have a dread of being caught in citizen's clothes, with the penalty of swinging. You don't seem to mind the risk at all. Now, I wish you to go down on our left and find out what the enemy is about down there. I have reports that there is no force in that region at all, and I have reports that the enemy is concentrating there. Can't you go at once?"

"Yes, general," I said. "Shall I report your orders to my captain?"

"You were absent without leave on this little expedition, weren't you?"

"Yes, general."

"Well, you can continue absent without leave. If you report to your captain the men will know that something is up in your case and talk it over. I don't like any talk at all about secret service work. Besides, if you do well I shall make a regular secret service man of you, attaching you to these headquarters."

"Won't my comrades think I have deserted? I've always been in trouble with my caiptain—my own fault, of course, because, being of a roving disposition, I always objected to regular duties."

"That's just what I wish them to think of you. It will keep them from thinking anything else."

"But, general, if I should come back into our lines and not find you to vouch for me"—

"I'll fix that."

He sat at a table and scratched off an order attaching me to his headquarters and handed it to me.

"There," he said, "do what you like with that. But don't get caught with it on you in the enemy's lines or it will hang you."

I took the paper, put it in the lining of my hat and, with a godspeed from my commander, rode away into the darkness.

The first thing for me to do was to get citizen's clothes. I could do this and see my girl again at the same time. So I rode straight to the house where she lived with her mother, a widow, and a family of younger children. I awakened the household and told the girl that I wanted the clothing I had found upstairs and which she had told me belonged to a brother of her mother's who lived with them, but who was now in General Jackson's army. Both mother and daughter were rebels and wouldn't have given me the clothes had I not told them a cock and bull story about Confederates being after me. As soon as I was rigged out as a Virginia farmer, leaving my horse in their barn and my uniform in the garret of the house, I marched away on foot in a southwesterly direction toward the region I was to look into.

I had no sooner reached it than I saw indications of an important move on the part of the Confederates. The location was swarming with troops. My object was to return at once and report the fact to the general, but there were several things about me to lead them to suspect me. I couldn't talk like a southerner, didn't look or act like a southerner and told contradictory stories about my antecedents. Seeing that they were uncertain about me, I told them that what I most wished for was to fight for Dixie. So they enlisted me, and I thought I was all right. I was so fearful of being accused of desertion on my return that I kept the general's order concealed under the thin leather strip inside and over the sole of my boot, but as soon as I was suspected I hid it under a stone, marking the spot carefully.

I found myself marching with the very force I had come to spy upon against the very general who had sent me. There was a series of battles, with much slaughter on both sides. I watched for a favorable opportunity to regain my own comrades, but none occurred. The truth is my captain was watching me. At last the whole brigade to which I belonged was surrounded and captured.

I realized that I was in a precarious situation. All depended upon my communicating with the general who had sent me on my mission. What was my horror to learn that he had been killed in one of the recent battles.

All now depended on my not being recognized, but this hope failed me, for an enlisted man who knew me was one of our guard. He saw me and informed my captain. The captain came to see me, took me away from the Confederates and preferred charges against me for desertion and fighting against the United States.

The battles were ended for the time being, and a court martial to try me was speedily convened. There could be no greater offense in an army than the double one of desertion and being captured with arms in one's hands on the other side. I told my story, and, as I expected, it was not believed. My captain's testimony against me was very damaging. I spoke of the general's written order, which I had hidden within the enemy's lines, but it was regarded as a clumsy device. I was convicted and sentenced to be shot. I petitioned for a stay of execution of the sentence till I could have opportunity to secure the hidden order, but there had been a great deal of desertion, and I and several others were to be made summary examples for the army.

Whenever I hear people talking about "justice" and the difficulty of punishing crime on account of too much sentimentalism it makes me shudder. I was to be shot for serving my country only too well. And now at the end of half a century I look back with reverence to two people (one of whom was instrumental in saving me and the other saved me) as representatives of that class who would govern by kindliness and mercy rather than on principle. These two were my mother and President Lincoln, himself a martyr struck down by one who madly looked upon him as a tyrant.

Upon inquiry I learned that President Lincoln alone possessed the pardoning power, but that the generals who wished to maintain discipline in the army were doing all they could to prevent his exercising this prerogative in the cases of deserters. So I did not think it worth while to make an application. I wrote my mother of my situation, assuring her of my innocence, but telling her that I had little hope that I would escape a disgraceful death.

The poor old lady was advised by friends of President Lincoln's kind heart, and she left her quiet home to go to Washington to try to force her way, as she was told she would have to do, through officials and doorkeepers, with the hope that she might secure justice—real justice—from the head of the nation.

When she reached the capital she knew not what to do, so she followed a simple method that suggested itself to her. She wrote the president that she had come to Washington to ask him to see justice done to her soldier son, that his life might be spared for his country and for her. In a homely way she wrote the story, embodying the main points that I have given and asking that my execution might be deferred till I could secure the hidden order. When she had finished her letter, not doubting in her innocence that she would be accorded an interview with the president, she mailed it.

Within forty-eight hours a note came from one of the president's private secretaries stating that Mr. Lincoln would see her the next day at 12 noon. Alternating between hope and despair, she went to the White House at the appointed hour. When she was ushered into the president's private room he was sitting at a desk, while his two little boys were climbing all over him. My mother said afterward that they reminded her of the Lilliputians climbing over Gulliver. Mr. Lincoln rose—he was so tall that she thought he would never cease rising—and, taking her by the hand, led her to a seat.

"I have called for the papers in the case of your son," he said, "and had them examined and a report made to me. I have issued an order for a stay of execution until such time as a search can be made of the location where he hid his order. Meanwhile he is to be returned to duty."

My mother looked upon the result as still dependent upon finding evidence that would prove me innocent. But she was soon informed that it was equivalent to dropping the case against me. I was far more delighted with it than I would have been with a pardon. The moment I heard it I made a vow that I would go through fire and smoke to secure that order and would send it to the wisest of human judges, who had given me my life and an opportunity to prove his wisdom.

On being returned to duty I applied to my captain for permission to go on a hunt for my evidence. He told me to put my request in writing and he would forward it. I did so, and my petition came back with the coveted permission indorsed on it. Disguising myself, I again risked my life by going among Confederates and made straight for the stone under which I had hidden my paper. I found it, though dampened and blurred, still legible. Then I made my way safely back to camp.

From having been considered a deserter I was suddenly elevated to the position of a very daring fellow. I sent my order to President Lincoln and received a reply in his own handwriting.

What became of the southern girl? Oh, she's my old woman!

THE UMPIRE WAS A SPORT.

And He Showed the Kickers That It Was Not Too Dark to Finish the Game.

Speaking of the doings of the veteran umpires, an old timer claims that Honest John Kelly is entitled to the record for freak doings among the indicator handlers. Back in the American association days, in a game played on the old Union grounds in Allegheny, Galvin was pitching for Pittsburg against Casey of the Athletics. Kelly was the umpire. In the ninth inning, with the score 5 to 0 in favor of the Athletics, the first man up for Pittsburg made a home run hit to center, and the visiting team at once set up claim that it was too dark to play.

The center fielder came all the way in and pretended that he could not see the ball in the gathering darkness. "Here," said Kelly; "give me a glove," and with that he started for center field. "I'll see how dark it is out there," he said. "You, Casey and Galvin, bat me out a few." Players and spectators gasped, but Kelly made good his bluff. He went out to deep center and, with the smoke of the mills lying low about him, actually caught ten or fifteen long line drives and high flies from the bats of the two pitchers without missing one.

Then the umpire came in and, taking off his glove, said: "Play ball. If I can see 'em out there, you fellows can." The game was resumed, and the Pittsburgs won in a great batting rally by 6 to 5.—New York World.

WET AND DRY MOONS.

There is an old superstition which dies hard, and that is that the position of the horns of the new moon tells what the weather will be. If the horns of the crescent are on the same level it will hold water, and hence it is a dry moon, but if it is tipped up then the water will run out, and it is a wet moon.

One thing has helped keep this belief alive. The moon is "dry" in the part of the spring that is usually fair, while it is "wet" during the season of autumn rains.

If this were a sure sign of the weather we could have our predictions published many years in advance, for an astronomer can predict the exact position of the moon at any time in the future.

The cause for the different positions of the crescent is simple. The moon is south of the sun in the autumn and north of it in spring. The crescent is found by the light of the sun falling on the moon, and the horns are naturally in a line perpendicular to the direction of the sun from the moon. That is all there is to this old superstition.—Boston Herald.

Confucius.

Confucius regarded his own life as a failure. He spoke against ambition, yet he coveted high office, nothing less than that of political adviser to some great ruler. A man of the highest lineage in China, he was yet poor and early supported himself by teaching. His pupils showed him an extraordinary devotion. The pick of the young men in his native state of Lu sat at his feet, and it was they who transmitted his tremendous influence. But Confucius saw not his immortal success, but his temporal failure. Only for a few brief years did circumstances permit him to exercise his practical genius for government. He became first a magistrate, then chief criminal judge in Lu, and, to quote Professor Legge, "crime ceased." Confucius, however, became dissatisfied with the ruler whom he served, a weak man who neglected his duty and gave himself up more and more to dissipation, so he resigned his post and banished himself.—London Spectator.

Don't Give Up.

Among some skaters was a boy so small and so evidently a beginner that his frequent mishaps awakened the pity of a tender hearted if not wise spectator.

"Why, sonny, you are getting all bumped up," she said. "I wouldn't stay on the ice and keep falling down so; I'd just come off and watch the others."

The tears of the last downfall were still rolling over the rosy cheeks, but the child looked from his adviser to the shining steel on his feet and answered, half indignantly:

"I didn't get some new skates to give up with; I got 'em to learn how with."

Life's hard tasks are never sent for us "to give up with;" they are always intended to awaken strength, skill and courage in learning how to master them.—Selected.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

"If Lize weren't so far away she'd come and nurse me. I'm pretty sick."

Swenson came back to say that probably Redfield and the doctor would reach the station by noon, and thereafter, for the reason that Cavanagh expected their coming, the hours dragged woefully. It was after 1 o'clock before Swenson announced that two teams were coming with three men and two women in them. "They'll be here in half an hour."

The ranger's heart leaped. Two women! Could one of them be Lee Virginia? What folly—what sweet, desperate folly! And the other—she could not be Lize, for Lize was too feeble to ride so far. "Stop them on the other side of the bridge," he commanded. "Don't let them cross the creek on any pretext."

As he stood in the door the flutter of a handkerchief, the waving of a hand, made his pulse glow and his eyes grow dim. It was Virginia!

Lize did not flutter a kerchief or wave a hand, but when Swenson stopped the carriage at the bridge she said: "No, you don't! I'm going across. I'm going to see Ross, and if he needs help I'm going to roll up my sleeves and take hold."

Cavanagh saw her advancing, and as she came near enough for his voice to reach her he called out: "Don't come any closer! Stop, I tell you!" His voice was stern. "You must not come a step nearer. Go back across the dead line and stay there. No one but the doctor shall enter this door. Now, that's final."

"I want to help!" she protested.

"I know you do, but I won't have it. This quarantine is real, and it goes!"

"But suppose you yourself get sick?"

"We'll cross that bridge when we get to it. I'm all right so far, and I'll call for help when I need it."

His tone was imperative, and she obeyed, grumbling about his youth and the value of his life to the service.

"That's all very nice," he replied, "but I'm in it, and I don't intend to expose you or any one else to the contagion."

"I've had it once," she asserted.

He looked at her and smiled in recognition of her subterfuge.

"No matter; you're ailing and might take it again, so toddle back. It's mighty good of you and of Lee to come, but there isn't a thing you can do, and here's the doctor," he added as he recognized the young student who passed for a physician in the Fork. He was a beardless youth of small experience and no great courage, and as he approached with hesitant feet he asked:

"Are you sure it's smallpox?"

Cavanagh smiled. "The indications are all that way. That last importation of Basques brought it probably from the steerage of the ship. I'm told they've had several cases over in the basin."

"Have you been vaccinated?"

"Yes, when I was in the army."

"Then you're all right."

"I hope so."

There was a certain comic relief in this long distance diagnosing of a "case" by a boy, and yet the tragic fact beneath it all was that Wetherford was dying, a broken and dishonored husband and father, and that his identity must be concealed from his wife and daughter, who were much more deeply concerned over the ranger than over the desperate condition of his patient. "And this must continue to be so," Cavanagh decided. And as he stood there looking toward the girl's fair figure on the bridge he came to the final, fixed determination never to speak one word or make a sign that might lead to the dying man's identification. "Of what use is it?" he asked himself. "Why should even Lize be made to suffer? Wetherford's poor misspent life is already over for her, and for Lee he is only a dim memory."

Redfield came near enough to see that the ranger's face, though tired, showed no sign of illness and was relieved. "Who is this old herder?" he asked. "Hasn't he any relatives in the country?"

"He came from Texas, so he said. You're not coming in?" he broke off to say to the young physician, whom Lize had shamed into returning to the cabin.

"I suppose I'll have to," he protested weakly.

"I don't see the need of it. The whole place reeks of the poison, and you might carry it away with you. Unless you insist on coming in and are sure you can prevent further contagion I shall oppose your entrance. You are in the company of others. I must consider their welfare."

The young fellow was relieved. "Well, so long as we know what it is I can prescribe just as well right here," he said and gave directions for the treatment, which the ranger agreed to carry out.

"I tried to bring a nurse," explained Redfield, "but I couldn't find anybody but old Lize who would come."

"I don't blame them," said Ross. "It isn't a nice job, even when you've got all the conveniences."

His eyes as he spoke were on the figure of Lee, who still stood on the bridge, awed and worshipful, barred of approach by Lize. "She shall not know," he silently vowed. "Why put her through useless suffering and shame? Edward Wetherford's disordered life is near its end. To betray him to his wife and daughter would be but the reopening of an old wound."

He was stirred to the center of his heart by the coming of Lee Virginia, so sweet and brave and trustful. His stern mood melted as he watched her there waiting, with her face turned toward him, longing to help. "She would have come alone if necessary," he declared, with a fuller revelation of the self sacrificing depth of her love, "and she would come to my side this moment if I called her."

He went back to his repulsive service sustained and soothed by the little camp of faithful friends on the other side of the stream.

During one of his clearest moments Wetherford repeated his wish to die a stranger. "I'm going out like the old time west, a rag of what I once was. Don't let them know. Put no name over me. Just say, 'An old cowpuncher lies here.'"

Cavanagh's attempt to change his hopeless tone proved unavailing. Enfeebled by his hardships and his prison life, he had little reserve force upon which to draw in fighting such an enemy. He sank soon after this little speech into a coma which continued to hold him in its unbroken grasp as night fell.

Meantime, seeing no chance of aiding the ranger, Redfield and the forester prepared to return, but Lee, reenforced by her mother, refused to accompany them. "I shall stay here," she said, "till he is safely out of it—till I know that he is beyond all danger."

Redfield did not urge her to return as vigorously as Dalton expected him to do, but when he understood the girl's desire to be near her lover he took off his hat and bowed to her. "You are entirely in the right," he said. "Here is where you belong."

Redfield honored Lize for her sympathetic support of her daughter's resolution and expressed his belief that Ross would escape the plague. "I feel that his splendid vigor, combined with the mountain air, will carry him through, even if he should prove not to be immune. I shall run up again day after tomorrow. I shall be very anxious. What a nuisance that the telephone line is not extended to this point. Ross has been insisting on its value for months."

Lee saw the doctor go with some dismay. Young as he was, he was at least a reed to cling to in case the grisly terror seized upon the ranger. "Mr. Redfield, can't you send a real doctor? It seems so horrible to be left here without instructions."

The forester, before going, again besought Cavanagh not to abandon his work in the forestry service and intimated that at the proper time advancement would be offered him. "The whole policy is but beginning," said he, "and a practical ranger with your experience and education will prove of greatest value."

To this Ross made reply: "At the moment I feel that no promise of advancement could keep me in this country of grafters, poachers and assassins. I'm weary of it and all it stands for. However, if I could aid in extending the supervision of the public ranges and in stopping forever this murder and burning that go on outside the forestry domain I might remain in the west."

Taken by surprise, he stammered, "I might, but am I the man?"

"You are. Your experience fits you for a position where the fight is hot. The Washakie forest is even more a bone of contention than this. We have laid out the lines of division between the sheep and the cows, and it will take a man to enforce our regulations. You will have the support of the best citizens. They will all rally, with you as leader, and so end the warfare there."

"It can never end till Uncle Sam puts rangers over every section of public lands and lays out the grazing lines as we have done in this forest," retorted Cavanagh.

"I know, but to get that requires a revolution in the whole order of things." Then his fine young face lighted up. "But we'll get it. Public sentiment is coming our way. The old order is already so eaten away that only its shell remains."

"It may be. If these assassins are punished I shall feel hopeful of the change."

"I shall recommend you for the supervisorship of the Washakie forest," concluded Dalton decisively. "And so goodby and good luck."

England, his blood relatives, even the Redfields, seemed very remote to the ranger as he stood in his door that night and watched the sparkle of Swenson's campfire through the trees. With the realization that there waited a brave girl of the type that loves single heartedly, ready to sacrifice everything to the welfare of her idealized subject, he felt unworthy, selfish, vain.

"If I should fall sick she would insist on nursing me. For her sake I must give Swenson the most rigid orders not to allow her, no matter what happens, to approach. I will not have her touched by this thing."

Beside the blaze Lee and her mother sat for the most part in silence, with nothing to do but to wait the issue of the struggle going on in the cabin, so near and yet so inaccessible to their will. It was as if a magic wall, crystal clear, yet impenetrable, shut them away from the man whose quiet heroism was the subject of their constant thought.

It was marvelous, as the dusk fell and the air nipped keen, to see how Lize Wetherford renewed her youth. The excitement seemed to have given her a fresh hold on life. She was wearied, but by no means weakened, by her ride and ate heartily of the rude fare which Swenson set before her. "This is what I needed," she exultantly said—"the open air and these trout. I feel ten years younger already. Many's the night I've camped on the range with your father with nothing but a purp tent to cover us both and the wolves howling round us. I'd feel pretty fairly gay if it wasn't for Ross over there in that cabin playing nurse and cook all by his lonesomeness."

Lee expressed a deep satisfaction from the fact of their nearness. "If he is ill we can help him," she reiterated.

There was a touch of frost in the air as they went to their beds, and, though she shivered, Lize was undismayed. "There's nothing the matter with my heart," she exulted. "I don't believe there was anything really serious the matter with me, anyway. I reckon I was just naturally grouchy and worried over you and Ross."

CHAPTER XX.

WITH THE AID OF THE PRESS.

LEE VIRGINIA was now living a romance stranger and more startling than any she had ever read. In imagination she was able to look back and down upon the Fork as if she had been carried into another world—a world that was at once primeval, yet peaceful; a world of dreaming trees, singing streams and silent peaks; a realm in which law and order reigned, maintained by one determined young man whose power was derived from the president himself. She felt safe—entirely safe—for just across the roaring mountain torrent the two intrepid guardians of the forest were encamped. One of them, it is true, came of Swedish parentage, and the other was a native of England, but they were both American in the high sense of being loyal to the federal will, and she trusted them more unquestioningly than any other men in all that west save only Redfield. She had no doubt there were others equally loyal, equally to be trusted, but she did not know them.

She rose to a complete understanding of Cavanagh's love for "the high country" and his enthusiasm for the cause, a cause which was able to bring together the student from Yale and the graduates of Bergen and of Oxford and make them comrades in preserving the trees and streams of the mountain states against the encroachments of some of their own citizens, who were openly, shortsightedly and cynically bent upon destruction, spoliation and misuse.

She had listened to the talk of the forester and the supervisor, and she had learned from them that Cavanagh was sure of swift advancement now that he had shown his courage and his skill, and the thought that he might leave the state to take charge of another forest brought her some uneasiness, for she and Lize had planned to go to Sulphur City. She had consented to this because it still left to her the possibility of occasionally seeing or hearing from Cavanagh. But the thought that he might go away altogether took some of the music out of the sound of the stream and made the future vaguely sad.

For the next two days Cavanagh slept but little, for his patient grew steadily worse. As the flame of his fever mounted, Wetherford pleaded for air. The ranger threw open the doors, admitting freely the cool, sweet mountain wind. "He might as well die of a draft as smother," was his thought, and by the use of cold cloths he tried to allay the itching and the pain.

With the coming of the third night Wetherford was unconscious and unrecognizable to any one who had known him in the days of "the free range." He was going as the wild west was going, discredited, ulcerated, poisoned, incapable of rebirth, yet carrying something fine to his grave. He had acted the part of a brave man; that shall be said of him. He had gone to the rescue of the poor Basque instinctively, with the same reckless disregard of consequences to himself which marked his character when as a cow boss on the range he had set aside the most difficult tasks for his own rope or gun. His regard for the ranger into whose care he was now about to commit his wife and daughter persisted in spite of his suffering. In him was his hope, his stay. Once again, in a lucid moment, he reverted to the promise which he had drawn from Cavanagh.

"If I go you must take care—of my girl—take care of Lize too. Promise me that. Do you promise?" he insisted.

"I promise—on honor," Ross repeated, and, with a faint pressure of his hand (so slender and weak), Wetherford sank away into the drowse which deepened hour by hour, broken now and then by convulsions, which wrung the stern heart of the ranger till his hands trembled for pity.

The day was well advanced when the sound of rattling pebbles on the hill back of his cabin drew his attention, and a few moments later a man on a weary horse rode up to his door and dropped heavily from the saddle. He was a small, dark individual, with spectacles, plainly of the city.

"Beware! Smallpox!" called Ross as his visitor drew near the door.

The newcomer waived his hand contemptuously. "I've had it. Are you Ross Cavanagh?"

"I am."

"My name is Hartley. I represent the Denver Roundup. I'm interested in this sheep herder killing—merely as a reporter," he added, with a fleeting smile. "Did you know old man Dunn of Deer Creek had committed suicide?"

"I'VE HAD IT."

Cavanagh started and his face set. "No!"

"They found him shot through the neck and dying—this morning. As he was gasping his last breath he said, 'The ranger knows,' and when they asked, 'What ranger?' he said, 'Cavanagh.' When I heard that I jumped a horse and beat 'em all over here. Is this true? Did he tell you who the murderers are?"

Cavanagh did not answer at once. He was like a man caught on a swaying bridge, and his first instinct was to catch the swing to get his balance. "Wait a minute. What is it all to you?"

Again that peculiar grin lighted the small man's dark, unwholesome face. "It's a fine detective stunt, and, besides, it means $20 per column and mebbe a 'boost.' I can't wait; you can't wait. It's up to us to strike now. If these men knew you have their names they'd hike for Texas or the high seas. Come now! Everybody tells me you're one of these idealistic highbrow rangers who care more for the future of the west than most natural born westerners. What's your plan? If you'll yoke up with me we'll run these devils into the earth and win great fame and you'll be doing the whole country a service."

The ranger studied the small figure before him with penetrating gaze. There was deliberate fearlessness in the stranger's face and eyes, and, notwithstanding his calm, almost languid movement, restless energy could be detected in his voice.

"What is your plan?" the ranger asked.

"Get ourselves deputized by the court and jump these men before they realize that there's anything doing. They count the whole country on their side, but they're mistaken. They've outdone themselves this time, and a tremendous reaction has set in. Everybody knows you've held an even hand over these warring Picts and Scots, and the court will be glad to deputize you to bring them to justice. The old sheriff is paralyzed. Everybody knows that the assassins are prominent cattle ranchers, and yet no one dares move. It's up to you fellows, who represent law and order, to act quick."

Cavanagh followed him with complete comprehension, and a desire to carry out the plan seized upon him.

"I'd do it if I could," he said, "but it happens I am nursing a sick man. I am perhaps already exposed to the same disease. I can't leave here for a week or more. It would not be right for me to expose others"—

"Don't worry about that. Take a hot bath, fumigate your clothing, shave your head. I'll fix you up, and I'll get some one to take your place." Catching sight of Swenson and Lize on the bridge, he asked: "Who are those people? Can't they take your nursing job?"

"No," answered Cavanagh bluntly. "It's no use. I can't join you in this at least not now."

"But you'll give me the names which Dunn gave you?"

"No; I can't do that. I shall tell the supervisor, and he can act as he sees fit. For the present I'm locked up here."

The other man looked the disappointment he felt. "I'm sorry you don't feel like opening up. You know perfectly well that nothing will ever be done about this thing unless the press insists upon it. It's up to you and me (me representing 'the conscience of the east'"—here he winked an eye—"and you federal authority) to do what we can to bring these men to their punishment. Better reconsider. I'm speaking now as a citizen as well as a reporter."

There was much truth in what he said, but Cavanagh refused to go further in the matter until he had consulted with Redfield.

"Very well," replied Hartley. "That's settled. By the way, who is your patient?"

Eloquent concisely, Ross told the story. "Just a poor old mounted hobo, a survival of the cowboy west," he said, "but he had the heart of a hero in him, and I'm doing my best to save him."

"Keep him in the dark—that's the latest theory—or under a red light. White light brings out the ulcers."

"He hates darkness. That's one reason why I've opened the doors and windows."

TEACHERS MEET

Thirty Sunday school teachers and superintendents, representing seven of the local Sunday schools, attended the annual institute in the assembly rooms of the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon and evening, many being kept away by the storm. The institute was in charge of Louis H. Koehler, assistant superintendent of the New Jersey Sunday School Association, assisted by Miss Alice . Hamlin, grade superintendent, both of Newark.

Miss A. S. Valentine, assistant superintendent of the junior department of the Third Presbyterian Sunday school, of Elizabeth, gave an entertaining illustration of the work now being done in the junior department of her school using those in the audience as imaginary scholars, accepting invitations to an imaginary party in Palestine and by explanations of the ancient customs revealed a method of interesting children in Bible study which had never previously occurred to the teachers.

By means of books, pictures and stories the lessons of the biblical education proceed along a graded course until examination proves whether the pupil is entitled to promotion. A system of credit marks has been established which is now in vogue in nearly every Sunday-school in the State. This system was determined upon for Plainfield: Attendance, 35; punctuality, 10; home study, 25; church attendance, 10; offering, 10; and bringing Bible to school, 10; total, 100. The child with the highest general average being awarded the presidency of the class for the month.

Miss Hamlin gave two lessons during the afternoon on primary grade work and another in the evening on the intermediate grade. The afternoon session adjourned at 5:30 and refreshments were served by teachers of the home schools.

Mr. Koehler spoke at length last evening on "The Calling of the Sunday School Teacher." He said the call to the teacher was a heavenly one and involved service, sacrifice and a great responsibility. If a person believed he or she was especially capable of teaching children the truths of the Bible it is like every other calling, their duty to do it, and because it becomes their duty for the Master they learn to love the work and are so much more effective.

"I believe," said the speaker, "that a teacher ought to remain in the department in which she is most effective, but a change may be desirable every three or four years."

A round robin table on Sunday school methods was circulated relating to five branches of the work. The church and the school, grading, management, teacher training and organized classes upon all of which a discussion led to clearing up essential points hitherto not altogether clear to teachers.

It was announced that by October, 1912, all the books for the graded courses from beginners to seniors would be ready and the first graduations would occur in 1913. Mr. Koehler and Miss Hamlin will conduct institutes at Perth Amboy and Jamesburg on Thursday and Friday of this week, respectively.

Want Trolley Line Extended to Grounds—Leighton Calkins is Re-elected President.

Officers were elected and encouraging reports were presented at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Country Club, at the Hartridge Auditorium, last night. While President Leighton Calkins, much to the gratification of the members, stated that the last dollar of floating debt was paid off last year, and that the bonded debt of the club was only $29,000, the members discussed ways and means to increase the revenue of the club with a view to making extensive improvements.

The club proposes to lengthen its course 500 yards, making it 6,000 yards, regulation length, at an expense of $500; increase the water tank capacity at the clubhouse, at a cost of about $3,000; enlarge the men's locker room, at an approximate cost of $1,500, making a total about $5,000.

President Calkins suggested two or three ways of increasing the revenue, one being that the active dues be left as at present, $30, and that inasmuch as fifty per cent. of the membership is made up of men and women who do not play golf or tennis and prefer the social side of clubhouse life, they should be willing to pay more than $6 a year for the privileges. It was proposed to raise the dues of this class to $12.

This quite remarkable fact was brought out, that the more business is done at the clubhouse restaurant the more money the club loses, owing to the cost of food, service, etc. It was also suggested that the dues of active members be raised to $35, but this was not greatly favored.

It was finally decided to refer the matter to the trustees giving them authority to devise ways and means, through an amendment to the constitution to increase the club income. It is the purpose to get a sufficient sum from the income to make improvements so as not to increase the bonded debt.

The question of having the trolley extended to the clubhouse was raised by David T. Kenney, who thought that such an improvement would help to make the club more of a success. Mr. Calkins explained that he had taken the matter up with Thomas McCarter, Col. Hine, as well as members of the Common Council, but thus far without success. Members of the Council had informed him, he said, that the company wanted certain privileges here, and they thought that in return the company might be induced to extend the tracks to the clubhouse.

It seemed to be the opinion of members that the company should be more than willing to make the improvement, inasmuch as the club has a membership of nearly 800 and a majority would use the trolley if it was extended and operated with a view to meeting the requirements. This line could be made a greater source of income.

Finally, upon motion of Mr. Kenney, the president was instructed to appoint a committee of five, with Mr. Calkins as a member, to see what can be done toward securing an extension of the trolley.

In speaking of the water question, Mr. Calkins said that inasmuch as the Plainfield-Union Water Company is extending its mains by the club property to South Plainfield, it might be possible to make a tap on the main next spring and use that service.

The club owns approximately 110 acres of land, a clubhouse which has cost over $20,000 together, with a farm-house, stables, lighting plant, sheds and other buildings, and as real estate is constantly increasing in value, the financial condition of the club is as good as any in the country. The club retires one $1,000 bond each year under the provisions of the mortgage.

The club plans for many attractions and additional activities the coming season, and among other things, has applied to the Metropolitan Golf Association for the junior tournament for young boys. It is felt that the club is well qualified to hold this tournament and that considering its character as a family club, could provide the right kind of entertainment for young boys perhaps better than most of the clubs in the Metropolitan district.

Leighton Calkins, J. E. Erickson and R. S. Rowland were elected trustees and H. T. Eaton, H. C. Munger and H. D. Hibbard, elected as the nominating committee for 1912.

SCOUTS TO GATHER AT NATION'S CAPITOL

The boy scout movement which has spread to 21 countries, appeals to the boys of this country as no other movement in recent years has done. It provides fun, educational and mental training, to say nothing of the moral stimulus and now the name of Sir R. S. Baden-Powell, who developed it with such detail is known throughout the world. Within a year the Boy Scouts of America have grown with remarkable rapidity. Germany is now adopting the system, but under the name of "Pathfinder" instead of scout.

The first annual meeting of the scouts will be held in Washington, D. C., next Tuesday and Wednesday. It will gather together the leaders of the movemen from all over the country. The council will meet President Taft in the East room of the White House at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, Tuesday, when the President will make a speech.

President Taft is honorary president of the organization and his address will be in the nature of a review of the aims and purposes of the organization. A general discussion will follow the President's speech. There are now over 300,000 boys enrolled in the movement and it is still growing.

INSPECTORS HUNT MAIL BAG THIEF

The mail pouch stolen from the east bound station of the Central Railroad on Monday night was recovered yesterday afternoon with all its contents intact excepting the registered jacket which was found at the registry window of the Elizabeth postoffice yesterday morning early. John Richardson, a bill poster, found the pouch lying partly covered with snow behind the Brokaw garage on the side nearest the railroad tracks early yesterday afternoon. He at once reported his discovery to the police who lost no time in recovering it and notifying Postmaster Bird of the find.

From the appearance of the pouch it would seem that it had been opened with a key as it was not cut in any way. From this it is believed that the thief was either an old railroad mail clerk or an expert mail thief. He must have known the secrets of the system of packing the pounches as he did not disturb the other mail matter. He just slipped his hand in and grabbed the registered mail jacket and threw the bag away.

A curious thing about the affair is the evident nerve of the thief. After securing the package of registered mail he deliberately stood up alongside the registry window of the Elizabeth postoffice and slit open the letters abstracting what they contained of value and leaving the written correspondence for whomsoever might find it.

Among the stolen matter are bonds and coupons, a check and some money, but the exact amount and list of losers will not be known until Postmaster Bird has finished his investigation. Inspectors from Washington are working on the case.

BELLE PETERSON GIVEN THREE YEARS.

In the Union county court this morning, Judge Vandewater sentenced Belle Peterson, of West Third street, to three years in the State prison at Trenton and William Vanderveer to six months in the county jail, while Annie Vanderveer, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Vanderveer was sent to the State home at Trenton.

These sentences are the result of the arrest and conviction of the woman and her common-law husband of running a disorderly house with the Vanderveer giri as one of the inmates.

Junior Fair Continues.

The attendance at the Jr. O. U. A. M. fair being held in Sebring's Hall, was even larger last night than at the opening. Dancing continued to be the feature and the young people enjoyed it until midnight. All the booths and stands were liberally patronized. New features are to be added in the entertainment line during the remaining nights.

Lecture for Teachers.

On Thursday at 3:30 o'clock, the third of the regular series of lectures to the teachers of Plainfield and North Plainfield, will be given in the Somerset School by Will S. Monroe, professor of Education at the Montclair State Normal School. The subject will be "Mental Work and Mental Fatigue." The public is invited.

GROOM DISAPPEARS; HIS BRIDE'S CASH TOO

Mary Goskiaski, nee Johnson, who married Charles Goskiaski, on January 31, is mourning the loss of her husband and the savings of a lifetime amounting to $725. Goskiaski disappeared yesterday after inducing his bride of a week to draw her money from the savings bank and hand it to him for investment. The couple were married by Justice Snape in the borough court room.

Goskiaski is described as being 23 years old, light complexion, about five feet seven inches tall, weighing about 140 pounds and speaking English with difficulty. He gave his occupation as clerk and his address as 116 Park avenue when married. The police of the city have been asked to look for the man who it is claimed has deceived his young bride and decamped with her money.

ELLIS DENIES HE DEFIED AUTHORITIES

LeRoy J. Ellis, president of the Democratic club, whose appointment by Mayor Moy as a member of the Board of Health was refused confirmation by the Common Council, denies that he ever defied the Fanwood health authorities orders. Following is his statement:

Editor, The Daily Press:

From your paper I notice that at the meeting of the City Council last night in considering my entirely unsolicited and unexpected nomination as a member of the Board of Health it was stated that a member of the Common Council declared that I had defied the Board of Health some ten years ago in its quarantine of my residence in Fanwood. The statement is untrue and I do not like to be placed before the public as one who so little realizes the duties and proprieties of good citizenship. Neither Mrs. Ellis nor myself had the slightest objection to the quarantine. We fully realized its necessity and observed its requirements. I did object, however, to the method of enforcing the quarantine, and justly. Armed guards were placed around the house without conferring with me or giving any intimation that such a step was contemplated. This action was most discourteous and unwarranted and under the circumstances most unusual and could only be accounted for on the theory of frenzied panic on the part of the Board of Health. On the placing of guards around my residence I relieved for the time being the president of the Board of Health from any further duties as the physician in the case and immediately sought another physician. My leaving the house for this purpose at about 5 a. m. is the only incident which might have been construed as a disregard of quarantine regulations. The life of the children was involved and I have no apologies or regrets on that account.

No one more fully realized the danger of contagion and importance of taking every precaution to prevent it than I and no one is more ready to take advantage of those means which medical and sanitary science has placed in our reach, and every such resource available then was resorted to. There was no going to and from the house by Christian Scientists as stated by the papers except on the advice and consent of the president of the Board of Health and they carefully observed all precautions required and suggested.

Respectfully,
L. J. ELLIS.

TO DEPORT YOUTH

Abandoned by Aunt, Favena is Sent Back to Home in Poland.

OVERSEER ACTS PROMPTLY.

Lad's Guardian Suddenly Decamped to Get Married and Leaves Him Without Support.

Brought to this country under the care of his aunt who passed him off as her son, Frank Favena, a young Polish boy was deported yesterday as he was about to become a public charge. Young Favena came to Plainfield in September last year and went to live a week with his aunt on East Third street. After being here for a week he was sent to Bryant school and proved to be a bright pupil. It was at this time that milk and rolls were being missed from the doorsteps of the homes of residents and the thefts were finally traced to young Favena. His excuse at that time was that his aunt did not give him enough to eat.

Judge William N. Runyon before whom the boy was arraigned sympathized with him and compelled the woman to support the boy and this was the last of his public appearance until he appeared at the office of the Charity Organization society on Thursday last seeking assistance. Favena was turned over to Overseer of the Poor, Alex. Ayers and after an inquiry into the circumstances of the boy's case, Mr. Ayers communicated with the immigration authorities at Ellis Island with the result that an official came to this city and took the boy away. He will be deported.

As to the aunt, it has been ascertained that she has decamped leaving nothing but a general idea of her whereabouts. It is believed that she tired of the boy and has gone to California to get rid of him or to marry. In any event the boy was abandoned and will soon be in his own home in Poland.

BOARD VOTES AGAINST ENFORCED VACCINATION

Conforming with the action of school organizations throughout the state, the Dunellen Board of Education, at its meeting, last night, took up the subject of vaccination among the local school pupils. The question was discussed in all its details and as a result the members decided by a vote of 5 to 3 not to recommend it. The school physician vouchsafed the opinion that sentiment is so decided against compulsory vaccination and that it so frequently leads to complications that it would be more advisable not to have it done until actual danger from small-pox existed. There has only been one case of the disease in the borough in nearly twenty years.

It was also stated in the meeting that in nearly every instance where parents had contested the right of school officials to compel the vaccination of children the cases had been lost by the authorities through default. For these reasons the board voted not to recommend compulsory vaccination.

During the meeting the board discussed action in the matter of the boys who have persistently been unruly in classes and violated school regulations. It was decided to allow them a last opportunity to become obedient and in the event of their failing to do so would recommend to have them placed in some institution.

The remainder of business transacted at the meeting was of a routine nature.

ENJOYED A CONCERT; BUT LANDED IN JAIL.

"Music hath charms, etc." and Cook and his chum Williams, two well known characters about town, could not resist their impulse to hear some choice selections when they had the means so close at hand. Monday evening, Ab. and Charlie having imbibed enough fire water to become in the savage state which music soothes, hied them to the East bound station of the Railroad where a multigraph furnishes the soothing strains from "Ill Trovatore" to "A Hot Time."

The twain were plentifully supplied with nickles and they kept the machine pouring out its variations until the Patrolman on the beat was afraid they would overtax the machine's in'ards and escorted the music lovers to headquarters where they snored echoes of Tannhaeuser and Verdi to their hearts' content.

Judge DeMeza listened to their simple tale yesterday morning and after reading both a lecture on the evils of drinking "cat" allowed them both to go.

Reward for Policeman.

Patrolman Frank Sweeney stands to get ten dollars three months from now according to Judge William G. DeMeza for having made the arrest of the Italian woman who Monday was fined twenty dollars. MISSIONARIES IN THE FAR EAST

Mrs. Charles H. Smith presented a paper full of interesting facts on "Women Missionaries in China, Japan and India," at the meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. Organized women's work on distinctly foreign missionary lines, she said, began at the period of the Civil war. She showed how this work, beginning in simplicity has continually grown in compexity, including now education, religion and secular, dispensaries, hospitals, zenana work and the training of Bible women and native nurses.

Mrs. Smith dwelt particularly on the work of the medical missionary among the women of the East. She quoted the remark of Li Hung Chang, "If the missionary ever comes to the Chinese heart, the physician will open the door." A Hindu gentleman said, "Your Christian women are winning our homes and your Christian physicians are winning our hearts."

A devotional service led by Mrs. Charles E. Nash, preceded the paper and resolutions were adopted appreciative of the services of the late Mrs. John D. Runyon.

SOBER LANGUAGE IS POST'S PLEDGE

George A. Post, one of the speakers at the banquet of the Chamber of Commerce on next Monday evening at Trueil Hall, is president and one of the organizers of the Railway Business Association serving his second term in that position. He is known among his associates as the "apostle of good humor" and a staunch supporter of temperance of speech. In the recent address to the members of the Traffic club, of Pittsburg, Mr. Post asked his hearers to sign the following pledge:

"I do solemnly promise that in the future I will abstain from the use of all intoxicating and inflamatory language." The pledge, like the man was original and at once caught on. He will speak upon the subject of the relationship existing between employer and employee, a matter which has had his personal attention for a number of years and one which is vital to every man engaged in business.

Senator James E. Martine will be at the right of toastmaster William L. Saunders and on this occasion will make his first public utterance since his election. It was reported today that Senator Martine is able to be about the house and that he will surely be well enough to attend the banquet and give his address on Abraham Lincoln.

George W. Perkins, who was recently elected to the presidency of the Equitable Life Assurance Society will speak on "Profit Sharing," as applied to modern business methods. Mr. Perkins was formerly a partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and his subject has been a matter of deep study for several years.

Col. C. W. Fuller, of Jersey City, is another speaker whom to hear is to enjoy. He is remarkable for the number of witticisms he can crowd into a short address.

Tickets for the banquet may be had by applying to the secretary of the chamber, John Ulrich, in the Frost building.

CHRISTIAN AND MISSIONARY ALLIANCE CONVENTION.

A three-days' convention will be held by the Christian and Missianary Alliance of Plainfield at the church corner of Duer street and Craig place, beginning on Friday and continuing Saturday and Sunday, February 10, 11 and 12. The meeting will be called at 3 and 7:45 o'clock p. m.

These will be the speakers: Rev. W. W. Newbury, State evangelist of the society; Rev. T. R. Francis, of Jersey City and Rev. I. Dukindell, a missionary from Central China. A cordial welcome will be extended to all.

General Booth to Speak.

On Lincoln's Birthday, Sunday, February 12, General Ballington Booth, president of the Volunteers of America, will speak in the First Baptist church in the evening at 7:45. General Booth will be accompanied by his junior staff concert group, a trio of musicians playing various musical instruments. The class of music is in keeping with the nature of the service.

Court Grants Order on L. J. Ellis, Administrator of An Estate.

MISS BROWN MADE DEMAND.

Ellis a Nephew of Richard P. Brown, Who Died Three Years Ago Leaving an Estate of $10,000.

In the Union County Orphans Court before Judge Atwater in Elizabeth this morning Leroy J. Ellis, of this city, was cited to give an accounting of the estate of Richard B. Brown, deceased, on petition of Miss Charlotte Brown, a sister who was the sole legatee of Mr. Brown's estate.

According to the records in the case Mr. Brown left between $10,000 and $15,000 and Mr. Ellis was named as administrator of the estate. Since receiving the money it is alleged that he has not rendered any accounting of the money given to him for investment and that repeated requests from Miss Brown have not been met with a proper response.

There are no allegations of misappropriating the money by Mr. Ellis, but Miss Brown declares that she has been unable to get any satisfactory settlement from him. It is believed that the money has been invested and that Mr. Ellis has not had time to make the settlements he has wanted to make.

Martin B. Stutsman assisted by William A. Coddington appears as counsel for Miss Brown. The writ is returnable on Friday, February 24. Mr. Ellis is Miss Brown's nephew.

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND MRS. DUNHAM'S FUNERAL.

Todd and Haverton sang two selections, "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me." The floral tribute included set pieces from the Dunellen Presbyterian church, Ladies' Aid Society, of which Mrs Dunham had been president for many years, and the Sunday-school department, in which she was a teacher.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, six relatives acting as pall bearers. Theye were Alexander Hunt and Alexander Hunt, Jr., of Westfield; Fred Wilcox, of Somerville; Fred Wilcox, Jr., of Dunellen William Shannon, of Garwood, and William Hedden, of Plainfield.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARDS WILL REMOVE TO CONN.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, who for the past twenty years have been prominent residents of Plainfield, their present home being on Franklin place, will remove to Greenwich, Conn., about May 1, having leased a handsome place on Madison avenue that city. The change is made purely for business reasons. The American Bank Note Company, with which Mr. Edwards is associated is to remove its place of business to a point beyond the Bronx and it will be impossible for him to commute to Plainfield.

During their long residence here, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards have made a great many friends, who will learn with the deepest regret that they are to leave the city. They have always evidenced great interest in local affairs and in every way possible lent their aid to the advancement of the interests of the city.

Gilby and Jonas Miller. Each enumerator is assigned to a ward. The cost of the census is being borne by the board. The number returned by the government enumerators, 6,420, is not considered accurate, and to satisfy many of the residents, the board has taken up the matter.

The trial of Joseph Veneza, of Scotch Plains came before the recorder's court this morning. The charge against Veneza is selling liquor without a license. The Always Busy Store

A Cleveland man celebrated his hundredth birthday the other day by giving a party to a number of his friends and relatives and told them the only way to keep young was to KEEP BUSY. He said:

"I'm too busy to die—come around in ten years and we'll have another birthday party."

The Ohio centenarian is right. The only way to remain young is to keep going. A person is exactly the same as a piece of machinery. The finest steel bearings will clog and the costliest machinery will rust if the wheels are allowed to stop. A human being can RUST out and DRY up in the same manner. Movement is as necessary to flesh as it is to steel. Keep busy and you'll, at least, not rust out.

A business house that does not keep busy is the same as a person or piece of machinery. It is the activity of a store that makes that store worth while—it's all in "keeping busy" as the aged Clevelander says.

The Bamberger store is the "ALWAYS BUSY STORE," hence it is as young in spirit and aggressiveness as it was eighteen years ago and it will be as young eighteen years hence as it is today.

Follow the Ohio's man's advice and keep busy. You'll feel better.

BIG BLAZE IN WOOLEN MILLS

A fire which destroyed the woolen goods and raw material valued at $85,000, broke out in the storehouse of the Somerset Manufacturing Company at Raritan, Monday night. It was only by work on the part of the combined fire departments of Raritan and Somerville that the blaze was kept from destroying the main buildings.

The firemen were badly handicapped by frozen fire hydrants. About every hydrant connected with the city water supply in the vicinity of the mill was found to be out of commission.

A fire loss amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars in mill property was prevented by the use of the powerful pumps in the engine-room of the mill which enabled the firemen to direct eight high pressure streams on the fire during the night. The fire will throw hundreds of operatives out of employment temporarily. The mill which had been running on short time during the winter, had just filled up its storehouses with raw material and started to its full capacity. The raw material is totally destroyed.

GOLF.

After receiving fuller reports of the doings of the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association the foreign critics have changed their views with regards to the relationship between St. Andrews and this country. Garden G. Smith, one of the best known of the foreign writers says:

"It is now perfectly clear, that the loyalty of America is at an end and that the uniformity of rule has only lasted so long as the American demands were fully satisfied. Apart altogether from the insistent cry for a purely national code and the dethronement of St. Andrews, there is a widespread rebellion against the United States Golf Association itself, which is regarded as too conservative and sectional in its administration. Mr. Calkins throws an interesting sidelight on this in connection with the Schenectady affair."

After quoting a letter from Mr. Calkins, in which the last named deplores the indifference felt in the West over the rules controversy, as well as dissatisfaction with United States Golf Association control, the foreign writer says goodby to the United States in the following caustic manner:

"But without concerning ourselves with the domestic troubles of the American golfers, it is evident from the Chicago meeting that even the moderate section which still wishes nominally to acknowlegde St. Andrews rule is asking more than St. Andrews can possibly give. The ruling body is practically asked to share its authority with the United States Golf Association and other foreign associations, the laws of the game being made by general agreement among them all. If this is not granted America at least will make her own laws. Even now the United States Golf Association has assumed the right to amend the rules of golf when and how it pleases. The American proposal is quite impracticable. It would simply be giving authority to all sorts of divergent opinions, which, as in the case of the Schenectady, it would be impossible to reconcile, and it would hasten rather than retard divergent rule and practice. The integrity of the game would be done. Surely it is far better to recognize the facts and cease crying "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." It is quite evident that the American golfers are unable to accept the St. Andrews rules any longer, and they must therefore go their own way, as they have done in other sports. We shall be very sorry to lose their allegiance and it is sad to think that American golf will soon interest us as little as American football."

BASEBALL.

Fred Beck, of the Boston Nationals was sold to the Cincinnati Club Monday at a price far in excess of the waiver price. Beck was never satisfied and expressed a preference to play elsewhere. Beck is delighted over the change and says that he will play better ball next year than ever before.

It is the intention of Roger Bresnahan, manager of the Cardinals, to give his young pitchers plenty of work this year. Roger has eight young pitchers to pick from and is confident of landing at least three good men out of the bunch. Sallee, the eccentric boxman, is expected to be the mainstay of the pitching department.

McKeesport will not be represented in the O. and P. League this season, as President Mansfield, of the club, sold the players on the reserve list to the Wheeling Club, of the Central League. Steubenville will in all probability take the place left vacant by McKeesport.

Charles Frank, manager of the New Orleans club, has made a request to Manager Connie Mack for any extra players that he might have that would prove capable of performing in the Southern League. Every year Mack has sent a few players down to New Orleans for further development and it is likely that a few more would-be big leaguers will sojourn in the South this season under the watchful eye of Manager Frank.

It is rumored that Tommy Aitkens, the southpaw on the reserve list of the Philadelphia Athletics, may be a member of the Baltimore Club this season. Jack Dunn is trying to get Manager Mack to part with the side wheeler.

J. C. Martell, who played with the Rochester Hustlers last season, threatens to retire from baseball unless he is sent to some other club by Manager Ganzel, instead of the Utica club, in the New York State League. Martell is wealthy and does not need to play baseball for a living. At the present he is practicing medicine at his home in Washington, D. C.

The National Baseball Commission Monday refused to change the status of player Moskiman, who, last September, was temporarily reinstated. During the reinstatement Moskiman played with the Boston Americans. The commission left the status as it had been placed before the National Board, that of an outlaw player.

Charley Wagner, the great little short-stop of the Boston Red Sox, and who at one time wore a Newark uniform, may be made a catcher during the spring training trip of the Speed Boys. President John I Taylor is seriously thinking of putting Wagner behind the bat, as he thinks that he could be more valuable to the team than he is at the present time. The former Newarker is considered one of the best shortstops in Ban Johnson's organization.

Thomas Senior, who for several years acted in the capacity of an umpire in the Central Pennsylvania League, committed suicide at his home in Chester, Monday night, by shooting himself. Senior was one of the most popular umpires in the C. P.L., and the fans will be sorry to hear of his death. No reason is known why the indicator handler should have done away with himself.

Harry Davis, who captained the Athletics last year, signed his contract with Manager Connie Mack Monday, and will again play first base for the world's champions. Now that Davis has signed, no more stories are expected to be published to the effect that he is to be sold to some major league club to become a manager.

Bob Ewing, the tall silent one of the Phillies, sent in his contract to the Philadelphia National Club, headquarters Monday. Ewing was a holdout and refused to sign until the club met his price. Great things are expected of the tall hurler this year.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—John Smith, a hobo, who claims Jersey City as his home, was given ten minutes to get out of town yesterday by Judge DeMeza. Smith was found loitering around the Clinton Avenue station Monday night. He had also been camping out near West End avenue.

—Charles Doran, a newly arrived German, employed in the City Market, was caught riding a bicycle on the sidewalk Monday and was arrested. Yesterday morning through an earnest plea of his counsel, Robert Newton Crane, Doran was allowed to go with a warning. The next one caught riding his wheel on the sidewalk will be fined by Judge DeMeza, who is determined to put a stop to the habit.

THE ART OF DRESSING.

The way to be artistically gowned is to discover one's best feature and then dress up to it. This law has been laid down to the class in artistic costuming which was recently added to the fine arts department of the New York Teachers' College and the instructor, who formerly designed for a Fifth avenue dressmaker applies it to emphasize the importance of developing one's individuality.

"If you have attractive eyes," says the expert, "make the most of them by your style of dress. If your hair is your sole claim to beatuy the tone of the dress should be such as to make the hair seem to beautify the entire face. If the pink of your cheeks is alluring in its delicacy choose some complementary shade for your dress."

Conversely, unattractive features—a prominent nose, eyes that squint or a too ample mouth should be "dressed down," and the expert affirms that such features may be subdued and better features given prominence if one knows the secret of the new art of beauty.

These secrets are to be imparted, it is understood, before the winter is over. Any woman, whether a member or not, may pose before the class, which will frankly discuss her good points and poor ones and plan an artistic costume of the proper fabric and the most becoming color to the lines best suited to her figure.

HOOKING THE HOOKWORM.

Five million Americans have hte hookworm. The fact is of greater importance than the 60,000 newly discovered worlds announced by Andrew Carnegie—Chicago News.

It is said that the hookworm has its hooks on 5,000,000 Americans. On only 5,000,000! Mr. Hookworm looks like a piker to the food trust. —Milwaukee News.

Our sympathy goes out to the Rocefeller Hookworm Commission, which is dreadfully worried. It appears that the fund of $1,000,000 donated by John D. Rockefeller for the eradication of the disease was given to extend over a period of five years. The commission says it will take at least twenty years to begin to stamp out the disease.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Feminine.

A local ironworker who has been married a couple of years always declared that his first son should be named Mat, after one of his best friends.

Learning the that ironworker and his wife had recently been blessed with a charming baby, the friend smiled all over his face when he greeted the father on the street.

"Well," he beamed, "how is little Mat?"

"Mat nothing," answered the father, "it's Matress."—Youngstown Telegram.

HERE AND THERE.

In order to check stabbing affrays and so-called crimes of blood which are considered the national scourge of Italy, a special law was passed a few years ago making it a crime to carry a penknife and its result has proved so beneficial that another law, equally draconian in character, will shortly be submitted to Parliament to combat alcholism, which has increased to an alarming extent.

The object of the proposed law is two-fold, as while combating alcoholism it indirectly encourages the consumption of wine, which Italians are neglecting for stronger drinks and liquors. According to the new law the sale of any drink containing more than 21 per cent. of alcohol is prohibited without a special license, which will be granted on payment of a fee varying from $2 to $20 to a limited number of bars and wine shops in each city. The manufacture or importation of absinthe as well as its sale will be absolutely forbidden, and from time to time a list of drinks abnoxious to health will be issued by the sanitary authorities and their sales will be prohibited.

The law prohibits the sale of drinks to persons under 16, to habitual drunkards, to persons of unsound minds and to those who suffer from weakness. Any person convicted of drunkenness will be liable to have his name removed from the electoral list for five years and will not be called to serve as a juryman. The law finally provides for the establishment of a sanitarium for habitual drunkards to be built by the State, and also sanctions awards to temperance societies and anti-alcholic leagues.

Suspicious.

"I notice," remarked the observant boarder, taking his seat at the table, "that the conversation stopped as soon as I came in. I hope nobody was saying anything to my discredit."

Then they all hastened to assure him that they had been talking about the weather.—Chicago Tribune.

Progress.

"Yes," said the old man "my daughter is still studying French."

"But she can't speak the language at all, can she?" remarked the friend.

"She couldn't at first, but now she can speak it just enough to make herself unintelligible." — Catholic Standard and Times.

Another Daring Enterprise.

"I can never make it."

"No matter. Go as far as you can, sending back copy from every roadhouse."—Exchange.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The heavy penalty inflicted upon Peter Nagle in the Middlesex county court, as told in yesterday's Daily Press, was a great surprise to his friends in the borough. Bearers of the petition presented in his behalf, signed by the complainant himself, is was generally supposed he would escape with a suspendede sentence.

A large number of friends from the borough and New Market attended the funeral of Mrs. Josephine Dunham, at her son's home in Plainfield, yesterday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Ernest R. Brown and there were several floral tributes from departments in the local Presbyterian church.

Although the members of the "Madame Jarley" cast voted to accept the invitation of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church to repeat the wax works entertainment, no date has yet been set. There is a probability that the proposition might not be carried out.

The funeral of Jennie Tozzi, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Tozzi, was held yesterday afternoon, burial being made in St. Mary's cemetery. The child was a year and a half old and was one of twins, the other having died about six months ago.

Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and Lakeside Council, Daughters of Liberty, will attend divine service in the First Baptist church next Sunday night. An appropriate Lincoln-Day sermon will be preached by the pastor, Rev. George Gardner.

William A. Coddington, of Plainfield, of the former firm of Reed & Coddington, has been appointed attorney for Piscataway township.

Miss Eleanor Dodwell, of the borough, has been paying an extended visit to friends in Little Falls.

The W. C. T. U. will hold the regular meeting tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. J. Todd.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

George W. Henry, a well-known resident of the township, died at his home near Alton, at an early hour yesterday morning, after a long illness from a complication of diseases. Private funeral service will be held from the home tomorrow afternoon, interment being made in Hillside Cemetery. Mr. Henry is survived by a widow and six children, four sons and two daughters; Luther G. Henry, Miss Leora Henry, both of Plainfield, Mrs. John Titus, of Westfield and William, Alberta and Arthur, who reside at home.

The first of a series of Library Talks will be given at the Library Rooms on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 11, at 3 o'clock, by Miss Asken, of the State Library Commission. All are cordially invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zabriskey, who have been visiting Mrs. Zabriskey's mother, Mrs. Hoppock, of Prospect avenue, have returned to their home in Plainfield.

Miss Evelyn Johnson, who has been ill for two weeks with the prevailing ailment, diphtheric sore throat, is improving nicely.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting of the Baptist church, will be held tonight in the parlors of the church.

Miss Rose Thomae, of the borough, is detained at home with a light attack of scarlet fever.

The snow storm made fair sleighing and the sleigh bells jingled in town again yesterday.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Several new members have joined the Baracca class of the Baptist church and competition between the two factions, the "red" and the "blue" for punctuality at all church services is very keen, and at the end of six months the winning side will be treated to a banquet at the expense of the losers.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Patterson have returned to their home in Philadelphia after spending the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thorne.

The Industrial farm house has just been painted and the barns and out buildings are to be painted later.

SOME NOVEL FIGURES FOR A COTILLON.

At a childrep's party a cotillon diversified with novel figures is popular among the young people and very pretty to watch. Fishing for partners is very entertaining. Duplicate boxes of magnetic fish with rods are provided. Each child angles for a numbered fish and searches for the partner who has caught a similar number.

The fishing goes on to the strains of dreamy music, which at a given signal changes to a galop, two-step or polka, and the fisher-folk foot it merrily.

In "Choosing Unseen Partners" those children desiring to be chosen are kept in the dancing room and those who elect to choose their unseen partners are banished. The children in the room are disguised with paper half masks and cracker caps or with those cardboard masks that are purchased flat in a box, provided with strings for tying on.

A sheet is held across the room to hide the dresses, and the masqueraders stand behind, only their heads showing. Great amusement goes on while the picking and choosing is in progress, and, of course, the masks look very comical as they prance 'round with partners.

The "Four-in-Hand" is the prettiest of all the figures. The drivers are given ribbon reins—just a long length of ribbon decked with bells and loops at each end for the drivers' use. A whip with ribbon lash is also presented.

The children are arranged around the room and a polka strikes up. The drivers dance 'round, beckoning those they wish to act as horses. The reins are slipped over the leaders; the wheelers just behind inside the ribbon support it on each side with their hands.

The team is driven in and out whenever the driver, or more often where the horses, like—and all must dance in ime to the music. Occasional collisions add to the fun.

The flicking of the ribbon whips and hte tinkle of the bells make an animaed and pretty little scene.

The delight of leaping through a paper hoop to reach a partner would cure any small boy of bashfulness. The hoops are covered with bright-colored tissue paper, and one is held in front of each little girl by a grown-up. The boys made a dash, and the destruction of the paper hoop is not the least attractive part of the performance.

WHAT WHISKY WON'T DO.

Plaintiff, a lumberman, telegraphed for four gallons of whisky for his raft hands. The telegraph was misdirected through the fault of the telegraph agent, no whisky arrived, and the raft hands refused to work. A freshet was at its height, and because the raft hands refused to go into the water without the whisky no rafts were constructed and the benefit of the freshet was lost. Plaintiff recovered over $500 damages.

The judgment was reversed however, by the Supreme Court of North Carolina, in Newsome vs. Western Union Telegraph Company, 69 Southeastern Reporter, 10, as the damages were too remote and uncertain. In the opinion of the court it required quite a stretch of the imagination to conceive that, had the four gallons of corn whisky arrived, the raft would have been properly constructed, loaded and safely conducted over a heavy freshet and then profitably marketed.

"Whiskey," said the court, "is very potential at times, but is cannot be relied on to produce such beneficial results as is claimed for in the case. It is a singular fact that in the country where the four gallons of corn whisky were expected to produce such unusual results its use was decried and its sale prohibited. It was contraband, outlawed, and dealing in it made a crime."

Recovery Expected.

Friend—Ah, doctor, how did you make out with that cranky patient of yours?

Doctor—Oh, we're both on the road to recovery. He's able to be about and I am suing for my bill.—Boston Transcript.

Had Worldly Assets.

PUPILS HEAR LECTURE ON THE WILD ANIMAL

"The Training of Wild Animals," was the subject of an interesting lecture at the Plainfield High School, this morning, by Allen S. Williams. The talk was made doubly interesting the prsence of Captain Jack Bonivata, who is considered one of the greatest animal trainers in the world. At the close of the lecture, the captain gave a short talk, relating some of his personal experiences while training lions and tigers.

Mr. Williams said that many persons who were highly intelligent concerning most things were generally ignorant about natural history. The speaker said that animals are trained for many reasons and great cruelty is often practiced, but they are generally trained for profit and exhibed by showmen. Mr. Williams relates many interesting experiences in training wild animals. He exhibited about one hundred fine stereopticon views, showing wild animals, as well as those trained.

There was also shown a series of pictures showing the methods of lion training and taming. Captain Bonivata said that the tricks of animals were all done by habit and the greatest difficulty is to get them to acquire the habit. He declared that more could be accomplished through patience than in being cruel to animals. Mr. Williams explained how the captain lost his right arm while training animals, which proved interesting.

Dr. Moldenke to Lecture.

"On the Shores of the Mediterranean—Along the Coast from Sicily to Greece," will be the subject of a superbly illustrated lecture of a voyage in Southern waters by Dr. C. E. Moldenke, at St. Peter's Lutheran church, Wednesday night, February 15, under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Society.

Co. K's Annual Inspection.

The annual inspection of Co. K by an officer from the regular army will take place Monday night in the local armory. The company will parade for inspection in the olive drab uniform and with the field equipment in their possession.

Farmers of West Deptford Township, Gloucester county, have risen against the continued raiding of their hen roosts and have themselves turned to raiding. A posse Sunday night arrested Clarence Johnson and Oscar Green, both colored, in their cabin, a mile south of Thorofare, and Magistrate Mankin held them for court. A bushel of chicken heads and enough feathers to make several beds were also found at the cabin.

To save the Burlington taxpayers the expense of boarding such prisoners a week or ten days and at the same time inflicting a punishment that seems to be a greater restraining factor than a jail term, Smith has substituted a twenty-four and forty-eight-hour fast, according to the offense and sobriety of the prisoner. Physicians have assured the official that no evil results to the health of prisoners will follow such punishment.

TRENTON READY FOR K. OF P. CONVENTION.

Arrangements have been completed for the annual convention of the Knights of Pythias of New Jersey, to be held at Trenton Wednesday and Thursday of next week. It is expected that nearly 3,000 delegates will be in attendance.

The convention will be preceded by a dinner by the Tuesday Annual Club in the Hotel Sterling, at which the officers of the grand lodge will be the guests. Covers will be laid for more than 100. Addresses will be delivered by Grand Chancellor A. Lewis Drucker, Grand Keeper of Records and Seals Elmer E. Margerum, and others.

Several resolutions amending the constitution will be offered. The most important amendments to be offered are that the grand inner guard shall be appointed by the chancellor, instead of being elected, and the abolishing of the committee on grand chancellor's report and the substitution of a committee on distribution.

The vote of the subordinate lodges for elective officers develops con-are H. W. Jerrell, of Bridgeton; outer guard and supreme representatives. The candidates for outer guard are H. W. Jerrell, of Bridgeton; Sarino Bechnizer, of Perth Amboy; Berthold J. Schreiner, of Plainfield; J. K. Sheridan, of Newark; J. F. Stryker, of Rockaway; Stewart Neighbar, of German Valley; Max J. Solinsky, of Bayonne.

The candidates for supreme representatives are Henry A. Heinrichs, Paterson; Dewitt C. Cobb, Silverton; John H. Conger, South River; Joshua Wilson, South Amboy; William G. Gowgill, Paulsboro; Abram Klemert, Paterson; Walter E. Hayhurst, Lambertville. The contest will be settled on the convention floor.

A Rare Freak.

Smith (at the dime museum)—Pshaw, I don't see anything curious or remarkable about that old man that seems to gather such a crowd to look and gape at him.

Jones—Don't, eh? Why, that old fellow lived 69 years in Adams County, O., and never once sold his vote. —Life.

An Act of Necessity.

A correspondent writes in to correct a story printed in this paper several days ago. "In that snake story I sent you," he complains, "you made one mistake. I told you that the snake was 20 feet long and you had it only 10 feet long."

We are sorry for this but the error was unavoidable. We were very much crowded for space when we used the story and we had to cut everything down.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Frank Daniels comes to the Plainfield theatre, for one night only, Saturday, February 11, in Charles Dillingham's newest musical comedy production of Viennese origin, "The Girl in the Train." The music is by Lee Fall, the famous composer of "The Dollar Princess," and the book is by Harry B. Smith from the German of Victor Leon. Mr. Daniels appears as the judge of a divorce court in Amsterdam, Holland, who is called upon to hear an extraordinary case which had its origin in a sleeping car. The testimony shows that a young wife had been left behind on a journey taken by her husband; that on the train he had surendered his sleeping compartment to a young and beautiful actress; and that the conductor had placed a totally wrong construction on this affair. The wife sues for a divorce, nevertheless, and the actress comes into court to defend her good name. The judge swayed by his admiration for the two beautiful ladies, alternately sides, first with the wife and then with the actress, and finally renders a remarkable verdict, that while the wife is entitled to her freedom on the evidence, the actress leaves the court without the slightest stain on her character. This whole act, by the way, is said to be hilariously funny, yet never at any time is there a line or a situation which could possibly offend good taste. The succeeding acts show a masquerade ball, where all meet again, and the last act is a picturesque fete in a seaport town where the husband and wife are reconciled, and the judge wins the actress. Mr. Daniels will be supported by a strong company, in which Miss Sallie Fisher will be seen as the wife, and Miss Vera Michelena will appear as the actress. There will be a singing and dancing chorus of sixty. The staging and costuming are up to the recoginzed Dillingham standard, which means everything will be found attractive, picturesque, and in good taste.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS ARE ASSURED SUCCESS.

"If the necessary appropriations were available, I would establish postal savings banks tomorrow in 500 additional cities and towns of the United States."

This statement was made Sunday night by Postmaster-General Hitchcock in view of reports thus far received concerning the first month's operation of the postal savings system. The reports are most gratifying to Mr. Hitchcock and to the other officers of the postal savings service. They are regarded as demonstrating that the new system already has passed the experimental stage.

The certificate of deposit plan, which is an innovation in the transaction of postal savings business, is shown to be admirably adapted to its purpose. It is found to be readily understood by depositers and easily handled by postmasters.

The total deposits in the forty-eight postal banks for January will amount to approximately $60,000. This is an average of about $1,200 in small towns. The average is larger than the corresponding average for the British system of postal savings depositors in 1908, the most successful year in the history of that system. A large majority of the depositors were foreign-born Americans, many of whom have been in the habit of sending their savings to their native countries for deposit.

Mr. Hitchcock has recommended to Congress the appropriation of $1,000,000 to be immediately available for the extension of the system.

CURFEW FOR SOMERVILLE.

The adoption of a curfew ordinance was advocated in all the churches in Somerville, Sunday and petitions to the Common Council were circulated in the congregations asking that such an ordinance be passed. The ministers all preached sermons on the danger to boys and girls of letting them run the streets at nights.

The agitation has been going on for some time, but definite action was recently taken by the Somerset Branch of the State Charities Aid Association and it appointed a committee consisting of all the ministers of the borough to devise a plan of action. The result was the concerted movement in the churches Sunday. Father Ryan, of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, is cooperating with the Protestant ministers in this campaign.

In the afternoon, Mayor C. C. Kenyon and Prosecutor F. A. Pope, discussed the advantages of a curfew with the Bible Fellowship of the Second Reformed church, which has a membership of over 100 men.

Christmas Poetry.

'Tis a month before Christmas, a day or two less,
And you may have noticed the signs in the press.
The gay Christmas poets get started betimes
And now are unloosing their holiday rhymes.

The tide will be rising for many a day.
The pent flood of piffle its bounds has now burst,
Its waves are upon you; prepare for the worst.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

"All wrong. According to Finsen, he wouldn't pit in the dark. However, it doesn't matter on a cowboy. You've a great story yourself. There's a fine situation here, which I'll play up if you don't object."

Cavanagh smiled. "Would my objection have any weight?"

The reporter laughed. "Not much. I've got to carry back some sort of game. Well, so long. I must hit the trail over the hill."

Cavanagh made civil answer and returned to his patient more than half convinced that Hartley was right. The "power of the press" might prove to be a very real force in this pursuit.

As the journalist was about to mount his horse he discovered Lee Virginia on the other side of the creek. "Hello!" said he. "I wonder what this pretty maiden means." And, dropping his bridle rein again he walked down to the bridge.

Hartley studied him coolly. "Are you a ranger too?"

"No, only a guard."

"Why are you leaving Cavanagh to play it alone in there?"

Lee explained. "He won't let any of us come near him."

"Quite right," retorted Hartley promptly. "They say smallpox has lost its terrors, but when you're eight hours' hard trail from a doctor or a hospital it's still what I'd call a formidable enemy. However, Cavanagh's immune, so he says."

"We don't know that," Lee said, and her hands came together in a spasm of fear. "Are you a doctor?"

"No; I'm only a newspaper man, but I've had a lot of experience with plagues of all sorts—had the yellow fever in Porto Rico and the typhoid in South Africa; that's why I'm out here ricochetting over the hills. But who are you, may I ask? You look like the rose of Sharon."

"My name is Lee Wetherford," she answered, with childish directness, for there was something compelling in the man's voice and eyes. "And this is my mother." She indicated Lize, who was approaching.

"You are not out here for your health," he stated, rather thoughtfully. "How happens it you're here?"

"I was born here—in the Fork."

His face remained expressionless. "I don't believe it. Can such maidens come out of Roaring Fork? Nit! But I don't mean that. What are you doing up here in this wilderness?"

Lize took a part in the conversation. "Another inspector?" she asked as she lumbered up.

"That's me," he replied—"Sherlock Holmes, Vidocq, all rolled into one."

"My mother," again volunteered Lee.

Hartley's eyes expressed incredulity, but he did not put his feelings into words, for he perceived in Lize a type with which he was entirely familiar—one to be handled with care. "What are you two women doing here? Are you related to one of these rangers?"

"That's my trade," was the unabashed reply, "and I'm not so old but that I can rise to a romantic situation." Thereupon he dropped all direct interrogation and with an air of candor told the story of his mission. Lize, entirely sympathetic, invited him to lunch, and he was soon in possession of their story, even to the tender relationship between Lee Virginia and the plague besieged forest ranger.

"We're not so mightily disinterested," he said, referring to his paper. "The Roundup represents the new west in part, but to us the new west means opportunity to loot water sites and pile up unearned increment. Oh, yes, we're on the side of the fruit and alfalfa grower, because it pays. If the boss of my paper happened to be in the sheep business, as Senator Blank White is, we would sing a different tune, or if I were a congressman representing a district of cattlemen I'd be very slow about helping to build up any system that would make me pay for my grass. As it is, I'm commissioned to make it hot for the ranchers that killed those dagoes, and I'm going to do it. If this country had a man like Cavanagh for sheriff we'd have the murderers in two days. He knows who the butchers are, and I'd like his help. But he's nailed down here, and there's no hope of his getting away. A few men like him could civilize this country."

Thereupon he drew from three pairs of lips a statement of the kind of man Ross Cavanagh was, but most significant of all were the few words of the girl, to whom this man of the pad and pencil was a magician, capable of exalting her hero and of advancing time and civilization by the mere motion of his hand. She liked him and grew more and more willing to communicate, and he, perceiving in her something unusual, pressed on, question-in the operation of a great financial institution is often not clearly understood.

Some people think that if they place their affairs in the hands of a Trust Company, that they immediately become involved in the operation of a mechanical routine from which all individual interest has been eliminated.

Come in and Talk it Over

as executor or trustee, every individual feature, every courtesy and special attention, which could possibly be offered by an individual executor, is afforded, and, in addition, the ESTATE HAS THE ADVANTAGES OF ALL THE GREAT RESOURCES OF THE COMPANY—its wide experience—its tried judgment and proved dependability, at no greater expense, and NO MATTER WHAT THE SIZE OF THE ESTATE.

ing. Then he must be going," he said to Lee. "You've given me a lovely afternoon."

Lee Virginia was all too ignorant of the ways of reporters to resent his note taking, and she accepted his hand, believing him to be a sincere admirer of her ranger. "What are you going to do?" she asked.

"I'm going back to Sulphur to spread the report of Cavanagh's quarantine." Again that meaning smile. "I don't want any other newspaper men mixed up in my game. I'm Lonesome Ned in stunts like this, and I hope if they do come up you'll be judiciously silent. Goodby."

CHAPTER XXI.

WETHERFORD PASSES ON.

SOON after the reporter left Cavanagh called to Swenson: "The old man can't last through another such night as last night was, and I wish you would persuade Mrs. Wetherford and her daughter to return to the valley. They can do nothing here—absolutely nothing. Please say that."

Swenson repeated his commands with all the emphasis he could give them, but neither Lize nor Lee would consent to go. "It would be heathenish to leave him alone in this lonesome hole," protested Lize.

"I shall stay till he is free," added Lee. And with uneasy heart she crossed the bridge and walked on and on toward the cabin till she was close enough to detect the lines of care on her lover's haggard face.

"Stop!" he called sharply. "Keep away! Why don't you obey me? Why don't you go back to the valley?"

"Because I will not leave you alone—I can't! Please let me stay!"

"I beg of you go back."

The roar of the stream made it necessary to speak loudly, and he could not put into his voice the tenderness he felt at the moment, but his face was knotted with pain as he asked, "Don't you see you add to my uneasiness—my pain?"

"We're so anxious about you," she answered. "It seems as though we should be doing something to help you."

He understood and was grateful for the tenderness which brought her so near to him, but he was forced to be stern.

"There is nothing you can do—nothing more than you are doing. It helps me to know that you are here, but you must not cross the bridge. Please go back!" There was pleading as well as command in his voice, and with a realization of the passion his voice conveyed she retraced her steps, her heart beating quickly with the joy which his words conveyed.

At sunset Redfield returned, bringing with him medicine, but no nurse. "Nobody will come up here," he said. "I reckon Ross is doomed to fight it out alone. The solitude, the long trail, scares the bravest of them away. I tried and tried—no use. Eleanor would have come, of course—demanded to come—but I would not permit that. She commissioned me to bring you both down to the ranch."

Redfield crossed the bridge and laid the medicines down outside the door. "The nurse from Sulphur refused to come when she found that her patient was in a mountain cabin. I'm sorry, old man. I did the best I could."

F. E. SMITH TALKS AT HOPE CHAPEL

G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of Hope chapel Sunday-school, presided at the teachers' conference, last night. Out of an enrollment of fifty-four, thirty-five were present. F. E. Smith, superintendent of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, addressed the gathering on "Problems in Sunday-school Work." He also told of the methods employed in his school and his suggestions proved helpful to the officers and teachers.

G. Stuart Simons, F. H. Andrews, J. Frank Lindsley, Mrs. M. E. Williams, G. Herbert Condict, Mrs. Donald McInnes, also spoke briefly of the chapel work. A committee will be appointed to arrange a meeting whereby the teachers will have an opportunity of meeting the new pastor, Rev. Frederick L. Greene, of Sherman, N. Following the informal discussion, Miss Marguerite Phillips, Miss Lela Duy and Miss Margaret Hutchinson served hot chocolate and cake and candy to the teachers present and there was a social hour.

The music of Lee Falls alone would carry a much pretentious piece to success. "The Girl in the Train," has a dozen songs that have achieved wide popularity, the favorites being, "Follow Me," "Eeny, Meeny, Miny, Mo," "That's Why People Marry," "You Must Be Mine, Dear," and "If Love Were Free." As all the scenes are laid in picturesque Holland, there has been ample opportunity for the scenic artist to exhibit his skill.

Frank Daniels in Charles Dillingham's musical comedy production, "The Girl in the Train," comes to the Plainfield theatre, for one night only, Saturday, February 11. This piece is an adaption by Harry B. Smith from the German opearta, "Die Ceachiedene Frau," which has been the rage of Europe for the past year. The original story is by Victor Leon, of "Merry Widow" fame, while the music is by Leon Fall, composer of the score for "The Dollar Princess."

COLORED PREACHER DENOUNCED AS FAKIR.

Judge William H. Morrow, of Belvidere, chairman of the committee on the Bordentown school, denounced Rev. I. W. L. Roundtree, of Trenton, a fakir, yesterday, when the claim of the colored preacher for extra compensation as a solicitor for the Industrial School for Colored Youth at Bordentown, was emphatically turned down by the State Board of Education in se sion at Trenton.

Judge Morrow said that when connnected with the institution, Roundtree did not earn his salary. The latter's claim was for $250. Roundtree is well known here, where he has visited many times.

Want Extra Session.

Assemblyman Boettner's resolution, calling upon President Taft to convene the newly-elect Congress in extra session to revise those tariff schedules that are responsible for the high cost of living, was adopted yesterday in the Assembly at Trenton. It was the opinion that it was high time something was done to reduce the cost of living for the American workingman and predictions were made that the country would get no relief until the tariff is revised.

Child Lost and Found.

Lizzie Miller, the seven-year-old daughter of John B. Miller, of 210 Richmond street, disappeared from home at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and could not be located after a diligent search. The city and borough police were notified and at 3 o'clock this morning the child was found at the home of a friend on East Third street. She had appeared there late in the evening tired out and crying and was put to bed by the good housewife.

The young women of St. Mary's parish conducted a euchre and dance last night in the new hall that was formerly part of the convent at Sixth and Liberty streets. The attendance was large and the affair proved a great success. It was the first given in the hall since it was detached from the old structure and turned around so that it now faces Liberty street.

Postpone Annual Meeting.

The Plainfield Riding and Driving Club has postponed its annual meeting for one month, owing to the illness of the president, O. T. Waring. The meeting was to have been held last night, but the club decided to wait until Mr. Waring is able to attend.

MISSION AT GRACE

Program is Announced for Week of Religious Conferences.

TWO SERVICES EACH DAY.

Rev. Charles Fiske to Be in Charge of Special Meetings Beginning on Sunday, February 19.

A series of religious conferences will be held in Grace Episcopal church beginning Sunday, February 19, by Rev. Charles Fiske, rector of the church of St. Michael and All Angels', of Baltimore, M. The services will be held daily in accordance with the appended program. Mr. Fiske comes here at considerable effort to hold these conferences. He is rector of a parish of 1,600 communicants and to give a week of his time here, just before Lent means much to him and his congregation.

Rev. Mr. Stevenson thinks his congregation owes it to Mr. Fiske by attending as many of these services as possible. Rev. Mr. Fiske is especially qualified for the work he comes here to do. He has had experience in conducting missions and he will come with the force of a new voice, to strike a new spiritual note. He was one of the four clergymen sent to San Francisco immediately after the great earthquake to resuscitate its church life, and the work he did there and has done elsewhere is an earnest of what he can do here if given the support he deserves.

These are the services: Sunday, February 19, 11 a. m., "Christ in Common Life;" 3 p. m., Children's service, "The Rule of Life;" 4:30 p. m., "What Seek Ye?" Morning instructions at 10 o'clock and evening service at 8 o'clock during the rest of the week including Saturday and Sunday. Monday, a. m., "The Source of Sacrifice," p. m. The Peril of Unreality." SNOWBALLER LANDS IN THE POLICE COURT.

A general mix-up occurred yesterday afternoon near Liberty and Third street when Edward Coffey and a gang of small boys snowballed Walter Ulmer, of the West End. Ulmer caught Coffey and washed his face in the snow and Coffey made a complaint to the police.

Coffey has a bad record as a stone thrower and Judge DeMeza did not believe his denial when accused of throwing snowballs, as he had received a complaint about the same gang of boys earlier in the day. The police will see to it that the practice is stopped.

BANQUET DETAILS ARE COMPLETED

At the meeting of the various committees of the Chamber of Commerce last night the final details of the coming banquet at Truell Hall were closed up and the prospects are that this banquet will surpass anything of the kind ever given in the city. Decorations of the most elaborate character have been contracted for. An orchestra has been engaged and a precentor to lead the singing of popular songs, a printed copy of which will be at the plate of each diner.

The assignments of places at the various tables has been practically completed and they will be lucky who get tickets for the affair at the last moment. It would be better to subscribe now rather than on the evening of the banquet. Tickets may be obtained from Judge John Ulrich, secretary of the chamber, at his office in the Frost building.

Fallows, of New York city.

W. D. Sargent was identified with the Saurer Motor Truck Company, and the entire capital stock has been purchased by him and his associates, who will assume all assets and liabilities.

C. M. ULRICH DEAD

Former Well Known Plainfielder Passes Away in New York.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE THE CAUSE.

Member of Several Fraternal Orders —Survived By a Wife and Two Children—Judge Ulrich's Brother.

Charles M. Ulrich, a former prominent resident of this city, died yesterday noon at his home, 445 Manhattan avenue, New York. He was taken ill at Denver, Col., several weeks ago and his condition became so serious that he was sent east as far as Chicago in a special car. Members of the Masonic order were in charge of him and continued the trip to the destination. The best possible medical aid was secured, but he steadily sank until the end. Brights' disease and complications were the causes of death.

Mr. Ulrich was born in New York in 1850 and came to Plainfield in 1871 at the solicitation of the late Nathan Harper. The latter was secretary of the Security Fire Insurance Co., by which Mr. Ulrich was employed. The concern sent him to Kansas City soon after he took up his residence in Plainfield and later ordered him to Chicago to assume general management of the business in that city. He was on his way there in 1872 when the great fire broke out which almost swept the place away, and forced the Security Company to fail.

Mr. Ulrich afterwards established the East Side Packing Company in New York and in later years associated himself with Joseph A. Blatz, his brother-in-law, in the same business in this city, the firm name being Ulrich & Blatz. Their plant was located at West Front street and Exchange alley. The concern sold out to another company after time and Mr. Ulrich engaged in other interests. He removed from Plainfield to New York about eight years ago. He went to Denver last spring to assume charge of a concrete plant, continuing his superintendency until his illness began.

Mr. Ulrich was a member of Anchor lodge, No. 149, F. A. M.; a past high priest of Jerusalem chapter, R. A. M.; past chancellor of Perseverance lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and a member of Plainfield council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum. Surviving him are his wife, one son, Carl T. Ulrich, and a daughter, Mrs. Harry Bliss, of Stamford, Conn. He was also brother of former Judge John M. Ulrich, of this city, and Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz, of the borough. The funeral will be held at his late home tomorrow night at 8 o'clock and burial will be in the family plot in the Lutheran cemetery on Long Island.

MacDonald & Ivamy sold about 4,000 tons of ice daily, which is about one-quarter the capacity of the plant The Plainfield Ice and Supply Company has bought out the distributing equipment and good will of MacDonald & Ivamy. All contracts made by the latter firm and which were assumed by he Crystal Ice and Coal Company, will be carried out by the Plainfield Supply Company and the same good service given by MacDonald & Ivamy will be continued.

REAL ESTATE MEN FIGURE IN A SUIT

The suit of William H. Abbott against Carles H. Lyman to recover the balance of a note given by Mr. Lyman to Mr. Abbott in 1899 was called this morning in the district court before Judge William Newcorn, but on application of William A. Coddington, counsel for Mr. Lyman a jury will try the case which has been postponed util next Thursday.

The papers in the case set forth that Mr. Lyman gave Mr. Abbott a note for $270.07 in July, 1899, on which a payment was made in March, 1905, amounting to $132. The suit is for the balance of $138.07, with interest for six years, alleged to be due by Mr. Abbott. Mr. Lyman's defense is that the note was paid by services rendered in selling a property for Mr. Abbott.

Several prominent real estate men will be subpoenaed to serve on the jury.

CANCELLED GAMES CAUSE OF TROUBLE

Physical Director Whittaker, of the Y. M. C. A., attended a meeting of the association physical directors at Newark, yesterday, when among other things there was discussed the trouble experienced this year through the cancelling of basketball games by certain teams. It was learned that the association cannot impose a fine on defaulting teams and the only alternative is for the directors to use their best influence to prevent cancellation.

The Plainfield team has suffered much from this trouble during the season, causing disappointment to supporters of the game. Only recently the Washington Heights team cancelled a game here and yet that night played at Orange. Belleville, which has one of the best teams in the State, and which is scheduled to play here Saturday night, cancelled its first game of the season with Plainfield.

Director Whittaker has been working at a considerable disadvantage in this his first year here, because of a lack of good material for a first team, but he is looking for better results in the future. Despite the handicaps, the team has done fairly good work.

PARENTS MUST SEND CHILDREN TO SCHOOL.

Two Italians, Joseph Genaro and Tony Sunda, both of the East End, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with neglecting to send their children to school. Genaro's thirteen-year-old daughter has failed to attend St. Mary's parochial school regularly and Tony Sunda's two children have been truants too often to allow the matter to pass unnoticed.

Genaro was fined $5 and Sunda was given a suspended sentence of $5 or 20 days in the county jail. The sentence in Sunda's case will be executed if he fails to send the two youngsters to the Lincoln school as directed by Miss Ball, truant officer.

CARNEGIE MAY AID PUBLIC LIBRARY

Report That Philanthropist Will Give $50,000 to Local Institution Lacks Confirmation.

DIRECTORS ARE EVASIVE.

A report was current today that Andrew Carnegie would give $50,000 to further the plans of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room directors, who aim to widen the usefulness of that institution and to obtain more satisfactory quarters for it.

When several of the directors, in turn, were asked the direct question by a Daily Press reporter as to whether the report was correct each declined to make any statement. Some of them evaded the question, while others simply said that they would not talk about it at this time.

It has been known for some time that the quarters were not adequate for the needs of the city and the directors have given much careful thought and attention to a discussion of plans for providing the city with a suitable building.

The utmost secrecy has been maintained about the matter and one of the directors in conversation with a Daily Press reporter today, remarked that he was a little puzzled to know how the matter became public. When told that the report was current, he replied that he did not want to prevent an announcement of the project, but that he could at present give no details.

Dr. Leonard Waldo, to whom The Daily Press reporter was referred for information on the subject, said in answer to the question as to library, that Mr. Carnegie was willing to lend aid to the public library, that Mr. Mr. Carnegie was always willing to render such assistance, but there was a question of terms to be considered and this required considerable thought.

"For a long time," said Dr. Waldo, "the directors have felt the importance of securing larger quarters for the public library, one that would be in keeping with the fine library owned by the city. I sincerely hope that nothing will happen now to upset the plans of the directors. I cannot at this time give any details of the plans under consideration."

Dr. Waldo at the time was on his way to hold a conference with Mayor Moy on the subject, it being his desire to get the ideas of the city executive regarding the proposition. Before the city could accept a gift of money from Andrew Carnegie the Mayor and Council would undoubtedly have to concur and it is with a view to getting the approval of the city government that Dr. Waldo held a conference with the Mayor this afternoon.

When questioned on the subject both C. Boardman Tyler and William M. Stillman, both directors of the Public Library, refused to discuss the matter.

The Women's Missionary Society of Hope chapel met yesterday afternoon, when a nominating committee comprising Mrs. A. S. Eckert, Mrs. A. Aitkens and Mrs. Charles Hughes was named. The committee will report at the meeting to be held Wednesday, March 8. Plans were discussed yesterday for a union missionary meeting at which representatives of the misionary societies of the various denominations will be present. Mrs. G. It is probable that there will be an investigation by Westfield Council as to the cost of the new fire department house. The building was to cost $20,000, but now the committee in charge of the work ask for an extra appropriation of $3,000, to complete the building. Several members of the Council think that the situation should be investigated, though there is no charge of any irregularity.

BASEBALL.

The Jersey City Baseball Club has changed hands. President Edward Barrow, of the Eastern League, was officially notified of the fact Tuesday in Baltimore and announced it to be magnates in session at the Hotel Rennert to make the final preparations for the 1911 campaign and to pass on several suggestions which Barrow, Dunn and several others have to make.

James J. Lillis, a Jersey City lawyer, purchased the franchise from the estate of Robert Davis and secured a lease of West Side Park. The price is said to have been $25,000.

The first official act of the new owner was to give manager Jack Ryan a three-year contract. Lillis the new owner, like his father, was a capital player, and the son for several seasons has managed semi-professional clubs. It is said that he will give Jack Ryan free rein, and the manager alone will be to blame if things don't go right. The club has not been a paying proposition for several years, but the new owners, it is said, will adopt a very liberal policy and buy the best players obtainable. .

Just before the meeting adjourned the committee of the Eastern League Baseball Writers' Association, was received by the magnates. President Sparrow, of the association, requested that the league recognize the association's membership card, and this was granted. At the organization meeting in New York, it was agreed that if the association was recognized by the league each representative, appointed by the association should have absolute control of the press box. The magnates discussed the new organization freely and said they favored the association, declaring it would have their backing. The association will work for the success of the league. The director of the association in Newark is John H. Shields, baseball editor of the News.

Manager Ryan has asked for waivers on Londrigan, who played in the outfield in about twenty games last year. Londrigan did not show much for the Skeeters, and Jack believes the young fellow is a player for the class B teams. Waivers also have been asked on Clement, who is one of the old timers up in Skeetertown. Clement was a fast outfielder at one time and a pretty fair batter, but he has gone back. When Clement was picked up for Jersey City, Billy Murray was manager of the team. Billy was impressed with the speed of Clement, despite the fact that the outfielder was a weak hitter. For weeks Murray practiced Clement at bunting and running to first. Being a left-handed batter, Clement, with his fast legs, soon learned to drop the ball and beat it to first in record-breaking time. When Clement became a sure bunter he was played, and for several seasons he got away with many a base hit that would have been a sure out for many other players.

Manager Joe McGinnity made a suggestion that pleased President Ed Barrow so well that he is going to bring it to the attention of other magnates. The plan suggested was a pay as you enter ball park. The "Iron Man" has been of the opinion for several months that such an arrangement is possible. Instead of ticket sellers the men would be employed as change makers. The idea of standing in line for tickets would be done away with to a great extent. Barrows said that the plan was an excellent one. McGinnity said that he believed the big league ball parks would be using the system before many seasons had gone by.

"Van would try to call the turn on what the pitcher was going to use. If he decided to go after a curve, he never tried tohit anything else. He let many good ones go by because he wasn't prepared to swing, but when the kind he was playing for came up, Van used to murder the ball. He was one of the good hitters for several years.

"Van Haltren's plan reminds me of being peculiarly successful against Jesse Burkett," continued Matty. "Jesse was one of the greatest hitters of his time. The first time I worked against him he hit one of my curves a mile.

"I knew he was waiting for the kind of ball I used and expected I would use curves most of the time. I never gave him another curve, and his first hit was the only one he ever made off me, and I pitched seven games against St. Louis that season."

Baseball at Yale.

The battery candidates for the Yale baseball team reported Tuesday to Captain Allan Corey, of the varsity team. There were forty enrolled in the squad. Orders were given for the candidates to report this afternoon to begin daily cage practice, although the infielders and outfield squad will not report till nearly March 1. Captain Corey stated that no coach for the pitchers would be engaged this season. William Lush, the former Clevelander, will have entire charge of the practice this season.

GOLF.

There is to be something of a contest over the award of the new fixture of the Metropolitan Golf Association—the inter-scholastic championship—for the Plainfield Country Club is an applicant for the affair, in addition to the Fox Hills Club. The Plainfield members think they have an extra good chance of landing the competition, because, despite the size of the organization, the club has no bar. That fact, by the way, explains why the New Jersey and other championships have never been held there.

It is argued that parents will be ready to send their young sons, even from Boston and Philadelphia, to such a club. Plainfield has a large junior list and would enter at least a dozen candidates. Leighton Calkins, who is the father of the whole junior movement, is president of the club, so giving the first of the series to that organization would be particularly appropriate.

Twenty-three clubs out of about sixty had made returns up to yesterday afternoon to the handicap committee of the Metropolitan Golf Association, while two, Glen Ridge and Upper Montclair, telephoned yesterday that their lists were on the way. A dozen or so are expected within the next twenty-four hours, at the end of which period the prescribed time will have elapsed. The returns have started more promptly this year than for several seasons.

An improved water plant is to be installed by the St. Andrews Golf Club this spring. Over $5,000 will be spent on it. The Apawamis Club has arranged to make any changes in the course for the amateur championship to supplement those which have already been planned, that may be suggested by the United States Golf Association. No expense will be spared to make the course the equal of any in the way of bunker "regeneration," which is all that will be needed as Apawamis has long possessed the best turf on the fairway and putting greens.

COL. STEVENS FIFTH ROAD COMMISSIONER

The appointment of Col. E. A. Stevens, of Hoboken, by Governor Woodrow Wilson, as State road commissioner, recalls the fact that he will be the fifth man to fill that office since May 25, 1894, when Edward Burrough, of Camden, was the first appointee to the place. He held the position for one year, dying in office. He was succeeded by Henry I. Budd, of Mt. Holly, who was appointed May 25, 1895 and died in office on January 21, 1905.

E. C. Hutchinson, of Trenton, was the successor of Mr. Budd, serving from January 1905 to 1908. Then Frederick Gilkyson, of Trenton, was appointed in January, 1908, serving to February of the present year. The Legislature will meet on Tuesday, when it is expected that Col. Stevens will be confirmed. It is generally conceded that Col. Stevens will make one of the best road commissioners in the history of the State.

State Supervisor of Roads, R. A. Meeker, of this city, has served in his capacity continuously since July, 1900, entering the office during the term of Commissioner Budd. There is undoubtedly no better informed man concerning roads in the State than Mr. Meeker, and he will be in a position to render valuable assistance to the new road commissioner. Mr. Meeker retains his position under the tenure of office act.

A Base Rumor.

A tramp called at the house of a gentleman and said: "I've walked many miles to see you, sir, because people told me that you was very kind to poor chaps like me."

"Oh, they saidso, did they?"

"Yes, sir, that's why I came."

"And you are going back the same way?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then, in that case, will you be good enough to contradict this rumor?"—California Christian Advocate.

FRANKLIN MINSTRELS TO HAVE ANNIVERSARY

The Franklin minstrel troupe, of this city, which gained fame in the local amateur field and over the "kerosene" circuit, has planned to hold an anniversary dinner on Washington's birthday eve. On that date six years ago the company gave its first show at Scotch Plains and attained such success that it has been maintained ever since. Appropriately enough the dinner will be held in the same village and Landlord Deegan, of the Scotch Plains hotel, will be the host. It is possible that covers will be laid for seventy-five as there are sixty-one members of the troupe all told, and a number of invited guests.

William J. Firstbrook, the initial manager of the Franklinites, will preside as toastmaster at the banquet and prominent amateur minstrel men will make brief addresses. Mr. Firstbrook is being assisted in making the arrangements by George D. Wilson and George Rittenhouse, who were associated with him in the organization of the troupe in 1906.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A plan has been devised by which the congregation of the Presbyterian church at Williamstown hopes to raise $12,000 for the construction of a new edifice.

While Miss Eva Henry, a school teacher, of Bergen county, was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Henry, in Millville, she was stricken with diphtheria, and is in a precarious condition.

Accused of asault and battery on his wife, Charles Deal, a former trolleyman, was committed to jail in default of $300 bail by Justice of the Peace Garrison, in Camden.

Taken suddenly ill near his home at Haddonfield Tuesday night, Isaac Lee Munyon, sixty-six years old, died before medical aid could be summoned. Coroner Litchfield gave a certificate of death from apoplexy.

Because of failing health, Harry T. Nekervis, Tuesday, resigned as cashier of the First National Bank, Camden, and Isaac F. Leech, of Haddonfield who has been receiving teller of the bank's Philadelphia branch, was elected to fill the vacancy.

Edward Dobbs and one of the men on his farm, near Woodbury, who were stunned by lightning last Saturday morning, have not fully recovered from the shock. This is the ninth time in sixteen years that lightning has struck around Mr. Dobb's place.

The matter of increasing salaries of city officials in Lambertville took another turn Tuesday night at the meeting of the council. The council recently passed an ordinance making a general increase in the salaries. Now it seems that the ordinance is void because the final passage was by the new council, and the measure must be reintroduced and go through the entire proceeding again to become effective. No appointments will be made until April in consequence. The old officers are serving until such appointments shall be made.

WASTE PAPER IN CHINA.

An Oriental has a superstitious regard for bread and will not suffer a single crust to fall to earth or be trodden upon. Should a crumb fall he has a little ceremony to go through with—bowing low, lifting it to his lips, touching his forehead with it and so on—before placing it on a wall or other safe place where the fowls of the air may secure it. He calls bread "the gift of God"—that is his name for it—and he reverences it accordingly. The Chinese feel the same way about any waste paper that has writing or printing upon it, and for the same reason. They reverence the Chinese characters, whether whittne or printed, because they regard them as the special gift of heaven to Confucius and the nation. Everywhere, attached to walls and buildings are small, neat basket-like receptacles in which such scraps are placed when found. Some pious soul nearby empties the receptacle and burns the contents to prevent their possible desecration. Should a Chinaman come upon such a scrap and find no receptacle at hand he will search for a hiding place—crack or crevice in the nearest wall—and leave it there safely out of harm's way. The Chinese priesthood are suspicious of all scrap heaps and hunt them over from time to time, lest some bit of paper bearing a single character should be overlooked.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HANDKERCHIEF CASE.

A dainty combined glove and handkerchief case may be made by lining a piece of htick corded or brocaded silk with soft silk, creasing it well down the middle so that it will open and shut like a book and binding it firmly all around with thick ribbon.

On one inside half make a long shaped pocket for gloves. On the other half divide the pockets in two, one half for veils and one for handkerchiefs. On each pocket, outside, wor wkthe name of the article it is to contain.

Fasten ribbon ends to the case so that it can be fastened by tying them when it is shut.

Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will give his lecture on "Eugene Field' at the M. E. church, Woodbridge, this evening.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Dunellen Camp of the P. O. S. of A., is making extensive preparations for the class initiation to be held on February 23. There are already twenty-five candidates in waiting and it is possible there will be several others. The work will be done by the degree team from New Brunswick and will be followed by a general social time. Guests will be present from Bound Brook, Plainfield and other places.

Henry Wrage, of Columbus street, has been quite ill with threatened pneumonia, the result of a heavy cold contracted while viewing the result of the dynamite explosion at Communipaw.

A party of young people from St. John's parish attended the enchre and dance in St. Mary's new hall at Plainfield, Tuesday night.

Miss Katherine Moynihan spent the week end with friends in Dover where she attended the reunion dance of a social club.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Firstbrook, of Westfield, were recent visitors at the home of Captain and Mrs. B. A. Cole.

Mrs. Huff, of Berlin, Conn., has returned home after a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. G. Kinney.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Eastman, of Glen Ridge, have been visiting borough relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. L. Peters recently entertained relatives from Cranford.

J. Y. Wilson was a recent visitor in New York.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Joe Alberts has decided to decline the offer to sign contract for the coming season with the Richmond team. Joe will continue to hold his position at Garwood with the Aeolian Co., playing independent baseball, Saturdays.

The Young People's Choral Union of the Baptist church, are arranging to give a musical in the church in the near future, the date being on or about the 22nd.

Henry Dean, who has been spending several months with friends at Delaware Water Gap, has returned home.

Mrs. M. A. Corrona, of Stanbury avenue, has returned from a visit with friends and relatives in New York.

Charles D. Stout, of Mountain avenue, is enjoying a two months trip visiting points of interest in Europe.

Mrs. W. S. Corey, of Park avenue, has been entertaining friends from out of town.

THE LARGE FAN.

The fashion for wearing butterflies has reached a point of the utmost exasperation, it will be admitted, when all that remains of the butterfly is a pair of hugh antennae made of gold or silver and used for the decoration of a peltry turban.

The large fan is to be a favorite once more, made of fluffy marabout feathers, mounted upon blonde tortoise-shell sticks.

The girls of the present day are less attached to their fans than those of a past generation were but the marabout models will make a potent appeal owing to their beauty.

Fans made of chicken skin painted and mounted upon mother-of-pearls are being sold also; they are of a smaller size than the marabout ones, but distinctly larger than the little models of past years.

Introduced as a decoration for the hair are a couple of high, upstanding ostrich feathers of contrasting shades of color, which, rising from a band of pearl-strewn tulle, make an imposing ornament for a curled chevelure modeled upon the vogues of the First Empire.

Some of the smartest evening frocks have he merest apologies for sleeves; strings of pearls are used instead, and the corsage is supported by little jeweled straps. Dance dresses for girls have a hem of pearls at the sides and caught together by strings of the gems the tufts of blossoms such as tiny white roses or snowdrops.

Engage Athletic Supervisor.

The Playground Commission has engaged Charles R. Bostwick, of the High School faculty, to be the supervisor of the new Stillman Field on Randolph road. Mr. Bostwick is a graduate of Yale and while in college was a member of the college track team. It is claimed that he has every qualification for the position of supervisor. It is expected that the field will be opened in May.

INSPECTOR TO TEST ALL ELECTRIC METERS

The electrical inspector of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners has been directed by the board to make an inspection of the meter departments of the various electric light companies of the State. His report will show the kinds of current supplied by the companies for light and power, the types of meters used in measuring the currents, the capacities of the meters, and the equipment in use by the companies for testing the same.

Attention is to be given by the inspector to the portable equipment, to the equipment located permanently in meter testing shops, where these are maintained, and the methods employed for checking the testing apparatus together with its present condition. Where it may be necessary the inspector has been instructed to give assistance in improving the methods employed in testing meters.

In each case serial numbers of testing instruments will be obtained and these will be used to provide for future identification. It is the idea of the board that eventually each company will be furnished with a certificate certifying to the accuracy of the testing apparatus employed.

POSSIBLE PAPER-MAKING MATERIALS OF THE FUTURE.

The next great step in utilizing farm waste may be a change in the manufacture of paper, as the wood fibre available will probably be exhausted within a few years.

Experiments by the United States Department of Agriculture have shown that almost any long fibre can be used for paper, and that such waste materials as cotton stalks and corn stalks make paper of very good quality—almost equal to linen. Besides these and other wastes, various plants that can be grown or obtained in large quantity are being tried.

Grasses of many kinds are being tested and among them is esparto, an African grass now largely grown in southern Europe, which is being already used for paper for English newspapers.

Bamboo, rice roots, and other plants from Japan and China, are being obtained for study in continuing the search for the paper-making materials of the near future.

P. H. S. NOTES.

These young women have been chosen for the cast of "Six Cups of Chocolate," one of the plays to be presented under the auspices of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School: Misses Ruth Douglas, Anna Smith, Esther Phillips, Elizabeth Hardwick and Caroline Mehl.

Dixon Phillips has been elected president of the Jnior class to succeed Gardner Bristol, who recently left school.

The annual basketball contest between the seniors and the faculty of the High School will take place tomorrow afterndon at 3:30. This game promises to be interesting and exciting.

Had a Fellow Feeling.

The business man was sitting in his office, thinking of starting for home, when a suspicious looking person came in with a leather bag in his hand, relates (London) Illustrated Bits.

"If you don't give me five pounds," sand the visitor, coming at once to the point, "I will drop this on the floor."

The business man was cool. "What The business man was cool. "What's in it?" he asked.

"Dynamite," was the brief reply.

"What will it do if you drop it?"

"Blow you up!"

"Drop it!" was the instant command. "My wife told me when I left home this morning to be sure and send up a bag of flour, and I forgot it. I guess it will take just about as much dynamite as you have there to prepare me for the blowing up I'll get when she sees me!"

He threw himself back in his chair and waited for the explosion, but it did not come.

"I'm a married man myself," said the dynamiter, and quietly slipped out.

No Burglary Says Chief.

A persistent rumor was going the rounds this afternoon that a burglary had been committed in the West End of town and that the robber had gotten away from one of the local patrolmen. When consulted this afternoon Chief of Police Kiely said he knew nothing of the occurrence.

Special Water Report

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL:

Your special Water Committee reports as follows:

Three questions have been considered:

FIRST. Can Plainfield, by means of a contract with the Water Company, assure to the City and its inhabitants the permanent preservation of a supply of pure and wholesome water?

SECOND. Would it be better for the City to own and operate a water supply system, and THIRD. If a contract be not advisable, and it be deemed better for the City to own and operate the system, from what source should the supply be obtained, and how?

In the consideration of these questions your Committee has had the benefit of the various reports on the water question heretofore made to the Common Council, and has also had the benefit of a discussion of the subject by the local press and by many of the citizens who have willingly given much study and attention to the matter and whose intelligent and able discussion has materially aided the Committee, all of which is hereby especially acknowledged.

The history of the water question in Plainfield and the facts with regard thereto have been fully set forth in those reports, the latest being that of Mr. James H. Fuertes, C. E., under date of November 21, 1910.

One additional fact to be stated is, that as a result of the special election held on April 19, 1910, Plainfield now has the right to acquire, by purchase or condemnation, the works of the Water Company, or to construct its own works.

We, therefore, proceed at once to a discussion of the first question, namely:

Can Plainfield, by means of a contract with the Water Company, assure to the City and its inhabitants, permanent preservation of a supply of pure and wholesome water?

At the present time there exists in Plainfield a strong sentiment against the making of a new contract with the Water Company, and while your Committee appreciates the weight of that sentiment, they believe that the question as to whether or not a new contract should be made should not be decided on sentiment, but that the City should decline to enter into a new contract only if it be determined that the interests of the City would not be properly advanced and protected thereby, or that the advantages of a new contract are outweighed by the advantages of municipal ownership of a water system.

At the outset of the discussion it seems appropriate to call attention specially to certain necessary incidents of any contract which could be made between the City and the Water Company.

(a) As to the permanence of such a contract.

Your Committee is advised that under the existing law, a contract could not be made for a period of more than ten years.

Mr. Frank Bergen, President of the Water Company, stated at one of the meetings held by your Committee that if a new contract should be made the Company would be willing to grant the City a privilege of two renewals of ten years each, thus taking care of a period of thirty years. When asked if that was the limit of the renewals, he did not state that it was, but intimated that he considered two renewals enough.

A question was raised as to the binding effect of the options, but your Committee, without deciding the point, has assumed that if a contract be made the agreements for renewals would be binding on the Company and enforceable by the City.

At the end, however, of the contract period and the periods covered by the options, (be they two or more), the contract would be at an end, and the City again brought to a point where it must negotiate anew for a supply of water.

It was stated by Mr. Bergen, that, in his opinion, before the expiration of the next thirty years, the territory lying within the triangle between Elizabeth, Plainfield and Perth Amboy, will be so thickly populated that there will not be enough water available within the triangle to supply the inhabitants thereof. If such be the possibility, (and there is probably no one better qualified than Mr. Bergen himself to correctly forecast the future), a serious question arises as to the wisdom of accepting a contract on the expiration of which the City will have to negotiate anew for a water supply and may then find itself confronted with serious competition from other places, for the water from the Netherwood wells.

Nor would this consequence be obviated by further renewals, for the situation at the end of the last renewal period, be it one or ten, would be the same.

It is a matter of common knowledge, that the available sources of water supply for Plainfield are being rapidly acquired; that water property and franchises are rapidly increasing in value, and it seems reasonable to suppose that in the years to come Plainfield cannot hope to secure a supply available for its needs at less expense than now. Nor does it seem sufficient to suggest that ultimately the State must acquire all sources of water supply for the benefit of its inhabitants. Such a suggestion is, at present, based largely on conjecture, and does not militate against the proposition that Plainfield should not now take a position which will involve the possibility that future negotiations for a supply of water to the City and its inhabitants from the sources within its own territory, may be complicated by competition from other places.

It has also been suggested that a solution of the water question for a period of thirty years, is all that is required in this time. That suggestion, however, involves the idea that if our present path be made easy, future generations may be left to look out for themselves. Your Committee is not impressed with the suggestion. It believes that consideration must now be given to the needs of the City of the future, and that the action now taken should be such as will forestall a recurrence of the present problem at a time when more serious difficulties will have been added by the lapse of time.

(b) As to the Company's relation with its other consumers.

At present the Water Company is supplying places other than Plainfield, from the Netherwood wells, and has declared its purpose to continue to do so. Plainfield is, and will remain, but one of many places to be supplied from that source. Therefore, the supply must, of necessity, be so apportioned as to give water to all, which, in case of a shortage, means that the use of water in Plainfield must be curtailed for the benefit of other places.

The inhabitants of Plainfield want water, not only to drink and to use for domestic and business purposes, but for other purposes. One of the charms of Plainfield is its well-kept lawns and vegetation, for the upkeep of which water is necessary, and for which water is bought. In case of a shortage, a serious question might arise as it has in the past, between the people and the Company, as to the purposes for which water should be used and how much of a supply the Company may be compelled under the contract to provide.

Mr. Bergen has stated that there has always been a sufficient supply for Plainfield, and that the shortage last summer was due to the fact that the people made an irrigation plant of the water works, a purpose for which they were not designed.

During the past summer the water pressure was so low in certain parts of the City that water could not be drawn at the taps in some of the houses, and at that time the Water Company asked the assistance of the City authorities to prevent the use of water for lawn sprinkling. Yet, your Committee is informed, that on the very day on which the Mayor's proclamation was issued in Plainfield, requesting the discontinuance of lawn sprinkling, notice was given by the Water Company, to Westfield, which was then, against its protest, being temporarily furnished with water from a surface supply, that the Water Company would again supply that City from the Netherwood Wells. The fact is suggestive, for if Plainfield must discontinue using water for certain purposes, in order that the Company may have sufficient to supply its other customers, where is the limit of use to be fixed, and what constitutes a sufficient supply?

(c) As to the enforceability of the contract obligations.

Assuming that a contract be made, it necessarily follows that in the course of thirty years situations may arise which cannot now be foreseen and provided for. Questions may arise as to the meaning of the contract, or the rights of other parties whom the Company may then be under obligations to supply with water. No contract can be drawn which will guarantee freedom from litigation, and the City might be obliged, no matter with what care the contract was prepared, to resort to the Courts to compel performance at a time when the City's needs would permit of no delay.

With these suggestions in view, let us now consider the kind of a contract the City would require.

In the actual preparation of a contract many details would have to be considered which it is not necessary to consider here. There are, however, certain fundamental requirements which must be considered.

First. Plainfield should continue to be supplied from the present source. Second. The permanence of a supply should be guaranteed to Plainfield, to the exclusion, if necessary, of other communities. Third. The rates should not be increased.

To meet these requirements, Mr. Bergen has stated that the Water Company is willing to enter into a ten year contract, with two renewals of ten years each, whereby the Company will agree to supply water from the Netherwood wells at the present rates. He also stated that if at any time the supply at Netherwood shall be insufficient for Plainfield, and the other places to be supplied from that source, the Company will agree to discontinue supplying other places from that source and to reserve that supply for Plainfield, and further, that if that supply shall give out, the Company will agree to furnish a supply from some other source.

Passing the question of the temporary character of a contract (and thirty years is a comparatively short time in the life of a City), we come at once to the question as to what, if any, provision can be made whereby the performance of such a contract on the part of the Water Company can be guaranteed.

It should be borne in mind that no money damages would be adequate. If the City needs water and the water is not supplied, no payment of money would be adequate. What the City wants in an emergency is water, not money.

To meet this point, Mr. Bergen suggested that a clause be inserted in the contract as follows:

"15.) That the Company shall continue to supply the City and its inhabitants with water from its wells at Netherwood in said city, and shall not draw water from said source to be used anywhere except in said city, borough, village and municipalities, the Company shall forthwith desist entirely from supplying water from the said source to persons or municipalities outside of said city and Borough of North Plainfield, it being the purpose and intention of this paragraph to secure to said City and Borough an adequate supply of water at all times from said source at Netherwood. The Company, however, shall supply pure and wholesome water in said city from some other source whenever the supply at Netherwood shall become insufficient for the needs of said city and its inhabitants.

"Whenever, and as often as, any question shall arise between the parties hereto as to the quantity of the water supply at Netherwood, and whether it is sufficient for all the municipalities supplied by the Company for the time being, a commission of three competent hydraulic engineers shall be appointed to investigate and report the facts to the parties hereto, with recommendations to secure compliance with this paragraph (15). One member of such commission shall be appointed by the Company, one by the City, and a third shall be chosen by the two so appointed; and in case either party hereto shall neglect or refuse after thirty days' notice to appoint an engineer for the purpose aforesaid, or in case the two engineers appointed as herein provided shall fail or refuse to choose a third within thirty days after their appointment, the American Institute of Mining Engineers is hereby authorized and requested to appoint an engineer on behalf of the party so neglecting or refusing, also to appoint the third engineer in case of failure or refusal of the first and second appointees to agree on a third member of the commission within the time aforesaid. The report of such commission, or the report of any two members thereof, shall be made in writing and in duplicate as soon as practicable, and delivered to the parties hereto. The recommendations contained in any such report for the purpose of securing the performance of this paragraph (15) shall be taken as part of this contract, and compliance therewith may be enforced by appropriate action at law or in equity, and this method of securing compliance with this article shall be in addition to and not in lieu of any and all other proceedings that might be had or taken for that purpose. The recommendations in any such report shall remain in force until revoked or modified by the report of another commission appointed as aforesaid.

"One-half of the compensation of the commissioners appointed as aforesaid, and one-half of the expenses incurred by them in making any such investigation and report, shall be paid by each of the parties hereto."

As bearing on the right of the Company to desist entirely from supplying water from the Netherwood wells to persons or municipalities outside of Plainfield, Mr. Bergen stated that within a few months the Company will have a new and larger source of supply, which by itself will be sufficient for the needs of all the places supplied by the Company outside of Plainfield and which now get water from the Netherwood wells.

Your Committee, after careful consideration, is of the opinion that the plan suggested by Mr. Bergen does not give to Plainfield the guarantee of performance on the part of the Company which Plainfield would require, and, further, that the plan suggested is not a desirable one for Plainfield to accept.

In the first place, no contract should be made whereby the opinion of Plainfield should be subordinated to that of a board of arbitration on which the representative of the Company and a stranger probably unacquainted with the local situation, will, together have the power, over Plainfield's objection, to decide what the requirements and rights of the City shall be from time to time, and whenever disputes shall arise, if Plainfield shall at any time decide that the supply available is insufficient, she would have the power to require the conservation, for her benefit alone, of the supply which nature has provided within her own territory.

In the second place, the appointment of arbitrators and the examination and decision of the questions involved would take time, and because of that fact the object of the clause might be defeated by its very terms.

Mr. Bergen states that such is not the fact, for the reason that by watching the situation Plainfield can always raise the question of sufficiency in plenty of time to enable her to procure action looking to the prevention of a shortage. While that may be true in theory, it may not be true in practice.

Previous to last summer, the Water Company has always assured the City that there was a sufficient supply. Whenever a question has been raised as to the insufficiency of the water pressure for fire purposes, (as it has been on several occasion), the reason for the lowering of the pressure, as given by the Water Company, has been that some one left a hydrant open and it froze, or some such cause,—but never that the supply was insufficient. Mr. Bergen stated that even during the shortage of last summer, there was a sufficient supply of water, and that the reason for the shortage was that the people used the plant for irrigation purposes and the Company could not pump as much as was drawn. During all the years gone by, the City has accepted the Water Company's assurance that there was a sufficient supply for all purposes, and judging from previous experience, it would do so in the future.

There is a reason for this, in that one of the very purposes of a contract is to dispense with the need of a City department charged with any responsibility for the water supply. Nor is there any representative of the City having any special or direct responsibility in the matter. Such conditions are not calculated to keep alive any spirit of independent watchfulness, and everybody's business being nobody's business, it is natural to suppose that persons not expert in such matters would fail to be alarmed by each particular lowering of the water table for which undoubtedly a plausible excuse could invariably be presented, and that the City, relying on well meant assurances of safety, might not realize the possibility of a shortage until actually confronted with it.

If a contract, such as is now proposed, should be made, and a shortage should occur, the very object sought to be obtained would be thwarted. Under such a contract, in the event that a shortage does occur, Plainfield can give notice and appoint an arbitrator; the Company can wait for thirty days and then appoint its arbitrator. If these two disagree, as to the third arbitrator, another thirty days must elapse, at the end of which the American Institute of Mining Engineers can appoint a third—sixty days will have then elasped before an investigation can be begun. A further time will be necessary for the investigation, and, at the end of these several periods, (during all of which the shortage may have continued) a report will be made, the recommendations in which are to become part of the contract.

But, in the meantime, what of Plainfield? If the pressure should be low and a severe fire loss should result, of what use would be a recommendation for increased pressure, made after the fire occurred? In one day an irretrievable loss may be sustained, and no recommendation thereafter made will indemnify against it.

Nor does the fact that the Water Company is increasing the size of its plant guarantee immunity from such a situation. The size of the plant is not being increased solely to care for Plainfield, but to care for Plainfield and the other places to be supplied from the same source. We know the present population served from Netherwood, and can estimate its needs, but we cannot even approximate the increase in the population of the territory. The population of the territory to be served is bound to increase in large proportions, and the time may soon come when even with its enlarged plant the Company will find itself pushed to the utmost to supply the demand, and the situation will then be no different from that of the past Summer.

But, even assuming that the City should decide in time that the supply was insufficient, and be able to persuade the arbitrators that the belief was well founded, and they so report and make a recommendation looking to the increasing or conserving of the supply, the increase or conservation is not thereby guaranteed. If the contract simply provided that the Company would supply a sufficient amount of water, and no arbitration clause was inserted in the contract, the Company might be liable in law for such damages as should result from its failure so to do, but resort to the law would be necessary to enforce the liability. The addition of the clause suggested does not alter the situation. That clause provides that the recommendations contained in the report of the arbitrators shall be taken as a part of the contract "and compliance therewith may be enforced by appropriate action at law or in equity," that is to say, if the Company does not comply with the recommendations of the report, legal proceedings may be taken to compel such compliance. In other words, the arbitrators may be appointed, the report may be made, and the recommendations may become part of the contract, but unless the Company is then willing and able, voluntarily to comply with the recommendations, the City must go to law to compel such compliance.

Nor would the City even then be sure that such enforcement could be had. At the present time the property of the Water Company is mortgaged in a large amount, and your Committee is informed that plans are now under contemplation for enlarging the mortgage. The contract with Plainfield would be subject to that mortgage. The recommendations of the arbitrators, made solely for the purpose of caring for Plainfield, might be such that compliance therewith would necessitate a large expenditure of money, much larger, in fact, than, in the opinion of the Company, would be justified by the revenues derived from Plainfield. In that event the parties then interested in the Company, by causing it to default on its bonds, could obtain a foreclosure of the mortgage, a sale of the property mortgaged, and the formation of a new Company, which would not be obligated by the terms of Plainfield's contract.

In the third place, the adoption of the suggestion is deemed inadvisable, because of the apparent agreement on the part of the City, that the Water Company may take water from Plainfield for other places.

With respect to this point, the terms of the contract suggested are so framed that the entire effect thereof is not at once apparent.

The language is as follows:

"That the parties hereto * * * do hereby covenant and agree each with the other as follows:" * * * "(15) That the Company shall continue to supply the City and its inhabitants with water from its wells at Netherwood in said City and shall not draw water from said source to be used anywhere except in said City, the borough of North Plainfield, the village of Scotch Plains, and the municipalities along the Central Railroad of New Jersey, between Plainfield and Elizabeth, not including Elizabeth, which are now supplied with water from said source, but the mains in the said city, borough, village and municipalities may be extended from time to time as their growth may require, provided that whenever it shall appear that the supply of water at Netherwood is not sufficient for the needs of said city, borough, village and municipalities, the Company shall forthwith desist entirely from supplying water from the said source to persons or municipalities outside of said city and Borough of North Plainfield, it being the purpose and intention of this paragraph to secure to said City and Borough an adequate supply of water at all times from said source at Netherwood. The Company, however, shall supply pure and wholesome water in said city from some other source whenever the supply at Netherwood shall become insufficient for the needs of said city and its inhabitants.

"Whenever, and as often as, any question shall arise between the parties hereto as to the quantity of the water supply at Netherwood, and whether it is sufficient for all the municipalities supplied by the Company for the time being, a commission of three competent hydraulic engineers shall be appointed to investigate and report the facts to the parties hereto, with recommendations to secure compliance with this paragraph (15). One member of such commission shall be appointed by the Company, one by the City, and a third shall be chosen by the two so appointed; and in case either party hereto shall neglect or refuse after thirty days' notice to appoint an engineer for the purpose aforesaid, or in case the two engineers appointed as herein provided shall fail or refuse to choose a third within thirty days after their appointment, the American Institute of Mining Engineers is hereby authorized and requested to appoint an engineer on behalf of the party so neglecting or refusing, also to appoint the third engineer in case of failure or refusal of the first and second appointees to agree on a third member of the commission within the time aforesaid. The report of such commission, or the report of any two members thereof, shall be made in writing and in duplicate as soon as practicable, and delivered to the parties hereto. The recommendations contained in any such report for the purpose of securing the performance of this paragraph (15) shall be taken as part of this contract, and compliance therewith may be enforced by appropriate action at law or in equity, and this method of securing compliance with this article shall be in addition to and not in lieu of any and all other proceedings that might be had or taken for that purpose. The recommendations in any such report shall remain in force until revoked or modified by the report of another commission appointed as aforesaid.

"One-half of the compensation of the commissioners appointed as aforesaid, and one-half of the expenses incurred by them in making any such investigation and report, shall be paid by each of the parties hereto."

As bearing on the right of the Company to desist entirely from supplying water from the Netherwood wells to persons or municipalities outside of Plainfield, Mr. Bergen stated that within a few months the Company will have a new and larger source of supply, which by itself will be sufficient for the needs of all the places supplied by the Company outside of Plainfield and which now get water from the Netherwood wells.

Your Committee, after careful consideration, is of the opinion that the plan suggested by Mr. Bergen does not give to Plainfield the guarantee of performance on the part of the Company which Plainfield would require, and, further, that the plan suggested is not a desirable one for Plainfield to accept.

In the first place, no contract should be made whereby the opinion of Plainfield should be subordinated to that of a board of arbitration on which the representative of the Company and a stranger probably unacquainted with the local situation, will, together have the power, over Plainfield's objection, to decide what the requirements and rights of the City shall be from time to time, and whenever disputes shall arise, if Plainfield shall at any time decide that the supply available is insufficient, she would have the power to require the conservation, for her benefit alone, of the supply which nature has provided within her own territory.

In the second place, the appointment of arbitrators and the examination and decision of the questions involved would take time, and because of that fact the object of the clause might be defeated by its very terms.

Mr. Bergen states that such is not the fact, for the reason that by watching the situation Plainfield can always raise the question of sufficiency in plenty of time to enable her to procure action looking to the prevention of a shortage. While that may be true in theory, it may not be true in practice.

Previous to last summer, the Water Company has always assured the City that there was a sufficient supply. Whenever a question has been raised as to the insufficiency of the water pressure for fire purposes, (as it has been on several occasion), the reason for the lowering of the pressure, as given by the Water Company, has been that some one left a hydrant open and it froze, or some such cause,—but never that the supply was insufficient. During all the years gone by, the City has accepted the Water Company's assurance that there was a sufficient supply for all purposes, and judging from previous experience, it would do so in the future.

There is a reason for this, in that one of the very purposes of a contract is to dispense with the need of a City department charged with any responsibility for the water supply. Nor is there any representative of the City having any special or direct responsibility in the matter. Such conditions are not calculated to keep alive any spirit of independent watchfulness, and everybody's business being nobody's business, it is natural to suppose that persons not expert in such matters would fail to be alarmed by each particular lowering of the water table for which undoubtedly a plausible excuse could invariably be presented, and that the City, relying on well meant assurances of safety, might not realize the possibility of a shortage until actually confronted with it.

A further time will be necessary for the investigation, and, at the end of these several periods, (during all of which the shortage may have continued) a report will be made, the recommendations in which are to become part of the contract.

But, in the meantime, what of Plainfield? If the pressure should be low and a severe fire loss should result, of what use would be a recommendation for increased pressure, made after the fire occurred? In one day an irretrievable loss may be sustained, and no recommendation thereafter made will indemnify against it.

Nor does the fact that the Water Company is increasing the size of its plant guarantee immunity from such a situation. The size of the plant is not being increased solely to care for Plainfield, but to care for Plainfield and the other places to be supplied from the same source. We know the present population served from Netherwood, and can estimate its needs, but we cannot even approximate the increase in the population of the territory. The population of the territory to be served is bound to increase in large proportions, and the time may soon come when even with its enlarged plant the Company will find itself pushed to the utmost to supply the demand, and the situation will then be no different from that of the past Summer.

But, even assuming that the City should decide in time that the supply was insufficient, and be able to persuade the arbitrators that the belief was well founded, and they so report and make a recommendation looking to the increasing or conserving of the supply, the increase or conservation is not thereby guaranteed. If the contract simply provided that the Company would supply a sufficient amount of water, and no arbitration clause was inserted in the contract, the Company might be liable in law for such damages as should result from its failure so to do, but resort to the law would be necessary to enforce the liability. The addition of the clause suggested does not alter the situation. That clause provides that the recommendations contained in the report of the arbitrators shall be taken as a part of the contract "and compliance therewith may be enforced by appropriate action at law or in equity," that is to say, if the Company does not comply with the recommendations of the report, legal proceedings may be taken to compel such compliance. In other words, the arbitrators may be appointed, the report may be made, and the recommendations may become part of the contract, but unless the Company is then willing and able, voluntarily to comply with the recommendations, the City must go to law to compel such compliance.

The contract with Plainfield would be subject to that mortgage. The recommendations of the arbitrators, made solely for the purpose of caring for Plainfield, might be such that compliance therewith would necessitate a large expenditure of money, much larger, in fact, than, in the opinion of the Company, would be justified by the revenues derived from Plainfield. In that event the parties then interested in the Company, by causing it to default on its bonds, could obtain a foreclosure of the mortgage, a sale of the property mortgaged, and the formation of a new Company, which would not be obligated by the terms of Plainfield's contract.

In the third place, the adoption of the suggestion is deemed inadvisable, because of the apparent agreement on the part of the City, that the Water Company may take water from Plainfield for other places.

With respect to this point, the terms of the contract suggested are so framed that the entire effect thereof is not at once apparent.

The language is as follows:

"That the parties hereto * * * do hereby covenant and agree each with the other as follows:" * * * "(15) That the Company shall continue to supply the City and its inhabitants with water from its wells at Netherwood in said City and shall not draw water from said source to be used anywhere except in said City, the borough of North Plainfield, the village of Scotch Plains, and the municipalities along the Central Railroad of New Jersey, between Plainfield and Elizabeth, not including Elizabeth, which are now supplied with water from said source, but the mains in the said city, borough, village and municipalities may be extended from time to time as their growth may require, provided that whenever it shall appear that the supply of water at Netherwood is not sufficient for the needs of said city, borough, village and municipalities, the Company shall forthwith desist entirely from supplying water from the said source to persons or municipalities outside of said city and borough of North Plainfield, it being the purpose and intention of this paragraph to secure to said city and borough an adequate supply of water at all times from said source of water supply at Netherwood."

These paragraphs embody two agreements, one expressed in words, the other implied. The expressed agreement is, that the Company shall not draw water at Netherwood to be used anywhere except in Plainfield, North Plainfield, Scotch Plains and the municipalities between Plainfield and Elizabeth, but included in that expressed agreement is an implied agreement that the Company may draw water from Netherwood for all of such municipialities.

Considerable doubt has always existed as to the right of the Company to supply water from the Netherwood wells to places other than those mentioned in the charter of The Plainfield Water Supply Company, namely, Plainfield and adjoining towns, and in view of such doubt, it seems most inadvisable to now enter into a contract whereby the City would appear to recognize the right of the Company to supply towns other than those mentioned, and perhaps thereby stop it therefrom raising the question should the necessity therefor ever arise.

Various changes in the plan proposed by Mr. Bergen have been suggested.

It was suggested that if at any time the supply at Netherwood should become insufficient for Plainfield, the Company should agree to thereupon cease to supply the other communities with water from that source until it should be determined by arbitration that the supply was not insufficient. Mr. Bergen's reply to this suggestion was that it was hardly fair to the Company or to the other communities. It was further suggested that if the water level should fall below a certain point, no water should thereafter be pumped out of Plainfield until the level should rise again to a certain point; that the period of selecting arbitrators be shortened, etc., but, in the opinion of your Committee, no such scheme would be sufficient.

In the report of the Water Investigating Committee of January 4, 1909, the following statement is made:

"The permanent preservation by the City of its water supply is without doubt the question of first importance. The question of economy is secondary, and although important in its turn, the matter of cost is not to be compared with the seriousness of those consequences which would result from loss of the control of our water supply. It must be borne in mind that the difficulties of the situation are bound to increase, and whatever the obstacles or however great the cost may be at the present time, they are not going to be any less at any time in the future. It is, therefore, important that whatever remedy shall be adopted at this time shall not fall short of a permanent solution of the problem. A contract which would fail to cover all important points, or should be temporary in its duration, would merely put off the evil day when the problem of the City's water supply must be met and solved. While contemplating the difficulties and giving full consideration to the cost, it will also be well not to forget the inevitable necessity of meeting the ultimate question and finding the permanent solution."

Your Committee agrees with that statement, and after a careful consideration of the whole matter, has reached the conclusion that the permanent preservation to the City and its inhabitants of a pure and wholesome water supply, cannot be assured by the making of a new contract with the Water Company, and we are thus brought to the second question, viz.:

Would it be better for the City to own and operate a water supply system?

In 1894, Mr. George H. Frost, Mr. E. N. Erickson and Mr. S. A. Ginna, Committee on Water and Sewerage, made a report, in which, after setting forth the facts with regard to Plainfield's water supply, and the consequences of excessive pumping, "which," as they state, "directly concerns the people of Plainfield," they made the following statement:

"The remedy for this condition of our public water supply is to secure a sufficient water shed as free from contaminating influences as possible, and take from it only such supply as is needed by the citizens of Plainfield and such adjoining communities as can safely be supplied."

Later, in 1905, Mr. Joseph O. Osgood, Mr. William L. Saunders and Mr. Benjamin S. Church, after making an investigation of the water question, stated their conclusions as follows:

"1st. We are of the opinion that it will be to the benefit of the City of Plainfield as a measure of economy, as well as for other reasons, to own its water supply system, although we do not look for any great reduction in the existing rates as a result of such ownership.

"2nd. Outside of the question of immediate economy in operating, we are of the opinion, on broader grounds that the City should own its water supply system, our reasons for this conclusion may be briefly outlined as follows:

"The conditions at Plainfield are such that it is entirely practicable for the city to obtain water within its limits at moderate cost, and in view of its needs for flushing sewers, hydrant supply and street sprinkling, as well as for domestic uses, there seems to be ample reason to expect that a water supply system could be profitably operated by the city and it would be greatly to its advantage to control the situation rather than to have the water works in the hands of an independent company. At present the streets of the city are torn up not only by the city in constructing, taking care of and connecting with its sewers, but by an independent water company and a gas company in laying water and gas mains, maintaining them and making frequent new connections. It seems to us evident that the city can to a great extent control the tearing up of its streets and prevent this being done by outside parties, it can effect a very material saving in the maintenance of its streets and obtain better streets at a less cost than at present.

"In view of the large consolidations now taking place all over the country, it is perfectly possible that if the water supply remain in the hands of a private corporation, they may become part of a large system and the interests of Plainfield be subordinated to those of the controlling company, or indeed to those of some other community.

"It is plain to us that the underground waters of Plainfield should first be made use of for the people of Plainfield and apparently the only way to make sure of this is for the city to own and control its water supply. At present a considerable portion of the water pumped in the city is piped to other places. There may be no objection to this at present owing to the abundance of the supply, but with the growth of the city the time may not be very far distant when the Water Company must exercise a choice between supplying Plainfield, or supplying other communities, and it is by no means sure that when the time comes, Plainfield will have the preference, and if it does, it may be made to pay dearly for the privilege.

"It should be mentioned in this connection that the tendency in late years, due to more extended experience in such matters, has been for communities to acquire their water works which formerly were owned by private corporations, and when new works are required, for communities to build them rather than to resort to the aid of private companies.

"As noted above, the conditions in Plainfield are especially favorable to the owning of the works by the city, due to the copious supply of water of good quality under the ground within the city limits.

"The city has already constructed a system of sewers to carry away the water supply after it has served its purpose, and with it the waste products of the city, and in order to preserve the purity of its underground water supply must from time to time extend its sewer system at considerable expense. The water supply and the sewerage system are mutually interdependent, and it would seem could best be handled together."

The question now under consideration was thus definitely answered by those gentlemen after careful investigation. The investigation by your Committee has the same result. To make sure that Plainfield's water supply shall be permanently conserved for Plainfield, the City must own and control the supply. Such a result cannot be otherwise obtained, and unless Plainfield is to be satisfied with something less, it should now and for all time be secured.

In the last analysis, after testing all questions of finance, engineering and law, and indeed quite independently of the result of those tests, the fundamental and distinguishing element of difference between the two possible courses of procedure, viz., municipal ownership or a contract with the Water Company, will clearly appear. On the one hand, there is the exclusive possession of the whole of a sufficient supply, on the other, a right to draw upon, or share in that supply in common with others.

Your Committee has no disposition to distrust the motives or suspect the good faith of the Water Company and its able management. But the fact remains that, conceding the best motives to the Company, and its willingness and ability to meet all its contract obligations, and perhaps even to anticipate them, not only are the Netherwood wells simply one of the sources of water supply of the Plainfield-Union Water Company, but that Company in turn is only one of the many companies now in control of the water supplies, including most if not all of those available for Plainfield.

By making a new contract with the Water Company, the City accepts a contract share in a great and growing system of water supply, combined with a preference upon the waters from the Netherwood wells. At the same time, we are aware that the Company has thousands of contracts for supplying water to individuals in other towns, from its several sources, including those same Netherwood wells. The effect of a contract is to bring about an agreement whereby it is understood by all parties that they are to draw from the same common source or group of sources of supply for the needs of all. It is an arrangement for sharing the supply, with a preference to one of the share takers, in respect of which preference the others are not consulted. That preference, if valid, will at all events be enforced, no further, in case of shortage, than absolute necessity shall require. It is true that the ownership of the supply involves trouble, uncertainty and a large expenditure, but it has the advantage that the supply is Plainfield's for all time, to be made larger or small as may be required for Plainfield's needs. If Plainfield wants only the bare necessities of a meagre water supply, it can so economize, but if, in addition to having water for public and domestic use, it wants an irrigating plant to maintain its lawns and gardens in times of heat and drought, no other towns need be consulted.

Your Committee is unanimously of the opinion that it would be better for the City to own and operate a water supply system; that a new contract should not be made with the Water Company, but that immediate steps should be taken for the acquiring of a municipal supply, and we are thus brought to the third question, namely:

From what source should the supply be obtained?

Of the various sources of supply discussed in Mr. Fuertes' report, four are surface supplies, and one an underground supply.

Of the four surface supplies, Mr. Fuertes concludes that the Lamington River supply is the most desirable.

Much has been said in regard to the advisability of acquiring that supply, and many cogent reasons advanced as to the wisdom thereof. Two reasons in particular have been advanced, (1) that the cost of operation of a gravity supply (such as the Lamington River), is less than the cost of operating a pumped supply, and (2) that a visible surface supply can be more accurately measured and safely forecasted than an underground supply.

Your Committee is of the opinion that the question of operating expense, while deserving of careful consideration, should not be decisive of the larger problem, and that if the City's present source of supply can be continued and conserved, the inhabitants of Plainfield would prefer it to a surface supply.

With respect to the second reason, it may be conceded that a visible source of supply is generally preferable to an invisible one, but the underground supply of Plainfield is not new or untried. The situation in Plainfield is unique. Beneath the City are two sources of supply, each independent of the other, and each yielding water in large volume.

This important fact has been demonstrated by Mr. Fuertes, whose examinations and tests of the wells in the neighborhood of Plainfield and over a large territory in this part of the State, show conclusively that there is a supply in the rock formation between the gravel beds, which, when tapped, rises to a higher or a different level from the level to which the upper water supply rises. The fact that the two supplies are under different pressure, indicates that they are from different sources, and Mr. Fuertes gives it as his opinion that the lower water in the rock formation will prove to be a new supply, independent of and quite as abundant as the gravel supply. The upper supply in the gravel bed has now been drawn on for many years from one central point, and has produced a supply which has, at all times, been more than sufficient for Plainfield alone.

The deep well pumps at the Water Company's plant have only recently been installed, but Mr. Bergen informs us that the two pumps already at work yield about 600,000 gallons each per day, and that it is anticipated that when the ten wells contemplated are in operation they will yield an average of at least 400,000 gallons each per day.

Mr. Osgood, Mr. Saunders and Mr. Church in their report in 1905, said:

"The conditions in Plainfield are especially favorable to the owning of the works by the city, due to the copious supply of water of good quality under the ground within the city limits."

And Mr. Fuertes in 1910, after a thorough examination, says, in his report:

"It is my judgment that the sufficient quantity of water could be had from the shale or sandstone formations in the neighborhood of Plainfield for the supply of that City independently of the works of the Plainfield-Union Water Company."

The Engineering Committee of the Water Investigating Committee of 1909, said, with respect to this matter:

"It may be stated, however, that with the information now before us, we are of the opinion that no other source of water supply for the city and borough should be considered so long as the underground water which the Plainfield-Union Water Company now taps with its wells is sufficient for the needs of the community."

Your Committee believes that that opinion voices the sentiment of the large majority of the Plainfield people.

While it is true that the limits of the underground water supply cannot be accurately established, it seems also true that the water which can be pumped from the gravel only at the Netherwood wells is abundantly sufficient for the needs of Plainfield alone, and that such sufficiency has been clearly established by the experience of twenty years of pumping. In addition to that, we now have the opinion of an eminent engineer and expert in the matter of water supply, that there is an independent supply of equal or greater volume available in the rock formation beneath the gravel beds. This new fact coupled with the fact that the present sources could be largely added to by the sinking of wells in other parts of our territory, renders it exceedingly probable that there is water enough within the limits of the City of Plainfield to supply all the needs of the inhabitants thereof, for all time to come, provided this supply can be conserved for the inhabitants of the territory beneath which the water lies, and your Committee is therefore, unanimously of the opinion that the source of supply to be selected by Plainfield should be the underground supply in Plainfield, and we thus come to the final inquiry in the third question, namely:

How should the supply be acquired?

This question involves the larger question as to whether or not the City, in acquiring its supply, can so proceed as to assure and conserve for all time for the City and its inhabitants, the water which, naturally, belongs to them.

Such permanent conservation is the chief result to be obtained, and to the majority of your Committee (Mr. Hoff dissenting), it seems apparent that the best way to obtain it is to acquire, if possible, the plant and distributing system of the Water Company, and also its right to pump within such territorial limits as it may be necessary to reserve for the complete protection of the Plainfield supply.

If the City cannot acquire, at a reasonable cost, not only the pumping station, wells and distributing system of the Water Company, but also its right to pump at any point from which the Plainfield supply could be depleted, the permanent preservation of the supply would seem to be assured.

Such a result can only be brought about, however, by voluntary agreement between the City and the Company or by condemnation. Mr. Bergen has stated that the Company is not willing to sell, therefore, no voluntary agreement can be made.

But further, if a municipal plant is to be established, it will be necessary in any event for the City to acquire the distributing system of the Water Company, and if an independent plant be installed, it will also be necessary to acquire the Company's right to pump at such points other than the Netherwood wells as would tap the source of the independent supply. Mr. Bergen has also stated that the Company will not sell its distributing system. Therefore, to acquire it, condemnation proceedings must be had.

In order, then, to acquire a municipal supply, either by taking over the necessary property and rights of the Water Company, or by means of an independent plant, condemnation proceedings must be had.

The cost of a proceeding to condemn the wells, and distributing system of the Company, together with so much of its franchise rights as may be necessary to accomplish the public purposes in view, would not be much, if any, greater than the cost of condemning the distributing system and the right to pump elsewhere than at the Netherwood wells. Nor would the period of litigation be prolonged thereby, for similar legal questions would be involved in either proceeding, and the majority of your Committee are of the opinion that inasmuch as such proceedings must be had, in any event, if the City is to acquire its own supply, they should be such as will, if possible, result in the acquiring of all the necessary rights and property.

Nor is such opinion altered by the fact that such proceedings may extend beyond the term of the present contract.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company was organized for the purpose of supplying water to Plainfield and adjoining towns. The obligation so to do is now imposed on the Plainfield-Union Water Company. If the present contract expires, water must still be supplied and if no contract rates are in force and a dispute arises with regard thereto, the Courts will compel the Company to furnish water at a reasonable rate. Mr. Craig A. Marsh, Corporation Counsel, during his lifetime so advised, and inasmuch as the Company has offered to supply water at present rates for thirty years, it seems improbable that any Court would permit them to be raised during the period necessary to complete the condemnation proceedings.

Definite figures as to the cost of acquiring such rights and property cannot now be given, nor can definite figures be given as to the income to be derived from the operation of a municipal plant, but they can be obtained through the medium of condemnation, and before proceeding to install an independent plant they should be.

The cost of the works and property owned by the Company in Plainfield and North Plainfield on April 30, 1907, was stated by the Company to be $429,297.72 (Report of the Water Investigating Committee of 1909 at page 18). Mr. Fuertes, in 1910, estimated the net physical value of street mains and accessories in Plainfield at $247,818.55 (page 51 of his report), and the value of the present wells, pumping station and ground in the vicinity. The city already owns land which gives access to this tract from Randolph Road close to the trolley line. The presence of the brook or other surface water would not interfere in any way with the wells, as they are so deep that no surface water reaches them.

Those who are familiar with this location must, I think, be impressed with the possibilities of such a development and if these two projects could be carried out, Plainfield would, at one and the same time secure two most valuable acquisitions.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

"Never mind," replied Cavanagh. "I'm still free from any touch of fever. I'm tired, of course, but good for another night of it. My main anxiety concerns Lee. Get her to go home with you if you can."

"I'll do the best I can," responded Redfield, "but meanwhile you must not think of getting out of the forest service. I have some cheering news for you. The president has put a good man into the chief's place."

Cavanagh's face lighted up. "That'll help some," he exclaimed. "But who's the man?"

Redfield named him. "He was a student under the chief, and the chief says he's all right, which satisfies me. Furthermore, he's a real forester and not a political jobber or a corporation attorney."

"That's good," repeated Cavanagh, "and yet," he said sadly, "it leaves the chief out just the same."

"No; the chief is not out. He's where he can fight for the idea to better advantage than when he was a subordinate under another man. Anyhow, he asks us all to line up for the work and not to mind him. The work, he says, is bigger than any man. Here's that resignation of yours," he said, taking Cavanagh's letter from his pocket. "I didn't put it on file. What shall I do with it?"

"Throw it to me," said Cavanagh curtly.

Redfield tossed it over the hitching pole, and Ross took it up, looked at it for a moment in silence, then tore it into bits and threw it on the ground.

"What are your orders, Mr. Supervisor?" he asked, with a faint, quizzical smile around his eyes.

"There's nothing you can do but take care of this man. But as soon as you are able to ride again I've got some special work for you. I want you to join with young Bingham, the ranger on Rock creek, and line up the Triangle cattle. Murphy is reported to have thrown on the forest nearly a thousand head more than his permit calls for. I want you to see about that. Then complete your maps so that I can turn them in on the 1st of November, and about the middle of December you are to take charge of this forest in my stead. Eleanor has decided to take the children abroad for a couple of years, and as I am to be over there part of the time I don't feel justified in holding down the supervisor's position. I shall resign in your favor. Wait now!" he called warningly. "The district forester and I framed all this up as we rode down the hill yesterday, and it goes. Oh, yes, there's one thing more. Old man Dunn"—

"I know,"

"How did you learn it?"

"A reporter came boiling over the ridge about noon today wanting me to give him the names which Dunn had given me. I was strongly tempted to do as he asked me to—you know these newspaper men are sometimes the best kind of detectives for running down criminals—but on second thought I concluded to wait until I had discussed the matter with you. I haven't much faith in the county authorities."

"Ordinarily I would have my doubts myself," replied Redfield, "but the whole country is roused, and we're going to round up these men this time sure. The best men and the big papers all over the west are demanding an exercise of the law, and the reward we have offered"— He paused suddenly. "By the way, that reward will come to you if you can bring about the arrest of the criminals."

"The reward should go to Dunn's family," replied the ranger soberly. "Poor chap, he's sacrificed himself for the good of the state."

"That's true. His family is left in bad shape"—

Cavanagh broke off the conversation suddenly. "I must go back to"— He had almost said "back to Wetherford. "My patient needs me!" he exclaimed.

"How does he seem?"

"He's surely dying. In my judgment he can't last the night, but so long as he's conscious it's up to me to be on the spot."

Redfield walked slowly back across the river, thinking on the patient courage of the ranger.

"It isn't the obvious kind of thing, but it's courage all the same," he said to himself.

Meanwhile Lize and Virginia, left alone beside the fire, had drawn closer together.

The girl's face, so sweet and so pensive, wrought strongly upon the older woman's sympathy. Something of her own girlhood came back to her. Being freed from the town and all its associations, she became more considerate, more thoughtful. She wished to speak, and yet she found it very hard to begin. At last she said, with a touch of mockery in her tone, "You like Ross Cavanagh almost as well as I do myself, don't you?"

The girl flushed a little, but her eyes remained steady. "I would not be here if I did not," she replied.

"Neither would I. Well, now, I have got something to tell you—something I ought to have told you long ago, something that Ross ought to know. I intended to tell you that first day you came back, but I couldn't somehow get to it, and I kept putting it off till—well, then I got fond of you, and every day made it harder." Here she made her supreme effort. "Child, I'm an old bluff. I'm not your mother at all."

Lee stared at her in amazement. "What do you mean?" she asked.

"I mean your real mother died when you was a tiny little babe. You see, I was your father's second wife—in fact, you weren't a year old when we married. Ed made me promise never to let you know. We were to bring you up just the same as if you was a child to both of us. Nobody knows but Reddy I told him the day we started up here."

"I'M NOT YOUR MOTHER AT ALL."

The girl's mind ran swiftly over the past as she listened. The truth of the revelation reached her instantly, explaining a hundred strange things which had puzzled her all her life. The absence of deep affection between herself and Lize was explained. Their difference in habit, temperament, thought—all became plain. "But my mother," she said at last—"who was my mother?"

"I never saw her. You see, Ed came into the country, bringing you, a little, motherless babe. He always said your mother was a fine woman, but I never so much as saw a picture of her. She was an educated woman, he said—a southern woman—and her name was Virginia, but that's about all I can tell you of her. Now I am going to let Ross know all of this as soon as I can. It will make a whole lot of difference in what he thinks of you."

REV. DR. EATON RAISES $200,000 ENDOWMENT

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church in New York, announced to his congregation at the annual meeting last night that $200,000 had been raised for the endowment fund of the church. One of the contributions was for $100,000, but the donor's name was not mentioned. It is Doctor Eaton's purpose to raise the endowment fund of the church to $500,000 within the next two years and by that time the site of the church will be worth $1,000,000.

A committee of nine members was appointed last night to assist Dr. Eaton in raising the balance of $300,000. The purposes of the endowment were not given.

FANS ARE PLANNING FOR BASEBALL TEAM.

Plans are being discussed for the formation of an athletic association here for the promotion of baseball and other sports during the coming season. There are a great many baseball fans who believe that the city is entitled to a representative ball team, one that will be able to furnish a first-class article of ball and meet the strongest semi-professional clubs in the State and New York. For the past two years, there has been little interest in the game here, the teams representing the city being more or less amateur and putting up that class of ball. The fans are getting hungry for something better.

With this object in view a meeting will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Frost building, to discuss the proposition. Invitations have been sent out to number who are interested in the scheme, by W. R. Cass and V. W. Nash, Jr. comprising a committee to get the ball a-rolling. A meeting is called thus early so that there will be plenty of time to organize a first-class team and be ready for the opening of the season in April.

GOVERNOR IS NOT WALL STREET'S MAN

Daniel Kiefer, who is chairman of the Fels Fund Commission, the object of which is to raise money for the campaign soon to be undertaken in Oregon for a radical change in methods of taxation, in emulation of the Vancouver experiment, to which Joseph Fels is contributing large sums, recently wrote to Governor Wilson of New Jersey expressing regret that he had at first misunderstood the attitude of the Governor. To this Mr. Wilson replied:

"My Dear Mr. Kiefer:

"Your kind letter of December 24th has given me a great deal of pleasure. It makes me smile to think that I should ever have been regarded as the Wall Street candidate for the Presidency. I am sure that though I have many friends in Wall Street they never supposed for a moment that I would be serviceable to any interest that would be opposed to the interest of the people and to the country at large. I am not surprising them; I am only surprising those who do not understand me.

"The duty of public men in our time is so clear that I do not see how any one can miss his way.

BUTCHERS DEFEAT GROCERS AT BOWLING

A beef diet proclaimed itself champion over the merely vegetarian last night when the butchers and grocers came together in a bowling match on Campbell's aleys. Three sirloin steaks dangled at the end of the cleavers after the melee was over and the asparagus was wilted. The score shows just how the trick was turned:

Y.M.C.A. MAY HAVE NO BASEBALL TEAM

At the meeting of the physical department committee at the Y. M. C. A., tomorrow night, it will be decided whether the association will have a baseball team the coming season. There is a possibility that there will be no team for various reasons. They believe that the players should be identified with the asssociation to a greater extent than just simply playing on the team, and with one exception this was not the case last season.

Physical Director Whittaker would like to see the association have a strong team playing better than third or fourth rate ball, but unless this can be accomplished, will not favor a team. It is a more or less expensive proposition to maintain a team, and unless it is thoroughly representative it seems like a waste of money to the association. The experimental stage is passed, so far as the association is concerned and what is wanted are results.

The question of a team will be thoroughly discussed tomorrow night and it will then be decided whether there will be a baseball team or not. Other matters pertaining to athletics will also be be discussed at the meeting.

WARRANT OUT FOR CHARLES GOSKIASKI

A warrant was sworn out this morning for the arrest on a charge of desertion for Charles Goskiaski, by his bride of a week, and who, it is alleged, induced his wife to withdraw from a savings bank her savings amounting to $725, disappearing immediately after.

This morning a clue to the whereabouts of the recreant husband was received in this city by a woman who it is said is responsible for the introduction of the couple to each other. Upon its receipt this woman brought it to headquarters where it was translated and it is believed that the runaway will shortly be brought to book.

PENN DENTAL DEAN CONDUCTED A CLINIC

Dr. Edwin C. Kirk, dean of the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, conducted a dental clinic here yesterday afternoon covering the subject: "The Erosion of the Teeth," and later presented a paper before the Plainfield Dental Society at the Homestead, on "The Prevention of Decay of the Teeth,' which followed the quarterly meeting and banquet.

There were about twenty guests, including several members of the medical profession. Dr. Kirk's paper touched on the scientific research in medicine so far as pertaining to dentistry. An informal discussion followed the paper by Dr. Kirk.

'CHANTECLER' THEME OF PROF. LANDON

Courtney Langdon, professor of literature at Brown University, will give a lecture under the auspices of the College Club, at the Hartridge auditorium, Wednesday afternoon, February 22, at 3:30 o'clock, on the "Interpretation of Chantecler." The proceeds will be used by the club in carrying on its work of supporting girls in college.

"Chantecler" is paramountly an allegoric poem, to be read and studied at leisure. On the stage it is not apt to have much more than an initial success of esteem, and a further success of curiosity. A performance on the stage would be far more likely to be successful after the public had become thoroughly imbued with the significance of the allegory of the whole, and of the satire of certain parts, and the title role were taken by a big strong man.

It is the opinion that the play should be presented in verse, if either audience or reader are to be given any adequate idea of the beauty or piquancy of the original French. "Chantecler" is a play which not only holds up a mirror to human nature, but shows "the very age and body of our time his form and pressure."

When the public has been "educated up" to it, it will cease to think of it as a show of doubtful success, and will esteem it a great portrait of our times of peculiar beauty and brilliant wit, well nigh worthy of Moliere's best work.

ECONOMIES IN ACCESSORIES.

Where the woman of small means is concerned extravagances in the shape of rare fur sets are sighed for in vain, and she has to contend herself with a single fur or call upon necessity to sharpen her brains in the designing of something to take its place.

This year, with a little patience and some skill, any woman can evolve for herself one of the wide velvet scarfs which are so fashionable. An interlining will give it a very cozy warmth and a finger-width of some inexpensive fur will add a border all round as a finishing touch.

In lieu of the fur, however, many of these long velvet scarfs are gathered into hugh silk tassels at the base, which still further simplifies the construction.

The velvet muff with an early Victorian border of fur is another item of fashion just now which suggests an economy without straying outside the realm of La Mode. Some of these muffs are hemmed on each side with a band of cloth, and, with a gown of mole-colored or gray velvet, a tassel velvet scarf and a muff of this description make up a very attractive ensemble and suggests very little outlay.

The draped velvet toque is likewise anothereconomy which can be so easily evolved at home that it might well be ranked among the items which a woman can carry out herself without being froced into the humiliating conviction that her creation has a home-trimmed air.

A single knot of thick gold or silver cable cord is all that is required as decoration, so that there are practically no shoals and rocks upon which the tyro may find herself wrecked.

Twenty young men, students in Rutgers College, entertained a large audience in Hartridge auditorium last evening with a program of songs instrumental music and good nature. The concert was under the auspices and for the benefit of the Netherwood Reformed church.

A committee of young women from the church entertained the college boys after the program was concluded with light refreshments served in the banquet room of the auditorium.

The program rendered was a varied one, the glees and quartet selections meeting with hearty approval. Two of the young musicians stood out prominently. Raymond W. Smith, tenor soloist, and E. T. DeWald, violinist. Mr. Smith sang with much expression several songs which showed a highly cultured voice of good timbre. Mr. DeWald surprised the audience with his splendid handling of the violin. His selections were popular and were played with judgment and feeling. Both received hearty encores.

The program:

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL GLASS INTIATION

One of the eighteen district meetings planned for the State, together with class initiation, was held last night in the rooms of Plainfield Council, No. 711 Royal Arcanum. The meeting was in charge of Grand Vice-Regent Joseph M. Arnold, and the uniformed degree team of Bayonne Council, No. 695, which did the initiatory work, and William Goster, of Bayonne, who is chairman of the committee on state of the order.

There were two candidates for initiation, George W. Hurst and Lewis F. W. Funk, who became members of Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, of this city. The degree work was exemplified in a satisfactory manner by the uniformed degree team from Bayonne.

There were about 250 members of the order present, including representatives from Plainfield Council, No. 711, and Greenbrook Council, 1725, of this city; Bridgewater Council, No. 1375, of Somerville, and Bound Brook Council, No. 1339.

After the business of the evening there were interesting remarks by William Coster, Supervising Deputy Grand Regent W. H. Anderson, of Orange; Vice-Regent Charles Hall, of Greenbrook Council; Vice-Grand Regent Joseph M. Arnold and others.

HEAVENLY REST CLUB HAS A BUSY EVENING

The Men's Club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, which has been very active during the present winter season, held a business meeting and social last night, that drew a large attendance to the parish house. The evening was passed in a most profitable way and served to show visitors how important the organization has become.

Forty members were present at the business sesion and several important matters were discussed. The date for the club's next dance in the parish house was given as Thursday evening, February 23, and not February 15, as has been erroneously stated. John Howell was elected to membership and indications point to many more additions in the near future.

After the business meeting the gathering was entertained for an hour by Thomas M. Muir, and William H. Pope, who gave songs, stories and instrumental numbers. The artists were liberally applauded at the conclusion of the program. Card playing was taken up and "500" and pinochle were enjoyed until a late hour. Refreshments were served during an intermission.

J. A. Maynard, president of the club, was in charge during the evening, and the assisting entertainment committee was composed of Mortimer Givens, Arthur Caleen, John Hallard, A. Jordan and A. Harris.

Y.M.C.A. BOARD'S ANNUAL MEETING

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held last evening and the following officers were elected: President, James E. Kimball; vice-president, Henry W. Herrman; recording secretary, Albert W. Beers; treasurer, John H. Doane. These are the same officers who served last year.

Clarence W. Spicer, president of the Spicer Mfg. Co., was elected a director to serve three years to succeed O. S. Rogers, resigned. Reports from the various departments of the association were read including those of the physical and boys' departments. Both T. G. Whitaker, physical director, and C. W. Bingaman, director of the boys' department, reported increased membership and classes.

The number of paid memberships among the boys is the largest in the history of the association and it is for this as well as several other reasons that greater accommodations are needed for the work. Messrs. Whittaker and Bingaman are preparing an exhibition of boys' work to be given on February 27, a detailed program of which will be given later.

LAUD THE MAYOR

Ministers' Association Approves Executive's Administration.

NEW MEMBERS ARE ADDED.

Hospital Sunday Changed to Third Sabbath in February—Musical Service on Good Friday.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association, at its annual meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, adopted resolutions approving the action of Mayor G. W. V. Moy regarding Sunday closing and expressing the firm belief that the Mayor's orders can be maintained without injury to the religious convictions and observances of the Seventh-Day Baptists, Hebrews and Adventists. The resolutions were supported also by Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardner, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, the denominational paper.

A vote of good fellowship and appreciation was given to Rev. John W. Musson, pastor of Temple Baptist church, who is to leave the city to take up the work in Meriden, Conn. It was the sense of the meeting that Mr. Musson had done active and splendid work during his residence here and the members expressed sorrow at the change which removes him from here and wished his Godspeed in his new field of endeavor.

The following letter was sent to Mayor George W. V. Moy and to the members of the Common Council:

"The Ministers' Association of Plainfield, at their regular meeting in December, 1910, appointed a committee to communicate to you their well wishes for the success of your administration as Mayor of our beautiful city and to express their conviction that in safeguarding the morals, sobriety and temporal welfare of our city it should be the aim of the administration, not only to steadfastly maintain our present policy of granting no new licenses for the retailing of spirituous and malt liquors, but to seek a further diminution of their number by refusing to re-license every saloon where there is a sufficiently strong protest from the surrounding property owners, either to the effect that the said saloon is not needed in that locality or, that the proprietor is not observing the regulations imposed upon him by the terms of the license; and that upon such refusal no other license be granted in its place.

"The committee further desires to heartily endorse your recommendation to the Common Council that a Board of Protection be appointed under the act of 1909 to prevent the sale of liquor to habitual drunkards or those likely to become such.

"We also desire to commend you for your earnest desire to secure for our city a more orderly Sunday and trust you will be successful in your efforts to close up all places now engaging in illegal selling on the Sabbath.

"We express the hope that in so doing no violence shall be done to the conscientious convictions of any of our fellow townsmen, Hebrews, Seventh-Day Baptists, Adventists or others who religiously observe the Sabbath held sacred by them and show a proper regard for the Sunday quiet necessary to the more general rest day.

"Assuring you of our heartest support in all your efforts to promote the best welfare of all our citizens, we are on behalf of the association, Yours etc."

The association also decided to hold the annual musical service on Good Friday, a committee comprising Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Rev. John Y. Broek, Charles W. McCutchen, Henry A. McGee and Dr. W. H. Murray being appointed to arrange the details.

A communication was received from the Plainfield Sunday School Association requesting that the ministers meet with the association relative to a discussion of plans for the State Sunday school convention to be held in this city next fall.

The association decided to fix on the third Sunday in February of each year as "Hospital Sunday," and the annual offering for the hospital will be received on that day.

Rev. F. St. John Fitch, a retired Baptist clergyman, and Rev. Frederick L. Greene, the new pastor at Hope chapel, and Rev. Royal A. Stout pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, were elected to membership.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Rev. John Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church; vicepresident, Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; secretary and treasurer, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring.

FLYNN'S PRISONER

Local Detective Corrals Fugitive Bridegroom by Clever Ruse.

AVARICE CAUSED HIS UNDOING.

Hoped to Enmesh Mrs. Redmond and Get Her Savings Too —Will Be Brought Back.

Detective Sergeant John Flynn added another to his long list of sensational captures yesterday afternoon by getting Charles Goskioski in Brooklyn, after the latter had purchased his ticket for Russia and had made all his preparations to skip with the balance of the money obtained from his young bride on Monday.

Goskioski made the fatal mistake of not being satisfied with $725 secured from the bride, but had laid plans to secure $400 more from his former boarding mistress and this proved his undoing.

On Wednesday evening Goskioski telegraphed to Mrs. Mary Redmond, of the borough, to meet him at an address in Brooklyn. The telegram was brought to Chief Kiely and translated. It made the way for the capture of the swindling bridegroom and plans were immediately put in operation to this end. Accompanied by Detective Flynn Mrs. Redmond disguised beneath the folds of a thick black veil kept the rendezvous at a saloon near the Adams street police station in Brooklyn. Goskioski was not there when Mrs. Redmond called while Detective Flynn and an officer from the Brooklyn detective bureau waited outside, but it required only a minute or two for the proprietor of the saloon to bring the man into his place.

He was told that there was a woman waiting for him outside the door and Goskioski went out. As he appeared around the corner Flynn approached him, saying, "Do you know where Carleton avenue is?" "No," replied Goskioski, "I haven't lived around here very long, I belong in Rochester." Just then Mrs. Redmond raised her veil to get a good look at the fellow and nodded to Flynn, which was a signal to nab the man. He protested that he was an honest laborer and that he had done nothing wrong, but his protests availed him nothing and he was lugged off to the Adams street station, where he will remain until proper extradition papers are made out and signed by Governor Dix.

The reason why Goskioski telegraphed to Mrs. Redmond is believed to have been for the sole purpose of attempting to get her to draw her money from the bank and quietly elope with him for Russia. But it is not believed that Mrs. Redmond would ever have reached the Czar's domains. The complaint on which he is held in Brooklyn is one signed by City Judge William G. DeMeza, charging grand larceny. Besides $640 in cash a ticket for Russia was found in the prisoner's pocket. It will require thirty days for the issuance of extradition papers.

DUNELLEN DOGS IN DURANCE VILE

Four dogs, prisoners in a chicken-coop, several men, residents of Dunellen and New Market, and Justice of the Peace Clark Rodgers, are mixed up in a case that soon will go thundering down the lines of time as a "bird" or several birds, like—wise dogs.

Word reached Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen, the S. P. C. A. special agent, yesterday, that several dogs were confined in a coop at Dunellen without food and water. Upon investigation Mrs. Van Hoesen found the animals on the premises of S. G. Latham, of Dunellen, held prisoners on charges of killing chickens. The matter, which will be the cause celebre of the year, will probably come up in New Brunswick next week.

In any event the dogs will be humanely cared for while they are awaiting trial.

CARE OF THE BRAIN

Will S. Monroe Gives Lecture on "Mental Work and Mental Fatigue."

TEACHERS COMPOSE AUDIENCE.

Professor of Montclair State Normal School Tells of Needs of Rest and Proper Exercise.

Professor Will S. Monroe, of the Montclair State Normal School, gave an interesting lecture on "Mental Work and Mental Fatigue," to the teachers of Plainfield and North Plainfield at the Somerset School yesterday afternoon. He said in part:

"All forms of mental activity are caused by a union of protoplasm with oxygen. One great function of every person is so to live as to store up protoplasm. Everything we do involves a re-arrangement of brain cells. The e cells wear down with activity just as coal wears down in a fire.

"At birth the brain is composed of all the cells that it will ever get. The problem is how to develop existing cells not to create new ones. This is done through mental exercise. The psychology of the lazy man is that he has not thus increased the storage capacity of his brain cells.

"Brain cells differ from muscle cells in this, that nature builds up the latter, but not the former.

"Brain activity produces poisonous waste, as coal burning produces ashes. This brain waste must be removed or the whole system is clogged. Sedentary life is unfavorable to the elimination of waste products; hence the mental worker is in danger of having these poisonous elements thrown back on his system, the effect being the same as when the ashes of a furnace are thrown back into the fire. Long and frequent vacations are necessary to the mental worker if the system is to be freed from these waste products.

"The signs of fatigue are often seen in the general appearance of the person, known as 'the tired look.' Another sign is the inability to control voluntary movements. St. Vitus dance is fatigue neurosis. Another sign is the alteration of disposition—a tendency to be irritable and impatient. The sensory powers are lowered. After several hours in a picture gallery the mind fails to take in the fine points of the paintings; and after several hours at the opera the ear distinguishes less and less the tones of the various instruments. The mind cannot grasp things when it is fatigued. Those who are but slightly acquainted with a foreign language find it almost impossible to speak that language when their brain is tired.

"One cause of fatigue is the infrequency of rest pauses. In Germany schools are required by law to give pupils at least ten minutes of rest every hour. Experiments have shown that three recesses in three hours greatly improve the work as compared with three hours of continuous application.

"Gymnastics as ordinarily practiced in schools is no substitute for rest. It requires even more concentration than mathematics. Rest means relaxation and refreshment. An extended recitation period is as senseless as a regime that provides for one meal per day of three times the usual quantity.

"The condition of the atmosphere has a bearing on fatigue. Pupils tire much more readily during the fall and spring than during the winter. Monotony in school work, as elsewhere, also causes fatigue.

"During periods of rapid physical growth nature absorbs at least twenty per cent. of a pupil's energy. Hence but eight per cent. is available for school work.

"To avoid fatigue there must be the right kind of nutrition. Pupils usually eat enough in bulk, but not wisely in kind.

"A large number of cases of mental breakdown result from insufficient sleep. High school pupils should have at least nine hours of sleep in a day, and younger pupils more. Social interests that keep pupils up late do much more harm to children than the studying they do in school."

Just a Hobo.

James Moran, who claims Philadelphia as his residence, fell afoul of the local police last evening while panhandling on West Front street. He slept in a cell and this morning was sent on his way by Judge DeMeza. Mr. Moran was just a hobo.

SNOWBALLED WOMAN CRIES FOR HELP

Amanda Smith, colored, did not take kindly to the shower of snowballs thrown at her last evening on Watchung avenue shortly before 5 o'clock and started up the street toward the Crescent Avenue church yelling "murder" at the top of her voice. Just as she arrived at the corner of Watchung avenue and Sixth street she slipped and nearly fell but quickly recovering her equilibrium she continued running until she reached the shelter of the church. Here she made a stand and demanded protection from the passersby.

Several persons, among them two brave men, stopped long enough to inquire the cause of Amanda's fright, but being told that it was just snowballs passed on without interfering with the gang of small boys who seemed bent on tantalizing her. There was no policeman in sight, but there was an old gentleman, who afterwards refused to give his name, went for the boys and capturing one held him until he got the names of the others and who promised to report the occurrence to police headquarters this morning. He failed to appear and the boys are still at liberty.

It goes without saying that if caught it will go hard with them.

HORACE CODINGTON RELEASED ON BAIL

After remaining in the Somerset county jail for a week while his counsel was procuring new bondsmen and also a writ to carry his case to the Court of Errors and Appeals, Horace Codington, now under sentence of eighteen months for misappropriating the funds of Warren township has been released on $2,500 bail. A special session of the court was held to effect Codington's release.

The amount of the bail under which Codington was formerly released was $2,000, and his uncle, William R. Codington, and John Bornman, collector of Warren township, were his bondsmen, but after the decision of the Supreme Court confirming his conviction, Judge Case raised the amount of bail to $2,500, and required new bondsmen. After a delay of several days Surrogate William J. DeMond and Lewis M. Codington consented to become the convicted lawyer's bondsmen, and they were accepted by the court.

After his release Codington held an informal reception at his office, where about twenty of his friends had gathered to congratulate him on his new lease of liberty.

LINCOLN AS LEADER PICTURED TO PUPILS

H. W. Herrmann, of Rockview avenue, gave a very forceful talk to the Borough High School pupils this morning on "Lincoln as a Leader of Men." He showed by illustration from the lives of David, Ahab, the Emperor of Germany, the Czar of Russia and the Emperor of China the truth of the adage, "Like Leader, Like People." Lincoln was a great leader, and he has made the American people more and more like him.

Lincoln possessed but five books; but he read during his early life every book to be found within a radius of fifty miles. A debt of eleven hundred dollars that was placed on his shoulders by his business partner forced him to take up surveying. This took him about the country, made friends for him, and caused him to look toward the law. His work as a lawyer on the circuit made more friends, and he became a political leader. At fifty-two he had grown to be the most powerful man in the nation.

On becoming President he appointed to his cabinet his greatest political rivals, and showed himself to be superior to them all.

He gained the supreme confidence of the people because of his loyalty to right, truth, and justice.

Rev. Dr. Herring Returns.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring have returned from Rochester, Minn., where the doctor underwent a delicate operation performed by the well known surgeons the Mayo Brothers. The operation was a success in every way and Dr. Herring has been permanently relieved of a trouble of long standing that of an obstruction in the neck. He will probably not preach on Sunday, but will attend the services in his church.

CARNEGIE'S GIFT FORMALLY MADE

TO FRONT ON COLLEGE PLACE.

Following a conference with Mayor Moy yesterday afternoon, Dr. Leonard Waldo, president of the Plainfield Public Library's board of directors, the formal announcement is made that Andrew Carnegie has given $50,000 to that institution, as exclusively told in The Daily Press yesterday. Dr. Waldo, was in communication with the ironmaster this morning. The philanthropist's secretary was informed that Plaifield welcomed his gift and would gladly comply with the conditions. Mr. Carnegie then made known his contribution.

As Mr. Carnegie does not wish any of the money to be used in altering the present library building at Park avenue and West Eighth street, a handsome new building will be erected in the rear of the present quarters to face on College place.

It is undecided yet whether brick or concrete will be used in the structure, as the architect has not been engaged. It is more than likely, however, that concrete will be the building material. The structure will be eighty feet front on College place and will have a depth of twenty feet not including the stock room in its rear. The lot has a frontage of 100 feet.

The collection of some 29,000 volumes excepting those on some special subjects will be housed in the stock room of the new structure. The tiers will have a height of twenty feet and will be built in the most approved method.

The medical, law and music collection will remain in the present building. The art, scientific and curio collections will also be kept in the old building as it is Mr. Carnegie's wish that those features not be placed in the new library which is to be his gift and which is to be used entirely for strictly library purposes. Moreover, the administration offices will be in the old building.

When the new building is erected, some alterations and improvements will be made at the old building, but the expense for this will be met out of a separate fund.

It cannot be stated at this time as to when the work will be begun, but it is expected that ground will be broken early in the spring.

As the municipality contributes a large sum annually for the support of the Public Library there are no obstacles in the way of the directors accepting Mr. Carnegie's contribution. As is his custom, he stipulates that the city provide for the maintenance of the institution, and therefore the way is clear for the directors.

The present structure was devised to the city in the will of the late Mayor Job Male years ago. At the time the building was fully large enough for the purpose but it has long since become totally inadequate for the growing needs.

Rev. E. D. VanHorn to Preach.

Why? Because it is a BOYNTON and has the BOYNTON square fire pot, which increases fire surface about 25% over other boilers of like diameter.

The BOYNTON "square pot" is the greatest improvement yet devised in heating systems. It is square at the corners, hence clears free of cinders and ash each time the grate is turned. That means a live fire, always, and plenty of draft. See your dealer about the WESTFIELD.

An effort is being made by Westfield hotel-keepers to have the time at which they must close their barrooms extended from 11:30 o'clock, the time now set for closing by ordinance, to midnight. There has always been complaints by the hotel men that they have had to close at least half an hour too early and an effort will be made to have the Council by ordinance give them until 12 o'clock.

Westfield Board of Education has practically made up the budget for this year and will ask the voters for $75,000 to run the schools at the annual school meeting next month. An epidemic of measles that has been among the pupils has seriously cut down the average attendance for the past month, as many as thirty scholars being absent on account of the disease at one time.

The engagement of Miss Lillian Hann and George B. Worth has been announced by the parents of the bride-to-be.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The action of the Board of Education in voting not to recommend compulsory vaccination has met with general approval from borough residents. So many cases of after effect of the virus have been reported that parents prefer to wait until there is an immediate necessity of vaccination. As the board stated there is another reason for not ordering it and that is that in practically every instance where the compulsory rule has been contested the parents have won the action by default.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church will conduct a Valentine social in the chapel tonight. The entertainment committee, of which Miss Louisa Todd is chairman, has prepared a number of interesting features that will delight all who attend. Refreshments will be served in conclusion.

The corner store of the Gray building at Washington and North avenues, which has been raised by John Fenner, has been undergoing extensive repairs. John F. G. Kinney is now completing the interior decorating.

Contractor J. Newton Apgar is making rapid progress on the new house he is erecting for the Home Investing Company on Dunellen avenue.

The New Market Card Club met Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Herbert L. Pierce. A general social time was enjoyed after the play.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Frank Daniels comes to the Plainfield Theatre for one night only, Saturday, February 11, in a new musical comedy production credited with extraordinary success abroad. It is "The Girl in the Train," a Viennese production by Lee Fall, the famous composer of "The Dollar Princess," and under its original title of "Die Coechiedene Frau," it has been played and sung in most of the cities of Europe, and is now running in Berlin and London. Charles Dillingham secured the American rights and engaged Harry B. Smith to make the adaption from the German of Victor Leon, who is well known as the librettist of "The Merry Widow." In making the American production Mr. Dillingham engaged Mr. Daniels for the hilariously funny role of the Judge of the Divorce Court, who is called upon in his professional capacity to decide the merits of a delicate case. The first act shows the divorce court in Amsterdam, Holland, with a wife pleading for freedom because her husband on a railway journey had given up his sleeping compartment to a fascinating actress. A talkative sleeping car conductor mixes things up, and it appears that the lock of the stateroom door was broken, so the testimony is conflicting, though it is stated that there isn't a line of a suggestion of anything in this entire production that could possibly be offensive to good taste. The comedy arises from the absurd rulings of the Judge, who promptly falls in love with both the actress and the wife, and renders decisions calculated not to offend either. He therefore grants the divorce to the wife, but makes a special ruling that the actress leaves the court without the slightest stain on her character. The second act shows a masquerade ball, where the husband tries to win back the wife, and the judge is alternately swayed, first by the ex-wife and then by the actress. The last act shows a fete in a picturesque seaport town of Holland, and there all ends of the plot are satisfactorily adjusted. Mr. Dillingham has surounded Mr. Daniels with a capable company, in which Miss Sallie Fisher appears as the young wife, and Miss Vera Michelona is seen as the actress. There are a dozen other principals, and a singing and dancing chorus of sixty. The staging and costuming are highly effective, the first act being costumed entirely in Delft blue, the second act is almost entirely green, and the third act is a riot of pink and white.

BASEBALL.

Eddie Collins, the Philadelphia Athletics' star second sacker, is telling the following story about Bube Vickers, when the big heaver was a member of Connie Mack's team. The Michigan man, who was once a terror to batters in the Nutmeg circuit, had a favorite trick of passing heavy hitters in pinches.

However, Collins recalls a game in which Rube failed to turn the tricks to advantage, and Larry Lajoie, the Frenchman, for whom no twirlers have any terrors, was the sticker who sent Rube to the woods.

The Athletics were playing in Cleveland; it was a sizzling-hot August day—just the kind of a lazy afternoon that is in tune with the peculiarly listless motions of Vickers when he is practically invincible—and Rube was sent in by the foxy Connie Mack to trim the Forest City team.

For the first eight innings Rube proved an enigma to the Naps, and the pellet looked like a blue fly buzzing and cutting a lightning fast zip through the humid atmosphere. In the mean time the best the Athletics could do was to squeeze one lone tally across the plate.

It was in the ninth inning, score 1 to 0, two out, with a Clevelandite on third and second. Connie was going through a series of contortious wig-wagging with his scorecard from the bench, meaning for Rube to walk Larry and take a chance on Bill Hinchman.

Rube was wise and undertook to follow instructions. He got three quarters done, but on the fourth ball became a little careless, and although it was outside and beyond the reach of an ordinary individual, it was just to the liking of the mighty Larry, who is ordinary with extra as a prefiex. Crash! bang! ball and bat collided. Noise of fence and ball meeting. Larry kissed out for two into right and two Naps romped home, curtain and funeral music for Rube.

Manager Hal Chase, of the New York Yankees, in a letter to Frank Farrell, owner of the New York Americans, reports that he has signed an outfielder by the name of Wilkinson, who is a student of St. Mary's College, San Jose, Cal., from which Chase was graduated. The manager of the Yankees believes that Wilkinson will make good, as he is a good hitter, fast runner and a quick thinker. The new player will not report for the Southern training trip, but will join the Yankees on their arrival in New York, on Saturday, April 1.

Fred Snodgrass, who played in the center garden for the New York Giants last year, sent in his signed contract from California yesterday. Snod in his letter reports that he is in good condition and will be glad to report at Marlin, Texas, for training. At the present time every man who is on the reserve list of the Giants has signed with the exception of Leo Drucke, the pitcher. The latter will turn his contract over to Manager John McGraw when the men gather at the training camp.

A meeting of the National League magnates for the purpose of adopting a schedule has been called for by President Thomas J. Lynch for Tuesday afternoon at Hotel Breslin, New York city. Little trouble is expected at the meeting, as it is said most of the magnates are satisfied with the way the playing dates have been allotted.

Charles L. Herzog's claim of $366.66 against the Boston National League club for salary during his suspension from July 7 to August 1 inclusive was disallowed by the National Baseball Commission in a decision promulgated at Cincinnati yesterday. The commission found that "the Boston Club was justified in suspending the player for his arbitrary disregard of discipline."

A contract has been signed by the officials of the Detroit Americans with the Monroe, La., baseball officials securing the training rights in that city for five years. The advance guard of Tiger players will report at Monroe for training on Monday, February 27.

Peter Cassidy, who will manage the Wilmington club of the Tri-State League, is on the lookout for players. He is anxious to secure some of the recruits who will be tried out by the various clubs in the Eastern League for his team. It is likely that Peter will land several who will fail to make good in the Barrow circuit.

First Baseman Flynn, of the Pittsburg Pirates, sent in his signed contract to Manager Fred Clarke yesterday. In all probability Flynn will be used as a catcher. Should Fred Hunter make good at first base, which is likely, Flynn will be kept to help out Gibson behind the bat.

CARNEGIE'S FINE GIFT.

It was with considerable pleasure that the people of Plainfield learned yesterday that Mr. Carnegie has given $50,000 for the purpose of erecting a new Public Library. Coming at this time when the community is unable to finance the plans of the board of directors because of the manifold demands of several other worthy public and private institutions, the gift is twice welcome. The munificent donation will provide as handsome and commodious a library building as may be found in any city of its size in the east.

Long ago, the present structure was found totally inadequate for the needs. The ever increasing collection, now the third largest public library in the State, made the conditions altogether too cramped and totally unsuited for the purposes. Convinced of this, the splendid body of men having the institution in their charge, set about to find a remedy. New quarters or enlargement of the present one was considered imperative. Their time, energy, influence and ability were brought to bear and the result is that as told exclusively in this paper yesterday, Mr. Carnegie has come forward in his characteristic way and we will have a building suitable for the purposes.

THE WATER REPORT.

Taxpayers generally will be much interested in the report of the Councilmanic water committee, which was published in full in last night's issue. A careful reading of the findings of the painstaking investigators will reveal the fact that the committee is as one for a publically owned water supply system. The only difference of opinion is as to the better means of obtaining that end. Purchase by condemnation is favored by all but one of the members, Mr. Holt's exception being based on his belief that it would be preferable to build an independent plant.

It will be noted that in the majority report, the legal proceedings against the private company are with a view of definitely ascertaining whether the purchase is within the means of the municipality and whether, as the suit progresses, the city finds it will be able to meet the necessary bonded obligations in operating the system. For its conscientious and efficiently directed efforts the taxpayers owe the committee a vote of thanks.

The man who does his duty as he sees it deserves encouragement and hence the timely action of the Ministers' Association in upholding Mayor Moy for his enforcement of the Sabbath observance laws and ordinances must be most gratifying to the city's executive.

REV. GABRIEL MAGUIRE IS AS BUSY AS EVER.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, is the firm believer in the old saying that a minister should wear out instead of rust out. This is shown by his many engagements for the next week. Sunday morning he will preach on "The Model Woman," and later in the day will conduct a funeral service. In the evening he will preach on "Something that is Better Felt Than Told."

Monday morning he will address the New York Baptist Ministers' Association in New York and in the evening will lecture in the Commercial High School, Brooklyn, Tuesday afternoon he will attend a conference of Baptist ministers in the Clinton Avenue Baptist church, Newark, and that evening will lecture in the Reformed church at Astoria, L. I. On Wednesday night he will lecture in the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city; Thursday evening he will lecture at Bay Shore, L. I., and on Friday night will lecture for the Board of Education of New York city.

That Ice Deal.

The statement yesterday that the Crystal Ice Company had made arrangements with the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company to distribute the product of the hygeia plant the coming season, was not intended to infer that MacDonald & Ivamy had sold its equipment and good will to that concern. MacDonald & Ivamy dealt directly with the Crystal Ice Company and were not a party to the ararngements made by the Crystal Company with the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company.

DYING AT 136 YEARS.

Oldest Woman in World Remembers George Washington.

At the age of 136 years, and undoubtedly the oldest white woman in the world, Mrs. Lucy Owens is dying at the home of her daughter, a centenarian, a few miles west of Longview, Texas. Mrs. Owens was born in North Carolina when the Revolutionary War broke out, and three years later saw George Washington. She is the only living person who has seen the first President. Many have questioned her age, but investigation of records shows that she gives it correctly.

Up until a year ago she could see and hear exceptionally well, and could walk about her room with the aid of a crutch. Until recently stricken she sewed without the use of glasses.

WILSON MAKES DENIAL.

Brands False Sensational Reports of Talk With Nugent

Governor Wilson yesterday took occasion to deny the sensational reports published in yellow newspapers in this State and New York regarding an interview between himself and James R. Nugent, chairman of the State Democratic Committee. The Governor declared the stories were without foundation.

Before making the denial the Governor called into his office a Trenton newspaper man, who, it is said, sent out the false reports and administered a severe reprimand. In addition the Governor wrote to the newspapers represented by the man, telling them the stories were false.

A Turkey Supper.

The women of Marconnier chapel will conduct a turkey supper at the home of Mrs. Eugene Van Court, Oak Tree, on Thursday evening, February 23. From the interest already manifested the attendance will be quite large. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the chapel fund.

In the Borough Court.

Raymond Smith, arrested on a disorderly charge, was fined $2 by Recorder Dolliver, this morning.

Ernest Sharp and family, of Evergreen avenue, have gone to New York for the balance of the winter.

GOVERNOR WILSON PRAISES CLEVELAND

Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey wrote a letter which was received yesterday by former United States Senator John F. Dryden, President of the Cleveland Memorial Association, who is now engaged in raising $100,000 for a memorial at Princeton to the late President of the United States.

This is the text of the letter:

"I am sure that the project to erect a noble monument to Mr. Cleveland at Princeton must appeal to men of all classes and of all political affiliations throughout the country. Mr. Cleveland had the happiness before he died of knowing that the whole country recognized his sterling worth and his great and conscientious services to the country. Partisan feeling died entirely away, and men everywhere saw in him a great character which had given him eminence and commanding influence in our politics and in our National policy. A monument to such a man, erected in a university town, where young men from all parts of the country may see it and reflect upon the lessons of conduct it represents, would surely be one of the most fitting inspirations of patriotism and public duty that could be conceived."

The fund passed the $85,000 mark last Wednesday night.

Gave Benefit Euchre.

Mrs. T. H. Sullivan, of Park avenue, gave a delightful euchre at her home yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the scholarship of Mount St. Mary's College. The affair was a great success, about sixty persons engaging in the play twelve handsome prizes were awarded the winning contestants. Refreshments were served in conclusion and a general social time enjoyed for about an hour.

Because the Westfield Midgets cancelled the basketball game with Grace church choir team last Wednesday, arrangements have been made to play the game on February 15. It will be a fine game as both teams are evenly matched. The game will be called at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

THE MICROSCOPE.

It Has Its Prototype In Every Spherical Drop of Water, as Most Inventions Have In Nature.

Nature offers a free microscope whenever one is wanted. She has been dealing in free optical instruments and optical phenomena ever since the first dewdrop formed or the first raindrop fell earthward. Every dewdrop and raindrop and spherical water drop has all the powers and principles of a microscope. To get one of nature's microscopes in operation take up a drop of water between the two points of two sharpened sticks, say matches, and hold the drop over the minute object to be examined. The result will be that the object will be magnified about three diameters. The supposed invention of the microscope was nothing more than shaping a piece of glass into an imitation of a water drop so as to be easily handled.

Spiders have made suspension bridges for ages. The rough edge of sword grass gave the inventor the idea of the reaper blade for the harvester. The buzzard has been using the aeroplane for flying a good many centuries. By tapping on an end of a long beam the man at the farther end can hear you telegraphing, the sound traveling through the timber. Fishes have been using bladders of wind for balloons, lifting them in water for countless years. Water has been a camera ever since the world had sunshine.

Help yourself to nature's store of all things man needs, but never say anything about the invention. Nature invented; you can only arrange and combine facts.—St. Louis Republic.

EARLY BALLOONING.

Some Odd Ideas That Prevailed In the Eighteenth Century.

As far back as 1844 the American public were led to believe that the Atlantic had been crossed in a balloon. On May 28 in that year the New York Sun published a detailed account of an aerial voyage from Liverpool to Charleston, which purported to have been accomplished by "the steering balloon Victoria in a period of seventy-five hours from land to land." Five columns were devoted to the description of the journey and to a scientific account of the balloon, of which a woodcut was given, and an air of verisimilitude was added by a list of eight passengers, one of the names mentioned being that of Harrison Ainsworth, who was then at the height of his fame.

At the end of the eighteenth century balloons were all the rage. Then, as now, enthusiasts predicted a time near at hand when war would either be an awful matter of the annihilation of armies and forts by bombs from above or would cease altogether through the abolition of frontiers and the fusion of nations. Prophecy went even further.

Canals and roads were to vanish and the space occupied by them to be restored to agriculture. And ships (if any still existed) when caught in a storm would be grappled by the mast from balloons above and safely conveyed into port or even carried over mountain ranges.—Chicago News.

London's Police Press.

An article in the Illustrated English Magazine gives an account of the printing department of Scotland Yard and the astonishing amount of work it turns out. Four times a day a broadside is issued to all the police officers. At 9 in the morning the first is sent out, giving an inventory of all property lost. At noon is issued a list of all persons missing, and this often occupies several pages. At half past 6 the broadside contains both subjects, and also at half past 10. A habitual criminal register is distributed and every few days an account of persons released on tickets of leave. A sheet of missing articles is sent to every pawnbroker, and as many as 4,000 copies of this document are needed. This is only a small part of the work done by the Scotland Yard press.

When You Can't Sleep.

There is an odd theory, which many people believe and which is certainly harmless, that sleeplessness may often be cured in the following odd way: Move your bed out into the room so that no part of bed or covers will touch the wall. Then place under each caster of the bed a piece of rubber or a rubber overshoe or set the caster in a thick glass dish. Then go to bed, making sure the covers do not touch the wall. Thus the bed and yourself will be cut off from all electric contact with floor or wall. Such absence of electric contact, it is claimed, will make you sleep better. It is said to have cured stubborn cases of insomnia.

How to Open a New Book.

The best way to open a new book without risk of injuring it is to place it on its back upon a smooth or covered table, let down the fore and then the hind board, hold the leaves in one hand and open a few of the fore and afterward the end leaves until you reach the center of the volume. Do this several times and you will not break the back of the book.

Made It Very Clear.

"How do you suppose she manages to keep up appearances on her husband's income?"

"What is her husband's income?"

"I don't know; but, of course, it can't be as big as it would have to be if they could afford to live as they do."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Graduate optician in charge.

A Reluctant Candidate.

During a local election in a German town only one man appeared at the nomination desk.

"Whom do you nominate?" inquired the official.

"Myself," was the answer.

"Do you accept the nomination?"

"Well, no."

The officer laughed and said:

"Then we must try again. Whom do you nominate?"

"Myself."

"You accept the nomination?"

"No."

A subdued "Donnerwetter!" escaped the lips of the perplexed official, but he went on:

"For the third time, whom do you nominate?"

"Myself," came the invariable reply.

"Do you accept the nomination?"

The man rose up, and a smile of satisfaction spread over his face as he answered proudly:

"Having been three times solicited by my fellow citizens to accept the nomination, I can no longer decline to accede to their wishes." He then retired.

The Opal.

In judging an opal color is of the greatest importance. Red fire or red in combination with yellow, blue and green is the best. Blue by itself is quite valueless, and the green opal is not of great value unless the color is very vivid and the pattern very good. The color must be true—that is to say, it must not run in streaks or patches, alternating with a colorless or inferior quality. Pattern is an important factor, the several varieties being known as "pin fire" when the grain is very small, "harlequin" when the color is in small squares, the more regular the better, and the "flash fire," or "flash opal," when the color shows as a single flash or in very large pattern. Harlequin is the most common and is also popularly considered the most beautiful. When the squares of color are regular and show as distinct minute checks of red, yellow, blue and green it is considered magnificent. Some stones show better on edge than on top.—Exchange.

Kept Them Dancing.

A Washington official, speaking of blunders in the diplomatic service, told of a mistake committed by an American in Afghanistan. He said:

"This American entertained the shahzada for three days, giving him a very handsome suit of rooms in his house. The morning of the shahzada's arrival the American host visited him in his apartment and was amazed to see the royal guest and his entire staff hopping about the floor in the oddest way. They conversed politely and gravely; but, instead of walking, they hopped, taking great leaps of eight or nine feet. The host ventured to ask the reason of this hopping. The shahzada politely replied:

"'You see, this carpet is green, with pink roses here and there. Green is a sacred color with us, so we are obliged to hop from rose to rose. It is good exercise, but rather fatiguing, I confess.'"

A Lively Office.

In his recollections in Blackwood's Magazine Sir Robert Anderson tells an amusing story of the days when he was employed at the home office. On his arrival one morning at the office he found a note from Sir James Fergusson's private secretary—his intimates called him "Creeper"—announcing that at 3 o'clock precisely an old hat, lately the property of the chief clerk, would be kicked off from the end of the corridor and requesting the favor of Sir Robert's presence. When Big Ben struck 3, Sir Robert heard Creeper's cheery voice ring out, "All on side; play!" They all turned out and the game began. On emerging from an unusually hot scrimmage Sir Robert became conscious of the presence of a stranger at his side, a timid little Frenchman, who meekly inquired, "Is ziss ze office for ze naturalization?" Sir Robert adds, "It was!"

Why He Cried.

The sympathetic neighbor asked: "Is your little brother ill this morning, Johnnie? I heard him crying in the most heartrending manner."

"No; not exactly," Johnnie explained, "but Willie pulled down a jug of molasses on himself in the pantry, and mother has been trying to comb his hair."—Exchange.

Livingstone.

Of Dr. Livingstone it was said by Stanley that the missionary lived for years among the most cruel and ignorant savages in the world, but he never fired a shot in anger, never "clubbed or clouted or banned or blasted." His manner was that of a "cool, wise old man who felt offended and looked grave."

Circumstances Reversed.

Unkempt Smith—Mister, would youse kindly help a poor man as is all in, down and out? Jocular Citizen—Why, certainly. Just climb the fire escape on that skyscraper across the street and walk in on the top floor. Then you will be all out, up and in.—Judge's Library.

It's Good Point.

"But," asked the long haired young man, "is there nothing at all about poetry that you like?"

"Yes," replied Crabbe. "Whenever I see a poem it makes me feel good to realize that there's no law to compel me to read it."—Catholic Standard and Times.

No grip is so hard to shake off as that of early convictions.—Maurice Thompson.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks were dull, but generally higher yesterday.

A sewer inspector was the first of the officials of Queens placed on trial for graft to be convicted.

Count Apponyi, the Hungarian statesman, visited Congress and made a speech to the House of Representatives.

Secretary Wilson, in a letter to the National Grange, asserted that reciprocity with Canada would benefit American farmers.

The search for the ghouls who desecrated the mausoleum of ex-Congressman William L. Scott, at Erie, Penn., produced no clews.

George S. Griscom, Jr., who returned from Italy, said he could tell nothing of the disappearance of Miss Dorothy H. C. Arnold.

It was learned that a new grand opera, by Arthur Nevin, would be sung in English at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, this season.

The New York Central's application for permission to lay more tracks in Eleventh avenue was held up for three weeks by the Board of Estimate.

Governor Dix's plans to abolish the Advisory Board of Consulting Engineers, Improved Canals, was generally opposed at a legislative hearing at Albany.

Chairman Hooker of the State Highway Commission replied at Albany to Governor Dix's charges of extravagance made in a speech here on Wednesday.

It was said in court by a lawyer that General Thomas T. Eckert made two wills, a prior testament to that under contest by a son being in favor of a granddaughter.

Great Britain and Austria-Hungary signed a convention providing that differences relating to existing treaties be referred to the arbitration court at The Hague.

The British Parliament practically went on record as favoring the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada by rejecting Austen Chamberlain's amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne by a vote of 324 to 222.

A motion to delay consideration of the reciprocity agreement was defeated in the Canadian Parliament and the Finance Minister, W. S. Fielding, announced that the agreement would be ratified subject to favorable action by the United States.

Congress—Senate: Mr. Beveridge spoke in favor of the Canadian reciprocity agreement, and Mr. Bristow, of Kansas, in advocacy of direct election of Senators; bills designed to protect the uniform of soldiers and sailors from discrimination at public resorts and for reorganization of the consular service were passed. House: A reappointment bill making the number of Representatives 433 after March 3, 1913, was passed.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Henry Miller's remarkable play, "The Havoc," has begun its second month at the Bijou Theatre in New York. This intensely interesting and superbly acted play is one of the few emphatic hits of the present season and is drawing capacity audiences to every performance at the Bijou Theatre. A heavy advance sale for six week ahead justifies the prediction that Mr. Miller's new success will enjoy the longest run the Bijou Theatre has had since David Warfield in "The Music Master" left Broadway for his two years' tour of the United States.

At the Astor Theatre, "The Boss," Edward Sheldon's great play, with Holbrook Blinn in the star role of Michael Regan has won a tremendous popular success. "The Boss" is the sensation of the hour in New York. The play tells the story of a man who has gained riches and power by insistent, bulldog methods, and who for a time compels all who come in contact with him to bow to his will. The regeneration of the man through the power of love is the great motive in the play. As Regan, Mr. Blinn has won the triumph of his life. Emily Stevens, Frank Sheridan, Howard Estabrook, H. A. LaMotte and other distinguished players are in the cast.

CONSIDER TOWNSHIP EXPENSES TOO GREAT

Members of the Greenbrook Protection Association attended the meeting of the North Plainfield Township committee, at Watchung, last night, for the purpose of entering a protest against what they considered the extravagant methods of the committee. They urged that more economy be practiced and cited the fact that the taxes have been constantly increasing for several years. In this connection they requested that lighting districts be set apart in the Greenbrook section, which was favored by the committee.

W. deLaR. Anderson, chairman of the committee, in answer to the protests of the Greenbrook residents, stated that it had been and is still the policy of the committee to keep the taxes at the lowest point and not to be extravagant. The committee was a unit in curtailing unnecessary expenses. He said that since 1872, year by year under this policy the taxes have increased until now they are out of all proportion to the benefits received and it was evident from this result that it is a poor policy.

Mr. Anderson said that he believed in an up-to-date business like expenditure of township funds. Where a dollar can be spent and $10 value or service received, he considered it to be good business for the township. He recalled the fact that the fire department recently saved $6,000 worth of taxable property to the township and the committee voted $5 to the fire company for the service.

Edward Canning and John Herrman were appointed policemen for the Watchung district and Charles Meyer for Scotch Plains. No appointment was made for the Greenbrook section, it being explained that none is needed at present. The rest of the time was taken up with the transaction of routine matters.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The girls' basketball team was defeated yesterday afternoon by the girls' team from Westfield High by a score of 11 to 7. It was one of the hardest fought games of the season and only the familiarity of the Westfield girls with their own court enabled them to win. The lineup: Plainfield—Forwards, Misses Durar and Stewart; center, Miss Douglas; guards, Misses Stiles and Wean. Westfield—Forwards, Misses Griffiths and Gladwin; center, Miss Pinchon; guards, Misses Tice and Bourne. Referee, Miss D. T. Day.

Jack Zerega has been elected a member of the advisory board of the Boys' Athletic Association to fill the vacancy made by the retirement of Gardner Bristol.

New candidates for the baseball team are having their tryouts in the High School gym. Yesterday afternoon Captain Russell had a squad of promising material go through a few preliminary stunts in pitching and catching for the purpose of limbering up muscles for the outdoor practice which will begin as soon as the weather permits. There are several promising candidates for the pitcher's box.

Lincoln's Birthday was observed at the assembly in the High School this morning with the following program: Songs by the school; march, "Meu of America;" address, Rev. George A. Warner, on "The Great American." The closing song was "Captain, My Captain."

CAMBRIDGE, MD., DELEGATES DUE HERE TODAY.

The delegation of citizens from Cambridge, Md., which plans to inspect the local sewage system and street pavement, is expected to arrive here this afternoon. The delegation will be comprised of Henry Lloyd, former Governor of Delaware; Herbert W. Haddon, civil engineer, both of Wilmington, Del., and three residents of Cambridge. The delegation will be received by H. W. Marshall, Henry L. Hall, A. L. C. Marsh and George L. Babcock, a committee appointed by Mayor Moy for the purpose.

The party will be taken about the city in an automobile and shown every courtesy on the tour of inspection. While here the delegation will also meet the councilmanic street committee and have a talk with the members regarding the streets and sewage system of the city.

Dr. Charles Moldehke to Lecture.

Dr. Charles Moldenke will give another one of his lectures for the benefit of the Evangelical Lutheran church, Grove street and Mercer avenue, Wednesday evening, February 15. This lecture is a continuation of the one he delivered last year and describes his voyage in southern waters. Those who have heard his previous lectures will be glad of this opportunity to hear more. They are very entertaining and instructive.

Library Closed Monday.

The circulating department of the Plainfield Public Library will be closed on Monday, the day following Lincoln's birthday. The reading room will be open from 2 to 6 with an assistant in charge.

SAY LADY DECIES LIKES TO SMOKE

When Lord Decies and his bride, formerly Vivien Gould, reached Brunswick, Ga., about noon yesterday over the Atlantic Coast Line, en route to Jekyl Island to spend their honeymoon, Lady Decies furnished a sensation by puffing a cigarette in full view of several hundred persons gathered at the depot to get a look at the bridal couple. When the train arrived Lord and Lady Decies were at lunch in the dining car. The people at the depot gave a cheer as soon as the train stopped.

When Lord and Lady Decies had finished lunch the bride took a seat at a window in full view of the curious crowd, produced a cigarette from a jewelled case, lighted it and coolly began to puff. The crowd broke into a cheer as Lady Decies puffed the cigarette, and she seemed to enjoy the applause.

In a few minutes the couple left the car Atlanta and walked to the wharf, a distance of 100 yards, between two lines of spectators, who cheered. Lord Decies lifted his hat and Lady Decies bowed. Instead of going into the saloon they took a seat in full view of the crowd. As the boat left the wharf they both waved goodby to the onlookers.

JERSEY TO GET 2 MORE CONGRESSMEN

There will be 433 members of the House of Representatives in the Sixty-third Congress as compared with 391 in the present House. The bill reported by Representative Crumpacker, of Indiana, from the Census Committee in the House at Washington, yesterday, providing for reapportionment on this 433 basis, was passed by the House late yesterday afternoon.

There was no record vote on the passage of the Crumpacker bill, but previously a substitute offered by Representative Campbell, of Kansas, proopsing to retain the membership of the House at its present total, was defeated, 131 to 171. The Democratic side voted solidly against the Campbell proposition, and their strength, supplemented by the votes of a good many Republicans who ignored the action of their recent party caucus, gave the proponents of the increase in the House membership a clear majority of 40.

Sixteen Republicans, 15 of whom are Regulars, ignored the action of the party caucus which approved the 391 bill, by voting for the measure passed yesterday.

The house has seldom seen more disorder than during the consideration of the reapportionment bill. Practically every member who tried to explain or does an amendment he had offered, he is howled down. Democrats and Republicans alike hooted and booed, banged their desk and yelled "vote," and "regular order," until the member on his feet gave up in despair.

The Crumpacker bill passed yesterday, and the Senate will acquiesce as a matter of course. It provides an increase of 42 members. The States of Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, tUah and West Virginia will get in one member each. The States of Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Texas and Washington will gain two members each, and California and Dakota will gain three members each. The total of 433 was selected because it was the lowest number that would prevent any State from losing a representative.

LITERARY.

The frontispiece of Scribner's Magazine for February is a reproduction in color of a striking portrait of John LaFarge. Price Collier's articles on India and the East are attracting the widest comment not only here but abroad. His cosmopolitan point of view, founded on travel and residence in many countries, gives special authority to his utterances on present-day political conditions. Mr. Collier's second article is entitled "The Gateway to India," and deals particularly with Bombay, where he was a guest at Government House. He gives a comprehensive view from first-hand observation of what it means to govern a great province in India, and outlines the general scheme of government through nine provinces. The point of view of the native is also presented. Another article of intense present-day interest is "German Railway Policy," by Elmer Roberts.

MODIFICATIONS IN SKIRTS.

Fortunately, the extreme exploitations of a fashion die a quick and decided death on this side of the sea, andthe hobble skirt has been hobbled as quickly as was compatible with its scanty lines out of style.. In its place the lower line has been widened and modified to give a delightful variety of line at the lower part of the skirt.

Some of the new models suggest other days, when the voluminous folds were looped up at the side by cords and jeweled chains. Indeed, one skirt exploited by a daring designer has given a decidedly raised line at the front and side, with a long sweep towards the back. Shoes designed especially for the gown should be worn with a costume of this type. It is doubtful, however, as to whether this new idea will be accepted by us.

Trains are appearing on evening gowns. Woman, despite the fact that short, round-length dresses are very comfortable- still clinge to a type of dress that gives her dignity and emphasizes her grace. A train undoubtedly does these things, therefore the makers have heeded the call and are giving us more modifications than ever.

There is the square court train, made extra and hanging in a straight sweeping line from the waist or shoulders to any length on the floor. Pointed trains are very narrow and swish to and fro quite like serpents—with all the allurements of the sinuous. Round trains and fishtail trains are also in evidence. The latter are used on draped dresses.

Double and triple effects are produced by a combination of these. A pointed tunic of lace, for instance, is draped over a square train, and so on.

Great effects are possible at the trasting fabrics or colors are used. Modified lines are accentuated and, if beautiful, make assurance doubly sure.

The lower line of the skirt is decidely coming into its own.

T. J. McGann, of Lincoln place, is still confined to his home with a severe attack of the grip.

By HAMLIN GARLAND

She uttered all this indeed as a man would have done, with steady voice and with bright eyes, but Lee Virginia could feel beneath her harsh inflections the deep emotion which vibrated there, and her heart went out toward the lonely woman in a new rush of tenderness. Now that she was released from the necessity of excusing her mother's faults—faults she could now ignore—now that she could look upon her as a loyal friend, she was moved to pity and to love, and, rising, she went to her and put her arms about her neck and said: "This won't make any difference. I am going to stay with you and help you just the same."

The tears came to the old woman's eyes, and her voice broke as she replied: "I knew you would say that, Lee Virginia, but all the same I don't intend to have you do any such thing. You've got to cut loose from me altogether, because some fine chap is going to come along one of these days, and he won't want me even as a stepmother-in-law. No; I have decided that you and me had better live apart. I'll get you a place to live up in Sulphur, where I can visit you now and again, but I guess I am elected to stay right here in the Fork. They don't like me, and I don't like them, but I have kind of got used to their ways of looking at me sidewise. They don't matter as much as it would up there in the city."

Lee turned back wistfully toward the story of her mother. "Where did my mother meet my father? Do you know that?"

"No, I don't. It was a runaway match, Ed said. I never did know who her folks were, only I know they thought she was marrying the wrong man."

The girl sighed as her mind took in the significance of her mother's coming to this wild country, leaving all that she knew and loved behind. "Poor little mother! It must have been very hard for her."

"I am afraid she did have a hard time, for Ed admitted to me that he hadn't so much as a saddle when he landed in the state. He hadn't much when I met him first, but everybody liked him. He was one of the handsomest men that ever jumped a saddle. But he was close mouthed. You never could get anything out of him that he didn't want to tell, and I was never able to discover what he had been doing in the southern part of the state."

As she pondered on her changed relationship to Lize, Lee's heart lightened. It would make a difference to Ross. It would make a difference to the Redfields. Traitorous as it seemed, it was a great relief, a joy, to know that her own mother—her real mother—had been "nice." "She must have been nice or Lize would not have said so," she reasoned, recalling that her stepmother had admitted her feeling of jealousy.

At last Lize rose. "Well, now, dearie, I reckon we had better turn in. It is getting chilly and late."

As they were about to part at the door of the tent Virginia took Lize's face between her hands. "Good night, mother," she said and kissed her to show her that what she had said would not make any difference.

But Lize was not deceived. This unwonted caress made perfectly plain to her the relief which filled the girl's heart.

Lee Virginia was awakened some hours later by a roaring, crackling sound and by the flare of a yellow light upon her tent. Peering out, she saw flames shooting up through the roof of the ranger's cabin, while beside it, wrapped in a blanket, calmly contemplating it, stood Cavanagh with folded arms. A little nearer to the bridge Redfield was sitting upon an upturned box.

With a cry of alarm she aroused her mother, and Lize, heavy eyed, laggard with sleep, rose slowly and peered out at the scene with eyes of dull amazement. "Why don't they try to put it out?" she demanded as she took in the import of the passive figures.

Dressing with tremulous haste, Lee stepped from the tent just in time to see Swenson come from behind the burning building and join the others in silent contemplation of the scene. There was something uncanny in the calm inaction of the three strong men.

Slowly, wonderingly, the girl drew near and called to Cavanagh, who turned quickly, crying out: "Don't come too close and don't be frightened. I set the place on fire myself. The poor old herder died last night and is decently buried in the earth, and now we are burning the cabin and every thread it contains to prevent the spread of the plague. Hugh and Swenson have divided their garments with me, and this blanket which I wear is my only coat. All that I have is in that cabin now going up in smoke—my guns, pictures, everything."

"How could you do it?" she cried out, understanding what his sacrifice had been.

"I couldn't," he replied. "The supervisor did it. They had to go. The cabin was saturated with poison. It had become to me a plague spot, and there was no other way to stamp it out. I should never have felt safe if I had carried out even so much as a letter."

Dumb and shivering with the chill of the morning, Lee Virginia drew nearer, ever nearer. "I am so sorry," she said and yearned toward him, eager to comfort him, but he warningly motioned her away.

"Please don't come any nearer, for I dare not touch you."

"But you are not ill?" she cried out, with a note of apprehension in her voice.

He smiled in response to her question. "No; I feel nothing but weariness and a little depression. I can't help feeling somehow as if I were burning up a part of myself in that fire—the saddle I have ridden for years, my guns, ropes, spurs. Everything relating to the forest is gone, and with it my youth. I have been something of a careless freebooter myself, I fear, but that is all over with now." He looked her in the face with a sad and resolute glance. "The forest service made a man of me, taught me to regard the future. I never accepted responsibility till I became a ranger, and in thinking it all over I have decided to stay with it, as the boys say, 'till the spring rains.'"

"I am very glad of that," she said.

"Yes; Dalton thinks I can qualify for the position of supervisor, and Redfield may offer me the supervision of this forest. If he does I will accept it—if you will go with me and share the small home which the supervisor's pay provides. Will you go?"

In the light of his burning cabin and in the shadow of the great peaks Lee Virginia could not fail of a certain largeness and dignity of mood. She neither blushed nor stammered as she responded, "I will go anywhere in the world with you."

He could not touch so much as the hem of her garment, but his eyes embraced her as he said, "God bless you for the faith you seem to have in me!"

Redfield's voice interrupted with hearty clamor. "And now, Miss Virginia, you go back and rustle some breakfast for us all. Swenson, bring the horses in and harness my team. I'm going to take these women down the canyon. And, Ross, you'd better saddle up as soon as you feel rested and ride across the divide and go into camp in that little old cabin by the dam above my house. You'll have to be sequestered for a few days, I reckon, till we see how you're coming out. I'll telephone over to the Fork and have the place made ready for you, and I'll have the doctor go up there to meet you and put you straight. If you're going to be sick we'll want you where we can look after you. Isn't that so, Lee Virginia?"

"Indeed it is," replied the girl earnestly.

"But I'm not going to be sick," retorted Cavanagh. "I refuse to be sick."

"Quite right," replied Redfield, "but all the same we want you where we can get at you and where medical aid of the right sort is accessible. I'm going to fetch my bed over here and put you into it. You need rest."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 12, 1911.

The poet has said:

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

But in these lines, as in many others, there is much poetic privilege, or what is usually called "poetic license." It is not always literally true that men can make their own lives sublime even by studying the lives of others who have done so. But it is true that lives may be made better and higher than they are by studying especially the lives of men who have reached a high place in life against great difficulties, provided the life following the example also possesses the abilities to achieve great things. Their latent talents are simply aroused and awakened into active energy by the inspiration of one who, having the ability, has used it.

But all men cannot be great and sublime. Life's duties are of various kinds—some distinguished and some humble. Some require great gifts, and some demand but insignificant abilities, but all are needed to make the world's work complete. But, if anything, the great work harder than the different lower classes. Moreover, God rewards each in proportion as he is faithful to his position, whether it be high or humble. If a king rules well he is no more in the sight of God than his most humble servant. In this way God equalizes men in their different gifts and places of labor.

Of all the men who have lifted other lives the best examples are to be found in the Bible. In this respect the life of Joseph is one of the most supreme, because he possessed a spirit and life of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who lived the only perfect life that was ever lived in this world after Adam's sin and fall.

His entire career was one of inspiration. He was born in a home of wealth and was the favorite son of his father, Jacob. Certain dreams pointed to his rule over his brethren, which he seems to have related with considerable pride. This, with the favoritism of his father, also manifest, caused his brethren to hate him, the result being that he was sold to men going to Egypt, who there sold him to Potiphar, a member of the king's household, and soon afterward thrown into prison. Here he interpreted two dreams of his fellow prisoners which came true, as he said, and one was executed and the other released to his old position in the king's household. But, released himself, he forgot Joseph, whom he had promised he would recommend to the king's mercy. Then the king had two dreams which were as one, and, no one being able to interpret, he recalled Joseph, who interpreted the king's dreams concerning the seven years of plenty and seven years of famine and was given charge of collecting and storing up grain in the seven years of plenty and for this purpose was next to Pharaoh, "the first man in the kingdom." Until his death he had great influence in Egypt, and his people prospered until gradually they were enslaved, when "a king arose who knew not Joseph."

In his life many lessons that should lift other lives may be found, of which only two will be mentioned.

First.—The first lesson is the supreme one. Joseph was always faithful to God. In his father's home he was an obedient son, else he would not have been the favorite son. When sold into Egypt and finally thrown into prison under a false and cruel charge he still put his trust in God, and when made first in the kingdom, next to the king, he was still mindful of God and ascribed the ability to interpret dreams to Him, and when ruling with Pharaoh in peace and power he stayed close to God. To this greatest of all can his splendid success be attributed. No one can reach true fame or real greatness without following Joseph in this respect. All else of greatness is but temporary and flimsy except God be behind it.

Second.—Joseph is the best type of Christian in the Old Testament. The Bible is a true record of the characters it portrays. The sins as well as virtues of its characters are all told. But of Joseph nothing evil is recorded except his pride in telling the dreams of his youth. He treated all alike. He was no respecter of persons. He told the dreams of his fellow prisoners with the same readiness that he interpreted those of the king. He saved Egypt in its awful crisis and Israel at the same time. His supreme mission, like that of Christ, was to save, and their names both mean Saviour. Like Christ, he resisted temptations.

WHEN USING MARABOU.

It is not surprising to find that the softness and beauty of marabou have been seized by designers of scarfs and wraps and used to give decoration, in addition to the delightful warmth that is required on chilly evenings. The scarf or wrap has been emphasized in the season's costume to such an extent that the suggestions given should be received with open arms by "designing" women.

There is a long, simple cape of chiffon in gorgeous flame-color, forming a beautiful background, upon which the two rows of brown marabou are placed. The edging of any garment with marabou is very simple. You will notice that if two rows have been used a consequent doubling of the charm results.

A striped effect is given in the straight scarfs of chiffon, puffed or shirred between each row of the feathers. This supple form can be tied or draped in soft folds around the shoulders, the color kindly harmonizing with any shade of an evening dress.

Embroidered silk of a dull tapestry blue is not too gorgeous to be made more beautiful by the addition of marabou. A straight panel of quilling and embroidery is relieved at each side by a plain band before the soft brown edge is used.

What marabou will do for a peacock blue satin wrap is shown by one beautiful model from Paris. A deep shawl collar, deep cuffs and the edging of the wrap are given by this attractive "fur." No other trimming is required for this effective and easily constructed outer garment.

For the fortunate possessors of whiter marabou sets here are ideas that surely should be crystalized into charming coverings. The ones who cannot resist the tempting display of these scarfs can purchase the downy trimming and fashion it into delectable shapes.

She Wasn't Afraid.

A crowd gathered on the street to watch a handsome fox terrier that was running about, nose in air. White froth was running from the dog's mouth.

"He's mad!" yelled a fat man.

The fox terrier stood in the center of the group with wide open eyes, either too mad or too frightened to move.

At this juncture the policeman arrived. A dozen voices began to tell him that the dog was mad; that it must be killed; that it had been snapping at the children; that it began to froth when it passed a pool of water, and how best to shoot.

A tall, quiet looking woman pushed through the crowd and started toward the dog. A dozen men yelled at her. Two or three men grabbed at her.

She picked the dog up and started out of the crowd. The policeman stopped her with:

"Madam, that dog is mad. He must be shot. Look at the foam coming out of his mouth."

"Foam!" she said contemptuously. "That's a cream puff he was eating."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Printing a Coin on Linen.

The print of a silver coin or medal may be made on silk or linen by dipping the fabric in a solution of nitrate of silver and stretching it over the face of the coin until the image is imprinted. The linen is sensitized by dipping it into a solution of nitrate of silver, made by dissolving sixty or eighty grains of nitrate of silver in one ounce of water. Wet the portion of the cloth which is to receive the impression in the solution and when nearly dry draw it over the face of the coin and tie it at the back. Expose to a weak light, and in a few minutes the raised design of the coin will appear on the linen. As soon as the print is dark enough remove and wash in clear water. When nearly dry iron it smooth with a warm iron, placing a piece of tissue paper over the print. In printing from the coin or medal it is advisable to paste a piece of paper on the reverse side, so that the silver will not come in contact with the sensitized fabric.

Student of Shakespeare.

The office boy sat in the corner busily engaged in reading a book. Strange to say, it was not "The Adventures of Bunko Jim," "Daisy Dean, the Demon Detective," nor even a thrilling narrative of more or less correct life on the plains. He was reading Shakespeare.

An expression of peace and joy was on his face that caused those who knew him to wonder if he had at last experienced a change of heart. His eyes sparkled, and his whole expression was one of happiness. Finally he turned to a worker at another desk.

"Say, Jim," he said, "I've got a question for you. Did you ever read Shakespeare?"

"Yep," was the reply.

"And d'yer know what he talks about?"

"Yep."

"Den maybe you can help me."

"What is it?"

"Well, I want to know which was de man, Romeo or Juliet?"—Youth's Companion.

Losing His Mind.

"Mother, guess you'd better send fer th' doctor," gasped Uncle Charlie Seaver as he sank into a chair and rocked back and forth, holding his gray head.

"Sakes alive! Ye haven't been and got the misery in yer head, have ye, Silas?" gasped his astonished wife, dropping a pie tin.

"I dunno what's the matter, but I've alwus had a hunch my mind 'd go some time. It's cum, I guess. I noticed th' trouble fust last week when I plumb forget to go up an' swear off th' $100 assessment till it was too late. Then I neglected to go to th' school meetin' last night to fight agin the new commissioner. But, wuss and wuss, I didn't guess within eleven pound seven ounces of th' weight of Wal Weaver's big hog killed today. I guess my mind has gone all right. I'm about all in."—Puck.

Tuning Forks.

The tuning fork was the invention of John Stone, royal trumpeter, in 1811. Though the pitch of forks varies slightly with changes of the temperature or by rust, they are the most accurate means of determining pitch. Tuning forks are capable of being made of any pitch within certain limits, but those commonly used are the notes A and C, giving the sounds represented by the second and third spaces in the treble stave.

An Incentive.

"Won't you try to love me?" he sighed.

"I have tried," she replied kindly, but firmly.

"My rich aunt has just died," he went on.

"In that case, dear, I will try again."—Puck.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

Hitchcock, Lillian Russell and Ethel Barrymore—Passing of the Third Floor Back and Many Others.

Completing negotiations with the leading booking agents Proprietor H. S. Sanderson, of the Plainfield theatre has succeeded in securing a list of special attractions that will keep the popular playhouse busy late in the spring. The array includes many of the leading stars and productions of the present season and is so diversified that amusement lovers of all classes will have plenty of opportunity of witnessing their favorite style of play.

Tonight Mr. Sanderson will offer the popular comedian, Frank Daniels, in his newest vehicle, "The Girl in the Train." Ie need only be said the Train." It need only be said that Mr. Daniels has been starring for more than thirty years and considers the present musical comedy the hit of his career to assure patrons they will be more than pleased. Those who remember his ludricous work in "Sergeant Brue," the "Office Boy," and the Kirk LaShelle production, "The Wizard of the Nile," "The Ameer" and "Miss Simplicity" can realize his ability as a funmaker.

Next Saturday, February 18, the house will present one of the most notable offerings of the esason, Eugene Walters newest drama, "Homeward Bound," which had its premier in Cincinnati, Ohio, a month ago and is soon to go into New York for a long run. The play is filled with even more pulsating hear throbs than Mr. Walter's other pieces, "Paid in Full," "The Wolf," and "The Easiest Way." William Courtney, a sterling actor, has the leading role, and Miss Dorothy Tinnart, the original charming widow of "The College Widow," plays opposite him. The entire cast is of exceptional merit. On Thursday, February 23, "The Soul Kiss," will be presented. This high grade musical offering closely rivals "The Merry Widow" in the hit it scored when first presented in New York and since taking to the road has been playing to S. R. O. audiences everywhere. It comes to Plainfield in all its entirety of cast, chorus and special orchestra. Closely following this presentation will come the ever-popular comedy drama "Human Hearts," on Saturday matinee and night, February 25. It is one of the country's standard plays and never seems to grow old.

Monday night, February 27, will mark another important date in local amusements. On that night the original production of ::The Girl in the Fair," will be the offering. The inimitable Carter De Haven will head the big cast and the producing managers send word ahead they will cheerfuly refund the ticket money to patrons not getting full value. This booking is one that musical comedy lovers will never forgive themselves for missing.

During March the threatrical menu will include "The Man of the Hour" on the second; Ellsworth's illustrated pictures on the Passion Play on the sixth; James Forbes' comedy, "The Traveling Salesman," on the ninth, Howe's pictures on the fourteenth, the successful musical comedy "The Time, the Place and the Girl" on the eighteenth; Joseph Gaites' musical comedy, "Bright Eyes," the biggest production of the kind on the road this season, on the twentieth, and Lillian Russell in "In Search of a Sinner," on the twenty-eighth.

Ethel Barrymore will return to Plainfield in her newest play on Saturday, April 1. Other attractions to follow are "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," on April 29. "The Smart Set" on May 2. Raymond Hitchcock on May 6 and Chauncey Olcott on May 29.

Buys Spencer Tract.

William H. Abbott, the real estate broker, who has purchased the property at Park avenue and Seventh street, adjoining the residence of R. H. Towner, says he intends to cut the tract up into building lots to suit purchasers. Mr. Abbott obtained the property from the Spencer estate through the agency of Armstrong Mulford.

To Address Suffragists.

Miss Mary Van Kleeck, of New York, will deliver an address at the meeting of the Plainfield Suffrage League at the home of Mrs. Samuel Huntington, 324 Franklin place, on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Her subject will be "The Necessity of Organizing the American Women Who Work."

WILL Y.M.C.A. PUT NINE ON THE FIELD?

The question of the Y. M. C. A. having a baseball team during the coming season, was discussed at a meeting of the physical department committee last night. Physical Director Thomas G. Whittaker was instructed to ascertain whether there is sufficient amateur material here to organize a team, it being understood, of course, that the candidates or players must be members of the association. If there is enough material, a team will be organized by Mr. Whittaker.

As stated yesterday, the association will insist this year in having a representative team or none. All available amateurs in the city are requested to make themselves known to Mr. Whittaker. It will depend entirely on the response and the character of the material as to the plans for a team. The association is further handicapped in not having a field to play on. However, if it is decided to have a nine no doubt a field will be secured. Another meeting will be held February 17 to take up the baseball question.

The committee decided las night to offer gold, silver and bronze medals as first, second and third prizes in the gymnastic championship and all-round athletic championship contests.

PARK CLUB COTILLON A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

Under the auspices of the entertainment committee a delightful cotillon was held at the Park Club, last night, the affair being particularly attractive. There were about two hundred guests. There were a great many novel figures, some of them new to the dancers, and they were executed in a clever manner under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McGee,who were complimented for the excellent program. Included among the favors were wands, canes, fancy caps, Japanese hair ornaments, magic fans, parasols, etc. There were in charge of a committee comprising Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. James C. Peck, Mrs. George T. Rogers, Mrs. Charles H. Lyman and Miss Anna P. Townsend.

The patronesses for the affair were Mrs. John L. Watson, Mrs. A. M. Abbott, Mrs. C. W. McGee, Mrs. H. L. McGee, Mrs. F. E. DuBois and Mrs. Edward T. Wilson. Music for the dancing was furnished by Muller, of Brooklyn, and this was a decided feature of the cotillon. During intermission refreshments were served under the direction of th entertainment committee.

McDonough was forty-five years old and lived in this vicinity a long time. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. John Horan, of South Plainfield, and Mrs. Michael Lyons, of New street, this city.

Y. M. C. A's Auxiliary Carries Out Ideas of Minister's Lectures.

MRS. KIMBALL IS CHAIRMAN.

Mrs. F. W. Wallace Chosen President at the Annual Meeting —Plans More Boy Problem Talks.

At the first meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, of the Young Men's Christian Association held at the Y. M. C. A. parlors on January 31, six of the seven members were present and a formal agreement for the moral and religious training of boys in the home was reached under the guidance of Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Beptist church, whose lectures on this subject were so well attended by Plainfield mothers during the closing weeks of last year.

Mrs. J. M. Kimball, president of the auxiliary, was elected temporary chairman of the committee and Rev. Mr. Mathiews' suggestion of a working agreement for the guidance of the committee was adopted. It is the purpose of this committee to continue the effort inaugurated by the directors of the Y. M. C. A. for the moral and religious training of boys in the home and to further the work by securing financial support for it.

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. F. W. Wallace; secretary, Mrs. O. G. Dale; treasurer, Mrs. H. C. Krebs. Rev. Mr. Mathiews in announcing the purposes of the committee said that the Women's Auxiliary had voted to maintain the work and had secured him to lead the movement. The plan will be to continue the talks to mothers of boys and two series of lectures on the subject will be delivered, one in March and the other in October. Between the lectures, Mr. Mathiews will meet those mothers who wish to talk over the question personally with him and he will point out the way to the solution of particular problems they may have.

All the lectures will be free to the public and the expenses of the movemnt will be met by voluntary contributions of members whose dues will be $1 a year. A circular letter will be sent to mothers in all parts of the city urging the support of the movement.

COLORED CHILDREN BEAT A WHITE CHILD

Complaint was made out this morning by Mis Adelaide Ball on behalf of Superintendent of Schools, Henry M. Maxson, against a couple of colored children who are accused of beating a little white girl in the yard of the Lincoln school. Vera Green, age 9 years, and Margaret Richardson, age 11 years, were the accused girls and Victoria Abasemra, a Syrian child the victim. Both colored girls had their parents in court when arraigned before Judge DeMeza and attempts were made by them to show that the alleged assault had been provoked by the white girl during school hours.

According to Miss Ball, a thorough investigation of the conduct of the accused children was made before Dr. Maxson ordered the complaint to be made. Miss Humpston, principle of the Lincoln school, has had similar trouble before on many occasions but as her attempts to break up the habit of slapping had failed she appealed to Dr. Maxson. Miss Ball asked Judge DeMeza to appoint a patrolman to guard the children at the closing of the school each day, but the court did not think the occasion warranted any such action. He warned Mrs. Green and a sister of the Richardson girl that they must behave or be punished.

NEIGHBORHOOD CLUB ORGANIZED BY WOMEN.

Mrs. William Newcorn, of West Front street, entertained several neighbors at her home, yesterday afternoon, when it was decided to form what will be known at the Monday Afternoon Club, and meetings will be held on that afternoon each week at the home of a member. Mrs. Newcorn was elected president. Those present yesterday enjoyed an informal social time, and musical selections after which refreshments were served.

Those present were Mrs. Joseph Moore, Mrs. G. L. Greenleaf, Mrs. A. E. Force, Mrs. John E. Dunn, Mrs. A. A. Varley, Mrs. John Hayes, Mrs. John Reed and Mrs. Max Tepper.

PAY VISIT TO THE HOSPITAL

Got on Wrong Train and Being Carried Through Were Delayed in Arriving—Well Pleased With Plainfield.

Former Governor Henry Lloyd, of Delaware; Herbert W. Hatton, civil engineer of Wilmington, Del., and L. C. Dale, of Cambridge, Md., comprising the delegation which planned a visit to this city, yesterday to inspect the sewer beds, street pavements, etc., arrived here during the afternoon, but through their own mistake they boarded a Philadelphia "flyer" at Jersey City not due to stop here.

Barlier in the day Mayor Moy received a telegram that the party would reach Plainfield on the train due here at 12:42, and His Honor was in his office awaiting them. At the same time the Mayor's special committee appointed to receive the visitors, comprising George L. Babcock, H. W. Marshall, Henry L. Hall, A. L. C. Marsh and Alexander Milne was at the railroad station awaiting the arrival of the train.

The train came, but instead of stopping, went through the city like a flash of lightning. Hurried inquiries brought the information that the train would not stop until it reached Wayne Junction, and the special committee so reported to Mayor Moy. Upon the arrival of the train at Wayne Junction a message was sent to Mayor Moy that the party had been carried through and would return on the next train. It was 3:30 when they got to Plainfield. Mr. Lloyd being well advanced in years and not so well able to stand the extra strain, decided to go on home, while the other two members carried out the original plan.

Upon their arrival here, the visitors were met by the committee and through the courtesy of Messrs. Babcock, Marsh and Milne, the entire party made a tour of inspection of the city in their automobiles. The sewage farm was first inspected, Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, who accompanied the party, explaining the system in detail. Then a visit was made to the pumping statio on Randolph road, which was examined, after which the delegates were shown through Muhlenberg Hospital. After inspecting the brick pavement and other kind of road building here, the visitors left on the 5:13 train for home.

Messrs. Hatton and Dale expressed themselves as being well pleased with what they had seen and appreciated the many courtesies extended. They were surprised at the equipment at the hospital, which they thought was remarkable for a semi-public institution. They seemed to be pleased with the sewage system and especially noted the fact that the brick pavement had shown such good wear. Before leaving they thanked Mayor Moy and the committee for the kindness and courtesy shown them while in the city.

ETIQUETTE OF FLAG

Bagley Camp Tells How and When Emblem Should be Displayed.

THE CEREMONIES EXPLAINED.

The Communication is Addressed to All School Superintendents in This Section of New Jersey.

Ensign Bagley Camp, No. 21, United Spanish War Veterans, has sent to the various school superintendents in this section of the State a circular letter outlining a scheme to promote recognition of the flag among the pupils of the public schools and to encourage and foster patriotism among the pupils and the public at large. In order to accomplish this end have laid out a program of raising and lowering the flag at the proper times and suggesting that it be done formally and with the respect that the colors are entitled to.

Among the things suggested by those having the matter in charge is that two color guards be appointed by the principal and a bearer into whose charge the flag shall be given for the ceremony of raising and lowering, the flag remaining up only between just before the first school session in the morning and lowered at the end of the afternoon session. The ceremony shall be formal and accompanied with "assembly" on the bugle wherever there is a pupil able to sound the notes. The raising is to be followed by the salute of the hands and during the ceremony all pupils should stand at attention.

In addition to the special ceremonies of lowering and raising the flag the committee calls attention to this: Under no circumstances should the flag be raised before sunrise nor left flying after sundown. The flag should never be used as a table, or stand covering. No person should ever sit or stand upon the flag nor should objects ever be placed upon it. On Memorial Day the flag should be raised to the top of the staff and at once lowered about two-thirds of the way down and left there until noon when it should again be raised to the top and left there until sundown.

The communication is signed by Harold D. Corbusier, James D. Macnab, and Daniel J. Shea, the committee from Ensign Bagley Post.

POLICE SEEK YOUTH WANTED FOR THEFT

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Harry Locke, 16 years old, of West Sixth street, on charges of theft made by several storekeepers in the city. It is alleged that Locke stole a pair of shoes from the store of M. Abrams, of West Front street and sold them to a fence.

It is well known that the young man would now be in custody had it not been for the over-confidence of the patrolman who was sent to arrest him. According to the story Locke was caught on Wednesday "with the goods on" and had confessed the theft to a patrolman. The latter went to the house and while he was going to one door the youth slipped out another and has since been in hiding. Every effort has been made to find him, but it is not believed that he is in town.

The father of the lad has declared his intention of putting the boy in the navy, but he'll have to find the youngster first.

The VanArsdale Idea.

This is the season of the year when VanArsdale holds his annual cash clearance sale of footwear. He has completed his stock-taking and placed about 3,000 pairs of men's women's and childrens' shoes on sale at geniune bargains. His method of conducting a shoe sale is somewhat different from most people. He buys no goods for the occasion, but lays out all discontinued lines, and borken sizes, as well as a great many regular lines. This stock is placed on sale for ten days or two weeks and Mr. VanArsdale sells them far below the true value, selling no shoes at sale prices on credit or making any refunds or exchanges on sale goods.

Dr. A. S. Hoyt Will Preach.

Rev. Dr. Arthur S. Hoyt, professor of Homiletics in Auburn Theological Seminary, will preach at both services at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, tomorrow. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the pastor, will preach that day at Williams College.

Rev. Dr. R. S. Campbell, of the borough, will preach for Rev. J. O. McKelvey, at Warren chapel tomorrow.

COW RUNNING WILD IS MADE A CAPTIVE

Roaming over the mountains and through the fields since last July, a cow shipped from the west, whose owner is unknown, was finally made captive in the barn on Champlain L. Riley's farm on the Washington road, yesterday, and today was removed to the township pound, where it will be held awaiting a claimant. The animal, one of a herd shipped from the west over the Lackwanna railroad, escaped from the train near Myersville, and ever since has been running about the country. At the same time a steer escaped, but it sought other fields, and has not been seen in the vicinity.

When made a prisoner in Mr. Riley's barn, an examination showed a dozen or more bullet wounds in the cow's side. It appears that when the animal would appear near a settlement the farmers would take their guns down and use the bovine for a mark. The cow was captured by Alexander J. Sharp, manager for Mr. Riley'h farm, he enticing the animal into the barn with a generous quantity of hay. A report was in circulation that the cow was a wild bull and this caused consternation among the residents in the mountains, especially the women and children. Mr. Sharp notified the railroad company today.

SUNDAY CLOSING

Three Offenders Fined and Trials of Two Others are Postponed.

ALL OF THEM ARE ITALIANS.

Two from Sunny Italy Allege They Are Seventh-Day Baptists and Will Haye to Produce Proof.

A number of Italians, friends or relatives of five others who had been haled to court on charges of violating the Sunday observance ordinances, were interested spectators when Judge DeMeza opened court today. Three of the five were fined and two who declared that they were members of the Seventh-Day Baptist church had their hearing put down for 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

Mary Pasto, who keeps a store on West Third street, was the first to face the judge. A briarwood pipe sold to Sergeant Overbaugh was the immediate cause of her appearance. She explained to the court that other storekeepers all about her were in the habit of selling on Sunday and she did not see why she could not do the same. Asked if she had been warned she answered in the affirmative and immediately was fined $10.

Pipes seemed to have been the thing most desired by the sleuths last Sunday. Mary Di Fiaro, of 321 Richmond street, sold Detective Sergeant John Flynn a corn cob pips, but said she had a right to do it because being a Seventh-Day Baptist, she closed her store on Saturday and opened on Sunday. Judge DeMeza questioned the woman closely as to how long she had been a member of that denomination. She declared that for a year she had been one of the regular attendants of the church in New York, because when she married (the second time) her husband was of that persuasion and had induced her to leave the Catholic church and join that of which he was a member. Strangely enough her term of membership in the church diminished from two years down to ten months as the examination proceeded and finally Judge DeMeza put the case over until Tuesday morning to permit an investigation to be made as to the truth of the woman's statements. John Consoli, of 26 Somerset street, claimed membership in the same church as Mrs. Di Fiaro and his case was also postponed.

Angelo Brancatti, and Nicholas de Luc, were the other two fined and when sentence was imposed on Brancatti he declared that he was not a member of any church, but that he had serious intentions of becoming an applicant for membership in a Jewish synagogue as a means of profiting by the larger business possible to be done on Sunday.

Judge DeMeza took the time to especially make plain the ordinances of the city so that all who were in the court could understand. Amerigo Brancatti, of Grant avenue, acted as interpreter for those who could not speak English fluently and his explanations were perfectly plain to those who came out of curiosity. It is safe to say that many of the small stores will be closed tomorrow.

FLAG THREE BY TWO INCHES AROUSES IRE.

For vioalting both the spirit and the letter of the law requiring that the flag of the United States shall be displayed at all school buildings during school hours and at such other times as may be deemed appropriate, one of the boards of education in Burlington county is likely to get a call down from State Superintendent Charles J. Baxter.

Mr. Baxter recently received a communication upon which was a drawing of a small flag accompanied by a statement that it was the exact size of a flag supplied by the Board of Education for one of the school buildings in the district. The flag was three inches long and two inches wide. Mr. Baxter wrote to the president of the local board to inquire whether the information furnished him was correct. He was surprised to receive an affirmative answer.

The State superintendent is himself a war veteran and as such is not lacking in a soldier's veneration for his country's flag. In his judgment the tacking up of a little three-by-two emblem on a school is a pretty cheap way of trying to instill ideas of patriotism and respect for the flag in the minds of the pupils. He will probably convey this thought to the local Board of Education without mincing words.

Under Section 230 of the general school law it is provided: "Every Board of Education shall procure a United States flag, flagstaff and the appliances therefor for each school in the district, and shall display said flag upon or near the public school building during school hours and at such other times as said board may deem proper."

This provision is generally complied with willingly by local boards, but in view of the interpretation placed upon it in the case under consideration an amendment will probably be offered to the act designating what sort of a flag is to be used, or, at least, providing that the emblem shall be a suitable one.

GERMANY'S CENSUS AS COMPARED WITH U. S.

Figures compiled from the 1910 imperial German census show there are forty-seven cities in the empire having a population in excess of 100,000 and form an interesting comparison with the statistics of the thirteenth census of the United States, which shows fifty cities with this population.

Berlin, Germany's largest city, without its suburbs, has 2,064,153, or half a million more people than Philadelphia. It is exceeded in population by Chicago by 121,000. Compared with New York, Berlin has not half so many people. With its suburbs, which are intended to be included in Greater Berlin, it has about 3,400,000, which would make it more than a million less than New York.

TWO GOOD JOBS.

The Civil Service Commission has called attention to the importance of the examinations to be held at the State House, Trenton, on February 20, when candidates will be tested for the positions of statistician and accountant of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners and assistant to the State auditor. The salary of the statistician is $2,500, and that of the assistant to the auditor $2,000 a year.

In the tests for the statistician experience will count five points, accounting three, commercial arithmetic two, and economics, corporation finances and statistics five. For the place as auditor experience will count six, duties four, accounting six and commercial arithmetic four.

Young Woman Tried Suicide.

A young woman, whose maiden name is given as Catherine Hutz, and who was employed since Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Huddel, of Fourth avenue, Roselle, was found in the kitchen of the Huddel home Wednesday, unconscious, with a gas tube in her mouth. She was revived and sent to the Elizabeth General Hospital, where it is thought she will recover. The girl undoubtedly attempted suicide. She left a note to her sister, Mrs. John Pierce, of South Park street, Elizabeth, in which she bade her sister good-by and asked for her prayers. Chief of Police Kinney says that he is told that the young woman was born in Union, and that she has been married three times. Her husbands, he said, are dead. Despondency over domestic troubles, the police say, drove her to her action.

Miss Annie Short, of Jersey City, who has been visiting friends here, has returned.

Miss Carrie Veghte, of Belle Mead, who has been spending the winter here, has returned from a visit to her home.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when most all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly relieved by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is the statement of a Plainfield citizen who has reclaimed good health by the use of this remedy:

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by lame and weak back and I never found anything that would help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills from Randolph's Drug Store. My back was so painful and sore that I dreaded to stoop and whenever I caught cold or exerted myself, I suffered more severely. I tried several kidney remedies but it was left for Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained from Randolph's Drug Store to cure me. They are certainly a most effective preparation for kidney trouble."

BASEBALL.

John P. (Hans) Wagner, the well known shortstop of the Pittsburg Pirates, was drawn as a juror for the March term of court at Pittsburg yesterday afternoon. Wagner is scheduled to leave for the training camp at West Baden Springs, Ind., on March 6, and it will be necessary for him to secure the consent of the court before he will be able to leave.

Steve Yerkes, of Millville, this State, has been signed by the Boston Red Sox and will be taken south on the training trip. It is the intention of Manager Patsy Donovan to have Yerkes take the place of Shorstop Wagner, who is to be sent behind the bat in place of Carrigan, who has failed to come to terms with the club.

Manager Jack Dunn, of the Baltimore Orioles, has arranged nineteen games for his team to play before the Eastern League season opens. Game have been arranged with the Boston Nationals, Philadelphia Athletics and Philadelphia Nationals as well as the two New York clubs. The Orioles wil play their first game at Oriole Park, Baltimore, on Tuesday, March 28, against Connie Mack's Athletics. Following are the games that Manager Dunn has arranged to date: March 28, Philadelphia Athletics; March 29 and 30, Philadelphia Nationals; March 31, Manhattans; April 1, Gas and Electric League; April 3 and 4, New York Americans; April 5, Rock Hill College; April 6, Western Maryland College; April 7, New York Giants; April 8, Cornell University; April 10 and 11, Boston Nationals; April 12, Georgetown College; April 12, Princeton College; April 14, Wilmington Tri-State; April 15, Walbrook A. C.; April 17, Hampden A. C.; April 18, Mt. St. Joseph College.

Mickey Corcoran, who played third base for the Buffalo Eastern League club last year, has not accepted the terms offered him by Manager Hughey Jennings, of the Detroit Tigers. Besides the sorrel top infielder seven other men have refused to put their "John Hancock" to the contracts tendered them.

Heitmuller is the only man on the reserve list of the Baltimore club that has not yet signed. Heiny is playing ball out in California, and Dunn does not expect to have any trouble in signing the big outfielder.

"Fans as a rule are of the opinion that errors play the leading role in sending young players back to the bushes, but they imagine wrong," says Joe McGinnity, manager of the Indians. "Errors certainly receive consideration, but in the category of the veteran manager errors are at the bottom of the list when the worth of ball players is being summed up.

"Ball players who do not make errors are not worth their weight in sawdust. It is the player who shirks chances who keeps his correct or near correct fielding average. Which is the better man—the chap who digs over back of third frantically, smothers a hard-hit ball which he gets to with both hands so that an error is charged against him when the latter reaches first, or the player who makes a half-hearted dash and then lets the ball skimmer to left field while the batsman romps to second base?

"Herman Long, one of the greatest shortstops of all time, made more errors each season than half of the other league shortfielders, but his superiority over them was never questioned.

"Big league managers today want players whose nerve is in the right place and who aren't considering what the official scorer will charge them up with every time they have a hard chance. It is the player who can be depended upon to fight every minute and who goes after every ball hit within a mile of him that sticks in the big show, even though he makes errors galore."

GOLF.

According to the latest rumor, Archie Simpson, one of the best known professionals, is soon to cast his fortunes with the land of the free. Simpson, who is a relative by marriage of George Low, the Baltusrol "pro.," plans to sail with Low when the last named returns from Carnoustie next month. Simpson sprang from the same school to which James Braid, the five times champion of Great Britain, owes so much. Latterly Simpson took up his residence at Carnoustie, where Alec Smith, open title holder of the United States, laid the foundation of his game.

Although he cannot be regarded as one of the younger school of golfers, Simpson is still a oyung man in a golfing sense. In 1890, the year John Ball won the open,Simpson tied with Willie Fernie for second money. Simpson finished in the prize list on several other occasions. As a greens architect and a designer of golf courses he has been in the foremost rank, while his clubs are known the world over.

Appreciating the advantages of an early start, the green and tournament committee of the Montclair Golf Club have drawn up a circular of instructions, which was mailed to the members Thursday. Along with the circular is a blank handicap form. On this each member is requested to give the five best scores he made over the club course during the season of 1910.

Another section of the blank is devoted to the subject of four-ball matches, always a troublesome problem at golf clubs, especially during the height of the season. A vote is requested as to whether it will be advisable to allow four-ball matches on Sunday mornings, Saturdays and holidays from May 1 to November 1.

"What will happen now?" Will the Royal and Ancient suspend all members of the United States Association asked a friend who I hear has got his golf mixed up with his football," asks a writer in the English journal Leader. "The Royal and Ancient will do nothing and do it with their accustomed dignity. You see, it's a polite friction with the St. Andrews people that they do not make for golfers generally. They make them for their own club. If other people think their rules so good that they desire to adopt them—very well then. St. Andrews neither feels flattered at the implied compliment or claims that its copyright is being infringed. It maintains an attitude of stolid indifference."

A "coronation match," amateurs against professionals, has been arranged for June 24 at Sandwich, England, where two days later the open championship is to begin.

Among the professionals from this side to winter at St. Andrews are Laurence Auchterlonie, Kansas City Golf Club, and our open and Western open title-holder in 1902; George Braid and John Herd, of Chicago links; Richard Leslie, St Charles Country Club, Winnipeg; Andrew Christie, Rochester Country Club; John Gatheram, Bellevue Country Club, St. Louis; William Braid, Maryland Country Club, and James Reid, who is to take the place of Jock Hutchinson at the Pittsburg Golf Club. They have been playing daily and foursomes are most in favor.

Ben Sayers, of North Bedwick, is professional of the Monte Carlo course this winter. It is at Mont Agel and there is another course sixty-five minutes by automobile from Monte Carlo, in the Gospel Valley, that is advertisd as the finest on the continent. At Easter, James Braid, J. H. Taylor, J.G. Sherlock and Arnaud Massy will compete in a special tournament of the Rome Golf Club.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Lew Fields inaugurated his New York engagement in "The Hen Pecks," the new big musical comedy production, under his own management at the Broadway Theatre last week. The production is the fourth in the series of gigantic musical and spectacular offerings under the management of Mr. Fields, which begun with the presentation of "The Midnight Sons," and which also include "The Jolly Bachelors" and "The Summer Widowers." It is totally unlike any of its three predecessors.

Henry W. Savage's production of Rupert Hughes' farce "Excuse Me," will make its Broadway bow at the Gaiety Theatre on Monday, February 13, succeeding "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," which has been selected as the inaugural attraction of the new George M. Cohan Theatre. The thirteenth has proved a lucky date for "Excuse Me." It first saw the light at Allentown, Pa., on Friday the thirteenth, and from the opening performance its success was assured. The production has been staged in an exceptionally lavish and complete manner by Mr. Savage, while George Marion, the well-known stage director, is responsible for the technical part of the performance.

DANIELS AS JUDGE OF DIVORCE COURT

Frank Daniels, who will appear at the Plainfield theatre for one night only, Saturday, February 11, in "The Girl in the Train," is one of a group distinguished in juvenile performances of "Pinafore." Some of the other stage personages since famous who appeared in the favorite Gilbert and Sullivan piece are Julia Marlowe, who was seen as Josephine; Ida Mulle, who also played Josephine and William Collier, who played Sir Joseph Porter. Mr. Daniels, naturally a comedian, was always cast as Dick Deadeye. Following the juvenile "Pinafore," Mr. Daniels made quite a success in a small company managed by a man named Atkinson. The best piece Atkinson produced was "The Electric Doll," in which the pudgy comedian shone so resplendently that the late Chas. Hoyt picked him out to create the part of Old Sport in "A Rag Baby." His picture of the broken down sport in the Hoyt piece was so perfect that Mr. Daniels continued in the part for upwards of two seasons.

Then came a dramatization of "Vice-Versa," an imaginative story by F. Anstey, whose fantastic play, "The Brass Bottle" was recently presented in New York. This stage version of "Vice-Versa" was called "Little Puck," and to this day when he meets strangers who can remember him that far back, Mr. Daniels is congratulated on his "Little Puck."

After several seasons in the Anstey piece, Mr. Daniels was leading comedian in Willard Spencer's musical play, "Princess Bonnie," which enjoyed several seasons of prosperity. At the end of that time, the late Kirk La Shelle undertook the management of Mr. Daniels and starred him in a Victor Herbert musical play, "The Wizard of the Nile." After that it was one success after another for the little comedian, who was seen successively in "The Idol's Eye," "The Anser," "Miss Simplicity," "The Office Boy," "Sergeant Brue," "The Tattooed Man," and the "Bells of Britteny." Now he is to return in a musical play that has been the rage of Europe, "The Girl in the Train." As the impressionable judge of an Amsterdam divorce court, Mr. Daniels has the best part in which he has appeared since the days of "Old Sport" and "Little Puck."

HERE AND THERE.

A free and timely translation of Cicero's great exodium by Rev. T. P. Boretty, of this city, is appended. Mr. Boretty declares that the Italians of the city are almost to a man is sympathy with his honor, Mayor George W. V. Moy and believes that their true sentiment was expressed four hundred years ago by the Roman statesman. This is the translation; the word Plainfield being substituted for Sparta:

"Honorable Mayor; What was extremely to be desired, what above all could return to your rank his glory and to our law its respect, is granted and offered you today, not by men, but, I dare say, by God himself, in these most critical and decisive circumstances for Plainfield and the Republic.

"In fact for some time, not only here, but also abroad, an opinion is being spread most unjust to the republic and to Plainfield. People say that, according to the manner in which the law has been enforced, the saloon and the shopkeepers, though guilty will never be condemned. At this same moment in which your rank and our law is challanged and memaced; at this same moment in which the spirits are being inflamed and the holy gift of liberty is in danger of degenerating into licentiousness; at this same moment, honorable mayor, some persons are being brought and accused before you. They are already condemned by the public and sane opinion on account of their behavior toward the law, although they think they will be absolved if you judge them by their hope and their boldness.

"In this case, honorable mayor, jealous to answer to the wishes and expectations of the Plainfield people, I present myself as an accuser, not in order to augment the hatred against this rank of yours, but to defend it against an infamy common to us all. In fact, we lead before your rank and to our law the influence they have lost of regaining the respect of the truly American people and the esteem of the foreign nations. In judging this case with fearless justice the power which rests in you and in the law will be more and more fixed and confirmed, if, on the contrary the riches, the hope and the boldness of the accused triumph over the law, I hope, at least, I may affirm honorable mayor, that if Plainfield wants a hand to enforce the law, the accused has not been wanting to the mayor nor the accuser to the guilty."

MR. HAND'S QUESTIONS.

The Special Water Committee has acted suddenly and made a mistake. I was not invited to any of the secret meetings that have been held during the past month or so although I pay a large amount of taxes.

It has leaked out that the surprising action of the committee was against the advice of some of our ablest citizens who attended the meetings, and it is an open secret that until a few days ago the committee had no idea of going into a long and costly lawsuit with the Water Company, and besides their action is contrary to the advice of Mr. Fuertes, the expert employed last year by the Common Council, at a cost of more than $4,000. What is the reason of this sudden change of front?

It seems strange that so soon as the taxpayers began to get together the committee jumped to a conclusion without giving the people a hearing who must foot the bills for lawyers and experts.

The Water Company, I understand has made a propostion, part of it has been published and it looks fair. Why was it turned down without giving the taxpayers a chance to consider it?

Mr. Angleman tells me that if the city began to condemn the water works and then backs out we must pay the expense of both sides, lawyers bills, and experts bills and all, after years of litigation.

Who would blame the Water Company then if it refused to renew its offer to give Plainfield a preference to Netherwood water?

We need the advice of the best New Jersey lawyer we can get in this matter. Somersaults and mysterious business should be stopped.

CHARLES H. HAND.

Biggest Egg in World.

The largest egg in the world, eighty times the size of an ordinary hen's egg, is one of the latest acquisitions of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. It would probably not be classified even by an unscrupulus dealer as "strictly fresh," for the scientists declare it was laid more than 400 years ago. It was popularly known in Madagascar, from whence it came, as the product of the "flying elephant," an extinct species of Roc, known as the Aepyornis maximus.

The egg is two feet two inches around its shortest circumference.

SCION OF INDIAN CHIEF, 107, STARTS LIFE ANEW.

With his fortune gone, but with his health good and his courage undaunted, Foster J. Foster, 107 years old, will begin life anew. Foster, the grandson of Red Jacket, chief of the Seneca Indians in New York Revolutionary periods, is in Kansas City to take steps to make his last fight for a mining claim out of which he says he was swindled. If he does not recover the claims, located in Montana, he asserts he will go into business and start all over again.

Foster says he was born in 1804, on what is now Seneca street, in Buffalo, which at that time was an Indian village. For years Foster was a government scout and secret service agent.

Our object, while selfish, is educational. There are thousands in this vicinity who are not our patrons either for Dry Cleaning or Pressing because they do not understand our service and the benefit Dry Cleaning is to soiled delicate garments.

WILSON ASKS AID FOR RED CROSS

Governor Wilson has issued a statement commending the appeal of the Red Cross association for aid for the sufferers in China. The governor calls attention to the fact that State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees, of this State, is also the State treasurer of the organization and that funds can be sent to him. The governor says:

"The tragical famine now prevailing in Manchuria, China, calls for special effort on the part of humane and Christian people everywhere to contribute to the relief of the suffering. The Commercial club, of Seattle, Washington, has undertaken, under the auspices of the American Red Cross society, to ship food and clothing. Flour, rice, dried fish and meat, coarse cotton cloth and cotton wadding for clothing, will all be most gratefully received and will be promptly forwarded by the club in an army transport granted by Congress for the purpose. Such gifts should be directed to the Commercial Club, Seattle, Washington, in the care of the Red Cross Agency. Money will also, of course, be very much needed and immediately sent to the American Red Cross Society at Washington, D. C.

"I would most earnestly commend this call for aid to the attention of all citizens of the State who can contribute supplies or money and would respectfully urge them to lend their assistance as freely and as promptly as possible.

"America has always been among the first in the great family of nations to give generous aid in such works of humanity, and I am sure that the people of New Jersey will be as quick to act and as generous in action as the epople of any of her sister States.

"For the New Jersey Red Cross Association.

ANNUAL HORSE SHOW ON JUNE 8, 9, AND 10

The eighth annual horse show of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club will be held at the club's show grounds, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 8, 9 and 10, the dates having just been fixed. It is proposed to make the forthcoming show the best in the history of the club, assurances having been received that all the former exhibitors will be here together with many new ones.

The horse show committee comprises Robert A. Fairbairn, chairman; William J. Buttfield, Edwin S. Hooley, Daniel Runkle, Sharles W. Smith. The grounds committee comprises Lewis G. Timpson, chairman; Lewis E. Waring, George P. Mellick, Harry L. Finch and Charles J. Fisk.

The present officers of the club are as follows, and will probably be re-elected at the annual meeting in March:

President, Orville T. Waring; vice-president, Robert A. Fairbairn; treasurer, Edwin S. Hooley; secretary, Lewis G. Timpson; assistant secretary, Charles W. Smith.

AN EVENING HOOD.

Light enough to allow the coiffure an unruffled glory and heavy enough to protect it from the winds of night is the new evening hood of chiffon.

It is made of light-colored chiffon, shirred in rows of two or three tucks that form a ruche around the front of the face. This fullness is then gathered to the base of the head and the ends of the material are used to tie around the throat as a scarf. Frills of silver or gold lace are used to line the front part, and if you wish to be very Parisian a little wreath of ribbon roses and leaves can outline the edge. This is made on a thin wire; the roses are of ribbon, folded down the centre and wrapped around a pencil or your finger. Blue, green, pink and gray roses may grow on the same stem if you wish.

The leaves are made of pinching a green ribbon and gahtering it into a round or pointed form.

A large chiffon scarf can be changed into an evening hood by a clever woman. There is promised a successful adoption of this new accessory for evening wear.

NOVEL WORKBAG.

The latest thing in workbags has a quaintness that makes it appropriate to be used as a prize. It is in the shape of a miniature sunbonnet and can easily be made at home.

Cut out two pieces of cardboard four inches long, four inches deep in front and two at back. Slope the sides to the shape of a sunbonnet frame.

Cover each piece with a flowered silk on the outside and white satin on inner side. To the back edge of the two pieces join a gathered crown of the silk and to the lower edges put a shaped peplum of the same material. This is cut three inches wide at top, the frame extending beyond it, and should be two inches deep, with the back edge cut straight and the front one sloped to make the lower edge of frill about four inches deep.

The crown is joined to the frames with a narrow whalebone, which opens to form a small bag for thread, thimble and a bit of fancy work.

On one inner side of frame are fastened leaves of white French flannel, with edges pinked and brier stitched in colored silk. On opposite side is ribbon, held at intervals to hold scissors, bodkins, stiletto and rule.

The bonnet fastens in front with a crocheted loop and button and may have baby ribbon attached if it is to be carried.

VOGUE OF SAILOR COLLARS.

They Are Worn on Many Garments This Season, Both Those For Afternoon and Evening Wear.

Everywhere—on gowns and coats and evening wraps and separate blouses and negligees—the sailor collar is prevalent. It is the one new touch in neckwear this season. It is of generous proportions—sometimes reaching almost to the waist—and it may be of any color or fabric. Moreover it may or may not match the rest of the costume.

The style as applied to indoor garments may be seen here in the blouse of taupe crepe de chine. The blouse is very simply made, to be worn with a taupe broadcloth suit in the new matched blouse, and is trimmed only by a shallow chemisette of white and gold lace and buttoned cuffs of the same lace over chiffon undersleeves. But the distinctive note is given by the sailor collar buttoned in front with a row of velvet buttons that end in tassels and cut with a curve in back to obviate the hunchbacked appearance that is the sailor collar's only drawback. The collar is felled and stitched double at the edge, giving the effect of narrow cording. Altogether it adds greatly to the appearance of a blouse that would otherwise look pretty, but rather unfinished. Even in very elaborate garments the sailor collar is worn.

In an evening and dress coat seen recently the sailor collar was at its best in a cream colored broadcloth with the brown velvet collar. The touch given was that of warmth, for rich brown combined with big gilt buttons to do away with the chilly appearance of white in winter. The collar did not come straight around the front, but was folded under a bias lapel and fastened down by the buttons. It was fitted over the shoulders and was rather high in the neck, the broadcloth beneath being stiffened as for a coat collar. The brown serves for the further purpose of being more becoming than white next to the skin.

In fur the velvet is extremely and deservedly popular. It appeared with an Alice blue broadcloth coat in an attractive shade of brown beaver. The coat was corded in front and had deep fur cuffs to match the collar. The latter is chiefly remarkable for the pointed tabs over the shoulders, making it lie flat without bulging. At the neck it was cut low and round in order to display the collar of the gown.

The sailor collar effect may, of course, be only an apparent one. In this case the collar is simply a stitched square applied on the blouse and is used chiefly because it gives an appearance of height.

Bowknot of Brilliants.

Bowknots of brilliants are very smart indeed and have supplanted the pearl brooch of other days. They are shown with a background of black or dark colored velvet or a heavy corded silk. Some have the center of the ribbon done in blue enamel, with a row of the brilliants just on the edge.

Why I Love St. Valentine's Day

Because It Helped Me In My Courtship and to Get the Girl I Wanted

By ARTHUR GRAY

A hundred years ago, when there were but a few million people in the United States, our progenitors fell in love in the old fashioned natural way and, being once in love, married as a matter of course, very few of them considering what they would live on in the married state. One reason for this, or cause, whichever one chooses to consider it, was that they fell in love and married young.

The reason why I appreciate St. Valentine's day is that it had a great deal to do with my present domestic happiness. A valentine began it, a valentine furnished means of keeping it up, and a valentine settled it.

Effie Winston at seventeen was at the exact age her mother married—married for love—married without any provision for the future. But Mrs. Winston married much later than a hundred years ago, when getting a living was easier and not so much was required. Consequently she didn't find married life as charming as it might have been had Effie's father had a fortune or at least an income commensurate with the requirements of an increasing family. Therefore, as might be expected, the lady did not propose that her sons should take wives until they could support them or that her daughters should marry men who were not prosperous.

This was sensible, but when a sensible idea is carried too far it ceases to be sensible. To come to the point, Mrs. Winston determined that her daughter Effie, in whom I came to be interested, should marry none other than a rich man. I wanted Effie, and I hadn't a cent. Ergo, Mrs. Winston was a very stupid and a very obstinate woman. This was my boyhood reasoning, and since I have grown to middle age I have not, in my case, seen any reason to change it. I confess, however, that my daughter Effie shall not marry a pauper.

I made Effie's acquaintance at dancing school. I asked her to dance with me twice in one of our afternoon dancing school meetings. St. Valentine's day came along soon afterward, and she sent me a valentine. This was the beginning of it. Indeed, the pretty little missive was my first intimation that a member of the opposite sex saw in me something more than in the other boys of her acquaintance. I didn't stop to consider that she might have sent one to a dozen other boys. If I had the heavenly flower of love might have been nipped in the bud. I knew Effie had sent me the valentine, for, fearing I might be mistaken with regard to it, she scrawled her name on it. I assumed that the verses printed on it had been laid down there by the printer for the express purpose of letting me know that Effie loved me.

Many a verse, many a letter, has been penned by a woman who intends to tell of the love she bears a man that have not in them a tithe of the pure sentiment that came to me in those lines, which had been slung off in thousands by a pressman in a dirty apron. I dreamed over my valentine, and I dreamed of Effie. She is now very necessary to me, but she is incapable of inspiring me with any of that delicious feeling which welled up within me like waters fitted to be quaffed by angels. I carried it to school with me and at recess stole away from the other children to look at it. I had it with me in my room when I went to bed and studied it till I knew every flower, every vine, every cupid. It was the last thing I thought of before going to sleep and the first after awaking in the morning.

Where was I? I remember—I was abusing my future mother-in-law for being so stupid as to refuse me her daughter's hand. This was long after I had received the valentine, for Effie was nineteen and I was twenty. Effie was as stupid, I thought, as her mother about the matter, for although she declared she would never marry any one but me, she demurred at becoming my wife, I being in possession of an income of nothing a year. At any rate, she told me that, her mother having forbidden her from receiving or communicating with me, she would obey. Indeed, she was forced to obey. I couldn't take care of her as my wife, and I had no right to be dangling about her keeping desirable suitors away.

"I accused her of heartlessness and other unattractive traits till I drew tears, then called myself a brute, then kissed her goodby and then went away determined to put myself in a position to earn enough to marry on.

I worked like a Trojan. I did not only my own work, but every one else's in the office where I was employed. While other boys who had no such spur as I had thought only of getting a holiday now and then or of shirking what work they didn't fancy I was thinking only of Effie and a tiny cottage. I worked all day and often at night. Indeed, I worked so hard that my employers noticed it and kept on raising my salary and advancing me till one day I was astonished at a proposition for me to manage the detail of the business at a salary of $6,000 a year.

While I was standing before the members of the firm with a puzzled look on my face I was not thinking of the proposition or the $6,000 a year; I was thinking of how to communicate the good news to Effie. I believed her mother would grow more and more difficult to satisfy in a pecuniary way each year, and I determined not to appeal to her, but to Effie direct. Three years had passed during which I had kept apart from Effie and Effie had kept apart from me. But how could I know whether she was unchanged? I couldn't. Suppose I wrote her to find out and received no reply. I wouldn't know whether my letter had fallen into her mother's hands or whether Effie had received it and did not care to renew our past relations.

And here comes in the second valentine. I was offered my new position the 1st of January, and in six weeks St. Valentine's day came round. I sent Effie, who was now twenty-two years old, a valentine. I was aware that the custom had even at that day fallen largely into the hands of children. I didn't intend to declare my love in verses that had now come to seem cheap to me. I used the valentine as a starter for a clandestine correspondence. I wrote a message on it in lemon juice, then indited in a disguised hand this couplet;

If to know me you aspire
Read my name before the fire.

You see letters written in lemon juice, though invisible before, when heated come out a brown color. Effie would apply the necessary heat. I only feared that she would throw the valentine in the wastebasket without reading the couplet.

That all turned out right was apparent in a letter I received from my valentine, for which I had given her an address. Effie was delighted at my success and said that she was very proud of me. She added, however, that, so far as obtaining her mother's consent to our marriage or even an engagement was concerned, it would be more difficult than ever. Her mother's figures for the fortune Effie's husband should possess were rising every day.

Effie and I after this continued to correspond clandestinely, she not knowing exactly what to do. She loved her mother, and she loved me. She had yielded to her mother's wishes so long as I was unable to support her, and, now that I was in a position to do so, she felt that something was due both to me and to herself. Matters were brought to a crisis by Mrs. Winston discovering our correspondence. A letter Effie had written me fell into her mother's hands.

It seems that Mrs. Winston had been on the watch for such a procedure and could not imagine how my first letter could have got into the house without her knowing it. Effie declined to enlighten her. That made the old lady very angry, and there was a great commotion in the Winston family. Of course our correspondence was stopped. Effie was forbidden to write to or receive letters from me under pain of being run off to Europe. In addition to the command Mrs. Winston set spies upon Effie, and she dared not post me a single note.

Matters went on in this way for nearly a year. One day a letter came to the Winston house that excited Effie's suspicions. It was now her turn to pry. The letter bore the business stamp of an agent of a steamship company. Effie steamed the envelope, opened it and read that her mother had engaged passage for two for Genoa, the vessel to sail on the 14th of February, or in about a week.

Here was a revelation. Something must be done. Something was done. And this is the way it was done.

Effie a week before St. Valentine's day went out and bought a supply of valentines for the children. The same evening she addressed a number of them, her mother asking why she was sending them so early, and she replying that they were going to distant places. She addressed and stamped them, managing to retain one, which she addressed to me. This she gave, with the others, to a maid to post, who mailed them without looking at the addresses.

This was the third and last valentine. I received it and read that Effie was ready to walk away with me to church before the sailing of the vessel that was to take her to foreign parts. She appointed a place of meeting and an hour. Indeed, she arranged everything to my satisfaction.

But there was very little time. The steamer was to leave at 1 p. m. on Feb. 14, and the appointment made by Effie to meet me was at dawn the same morning. Before any one in the house was awake she was up and dressed and stealing downstairs. Then she went out by a rear door. I was at the corner with a carriage, and when I saw her scudding toward me I opened the carriage door, we got in and were driven away.

I had arranged my part of the elopement and engaged a clergyman to be up and ready to perform a wedding ceremony when the cocks were crowing. We found him ready, and in a few minutes a knot had been tied that Mrs. Winston could not unloose. From the parson's we drove back to the house. Effie let us in with a night key, and we waited till her mother came downstairs to breakfast. Since she was to sail that day she was up early, and when she entered the room where we were and saw us sitting together her astonishment was unbounded. Effie said to her:

"Mother, I am of an age to think and act for myself. We are married. I have acted without your knowledge to save trouble, for I knew you would oppose me, and I had made up my mind to choose my own husband."

Well, it was made up in time, but not then. Mrs. Winston canceled her passage abroad, and Effie and I went on our wedding trip.

Is it a wonder that we both appreciate St. Valentine's day?

BALLADE OF SORE PLACES.

IN years gone by I used to stand
Close by the fire at eventide,
While mother scrubbed to beat the band
Upon my bare and tender hide.
And, oh, the way I squirmed and tried
To save the spots she hunted for!
No matter where she touched, I lied—
"Don't touch me there! That place is sore!"

On head or heels, on foot or hand,
On sunburned back or ticklish side,
On dark gray spots she closely scanned
And rubbed until I nearly died.
With elbow grease galore she plied
The soapy rag until I swore
I'd never bathe when grown and cried:
"Don't touch me there! That place is sore!"

The greatest martyr in the land,
The victim of a mother's pride
I was. Alas for high and grand Resolve to howl till pacified!
Whene'er my mouth was opened wide
That schooling rag its lesson bore
That soap soaked tongue refused to chide:
"Don't touch me there! That place is sore!"

L'ENVOI.

O Time, thy toll is not denied,
Since mother washes me no more!
But round my heart 'twill aye abide—
"Don't touch me there! That place is sore!"

POSTED HERSELF.

And Then the Princess de Talleyrand Told the Author About His Book of Travels.

Prince de Talleyrand one day, when rising from lunch, said to his wife, a very ignorant lady: "You will have at your side at dinner tonight a very remarkable man. He has written his travels. For heaven's sake, do talk to him sensibly. As you pass through the library ask for the book and glance it through and bring the conversation to this subject. Do not forget to ask for M. Denon's work."

The princess obeyed, but the thought of the torrent of sarcasm which would follow an unsuccessful issue of her lord's commands made her forget the name of the author. "Give me," said the princess, addressing the librarian, "the adventures of this traveler. Listen, now, a name which ends in 'on.'"

"I know," said the librarian, smiling, and he handed her "Robinson Crusoe."

Mme. de Talleyrand read the book and was enchanted with the story, and more so with the thought that she was to dine with the author. At night she found herself next to M. Denon at table. She was not long in turning the conversation into the line directed by the prince, so she said to her neighbor: "Your travels have interested me deeply, monsieur. What joy you must have experienced in your lonely island when you found 'Friday!'"—From "L'Esprit de Talleyrand."

HELD HIS JOB.

The Boy Was Willing to Be a Friend to Senator Hanna.

When Senator Hanna was walking through his factory in Cleveland some years ago on the lookout for new ideas or anything which would aid the progress of business he overheard a little red headed lad remark:

"Wish I had old Hanna's money and he was in the poorhouse."

The senator returned to his office and rang to have the boy sent to him. The boy came to the office timidly, just a bit conscience stricken, wondering if his remark had been overheard and ready for the penalty. As the lad twisted his hands and nervously stood on one foot before the gaze of those twinkling dark eyes fixed on him by the man at the desk he felt the hand of Uncle Mark on his shoulder:

"So you wish you had old Hanna's money and he was in the poorhouse, eh? Suppose your wish should be granted. What would you do?"

"Why," stammered the lad, "the first thing I would do, sir, would be to get you out of the poorhouse."

The senator laughed and sent the boy back to his work. Today he is one of the managers of a large factory, but he never tires of telling the story that held his first job.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

Canine Etiquette.

In their relations with one another dogs have a keen sense of etiquette. A well known traveler makes this unexpected remark about a tribe of naked black men living on one of the south sea islands: "In their everyday intercourse there is much that is stiff, formal and precise." Almost the same remark might be made about dogs. Unless they are on very intimate terms they take great pains never to brush against or even to touch one another. For one dog to step over another is a dangerous breach of etiquette unless they are special friends. It is no uncommon thing for two dogs to belong to the same person and live in the same house and yet never take the slightest notice of each other. We have a spaniel so dignified that he will never permit another member of the dog family to pillow his head upon him; but, with the egotism of a true aristocrat, he does not hesitate to make use of the other dogs for that purpose.—Henry C. Merwin in Atlantic.

When Lives Were Cheap.

In the prison of Luxembourg one of Fouquier Tinville's agents could make up only seventeen convicts out of the list of eighteen which had been given him. "I want one more," he said. He asked the first suspect who passed by his name and on hearing it said, "Yes; it is you." He had him carried off, and the next day he was guillotined.

On another occasion a warder called out the name of an aged prisoner. A lad who was playing ball in the gallery mistook the name for his own and asked if he was wanted. "Yes," was the answer; "come along," and the next day the boy was guillotined instead of the man.

At Bordeaux a boy of sixteen named Mellet was guillotined instead of an old man of eighty named Bellay. On objecting he was told that he was eighty years old in wickedness.

Not Guilty.

It was 4 a. m. and Bilkins crept softly into the house and removed his shoes, but as he tiptoed up the stairs one of the treads gave a loud creak.

"Is that you, John?" demanded Mrs. Bilkins from above.

"No, my love," replied Bilkins. "It's the stairs."—Judge.

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Lee still lingered after Redfield left them. "Please do as Mr. Redfield tells you," she pleaded, "for I shall be very anxious till you get safely down the mountains. If that poor old man has any relatives they ought to be told how kind you have been. You could not have been kinder to one of your own people."

These words from her had a poignancy of meaning which made his reply difficult. His tone was designedly light as he retorted: "I would be a fraud if I stood here listening to your praise without saying, without confessing, how deadly weary I got of the whole business. It was simply that there was nothing else to do. I had to go on."

Her mind still dwelt on the tragic event. "I wish he could have had some kind of service. It seems sort of barbarous to bury him without any one to say a prayer over him. But I suppose that was impossible. Surely some one ought to mark his grave, for some of his people may come and want to know where he lies."

He led her thoughts to pleasanter paths. "I am glad you are going with the supervisor. You are going, are you not?"

"Yes, for a few days, till I'm sure you're safe."

"I shall be tempted to pretend being sick just to keep you near me," he was saying when Redfield returned, bringing his sleeping couch. Unrolling this under a tree beside the creek, the supervisor said, "Now, get into that."

Cavanagh resigned Lee with a smile. "Good night," he said. "Oh, but it's good to remember that I shall see you tomorrow!"

With a happy glance and a low "Goodby" she turned away.

Laying aside his blanket and his shoes, Cavanagh crept into the snug little camp bed. "Ah," he breathed, with a delicious sense of relief, "I feel as if I could sleep a week!" And in an instant his eyes closed in slumber so profound that it was barren even of dreams.

CHAPTER XXII.

OUT OF QUARANTINE INTO HEAVEN.

WHEN Cavanagh awoke it was noon, and Swenson, the guard, was standing over him. "I'm sorry, but it's time to be moving," he said. "It's a long ride over there."

"What time is it?" inquired Cavanagh, with some bewilderment.

"Nearly noon. I've got some coffee ready. Want some?"

"Do I? Just watch me!" And he scrambled out of his bed with vigor and stretched himself like a cat, exclaiming, "Wow, but it does feel good to know that I am out of jail!"

Going down to the stream, he splashed his face and neck in the clear cold water, and the brisk rubbing which followed seemed to clear his thoughts as well as sharpen his appetite.

"You seem all right so far," hazarded the guard.

"I am all right, and I'll be all right tomorrow, if that's what you mean," replied Cavanagh. "Well, now, pack up, and we'll pull out."

For a few moments after he mounted his horse Cavanagh looked about the place as if for the last time, now up at the hill, now down at the meadow and last of all at the stream. "I hope you'll enjoy this station as much as I have, Swenson. It's one of the prettiest on the whole forest."

Together they zigzagged up the side of the hill to the north, and then, with Cavanagh in the lead, followed by his pack horse, they set up the long lateral moraine which led by a wide circle through the wooded park toward the pass. The weather was clear and cold. The wind bit, and Cavanagh, scantily clothed as he was, drew his robe close about his neck, saying: "I know now how it feels to be a blanket Indian. I must say I prefer an overcoat."

A little later the keen eyes of the guard, sweeping the mountain side, were suddenly arrested. "There's a bunch of cowboys coming over the pass," he called.

"I see them," responded Cavanagh. "Get out your glasses and tell me who they are."

Swenson unslung his fieldglasses and studied the party attentively. "Looks like Van Horne's sorrel in the lead, and that bald face bay just behind looks like the one Gregg rides. The other two I don't seem to know."

"Perhaps it's the sheriff after me for harboring Edwards," suggested Cavanagh.

But Swenson remained sober. He did not see the humor of the remark. "What are they doing on the forest, anyhow?" he asked.

Half an hour later the two parties came face to face on a little stretch of prairie in the midst of the wooded valley. In the sheriff's party were Gregg, the deputy and a big man who was a stranger to Cavanagh. Their horses were all tired, and the big civilian looked saddle weary.

"Good evening, gentlemen!" called the sheriff in southern fashion as he drew near.

"Good evening, Mr. Sheriff," Cavanagh civilly answered. "What's the meaning of this invasion of my forest?"

The sheriff for answer presented the big stranger. "Mr. Cavanagh, this is Mr. Simpson, the county attorney."

Cavanagh nodded to the attorney. "I've heard of Mr. Simpson," he said.

Simpson answered the question Ross had asked. "We were on our way to your station, Mr. Cavanagh, because we understand that this old man Dunn who shot himself had visited you before his death, giving you information concerning the killing of the Mexican sheep herders. Is that true?"

"It is."

"When did he visit you?"

"Two days ago or maybe three. I am a little mixed about it. You see, I have been pretty closely confined to my shack for a few days."

Gregg threw in a query. "How is the old man?"

"He's all right. That is to say, he's dead. Died last night."

The sheriff looked at Simpson meaningly. "Well, I reckon that settles his score, judge. Even if he was implicated he's out of it now."

"He couldn't have been implicated," declared the ranger, "for he was with me at the time the murder was committed. I left him high on the mountain in the Basque herder's camp. I can prove an alibi for him. Furthermore, he had no motive for such work."

"What did Dunn tell you?" demanded the sheriff. "What names did he give you?"

"Wait a moment," replied Cavanagh, who felt himself to be on his own territory and not to be hurried. "There's a reward offered for the arrest of these men, is there not?"

"There is," replied the attorney.

"Well, before I make my statement I'd like to request that my share of the reward, if there is any coming to me, shall be paid over to the widow of the man who gave me the information. Poor chap, he sacrificed himself for the good of the state, and his family should be spared all the suffering possible."

"Quite right, Mr. Cavanagh. You may consider that request granted. Now for the facts."

"Before going into that, Mr. Attorney, I'd like to speak to you alone."

"Very well, sir," replied the attorney. Then, waving his hand toward the others, he said, "Boys, just ride off a little piece, will you?"

When they were alone Cavanagh remarked, "I don't think it wise to give these names to the wind, for if we do there will be more fugitives."

"I see your point," Simpson agreed.

Thereupon rapidly and concisely the ranger reported what Dunn had said, and the attorney listened thoughtfully without speaking to the end. Then he added, "That tallies with what we have got from Ballard."

"Was Ballard in it?" asked Cavanagh.

"Yes. We forced a confession from him."

"If he was in it it was merely for the pay. He represented some one else."

"What makes you think that?"

"Because he was crazy to return to the show with which he used to perform and desperately in need of money. Have you thought that Gregg might have had a hand in this affair? Dunn said he had, although he was not present at any of the meetings."

This seemed to surprise the attorney very much. "But he's a sheepman!" he exclaimed.

"I know he is. But he's also a silent partner in the Triangle cattle outfit and is making a lot of trouble. And, besides, he had it in for these dagoes, as he calls them, because they were sheeping territory which he wanted himself."

"I don't think he's any too good for it," responded Simpson, "but I doubt if he had any hand in the killing. He's too cunning and too cowardly. But I'll keep in mind what you have said, and if he is involved in any degree he'll have to go down the road with the others. His money can't save him."

As they came back to the party Cavanagh thought he detected in Gregg's eyes a shifting light that was not there before, but he made no further attempt to impress his opinion upon the attorney or the sheriff. He only said: "Well, now, gentlemen, I must go on over the divide. I have an appointment with the doctor over there; also with a bed and a warmer suit of clothes than I have on. If I can be of any service to you when I am out of quarantine I hope you will call upon me."

"It is possible that we may need you in order to locate some of the men whose names you have given me."

"Very good," replied Cavanagh. "If they come upon the forest anywhere the supervisor and I will find them for you."

So they parted, and Cavanagh and his guard resumed their slow journey across the range.

CONCLUSION.

In her career as the wife of a western rancher Eleanor Redfield had been called upon to entertain many strange guests, and she made no very determined objection when her husband telephoned that he was bringing Lize as well as Lee Virginia to stay at Elk Lodge for a few days. The revelation of the true relation between the two women had (as Lize put it) made a "whole lot of difference" to Mrs. Redfield. It naturally cleared the daughter of some part of her handicap, and it had also made the mother's attitude less objectionable.

She had seen Lize but once, and that was in the distorting atmosphere of the restaurant, and she remembered her only as a lumpy, scowling, loud voiced creature with blowsy hair and a watchful eye. She was profoundly surprised, therefore, when Lee Virginia introduced a quiet spoken, rather sad faced elderly woman as her mother.

"I'm glad to see you, Mrs. Wetherford," Eleanor said, with the courtesy which was instinctive with her.

"I'm mighty obliged for the chance to come," replied Lize. "I told Reddy—I mean the supervisor—that you didn't want no old timer like me, but he said, 'Come along,' and Lee she fixed me out, and here I am." She uttered this with a touch of her well known self depreciation, but she was by no interpretation sordid or common.

Ross had not yet arrived at the cabin, but Redfield had warned Lee not to expect him till after dark. "He probably slept late, and, besides, there are always delays on the trail. But don't worry. Swenson will ride to the top of the divide with him and if it seems necessary will come all the way."

This feeling of anxiety helped to steady Lize, and she got through the meal very well. She was unwontedly silent and a little sad as well as constrained. She could see that Lee fitted in with these surroundings, that she was at home with shining silver and dainty dishes, and she said to herself: "I could have been something like her if I'd had any sort of raising, but it's too late now. But, Lord, wouldn't Ed like to see her now!"

It was not yet dark when they came out on the veranda to meet the doctor, who had come to meet Ross, and Lee's anxiety led her to say, "Can't we go up to the cabin and wait for him there?"

"I was about to propose that," replied Redfield. "Shall we walk?"

Lee was instant in her desire to be off, but Lize said: "I never was much on foot, and now I'm hoof bound. You go along, and I'll sit on the porch here and watch."

So Lee, the doctor and Redfield went off together across the meadow toward the little cabin, which had been built for the workmen while putting in the dam. It was hardly a mile away, and yet it stood at the mouth of a mighty gorge, out of which the water sprang white with speed.

But Lee had no mind for the scenery, though her eyes were lifted to the meadow's wall, down which the ranger was expected to ride. It looked frightfully steep, and whenever she thought of him descending that trail, worn and perhaps ill, her heart ached with anxiety. But Redfield rambled on comfortably, explaining the situation to the doctor, who, being a most unimaginative person, appeared to take it all as a matter of course.

At the cabin itself Lee transferred her interest to the supper which had been prepared for the ranger, and she went about the room trying to make it a little more comfortable for him. It was a bare little place, hardly more than a camp (as was proper), and she devoutly prayed that he was not to be sick therein, for it stood in a cold and gloomy place, close under the shadow of a great wall of rock.

As it grew dark she lighted a lamp and placed it outside the window in order that its light might catch the ranger's eye, and this indeed it did, for almost instantly a pistol shot echoed from the hillside far above signaling his approach.

"There he is!" she exclaimed in swift rebound to ecstasy. "Hear him shout?"

His voice could indeed be heard, though faintly, and so they waited while the darkness deepened and the voice of the stream rose like an exhalation, increasing in violence as the night fell.

At last they could hear the sound of his horse's feet upon the rocks, and with girlish impulse Lee raised a musical cry, an invitation as well as a joyous signal.

To this the ranger made vocal answer, and they could soon see him moving athwart the hillsides, zigzagging in the trailer's fashion, dropping down with incredible swiftness. He was alone and leading his horse, but his celerity of movement and the tones of his voice denoted confidence and health.

The doctor laughed as he said, "I don't think a very sick man could come down a mountain like that."

"Oh, he isn't sick yet," said Redfield. "What we are afraid of is a possible development."

Lize was on the veranda when Lee and Redfield returned. "Did he get through?" she asked.

"He's all right so far," returned Redfield cheerily. "We left the doctor about to fly at him. We'll have a report soon."

They had hardly finished telling of how the ranger had descended the hill when the doctor arrived. "He hasn't a trace of it," was his report. "All he needs is sleep. I cut him off from his entire over the range outfit, and there is no reason why he should not come down to breakfast with you in the morning."

Mrs. Redfield thanked the doctor as fervently as if he had conferred a personal favor upon her, and the girl echoed her grateful words.

"Oh, that's all right," the doctor replied in true western fashion. "I'll do as much more for you any time." And he rode away, leaving at least one person too happy to sleep.

The same person was on the veranda next morning when Cavanagh, dressed in the supervisor's best suit of gray cassimere, came striding across the lawn, too impatient of the winding drive to follow it. As he came, his face glowing with recovered health, Lee thought him the god of the morning and went to meet him unashamed, and he took her to his arms and kissed her quite as he had promised himself to do.

"Now I know that I am delivered," he exclaimed. And they entered the new west together.

Entering the public school, he removed a window pane with a putty knife instead of smashing it, and then walked off with a large flag and a new clock.

Herman Bier, forty-seven years old, left his home at 211 Warren street, Gloucester City, December 26 last, presumably to go to the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, for treatment. Since then he has not been heard from by his wife and family. His wife has asked Mayor Lincoln to have a search made for him, as she fears that he has met with foul play or some accident.

Trying to climb down from a high derrick, LeRoy Purdy, sixty years old, Thursday, fell into a pit at the United States Iron Foundry in East Burlington and broke both arms. When removed to his home fellow workers found that the man while working all day in the foundry, had for a fortnight had the care at night of several members of his family who are ill.

NEWARK AUTOMOBILE SHOW TO BE BIG ONE

With the Newark auto show's opening date less than two weks away local automobile dealers are busliy engaged in getting their exhibition cars ready. The extraordinary demand for spaces not only in the pleasure and comercial car division, but in the accessory section as well, is an indication of what manufacturers think of the possibilities for business in this vicinity. The fact that more than 150 spaces have been conracted for in the pleasure car section alone and that every available square inch of space in the commercial motor vehicle department will be filled with the latest and best in transportation models is an assurance that the forthcoming show will be the greatest ever seen in this State.

The forthcoming show, which will be held in the First regiment armory the week of February 18-25, will mark probably the most important epoch in the history of the automobile in Newark. The industry is now on the flood tide of prosperity and new combinations of capital, anxious to share in the profits, are constantly entering the field.

Practically every car of importance will be seen at the show, and visitors will be afforded an opportunity of inspecting all that is latest and best in motor vehicle construction.

Senator Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic City, is to deliver the opening address at the show, and added interest is attached to his visit here by the opposition that is being raised against this State for which he stands sponsor. The question of reciprocity is one that affects every automobilist in the State. Everyone is now thoroughly familiar with the campaign that has been waged for remedial legislation, and while the majority of motorists in this section are in favor of the proposed changes they cannot understand why those in other parts of the State should be opposed to it. It is possible that Senator Edge will explain just why there should be opposition and from what sources the opposition emanates. A record-breaking crowd, therefore, is expected to be on hand on the opening night.

In addition to the standard makes of cars that are shown, there will be a number of exhibitions that will attract attention because of their historical interest to the automobiling industry. Among these may be mentioned the Pierce motorette, the first car ever built by the Pierce-Arrow concern; the Alco car, which was twice driven to victory in the Vanderbilt cup race, and the Vanderbilt cup itself; the Glidden trophy, which will be shown in Newark for the first time, and several collections of valuable track and roda-racing prizes which have been won by the different makes of cars that are to be shown.

BASEBALL'S FANS PLAN FOR MEETING

A meeting of baseball fans was held in the Frost building last night, when there was a discussion of plans for the coming season. It was decided to call a mass meeting for February 24, to which all persons interested in having a representative baseball team in this city will be invited.

The propostion is to form an athletic association to promote baseball and other sports. The officers of the Plainfield Baseball Club attended the meeting last night, but it was not decided whether to merge that club with the new association or not. This matter will come up at the mass meeting, but the ways and means have not been fully determined.

HERE AND THERE.

A. D. Thompson, who with Mrs. Thompson and Miss Adelia Runyon, is stopping at the Plaza Hotel Havana, Cuba, writes to a friend here that the party reached Havana on January 25. The weather is beautiful and there has not been a stormy day since leaving home. Mr. Thompson says that the temperature in Havana averages about 75 degrees and it has not varied 10 degrees since he arrived. It is clear, sunshiny and bright all the time. Continuing, Mr. Thompson writes: "The city is full of tourists from the States and also from foreign countries. Cuba is improving and becoming Americanized very rapidly. It is now six years since we first came her and I can see an improvement each year. We have had ideal weather for aviation week, which came to a close yesterday, February 5, and some very fine exhibitions of flying. We expect to remain here until the middle of March."

Hatpins of the long rapier-like variety are being tabooed by the women of Montclair, according to a jeweler in Glenridge avenue, that town.

"For the past month," said the jeweler Thursday, "scarcely a day has passed that some woman has not brought in some to be shortened. The average number of persons coming for that errand is about five a day. One woman left this morning a package containing no less than eighteen of the baneful articles.

"They were of all varieties, the shortest one twelve inches in length and the longest sixteen. She declared she had as many more at home, which she proposed sending to me.

"What seems to be the correct length now a days is eight inches. By putting gold ornaments on the ends cut from three hatpins sent in by one woman I made new pins. When I told her what I had done, she considered it a joke and bought them from me.

"Just what is the cause of the changed lengths I am at a loss to determine. At first I was inclined to believe that the women were at last realizing the danger their protruding hatpins were to the innocent passerby, and were shortening them for humane reasons, but my wife tells me that it is only because the hats are made narrower this year and that the ends are in the way."

The New York Tribune of last Sunday in an article concerning "Sculpture and Decoration," has the following to say which will be of interest here:

"Classical motives are not pieced together by rule of thumb, but are handled with increasing idiomatic freedom. Not the teachings of the professor, but the living ideas, exert the controlling influence.

"It is so easy to turn pedantic when you are studying the pages of antiquity. It is so hard to shut the book and to remember the spirit as well as the form. But that is what is being done by more than one American of equal energy and judgment. Look, for example, at the two heroic designs by Tracy, Swartout & Litchfield, the armory for the District of Columbia and the United States Postoffice and Courthouse at Denver. It would be hard to say which of these buildings gives the spectator the keener pleasure, they both possess such sterling qualities of force and fineness, of balance, and of what can only be described as a kind of warmth. These are salient examples of veritably vitalized architecture, of learned but free and interesting work."

Evarts Tracy, who is a member of the above firm of architects, is a resident of this city, and has designed some of the finest buildings in this country.

40 MILLIONAIRES MADE BY CARNEGIE

Andrew Carnegie, who has just given $50,000 to the Plainfield Public Library, called yesterday on a publishing firm in Fifth avenue, New York and talked to the girl employes.

"Most millionaires' wives are not happy," he declared, after contrasting the happiness of toil with the doubtful advantage of being born rich. "They have too many luxuries and have no mental resources to fall back upon. Some of my partners have been unjustly criticised for what was not their fault, but the fault of their wives."

He smiled while he gave the following advise to the girls concerning millionaires with matrimonial intentions:

"Don't refuse a man simply because he is a millionaire. I would rather be born poor than a millionaire, and I have had some experience in both directions.

"I have made forty-two or forty-three millionaires in my time, but I want to say that the only right a man has to wealth lies in his acquiring it by some useful labor. The great trouble with the wealth of today is that the sons of millionaires do not realize this very necessity of being of use to the community.

"I am very glad to see you all so happy in your work; work that one is not glad to do never amounts to much. Smile all the time."

SCHOOL FIVE EASY FOR THE TEACHERS

A one-sided contest marked the annual game of basketball between the seniors and the faculty of the High School yesterday afternoon, the final score being 48 to 10 in favor of the faculty. The teachers led from the start to finish and at no time did they allow the boys to catch up with the score. The shooting of the faculty was so accurate and so persistent that there was no change for aggressive work by their younger opponents.

In the first few minutes of play Shaffer made a basket and put the seniors in the lead, but it was only a flash in the pan. The faculty soon began to develope some fine team work and the baskets were thrown in quick succession. Lindsay got three one after the other after Mr. Broadbent had captured the first by a superb shot. At the end of the first period the score stood at 11 to 6 in favor of the faculty. Several changes in the lineup of the seniors failed to improve their play in the second half while the faculty seemed to make goals at will. Mr. Best made 26 of the 37 points scored in the second half for the faculty proving himself the star of the game. Manley was the only one of the seniors to score in the second half making two baskets.

ALL THE TROUBLE IN A SLEEPING CAR

Frank Daniels will appear at the Plainfield theatre tonight in Charles Dillingham's new musical comedy production, "The Girl in the Train" which is the present musical rage of all Europe. Originally produced in Vienna, this tuneful and attractive operetta by Leo Fall scored such a tremendous sensation that it soon was being played all over Europe. Charles Dillingham secured the American rights and engeged Harry B. Smith to adapt the book from the original German of Victor Leon.

The story relates to an adventure on a sleeping car, where a young husband, leaving his wife behind on a journey, gives up his steatroom to an actress. The circumstances are such that the wife sues for a divorce and the first act shows the divorce court, where Frank Daniels appears as the judge. His efforts to side with both women and to preserve his own dignity, proves very amusing. The succeeding acts show a masquerade ball and a fete in Holland. The strong cast to support Mr. Daniels includes Miss Sallie Fisher, Miss Vera Michelena and a number of others, including a chorus of sixty.

STORES TO BE OPEN LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

There will be no general observance of Monday as Lincoln's Birthday in Plainfield, as practically all of the merchants have decided to keep their stores open all day. The local banking institutions will close as provided by law. The postoffice will observe holiday rules; that is one delivery will be made in the morning and the office will be closed at 10 o'clock for the day.

There will be a number of minor or private celebrations of the event throughout the city, but the big affair will be the first annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce at Truell Hall, in the evening. It has not been the custom in years past to generally observe Lincoln's Birthday as it comes too near Washington's Birthday, which is celebrated throughout the State and country.

A FAN'S MID-WINTER DREAM.

As I look without where snow is falling
I can almost hear the umpire calling,
I can almost hear the crash of the bat
As it hits the tough horsehide;
I can almost hear the fans a-yelling,
"Slide, you big dub, slide!"
I can see the shortstop make a dive,
And field the hard hit clout,
I can see him whip it o'er to first,
I can hear the loud, "you're out."

HALLET AND DAVIS

"The House of Superior Pianos and Right Prices"

We carry as fine a line of pianos as can be found anywhere, including a special department for player-pianos.

We have been manufacturing pianos since 1839, but this would mean nothing to the careful buyer (who refuses to pay for a name) if our prices were not right—but our prices are right—just right.

There is no false economy in buying here. The Hallett & Davis Piano is everywhere recognized as the world's standard. To pay more than the price of a Hallet & Davis is to waste money. A colonial model Hallett & Davis is $365—other styles a little more, according to cases.

We carry pianos for any purse. For example, for those who want a new piano at less than $200, we say:

WE HAVE NEW PIANOS FOR $190
Terms as Low as $10 Down and $5 a Month.

Our selling plan is absolutely one price. Every piano is plainly tagged—no mystery about the price. It is this fair and right plan, combined with our experience, superior factory facilities and ample capital, that form the foundation of our enormous business, the largest in New England.

Write for catalogs of pianos or player-pianos. We have many interesting booklets showing piano construction, etc.

LINCOLN'S PLACE

Martyr President Like Elijah Called by God Minister Declares.

HE TRIUMPHED WITH RIGHT.

Too Few Have Courage of Their Convictions Today, Declares the Rev. Charles L. Goodrich.

"Elijah and Lincoln" was the subject of Rev. Charles L. Goodrich's sermon at the Congregational church yesterday morning. From these two great characters the lesson of courage was drawn plus character and religious belief and fealty to the God of the universe. Special music, including a new hymn, by an American composer, was sung by the quartet choir.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich said that both Lincoln and Elijah were the men of the hour in their times. Their opportunities for service were analogous and their attitudes toward the people of their times strangely similar.

Elijah appeared before the court of Ahab in his goatskin coat Lincoln presented himself at Washington in the uncouth garments of a countryman, yet their appearances before these great tribunals of the people did not in any way detract from their great accomplishments. Elijah stepped into the midst of the worshippers of Baal and fought his battle for the religion of the Hebrews who worshipped the true God. It was a question then of whether Baal worship should prevail. It was a crisis in the lives of the Hebrews.

Lincoln came to the front, when a crisis faced this country and taking the helm he steered the course which led to final triumph of right. He steered the country through a great conflict of doubt. Whether we were to all be free or all slaves was the question confronting Lincoln and we all know what resulted after he had given to the whole area of the country a united people.

There was no other man on earth when Elijah came who could have done what he did and the same can be said of Lincoln. And we believe it will always be the same with us. Our nation is a Christian nation in its broadest sense and we firmly believe that in future crises God will raise up the man who will safely guide us through them. Both Elijah and Lincoln came from the country—Elijah from the hills of Syria and Lincoln from the woods of Indiana and Illinois, but this does not mean that to be born in the country is a guarantee of greatness. Many of our foremost men today are city bred and the advantages of the city life and training are not to be denied. They have been the means of producing great men.

Elijah knew that his call was from God and the courage born of this knowledge enabled him to stand alone and win. In Lincoln there was to be seen equal courage in his convictions of right. He saw the true cause and followed it to a successful conclusion. Today there is too much of compromise, too little backbone. Too few have the courage of their convictions and too many are supinely following the crowd. In the cases of Elijah and Lincoln they would not have stood true to their convictions had they not cultivated the true spirit of godliness. They had both done God's will in small things all their lives and when the great test came they were prepared for every call upon their resources and were strong to accomplish what God wanted.

Everyone of you will have to face things in your lives which will be in the nature of crises. I urge you to stand firm for the right. Let all of us cultivate the spirit of Elijah and of Lincoln.

A short sermon to children of the Sunday school followed the first address in which Mr. Goodrich took for a text, "And I being lifted up will draw all men unto me." He used as a practical illustration of the drawing process a small magnet with four different sized nails, showing how easy the smaller ones were drawn and how difficult it was to draw the larger ones. The nails represented children, youths and men, some of the latter being rusty and crooked. It made the application of the lesson very clear.

Mass Meeting February 23.

The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union will hold a mass meeting in the First Presbyterian church, Thursday evening, February 23, at 7:45 o'clock. The speaker will be Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Parmley Memorial Baptist church, of Jersey City, and his subject will be, "The Largest Loyalty." The music will be one of the features of the meeting which will be in charge of Nelson VanWinkle, chairman of the Missionary committee of the local union.

HUGE PRINTING PRESS CONSTRUCTED HERE

One of the largest printing presses ever constructed at the Walter Scott plant was shipped from the factory last week. It is a four-deck affair and is consigned to the Times-Herald, of Dallas, Texas, and required three freight cars for transportation.

The press is catalogued as the "Speed King" and lives up to the name. It is really four machines in one and by simply turning levers can be combined or separated at will. It will print 48,000 twelve-page papers an hour or a proportionate amount up to thirty-two pages. A color section is also included and puts the Times-Herald in a position to turn out one of the most complete papers in the south-west. At the tests given in the Scott shop the machine worked to perfection, fulfilling every expectation of the designers.

The press will be erected in its permanent home by the firm's expert, Joseph Neal, of East Second street, who is at present on a similar mission in Kansas City.

HENRY MILLER DIES IN HIS 87TH YEAR

Henry Miller, aged eighty-six years, for many years a well-known wholesale shoe merchant of New York, died yesterday at his home, 1120 Putnam avenue, from the infirmities of old age. He had been critically ill about a month. Mr. Miller was born in New York and, until twenty-seven years ago, when he removed to this city, always lived there. He conducted a successful wholesale shoe busines for many years, retiring because of advancing age.

Mr. Miller was a man of strong character. He was a life-long member of the Episcopal church, being identified with a New York parish. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. C. O. Bogardus and two granddaughters, Miss Mabel Bogardus and Mrs. L. T. Koons; also a grandson, E. H. Bogardus, all of this city. Private funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock at the late home and Rev. Elory G. Bowers, of St. Stephen's church, will officiate. The burial will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn. Friends are requested not to send flowers.

"THE GIRL IN THE TRAIN" A PLEASING PRODUCTION.

Tuneful lyrics, wholesome music and natural stage sittings characterizes the production of "The Girl in the Train," at the Plainfield theatre Saturday night. It was witnessed by a large and appreciative audience exceptionally liberal with its applause.

Frank Daniels, the star of a dozen successful musical comedies, made an instantaneous hit. His facial expressions are ludicrous to the extreme and he injected impromptu comedy to the original book that made it impossible for his supporting cast to repress smiles. Mr. Daniels will be a welcome visitor to Plainfield at any time in the future.

Miss Sallie Fisher, in the leading feminine role, sang and danced prettily, and the chorus as a whole was one of the season's best. The stage sittings kept pace with the rest of the production and taken altogether "The Girl in the Train" was one of the refrshing, memory-clinging kind.

Ladies' Aid Dime Social.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel will observe Lincoln's Birthday at Hope chapel, tonight, by giving a dime social to which all the members and friends are cordially invited. An informal program of entertainment has been arranged which will include selections about Lincoln. Various games have been planned which will be a source of enjoyment. Refreshments will be served.

Surprised Miss Townley.

Miss Grace Townley, of Grandview avenue, celebrated the sixteenth anniversary of her birthday Saturday, and in the evening she was given a surprise party by a large number of her friends. The evening was spent in dancing, playing games and singing popular songs. Refreshments were served during the festivities. Miss Townley received a number of gifts.

Rare Coins on Dead Man.

On the body of a white-haired old man, who died suddenly in an uptown New York street at 4 o'clock Saturday morning, the police found a well worn leather pocketbook containing 135 pennies. The collecting of rare coins of this denomination had apparently been the old man's fad. There were no letters or papers to indicate his identity.

HEISENLUF NACHT

FIVE HUNDRED ARE PRESENT.

The Twenty-second Annual Entertainment Is Held Under the Direction of Herman Klinsman.

Five hundred people thronged Saengerbund hall last night, on the occasion of the Gesang and Turn Vereins twenty-second annual carnival gathering, or as it is known popularly, "Heisenluf Nacht," meaning hot air night. The attendance included the members and their families and invited guests from the city and borough, Somerville, Westfield, Garwood and Stirling. It was one of the most successful affairs of the kind the Turn Verin has yet conducted.

A custom of "Heisenluf Nacht" is to present "knocks," gentle and otherwise, to the members for their misdeeds during the year. No one must take offense and it makes little difference if they do, as the "guying" only becomes worse. Sometimes a "knock" is handed out when it is least expected and the consternation of the victim adds to the merriment of the gathering.

Herman Klinsman, as chairman of the carnival committee, was in charge of the program. It was opened with the reading of the "minutes," which required nearly an hour and made a big hit. They were inscribed on a parchment thirty feet long, two boys being pressed into service to hold them up. The "knocks" came so fast it sounded like the anvil chorus, and Mr. Klinsman acted his part to perfection. Among the hapless victims were "Sunny Jim," "Stenzy," "Foxy," "Jellig," August Wolf and Lawrence Fahn. The crowd showed them no mercy when the raps were delivered.

The singing section gave several appreciated numbers, and hits were made by the "Three Twin Minstrels," composed of Sam Brooks, "Mickey" Moore and Jacob Schlick, also a sketch, "The Iceman," by a picked cast. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The program in full was as follows: Reading of the minutes, Herman Klinsman; "Amhehr," singing section; sketch, "The Iceman," Fred Becker, Jr., John Alster, Miss Jennie Gubiler and Miss Mary Traynor; baritone solo, Angelo Mignon; recitations by members; "Three Twin Minstrels," presenting "After Supper Splash;" "Searchleid," singing section; baritone solo, Angelo Mignon; "Gesang von Gottlieb Sundt,' by special request, August Wolf; giving a recitation, "No Cabbage in My Cigars,' Herman Klinsman; "Auf Verlargen," Charles Dresselt; "Lied von Der Nose," singing section; recitation, Mrs. Tony Breitner; final chorus, singing section. The baritone solos by Angelo Mignon, with mandolin accompaniment, were among the features and received prolonged applause.

The committee in charge was composed of Herman Klinsman, chairman; Charles Giebeler, Herman Klinsman, Jr., and Lawrence Scheelein; reception committee, Charles F. Meyer, Jr., chairman; George Schlick, Jacob Schlick and Adam Jordan.

Holy Cross vs. Ajax.

A basketball game to be played on Wednesday evening on the court of the Church of the Holy Cross team promises to be a hard fought game. The Holy Cross team will line up against the Ajax team, one of the boys' teams of the Y. M. C. A. The lineup will be as follows: Holy Cross—Forwards, Van Norden and Moran; center, Seal; guards, Mosher and Little; substitute, Vail. Ajax—Guards, Brymaski and Glover; center, Dunning; forwards, Peacock and McName.

Found Lost Dog.

Theodore A. Martin, the expressman, of 409 East Third street, received a letter yesterday from George Wilson, of 327 West 134th street, New York city, that he had found Martin's shepherd dog. Mr. Martin had missed the dog since Wednesday night, when it followed a van of furniture into New York. The latter learned the name of the owner of the dog through the license tag after reporting the matter to the police.

Funeral of Michael McDonough.

The funeral of Michael McDonough, who died as the result of injuries received by falling from a wagon, was held in St. Mary's church this morning. The mass was said by Rev. Father Sciolla and burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall bearers were four cousins, Messrs. Edward, John, Patrick and Anthony McDonough.

BANQUET TONIGHT

Who Will Speak and What They Will Speak About.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Yes, Senator J. E. Martine Will Be There and So Will Some Other Celebrities.

Promptly at 7 o'clock tonight, the first annual banquet of the newly-organized Chamber of Commerce will be held in the main dining room at Truell Hall. Never in the history of local festivities of this character has there ever been such a galaxy of distinguished speakers for the occasion. To hear them, fully 250 representative business and professional men will gather.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders will be the toastmaster and that means that a past master will occupy that most important post. Chief among the speakers, of course, will be the ever popular James E. Martine. This will be his first public appearance since his election to the United States Senate and it goes without saying that he will be given a big reception. His topic will be "Abraham Lincoln."

George W. Perkins, late a partner of J. P. Morgan and now a trustee of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, will follow Mr. Martine. His topic will be "The Experience of the Steel Corporation and the Harvesting Combine In Profit Sharing." The subject for former Congressman George A. Post's speech will be "The Railroads and Business." William G. Besler, vice president and general manager of the Jersey Central, will talk on "As a Railroad Man Sees It." "Why?" will be the topic discussed by Col. C. A. Fuller. William J. Moran's subject will be "The Employer's Liability."

And there will be some songs and above all a fine dinner served by DeMolli. At the speakers' table will be seated in addition to the speakers and the officers of the chamber, Father Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's; and Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross. Yes, the two mayors, G. W. V. Moy and N. B. Smalley, will grace the board.

T. J. M'GANN DIES AFTER A BRIEF ILLNESS

Thomas J. McGann, one of the borough's best known residents, died early this morning at his home on Lincoln place. He was taken ill last Tuesday with grip, and pneumonia quickly followed. He sank rapidly despite all medical aid, the end coming shortly after midnight.

Mr. McGann was born in Washington Valley forty-six years ago and always lived in this vicinity. He was a grading and excavating contractor and dug most of the cellars for the large buildings in the city and borough. He was active in the borough fire department before the present system was installed and belonged to Plainfield Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose. His death is the first the organization has suffered since it was installed. Surviving Mr. McGann are his wife and three step-sons. They are Marcus, Lewis and Charles McGann. His father, Thomas McGann, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Handler, live in Washington Valley. There is also another sister, Mrs. William Holman, of Newark.

The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church, Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

KINDER SINFONIE

Excellent Performance Enthusiastically Applauded at the Park Club.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' BENEFIT.

Cup Bearers' Circle Entertainment Is Witnessed By An Unusually Large Audience.

The Park Club auditorium was well filled on Saturday evening by a fashionable and enthusiastic audience when the members of Cup Bearers' Circle of the King's Daughters presented the Kinder Symphonies and several dances of an unique character. The music, under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, organist of Grace Episcopal church, was of a character to demand instantaneous recognition and applause and the orchestra, composed of thirty-five young women, interpreted it with confidence and ability. With the exception of an occasional rushing of the tempo by the pianists the young women played in splendid time and gave evidences of careful training.

Perhaps the best number on the program was the "Flirtation" pantomime, in which eight young women and Effingham Pinto impersonated a flirtation in which nothing was said and much left to be interpreted by the audience, but it required no special observation to see the expression on the face of the only male member of the cast when the only young woman who did not march by him with a fan or parasol turned a hideous face toward him after showing her back during all the preceding evolutions. It was really funny.

The various instruments, which included violins, pianos, trumpets, drums, nightingale whistles, cuckoos, rattles and quail pipes, formed an orchestra the like of which was never heard in Plainfield before. It was confidently predicted at the close of the last number on the program that the entertainment would be repeated.

The following formed the orchestra: Violins, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Jacoby and the Misses Helen Harmon, Anna Waldo, Julia Thomas and Alice Titus; pianos, Misses Ruth Waldo, Barbara Fleming, Edith Mellick and Louise Booth; 'cello, Dr. Lebnard Waldo; trumpets, Misses Muriel Ashwell and Marguerite Carpenter; drums, Misses Helen Stevens and Madeline Ashwell; nightingales, Misses Grace Burke, Emily Poucher, Constance Wilcox and Florence Stuart; cuckoos, Misses Eunice Watson, Ruth Van Vliet and Lillian King; rattles, Misses Marion Brown and Ethel Most; quails, Misses Martha Robert, Gladys Peck and Beresford Letcher; triangle, Miss Mary Faber; sand-paper, Miss Ruth Titus; castanets, Mrs. Morris J. Dumont; popgun, Mrs. Snow and Mrs. Osborne; tambourine, Miss Hope Ivins.

Fantasie dance, Miss Helen Stevens and Effingham Pinto; flirtation pantomime, Misses Sylvia Curtis, Anna Garrigues, Elizabeth Flanders, Marguerite Carpenter, Hope Ivins, Louise Booth, Florence Stuart, Mrs. E. M. Perkins and Mr. Pinto. Shadow dance, Miss Stevens and Mr. Pinto. The two symphonies were "Spring" and the "Bird."

NARROW ESCAPE FOR F. W. YATES

A collision in which Frederick W. Yates, of Kensington avenue, narrowly escaped death occurred last evening at 8:40 o'clock at the corner of Arlington avenue and Eighth street. Mr. Yates was driving his touring car toward Park avenue while the trolley car was going East on Arlington. The speed of the trolley was such that the motorman could not stop, even after it had struck the automobile, for nearly half a block. The impact drove the car up on the sidewalk and smashed the radiator and two of the wheels.

An eye witness of the occurrence declared that the trolley car was going so fast that it would have been an impossibility to have stopped the car for a passenger. Mr. Yates seeing that a collision was inevitable turned his automobile into Arlington avenue to lessen the force of the blow, thereby taking a chance of being hurled under the wheels of the trolley. He fortunately escaped injury beyond a shaking up.

SENT HIM TO JAIL FOR BEATING WIFE

For beating his wife on Sunday night, William Hannig, of 826 Richmond street, 41 years old, was fined $5 this morning by City Judge William G. De Meza, failing payment of which he will have to spend twenty days in the county jail.

Mr. and Mrs. Hannig have not lived happily together for a long time, according to the wife's story. Ever since they were married they have quarreled and their home life has been anything but happy. Judge De Meza told the couple this morning that it would be much better if they could overlook each other's faults and try to forget the past, but Mrs. Hannig said she did not think they could ever live together again in harmony after what had occurred. She said on the stand that her husband had threatened her with a knife and besides striking her threatened to go and live with another woman who had promised to take her place.

When on the stand Hannig declared that he only struck at his wife in a playful way, more to frighten her than anything else, and that she had made motions to him that provoked him to anger.

Judge De Meza said to Hannig in fining him that because it was his first offense he would make the penalty light, but another appearance would bring the full penalty. Mrs. Hannig's statements were corroborated by Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson, who lives in the same house and heard the row. Robert Newton Crane represented Mrs. Hannig.

Prof. Hoyt Preached Here.

Prof. Arthur S. Hoyt, of Auburn Seminary, occupied the pulpit at the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday, morning and evening. In the morning he deviered a strong sermon on the subject: "The Son of Man," it being an especially clear interpretation of the Scriptural texts on the subject. Dr. Hoyt is professor of Homiletics at Auburn Theological Seminary, from which institution, Rev. Frederick L. Green, Hope chapel's new pastor, is a graduate.

Hobo Gets Sixty Days.

The beauties of the city were so attractive to John Smith, a hobo who was banished last week, that Mr. Smith could not resist the temptation to return and seek hospitality at the Clinton Avenue station last night, where he was found by Patrolman Sweeney snugly asleep around the stove. This morning Judge De Meza sent Mr. Smith to the county jail for sixty days, where he will have a chance to have an occasional bath which he sorely needs.

THE MODEL WOMAN

SAYS REV. GABRIEL R. MAGUIRE.

Baptist Minister Roundly Denounces Practise Of Apeing the Women of France.

Taking as his model, Mary the Mother of Jesus, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire preached a sermon on the model woman yesterday morning which astonished his congregation and opened their eyes to certain conditions of present day fads and fancies, from which he drew a lesson memorable in the annals of Park avenue church sermons.

"There is no greater blessing conferred on woman," said Mr. Maguire, "than the giving to the world a man, a great man if you will, but a son in any event. This is not only the privilege which she should enjoy, but in which she should take pride. Today our women ape the French women, not alone in matters of dress, but in everything even to the rearing of families. If a French fashion dictates a hat three feet in diameter the American woman tries to meet it or go it one better; if the French woman wears her three inches of leather for a heel there follows in New York the imitation of her shoe; if it becomes the fashion in the French capitol to wear absurd attire emulation follows in this country, and what is the result?

"That question may best be answered by comparing the results obtained by a careful revision of the statistics of both countries. Did you know that at the end of last year more than 10,600 newly born infants had been found at the outlets of the great sewers of Paris? Thrown into the Seine as so much offal. Crime after crime committed in the name and for the sake of fashion.

"Mary, the mother of our Saviour, the one whom I would hold up before your mental vision, called it her chiefest joy to bring into the world the greatest Man ever known. How many women today count it anything but joy to even mother one who is not great? There is the sin. The monstrous sin—not wanting to eagerly perform the works destined for the woman of today in furnishing to the world men.

"The other day I saw a High School boy standing on a corner not very far away puffing a cigarette. Can you blame the teachers of that institution for what the boy was doing? No! You can blame the mother. She has allowed the boy to acquire a habit without even an attempt to correct it and she is the one to be censured.

He mentioned the disgust with which the people of Georgia looked upon the public exhibition of cigarette smoking given by Lady Decies, nee Vivien Gould.

"The new woman thinks more of driving her high-powdered automobile; her bridge parties and other diversions than she thinks of her offspring when she is fortunate enough to bring one into the world.

"Oh, the pity of it! Oh, the shame of it! Why not be what God intended you to be! Why not a woman in the fullest sense of the word. Do what the Almighty intended that you should do and be what He intended you should be. Do you thing for a moment it is more graceful or more tender to carry in your arms a poodle dog than a baby? Will anyone think more of you for that? I am asking these questions of the modern woman. I hope my voice will find lodgment in those who practice this sort of thing and pondering their condition in the sight of their Creator answer to Him for what they do and the things they neglect to do."

A large congregation heard the sermon and much comment passed upon it, but the consensus of opinion was the that pastor Maguire had only told the truth of the existing conditions among certain classes of women. It is hardly probable that he had in mind any resident of Plainfield.

Recital at Dunellen.

A splendid program of musical dramatic selections has been arranged by Clifford A. Braider, organist of the First Presbyterian church for a recital this evening at the First Presbyterian church of Dunellen. Mr. Braider will be assisted by Miss Elizabeth De Cant, soprano soloist; Mrs. Aimee Emmons Phillips, dramatic reader and Miss Edith Cecilia Rubel, violinist.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG SPEECH.

FOURSCORE and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The members of Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., Lakeside Council, D. of L., and the local Grangers attended divine service in a body at the First Baptist church last night. An appropriate Lincoln Day sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. George H. Gardner. The other local pastors, Rev. Ernest R. Brown and Rev. W. A. Knox, also observed the birthday of the martyred president by preaching on fitting sermon topics.

The third organ recital of the series arranged by the organ committee of the Presbyterian church will be given tonight. Clifford A. Braider, who is well known to local audiences, will preside and will be assisted by first class talent. The proceeds will be for the music fund of the church.

The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. B. Eick. Members are requested to bring their mite boxes to be opened in the evening.

Tomorrow is St. Valentine's Day and the young fellows will observe it by exchanging laceframed heart sentiments; also by anonymously sending "penny terribles."

The pupils of the local schools are arranging to hold combined exercises next Friday in celebration of Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays.

George Schafer and family, who have been occupying the Samuel Titus house on Main street, have planned to move to Rahway.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Saengerbund bowling team and the local team will no doubt roll a return game in the near future, as the Saengerbunds are anxious to wipe out the defeat administered to them by the locals last week. The game will be rolled on the Saengerbund alleys.

James McGaee and family, who have been residing in the Toucey cottage on Westfield avenue, for several years, removed Saturday to North Plainfield.

When it comes to mud, there is hardly any choice for pedestrians as to where they will walk, as the sidewalks are about as bad as the roadway.

Henry Demarest, of Front street, has returned to his position in New York, after a vacation of several weeks, on account of ill health.

A number of the local members of the Junior O. U. A. M. attended the fair of Plainfield Councils Saturday night in Sebring's Hall.

A well attended and most profitable meeting of the Epworth League was held last night in the class room of the Methodist church.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church was held last night in the church parlors.

Peter VanZandt, of Plainfield, was the guest over Sunday of friends in town.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

No keener observer of life than Eugene Walter is now engaged in the occupation of writing for the stage. He has a strong, direct way of telling unpleasant truths in a manner which leaves its impress upon the listener. In his latest drama, "Homeward Bound," which will be seen in Plainfield next Saturday night, Mr. Walters presents the problem of "easy money" and its inevitable cost. The Shuberts are sponsors for "Homeward Bound" and in the leading role, that of "John Maxwell," they are starring William Courtney, one of the best known of America's younger leading men. In Mr. Courtney's support will be found the best company which can be procured. Miss Dorothy Tennant will play "Mrs. Maxwell;" Frederick Burton will appear as the financier; "Mr. Stuart;" William Rosell will play a young reporter; Marion Ballou will essay the role of a gabby dowdy woman and Amy Somers will create the part of a typical American "Slavery." The story of "Homeward Bound" has to do with the desire of a hard working young chemist, to supply his luxury loving wife with the finery her heart desires. By putting his O. K. on an inferior grade of cement he gets his bit of graft, which amounts to $40,000 on a dam contract which runs into millions. His "easy money" leads him into speculation. His subsequent losses make blackmail the next step, and just as a terrible tragedy seems imminent, the couple's eyes are opened to a sense of their degredation and by a tremendous effort of the will, they set their feet straight in the path which leads to an honest goal.

Miss Alice Smith, of Jersey City, has returned home after a visit with friends here.

SPORTS
News and Notes

BASEBALL.

It seems possible that there may be something in the talk of a deal between the Highlanders and St. Louis. Chase has stopped off in Chicago to attend the American League meeting, and it seems probable that he has some sort of a trade in view. Rumors state that Hedges and Wallace want Austin and LaPorte for Hartzell.

It is hard to see how this can be thought an even swap. Austin is a faster fielder and La Porte a heavier batter than the St. Louis man. Of course, Chase may figure that he cannot make use of the abilities of both men as third basemen in the same game, and that it is better to strike an average in the person of a Third player. The main trouble with La Porte is that he is very susceptible to injury and often is out of the game. Austin doesn't hit well enough for an infielder, and while Hartzell was little better last season, in 1908 he batted .265, which is a fair average. The Browns secured Hartzell from the Denver club when McAleer was the St. Louis manager.

There are wide differences of opinion regarding Chase's ability to manage a team. Such good judges as McGraw and Griffith predict that the star first sacker will demonstrate unusual powers of leadership, but Freddie Payne of the White Sox, and Matty McIntyre, also of the spotless hosed players, are on record with statements that under Hal Chase the Hilltoppers have a slim chance to come under the wire in the van.

"With Stallings at the helm, I believe that the New York club would just about win that pennant," said Payne, "but under Chase I can't see the Manhattan outfit at all. Hal has a fine bunch of players enrolled, and is himself one of the best in the world,, but he doesn't appeal to me as a man who will make a success of managing.

"Had Stallings remained with the club and had he been able to eliminate the factions and cliques that hurt the Yankees last year, he would have been out in front next October. George is a mighty good pilot and one who has made a showing with every club that he ever took charge of. He taught the Yankees a lot of baseball, and had them about ready to go out and cop in another season when they tied the can on him."

Manager Clarke, of Pittsburg, intends to take a firm stand regarding Pitcher Camnitz. He says:

"Some time after my return home from the meeting of the National League in New York last December I wrote to Howard Camnitz telling him that if I did not dispose of his services to some other club before February I would send him a Pittsburg contract for 1911.

"The time is up and Howard Camnitz will play ball in Pittsburg or not at all so long as I am manager. I wrote him to that effect and assured him that I intended to go through with this plan, and I am going to do so as I am satisfied that it will establish a good precedent."

Clarke Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, intends to carry his own life-saving corps this season in the persons of Ernie Diehl and Emil Habener, two residents of Redville, who have promised to help out the team whenever their services are required. Neither man will be carried as a regular member of the club, as each has an excellent business in Cincinnati and cannot give all his time to the diamond.

The plan is to have Griff fly the distress signal whenever the Reds are in a slump. Thereupon Diehl and Habener will emulate the original Cinnatus and quit the plough for the battlefield.

Diehl already has won a few dozen medals as a life saver in the baseball world, helping out Pittsburg, Toledo and Louisville on various occasions. Habener is a catcher and is almost as large as Larry McLean, which makes him a very nice little chunk of a man. He is said to be able to hit the ball a mile and to throw to bases with the speed and accuracy of a rifle shot, excellent accomplishments for a first aid to the slipping backstop.

Hans Wagner has been drawn as a juror for the March term of court. As the big German wishes to leave for West Baden on March 6, he will undoubtedly try to get the court to excuse him from serving. If the other jurors happened to be baseball fans it is propable that the lawyers' arguments would receive but scant attention. Wagner is better at short than in the box, and this statement doubtless covers the jury box also.

Rumor says that the St. Louis Club may change hands after all. This time it is a syndicate of Chicago men who are after Hedge's holdings.

"If the St. Louis club is for sale and the price named is not exorbitant I can procure the money to buy it in twenty minutes," said the leader of this proposed syndicate. "I have talked with the men and they are willing. I will put in as much as any of them and figure there will be ten men in the deal. It is our idea to put Jimmy Callahan at the head of the club. Now, I have made no overtures to Hedges as yet, but I know him very well and have heard him say he wants to get out on account of poor health."

John McGraw has ordered fifteen dozen official league balls for the training season at Marlin. It almost seems as if he expected to have several horsehide spheres injured in batting practice.

BANKERS INDORSE THE ALDRICH PLAN

Foremost bankers of the country, at Atlantic City, on invitation of United States Senator Aldrich, have failed to find any important defects in his plan for reforming the currency legislation of the nation, and Saturday closed a three-day secret session held at the Marlborough-Blenheim, after making a few minor changes in the bill. Congressman Vreeland, of New York, deputy chairman of the monetary commission which has had under consideration the drafting of a measure that will meet the demands of the country, acted as chairman of the twenty-two financial experts representing New York, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Kansas City, St. Paul, Omaha, St. Louis, Chicago, Nashville, Atlanta, Philadelphia, Boston and Buffalo who attended the conference. According to a prominent member, the Aldrich measure, designed primarily to control by legislation monetary panics, received the indorsement of and moral active support of the representatives of the banking world of the nation, who approved the plan as it was submitted by Aldrich to the monetary commission.

"While some may refer to it as a central-control issue, yet it is different in many respects and solves the problem of elasticity in currency which the present laws don't provide," he declared.

Dr. C. E. Herring at Church.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, who recently returned fom Rochester, Minn., where he underwent a serious operation, attended the services at his church, yesterday, but did not preach. In the morning he briefly addressed his congregation and read the Scripture lesson. He expressed his pleasure at once more being with his people and after the service many remained to greet him and show their appreciation for his safe return.

WEEK'S PROGRAM FOR LEGISLATURE

The sixth week of the Legislature and probably the first in which any real law-making progress will be made, will be deferred in the opening until tomorrow, the usual Monday night session being omitted because of Lincoln Day.

Both the Senate and the Assembly are expected to put in a full day tomorrow, with hearings and the passing of bills, and both will probably be busy all day Wednesday. With the term almost half over it is necessary for the legislators to get to work and to keep at if they hope to accomplish anything before final adjournment.

Many of the members are of the opinion that final adjournment should not be considered until all pending business is cared for with all the deliberation that it merits, but it is likely that as the session lengthens out to twelve or thirteen weeks, the usual length, there will be the usual disposition to wind up affairs and get away for the year.

This week's session will be enlivened by several hearings which doubtless will attract more attention than the regular business. Tomorrow there will be a hearing on the various election bills now pending, also a hearing on Senator Osborne's bill to prohibit the employment of young boys as night messengers. The pending election measures include bills completely revolutionizing the election regulations of the State, both primary and general. Among them is Gov. Wilson's bill for a blanket ballot, civil service election officers, and other radical reforms. Bills for the extension of the direct primary system to the nominations of Governor and Congressmen are also pending.

There will be three important hearings on Wednesday, one on Public Utilities legislation, one on pending employers' liability legislation, and one on the Ocean Grove Borough bill. All of these will be largely attended.

The cities in the northern end of the State are especially interested in the Public Utilities bill and the employers everywhere, as well as the wage workers, are interested in the liability measures.

The Ocean Grove hearing is expected to attract a large crowd. The Borough bill advocates have engaged a special train to bring their followers from the shore, and Summer residents from other parts of the State and from New York and Philadelphia are expected. The Methodist Camp Meeting Association, which now controls Ocean Grove, will be represented by the best legal talent obtainable and will be backed by many prominent Jerseymen, including ex-Gov. Stokes, in an effort to prevent any change in the government of the resort.

The boroughites maintain that just representation in the management of public affairs is denied them and also that they are being too heavily taxed. The camp meeting people declare that the effect of a borough law would be to break down religious restrictions and secularize the resort. Borough bills have been presented and defeated in several recent Legislatures.

Among the new business that will doubtless come will be further appointments by Gov. Wilson, including that of Col. Edwin A. Stevens, of Hoboken, as State Road Commissioner. The Governor is making this appointment in spite of the efforts of leading Democrats to land an active party worker in the berth, but Col. Stevens is not likely to be opposed in the Senate, for he has the admiration and co-operation of Senator Fielder, of his home county of Hudson, and in addition the appointment is generally recognized as excellent.

It is also expected that the week will be productive of the local option bill of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League. The measure will be "fathered" by Senator Gebhardt, of Hunterdon county, who made an unsuccessful effort to get such a measure through the last Legislature.

The Anti-Saloon people have been in conference with Gov. Wilson and it is generally believed that he would sign a local option bill, but no one believes that this Legislature will pass such a measure. The introduction of the bill, however, will have the effect of keeping the matter before the people and probably of preventing the enactment of any "open Sunday" legislation, either for sports or excise privilege.

Still Get Evidence.

The vigilance of the police was not at all relaxed yesterday in spite of rumors to the contrary. More than twenty stores were entered by the plain-clothesmen of the department and evidence of Sunday selling obtained. Several hours were spent by the men in police headquarters today arranging the exhibits of evidence of Sunday traffic gathered yesterday.

Congregational Men's Club.

"Ladies' Night" will be celebrated by the Men's Club of the Congregational church tomorrow night. All adult members of the church are invited to come and bring their friends. Entertainment will be furnished by a male quartet and readings by Mrs. Royle Phillips will be another attraction calculated to please. The entertainment will begin at 8 o'clock.

"SPEAK EASIES" AS A STATE EVIL

Information indicating that there are almost 3,000 places in the State where liquor is sold illegally, was laid before Governor Wilson by representatives of the Anti-Saloon League, according to the statement of G. Rowland Munroe, of Newark, counsel for the league, made Saturday.

Mr. Munroe visited the Governor, with Rev. Thomas B. Shannon, also of Newark. They called to inform the Governor that Senator Gebhardt would introduce a local option bill tomorrow. The bill, according to Mr. Munroe, will be of the same nature as that put in last year.

Mr. Munroe state that a mass of figures relative to the sale of liquor in the State had been laid before the Governor, including comparisons, which indicated that New Jersey had more than twice as many liquor licenses, in proportion to its population, as any other State. He declared also that the "speak-easies" were more numerous. It was in this connection that the figures relating to the supposed illegal sales were presented.

The information was that while there have been issued in the State 7,861 retail liquor licenses, in addition there have been issued 2,970 internal revenue tax receipts to persons who have not taken out any local license. The figures were submitted, Mr. Munroe said, so that the Governor might take whatever action he desired.

When informing the Governor of the intention to have the local option bill introduced, Mr. Munroe and Mr. Shannon did not ask him to take any stand, and the Governor did not volunteer any declaration as to possible action, if the measure should come before him. Even the men back of the bill have no hope that it can be passed this year.

"We informed the Governor the other day," said Mr. Munroe, "that the bill was to be introduced. He listened to us with a great deal of interest and to the arguments that we presented, but he made no declaration about the subject. We did not ask him any."

"Local Option Sunday" will be observed throughout the State in various churches next Sunday. The Anti-Saloon League will send out letters to all pastors, asking them to make the liquor business the subject of their sermons.

LINCOLN DECRIED LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Among the most interesting discourses yesterday on "Lincoln," was that by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, at the morning service. Dr. Anderson briefly related incidents in connection with the birth of Lincoln, as well as the place, the date and place of his death and circumstances attending it, the removal of his remains to Springfield, Ill., and the burial, in his introductory remarks.

The preacher spoke of several features and characteristics in the life of Lincoln, touching upon the lack of early education and the fact that he was a hard student and a wide reader. He referred to his honesty and referred to incidents to prove this; also to his life as a lawyer and statesman, that he was a strong temperance man, believing in total abstinence for the individual and constitutional prohibition of the liquor traffic for the State. To prove this, Dr. Anderson read a couple of quotations from Lincoln, one which to J. B. Merwin on April 14, 1865, the morning before his assassination, as follows: "After reconstruction the next great question will be the overthrow of the liquor traffic." In 1853 Lincoln was quoted to have said:

"The most effectual remedy would be the passage of a law altogether abolishing the liquor traffic. There must be no more attempts to regulate the cancer. It must be eradicated."

Dr. Anderson spoke of Lincoln's relation to the Bible, showing that he studied it, believed it and loved it. He referred to his superior sense of high-class humor and illustrated it with a few incidents. He also showed that he possessed a strong sympathetic nature and illustrated the truth of that. In closing he spoke of his reverence of love for his mother, stating that he once said:

"All that I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother. Blessings on her memory." Dr. Anderson concluded by saying that Lincoln believed in the interposition of God and that he directly or indirectly governs the affairs of men.

PROTECTING MAHOGANY.

In these days of dust the careful housekeeper finds it sifts into her mahogany tops, despite covers. This is bad for the wood and makes the covers look dingy.

A lining of some sort should be provided. Sometimes this is in the form of wadded covers of china silk that stand washing. But these give the linen covers a padded look that is not especially desirable.

An interlining of glass is growing in favor. This protects the wood, and if heavy enough not to crack easily is serviceable and quickly cleaned. The edges should be rounded so as not to cut with careless handling.

One housekeeper advocates the use of asbestos sheets under her dressing table covers. There is no danger of the wood is hot curling tongs or half burnt matches are dropped.

It is cheaper and more convenient to use white blotters as a lining. These keep dust from the wood admirably, absorb upset liquids and cost so little that they can frequently be renewed. They have the effect also of making the linen or pique top look whiter.

JR. O.U.A.M. FAIR ENJOYED BY MANY

The Jr. O. U. A. M. fair which closed on Saturday night was one of the most successful events in the history of the organization. Upwards of 1,000 tickets of admission were sold on Saturday evening and interest in the event was kept up until the closing hour.

Lots of fun was had in the auction sale of articles donated by merchants of the city, which had remained unsold and the bidding was lively. Three tons of coal were given away and a present of fifteen dollars in gold donated to the holder of a certain ticket. These donations were made immediately preceding the last dance on the program. During the week the prize cats exhibited by Mrs. Guy Thomas attracted much attention.

During the week these organizations had representatives present: Company K, Second Regiment; P. O. S. of A., Daughters of America, O. U. A. M., Daughters of Liberty, and uniformed rank Jr. O. U. A. M., of Westfield. Many other organizations sent special representatives, all of whom seemed to be impressed with the splendid order maintained at this fair.

The committee of arrangements composed of members of the four councils of the order in this city was composed of I. N. Wyckoff, chairman; W. H. I. Cubberly, secretary; A. H. Peck, treasurer. The sub-committees were: Floor and dancing, C. S. Wilson, manager; W. H. I. Cubberly, C. A. Doeringer, J. Pennington, A. Perret and F. G. Walsh; donations and booths, J. Y. Martin, chairman; G. E. Thomas, J. D. Moon, D. B. Martin, H. VanPelt and F. Coller; music, hall and refreshments, L. D. Hall, chairman; A. Hoffman and D. Patterson; general committee, C. Lowrie, J. H. Adams, T. W. Downs and Frank Stadt.

OUR DUMB FRIENDS.

Reformers, wake! A crying wrong
Has been permitted overlong!
And wanton cruelty hides behind
A so-called "service to mankind."

Ah, save dumb vegetables' life
From the too eager kitchen-knife.
Their fate contributes not a bit
To "scientific benefit."

What torture must a cabbage feel
As nearer comes the glittering steel!
And pierces, with a fiendish art,
Straight to the tender, quivering heart!

Potatoes suffer without doubt
When ruthless hands their eyes cut out!
Say, does it aid our humankind
When these dumb creatures are made blind?

Again they wreck their horrid will,
Furthering (they say) the artist's skill.
Its dumb appeal they treat with scorn,
And cut the ears from living corn!

These awful truths should make us pause
And reconstruct our country's laws;
With righteous wrath our blood should boil
At martyred victims of the soil.

Oh, Anti-Vivisectionist:
This portion of your work you've missed!
And your success is but defeat
If man may flay a living beet!

May Meet in Minneapolis.

The 1912 General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held in Minneapolis, Minn., if low railroad rates can be secured. Des-Moines has been selected as the second choice and Saratoga Springs, N. Y., as third. The final decision has been left in the hands of a special committee. The selection of these tentative sites was made by the book committee of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Local Dogs Will Be Exhibited.

Many local thoroughbred dogs will be exhibited at the thirty-fifth annual dog show of the Westminster Kennel Club, which opened today at Madison Square Garden, New York, among them being entries from Meadowview Kennels, A. G. Hooley, Midlothian Kennels, Edmund L. MacKenzie; and George F. Parker will show his celebrated terriers.

PLUMED HATS,

Share Popularity This Season With the Sugar Scoop.

Alsatian Bow of Stiff Ribbon and Ostrich Feathers Are the Conspicuous Trimming For Present Head Wear.

The newest in hats might be summed up in one word—plumes—if it were not for certain other tendencies, such as the prevalence of the Alsatian bow and of the sugar scoop shape. Let us inspect their beauties and then pass on to the alluring ostrich feather.

The sugar scoop shape holds the unique position of looking uniovely off a head and surpassingly lovely on. It is really becoming to any number of types, but it is best modified and softened by a huge bow. These Alsatian or windmill bows are very large, made of stiff ribbon or loosely wired, and are tied at the back, drooping over the crown toward the front. They are all the trimming that any hat needs, and all the smart tailor made millinery shows their influence.

To turn to feathers, we are to have almost a superfluity of them, if that were possible. First of all is the shower plume, two or three partly curled ostrich plumes, one sewed in the chanticleer fashion straight up at the back of the hat, the other one or two, according to size, fastened so as to fall loosely over the front to the very brim, and all mingling so as to seem one feather.

Nearly all of this year's hats are being trimmed largely at the back. Really one might almost say that last season's hat could be turned around backward to put it in this season's fashions. See, for instance, the black hatter's plush, with its white plume (black and white is distinctly the thing) and its black and white ribbon scarf. The plume there is curved around the high crown, but from the front back, the front showing only the ribbon. Surely this is a departure.

A very smart trimming for a velvet turban is one white plume fastened at the side and falling over the top like a cockade. This is especially becoming to a youthful face.

For dressier wear than this turban effect there is the satin hat trimmed with two of the new rainbow willow plumes. These plumes are shaded so as to run the entire gamut of the colors of the rainbow. For a change they are sewed in front and fall back against the crown in different directions. The darkest shade is at the midrib, the colors fading away until the lightest comes at the edge.

These hat suggestions need no recommendation. Never have we had lovelier millinery than now. And, above all, now is the time to go up into your storeroom, take out every ostrich feather you ever owned and have it dyed or curled until it is able to join the popular procession of plumes.

Bedquilt Easily Made.

Cold weather is here with a vengeance, and some of us are wishing we had one of the heavy quilts grandmother handed down to us and we handed down—to the church fair. Well, here is the way to make one quickly and easily.

Get two pieces of sateen or of mercerized printed goods in contrasting yet harmonious colors and of the proper size to fit your bed. Put the right sides together and machine stitch up two of the sides. Then turn the goods inside out and run it up in stripes six inches apart.

Next get soft calico, which tear up into strips each six inches wide. Machine stitch these up the sides and fill them with cotton batting.

Draw the cotton filled calico into the strips of your quilt, being sure to fit them evenly and neatly, and sew up the ends. Finish with a ribbon quill or edging and your quilt is done.

Saving Tablecloths.

It is well to have your tablecloths and sheets folded widthways occasionally instead of lengthways, as this prevents the fold from always coming in the same place and thus causing that place to wear out first.

The Postoffice, The Popular Magazines and The People

A provision has been added to the Postoffice Appropriation Bill by the Senate Postoffice Committee without proper notice or public hearing. It provides for an unjust discriminatory and confiscotory tax on the popular magazines. By attaching this provision to the Postoffice Appropriation Bill at the eleventh hour, all opportunity for open discussion and consideration by the people, the publishers and the Senate was cut off. It was an un-American star-chamber proceeding, accomplished under Presidential and political coercion.

If this bill is passed, with the provision which practically exempts from taxation magazines which have not spoken boldly on public questions, many of the popular periodicals will be put out of business altogether and the others, without exception, will be seriously crippled.

Even if it were possible for magazines to continue in business under these new conditions, the people would derive no benefit from the measure; for until the Postoffice Department is taken out of politics, and a businesslike management installed, it is improbable that any additional revenue collected will be used economically.

We urge every friend of honest politics, economical government and a free press to telegraph or write an immediate protest to their Senators and Representatives.

CAUTION OF THE MINT.

Dust, Ashes and Tools Are All Sold For the Precious Metals Which They Contain.

It has been aptly said that no miser guards his treasure more religiously than Uncle Sam watches over the precious metals that pass through his mints. Then, too, the precautions against waste are almost innumerable.

Every evening in each of the mints of the United States the floors of the melting rooms are swept cleaner than a New England housewife's kitchen. The dust is carefully put aside, and about once in two months the soot scraped from every flue is transferred to the same precious dust heap. This is then burned, and from its ashes the government derives no inconsiderable income. The earthenware crucibles used in melting are employed no more than three times. They are crushed beneath heavy rollers, and in their porous sides are found flakes of the precious metal.

In the melting room when the casters raise their ladles from the melting pots a shower of sparks fly from the molten surface of the metal. For the most part they are bits of incandescent carbon, but clinging to the carbon is often a minute particle of metal. Lest such particles should escape, the ashes and clinkers below the furnaces are gathered up at night. This debris is ground into powder by means of a steam crusher and then is sold to a smelter, like ordinary ore, at a price warranted by the assayer.

The ladles that stir the precious metal, the big iron rods, the strainers and the dippers, all are tested in a most curious fashion. After considerable use they become covered with a thin layer of oxidized silver, closely resembling a brown rust. The implements are then laid in baths of a solution of sulphuric acid, which eats away the iron and steel and leaves the silver untouched.

Gradually the ladle, or whatever the implement is, will disappear, and in its place remains a hollow silver counterpart of the original, delicate as spung glass. These fragile casts reproduce the ladle with perfect accuracy in all its details, although their surfaces are perforated with innumerable little holes. Scarcely have they been molded, however, before they are cast into a crucible to become in time dollars, quarters and dimes.

In one corner of the melting room there is a large tank into which newly cast silver bars are dropped and left to cool. Infinitesimal flakes of silver scale off and rise to the surface of the water, which acquires the metallic luster of a stagnant pool. Here is silver that must not be lost, so beneath the pipe through which the tank is emptied is banked a thick layer of mud. As the water filters through it the mud retains the precious residuum. Four times a year this mud is removed, and each experiment discloses the fact that some $50 has been saved.—Baltimore American.

His Text.

The three-year-old son of a Methodist minister was with his mother at a gathering of ladies. At the proper time he was given a cooky. He ate it in short order and asked for another. The hostess said:

"I'll give you another if you will sing for us."

"Can't sing," was his reply, "but I know something I can say."

"That will do all right," the lady answered, expecting to hear "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," or some other nursery classic.

But the little fellow drew himself up in real Sunday school fashion and said his piece:

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

The lady gave him the cooky, and the whole company seemed to be very cheerful about it.—Harper's Magazine.

A Water Telescope.

Norwegian fishermen use a water telescope to ascertain the position of the herring shoals. This is the way to make the water telescope:

Procure a tube made of tin and funnel shaped about three and a half feet long and ten inches in diameter at the largest end. It should be wide enough at the top to take in the observer's eyes, and the inside should be painted black. At the bottom, or wide end, a clear, thick piece of glass must be inserted, with a little lead in the form of a ring to weight the tube. When the instrument is immersed in clear water it is astonishing how many fathoms down the observer can see.

The Sybarites.

The Sybarites were the inhabitants of the ancient city of Sybaris, in southern Italy, founded 720 B. C. They were so greatly addicted to voluptuousness and self indulgence that their name became a byword among the peoples of antiquity. The word "sybarite" is used at the present day to denote a person devoted to luxury and pleasure.

CHAPTER I.

FOUL PLAY.

It was a wild night in March. The great trees in Bushey park creaked and groaned and swept their bare arms through the air as if they were blind giants fighting invisible foes. The night was dark, for the sky was full of clouds, but no rain fell.

In Chestnut avenue no vehicles were to be seen, and Guy Lorimer had met no one on his way from Hampton Court. He was just congratulating himself on escaping without a wetting when he suddenly stopped short in his stride. He had heard, not twenty paces off, the short, sharp report of a pistol. The report was not loud, scarcely louder than the crack of a whip, but it was unmistakable.

Guy stood listening for some sound that might guide him to the spot, and in the instant that followed the shot he believed he heard a scream—whether of fear or pain or horror he could not tell.

Hearing nothing further, he shouted and waited for an answer, but there was no response. Then he ran as fast as he could in the direction from which the sound of the shot had come.

He had only gone about forty yards when he heard a cry. The sound came from his left, from the direction of the avenue, and almost at the same time he saw the figure of a man steal from under the shadow of the trees and dart across the avenue. Guy rushed after him and kept him in sight till he was swallowed up by the trees at the other side of the avenue. Here it was impossible to follow with any hope of success, for the fugitive had nothing to do but to step behind one of the trees and wait till his pursuer had blundered by. Besides, Guy thought to himself, if any one has been shot he must be attended to at once.

He ran back, shouted and waited for some answering cry. A woman's voice, clear and full, called out, "Here!" He ran to the spot and found a man lying at full length on the ground. A woman, whose face was covered with a veil, knelt at the man's side, supporting his head on her arm.

"What has happened?" cried Guy breathlessly. "He is not dead, is he?"

"No, he is not dead, but I fear he is dangerously hurt."

Guy was startled. This was a lady of some social position, if anything could be judged from the tones of the voice. What was such a woman doing here at such an hour?

"I will run for a doctor, if you will kindly wait here till I come back," said Guy. "By the way," he added, "were you here when the shot was fired?"

"I? No. I came up as you did yourself."

"Did you come from the Teddington end of the avenue?"

"What business is that of yours?"

The lady's tone was proud, contemptuous, menacing. Guy was certain that he had heard that voice before.

"Rather an odd night for a lady to take a stroll in the park," Guy thought to himself, but he only turned to the sufferer and asked, "Are you conscious, my poor fellow?"

A moan was the only answer.

"I am going for a doctor and a policeman," said Guy. "Keep up your courage. I shall be back presently."

"Take me home. Fetch a cab and take me home," said the wounded man, with more energy than Guy had thought he possessed. "There's no need for a policeman."

Guy set off without waiting to hear more, but he had gone only a few hundred yards when he met a park keeper, to whom he told what had occurred.

"It looks very much like an attempt at murder," said he. "But the first thing to do is to get the wounded man home. Get a cab as quick as you can and a doctor if you can find one. I will go back and stay with him in the meantime."

He had some little difficulty in finding his way back to the spot where the wounded man was lying, and during the journey his foot struck against something lying on the ground. The object gave out a sharp ringing sound, as of metal. He stooped and picked up a revolver, a small thing, scarcely larger than a good sized pipe. Muttering to himself that the man must be a fool to drop such a damning piece of evidence on the very scene of the crime, he slipped the revolver into his pocket.

When he reached the wounded man the lady had disappeared.

"I wish I had told the park keeper to fetch a doctor in the first place," he muttered as he knelt down beside the sufferer.

"No doctor could help me," said the man faintly.

"We can't tell that," said Guy, trying to speak cheerfully.

By this time he heard the sound of wheels. He shouted, and a cabman appeared, carrying one of the cab lamps in his hand.

Guy's ulster was spread upon the ground, and with some difficulty Guy and the cabman lifted the wounded man on to it and then carried him to the cab.

"I had better go with you myself," said Guy, with one foot on the step. "Where shall I tell the man to drive to?"

"Tell him to drive over Kingston bridge," said the man after a pause.

It was necessary to drive slowly to avoid jolting, and Guy was horribly afraid that the man would die in his arms. By the time they reached Kingston his voice was very weak, but he still refused to say where he lived, preferring to give directions from time to time as to the streets the cabman was to drive through.

"The man must be a fool," said Guy to himself. "As if it wouldn't be the easiest thing in the world for the cabman or me to find our way back tomorrow if we liked!" But the patient was in such a state that it was necessary to humor him.

The cab finally stopped at the door of a humble six roomed cottage, one of a row. A light was burning in the window, and as soon as the noise of the wheels ceased the door was opened by a tall, dark haired girl, who held a candle above her head.

"Father!" she cried in a tone of terror and anxiety. "What has happened?"

"Your father has been hurt," said Guy, answering for him. "Can we take him to a bed on the ground floor? I am afraid he cannot bear being carried upstairs."

The girl made no reply, but her white face became yet paler as she turned and led the way into the little sitting room. Out of this a bedroom opened, and, having made some hasty arrangements for the reception of the patient, she went back and helped the two men to carry him through the narrow passage and doorways.

No sooner was he laid on the bed than he fainted away.

"Have you any brandy in the house?" asked Guy, turning to the girl.

She fetched what was wanted and he managed to pour a little of the spirit down the man's throat with a spoon. After a minute or two the patient opened his eyes and looked wildly around him. His eyes fell on the girl, who had dropped on her knees at the side of the bed, and a softer expression came into his face.

"Nora, my girl, it's all up with your poor old dad," he said, and for answer she could only hide her face, while a dry sob burst from her lips.

"Tell me where I can find a doctor," said Guy in an anxious whisper. "It is too soon to give up hope. He may not be so badly hurt as he thinks."

"If so be that you could fetch a praste, sor," said the man in a more pronounced Irish accent than he had yet used. Guy feared that this was a bad sign, but he got from Nora the best directions he could and sent the cabman for the priest, while he himself ran for a doctor.

The doctor luckily was at home. He returned with Guy, and when he had made a short examination of the wounded man he merely bound up the wound in a superficial way and gave Nora some simple directions.

Then he went into the outer room, and Guy followed him.

"I can be of no use," the doctor said, partly closing the door. "The poor fellow is sinking fast. He can't possibly live out the night. But how did it happen? Did he shoot himself?"

"That is more than I can tell you," said Guy, "but I fear it is a case of murder." And he told the doctor briefly what had happened,

Knowledge of Mexico and its people is limited to so small a number that the entertinment given by the Junior Band of the First Baptist church, Saturday afternoon, in the lecture room, with Mexico and its people for the subject, was full of instruction to the audience, made up of those unfamiliar with the country and its inhabitants. The mission band has had Mexico for the subject of study since the early fall and its members presented the following program with fine effect, Mrs. Reuben Knox, who had the children in charge, describing the tableaux in an interesting manner:

The Toltec maiden, Catherine Endress; the Aztec maiden, Dorothy Lee; Montezuma's daughter, Erma G. Dobbins; the Malinche maiden, Emma Vershuur; Hidalgo's sister, Rachel Smith; Mexican school children, Randolph Douglas and Emily Pilger. The Story of Little Pachita, Travis Nash; Religioras, Constance Harris; prayer means and men, Charlotte Vershuur.

The Public Letter Writer, Bessie Case, Ruth Hoffman; the Peon, Arthur Krausse; the Cargodas, Charles Nash; tortilla maker, Elsie Vershuur; basket maker, Wilhelmina Endress; water - carriers, Mabel Douglas, Florence Douglas, Flora Krausse; Zeraphe men, Ruth Hall, Arthur Nash, Clarence Krausse. All of the children took their parts exceedingly well.

A brief description of the beautiful lakes of the country was read by Miss Louise Hackett. In the absence of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson conducted the devotional service with which the affair opened. Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan presided at the piano.

A sale of cake and candy with useful articles made by the band, concluded the entertainment. The following members were in charge: Cake table, Mabel Douglas, Lucy Douglas, Edna White; Candy, Constance Harris, Erma G. Dobbins; fancy, Flora Krausse, Lillian Fountain. The sale was superintended by teachers of the band and Mrs. Albert Kennelly was in charge of the costuming.

BELLEVILLE'S FIVE NOT FAST ENOUGH

Undoubtedly one of the best basketball games witnessed here in a long time was that between the Belleville and Plainfield Y. M. C. A. fives at the local association gymnasium Saturday night. The game was fast from start to finish, and Plainfield had the satisfaction of winning, the final score being 46 to 36. The Belleville boys were a little late in arriving and consequently had little time for practice. However, as subsequents events showed, they did not need much practice. They made the locals extend themselves to win out.

The score at the end of the first half was 20 to 17 in favor of Plainfield. Things got mighty interesting in the second half, especially when the teams tied with a score of 28 to 28. The rooters in the gallery cheered their favorites to the echo, and this served to help the locals on to a victory. During the second half, Plainfield was able to keep the ball in its possession most of the time and cheer after cheer was given as the agile players continued to run up the score with goals from the field.

The locals had to pay the penalty for a number of fouls, and this was about the only way the visitors could score a goal in the last half. Toward the end, Ricketts was taken out and Naylor finished the contest. Plainfield showed a decided improvement in general play and the game deserved much better patronage. The lineup:

Plainfield—Forwards, Ricketts, Stein; centre, Fritts; guards, Gavett Manley, Naylor.

Belleville—Forwards, Burnside, Girard; centre, Depew; guards, Farst, Smith, Marshall.

An excellen preliminary game was played between the Ajax, of the Y. M. C. A., and the Social Five, in which the latter won by a score of 40 to 22. At the end of the first half the score was 26 to 16 in favor of the visitors. The lineup:

Ajax—Forwards, Peacock, McNamee; centre, Dunning; guards, Glover, Newmiller, Richardson.

Social Five—Forwards, Walker, Ricketts; centre, Good; guards, Carty, Nash.

Physical Director T. G. Whittaker was referee of the first game and G. M. C. Smith the second game.

CHURCH'S SYMBOL PLACED IN EDIFICE

As the congregation at Trinity Reformed church assembled for morning service yesterday the members were surprised when they observed with much pleasure another improvement, a beautifully designed representation of the coat-of-arms of the Reformed Church in America having been placed in a niche in the front of the edifice. The symbol in colors, scarlet red and blue, gold and silver, is the handiwork of a noted interior decorative artist, Alberto Buccini, of 347 Fifth avenue, New York.

It being the wish of the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, that the coat of arms adorn the edifice, Mr. Buccini was engaged by one of the consistory to paint it, but when his product was finished the artist announced that it should be his gift in cherished memory of a departed and beloved friend, Mrs. Clara M. Force. It was placed in position by Seader & Martin, of Chatham street.

The design measures eight by twelve feet and replaces the Scriptural text, "Holiness Becometh Thy House, O Lord," which had been inscribed in the niche during the active pastorate of Rev. Dr. Schenck. In renovating the edifice recently the walls were washed down and the inscription was obliterated.

Description of the emblem:

The emblem of the Reformed church is an adaptation of the coat-of-arms of William the Silent, Prince of Orange, to whom the Netherlands owes her civil and religious independence. The coat-of-arms represents the principalities of which William was ruler, or to which he was in some way related.

The first quarter of the large shield bears the arms of Nassau. It has a gold lion rampant, on a blue field surrounded by seventeen gold billets, representing the union of the ten states of the Netherlands, with the seven states of Holland under William. The second quarter represents Katzenelnbogen and has a red lion rampant gardant, crowned, on a gold field. The third quarter represents Vianden, and has a red field banded with silver. The fourth quarter has two gold lions passant gardant, on a red field, and is the shield of Dietz.

The small shield is also quartered. The first and fourth quarters bearing diagonal bands of gold on a red field represent the principalities of Zhalons. The second and third quarters, with a horn or bugle suspended on a gold field, that of Orange. These martial horns symbolize the courageous leadership of those who took up arms against the Moors and Saracens.

The smallest shield is that of Jane of Geneva, who married one of the Princes of Orange. It is divided into nine squares, five of which have gold, and four blue fields.

The crown which surmounts the shield represents the Emperor Charles the Great who, while Sovereign of the Netherlands, granted them the right of carrying the imperial crown above the coat-of-arms.

To adapt this coat-of-arms for use as a church emblem the pillows and stars were added, as were the mottoes, Nisi Dominus Frustra, "Without the Lord all is vain," and Een-Dracht Maakt Macht, "Union makes strength." The one, taken from Psalms, 127:1, fitly expresses hope in God; and the other was the watchword of the Dutch in their long struggle for home and church.

FOR IRELAND'S FREEDOM.

Big Mass Meeting Planned in Paterson February 20.

Paterson Irishmen and Irish-Americans interested in the cause of Ireland's freedom will hold a monster mass meeting in Entre Nous Hall, Paterson, Monday evening, February 20.

The principal speaker will be Captain O'Meagher Condon, who shortly after the Civil War was condemned to death by the British courts for his activity in the Irish cause. He was later released. It is thirty years since Captain Condon was last in Paterson.

Very Reverend Dean William McNulty and William B. Gourley will also address the gathering. Subscriptions will be started to aid the cause. The State and county boards of Sons of Erin are behind the movement and the meeting in Paterson will be the first of a series to be held throughout the State.

The Home department of Trinity Reformed church will attend the service Sunday, March 19, when the pastor, Rev. J. Y. Broek, will preach a special sermon to the women.

A SAVAGE WITCH.

King of the Quiah Tribe Saved the Man's Life by Chopping Off His Ear.

The author of "Heroes of Modern Crusades," the Rev. Edward Gilliat, M. A., at one time master of Harrow school, says in his book that he had years ago the privilege of meeting the king of the Quiah country, Tetti Agamasong, at Harrow. The Quiah king had been educated at St. Augustine's college, Canterbury, and was able to lecture to the Harrovians in good English. In his lecture he told a quaint story which brings one nearer to the weird lives of the Quiahs, a small agricultural and trading tribe of inoffensive characters on the west coast of Africa.

"In my country," said the king, "we have no prisons; therefore if a culprit is brought to me I must chop off something—an ear or two, a hand or a foot—and he goes home a sadder and a wiser man. Just before I left for England a chief came to my hut, bringing a prisoner.

"'What has he done, friend?' I asked.

"'He is a dangerous witch, O king. He can turn himself into an alligator.'

"'Pooh! Nonsense! I don't believe that old fashioned stuff.'

"'Oh, but we saw him do it down by the big river.'

"Indeed! Well, chief, tell me all about it. You saw him yourself?'

"'I did. We were hunting by the banks of the river with our rifles when all at once we saw a big alligator lying on a rock in the river. The witch man was lying asleep in a hammock some fifty yards away. Oh, the dangerous creature be is!

"'Well, king, do not laugh with your eyes like that, for I am speaking the truth. I put up my rifle to shoot the alligator; but, to our great fear, as soon as I fired this fellow rolled out of his hammock and fell on the ground and rubbed his back and swore he was hurt.

"'Now, O king, if this witch had not been inside the alligator how could he have been hurt when I fired?'

"Gentlemen," concluded the king, "I see you are laughing with your eyes, but it is very difficult to rule over a people untaught and given over to superstition.

"What did I do? Why, if I had left him free they would have killed him as soon as I had gone on my ship, so I saved his life by chopping off his left ear."

MODERN CHESS.

The Game Vastly Different From That of the Ninth Century.

Chess is but a game, a pastime, a relaxation, but it has at times absorbed the faculties of the intellectual in every clime. Perhaps the greatest eulogy on the game was the remark of Sir Walter Raleigh, "I do not wish to live longer than I can play chess." It is certain that those who do not play the game are quite unable to form any conception of the high intellectual delights experienced by the chess enthusiast.

The origin of chess has been sought in vain. The fact is the game has so changed, developed and improved down the course of centuries that in its present form it would not be recognized by its inventor, if there ever was one. The oldest chess problem on record is thought to be that contained in an ancient Persian manuscript attributed to Caliph Kalifen Mutasin Billah, who reigned in Bagdad A. D. 833 to 842. But the reader would have to learn the old rules before it was intelligible. For example, the queen could make a move of only one square at a time and that on a diagonal, but a queen promoted from a pawn was allowed to make a move of two squares diagonally. The bishop had no power over any square except the third from which it stood on its own diagonal line, but it was allowed to vault over any piece that happened to be between. In short, it was a totally different game. Chess in the precise form in which we know it and play it today is a comparatively modern game. —London Strand Magazine.

Amending a Proverb.

There are a lot of silly proverbs knocking about. Take, for instance, "If pigs had wings they would fly." Now, this is absurd if you like. Do you know what sized wings a pig weighing eighty pounds would require in order to fly? They would measure about thirty yards from tip to tip. A nice state of things to keep pigs in an aviary with wings of that size! The proverb would run much better:

If pigs could fly
Pork would be high.

—London Scraps.

The Right Way.

Little Willie liked ice cream, but he objected to turning the freezer. One day his mother was agreeably surprised to find him working at the crank as if his life depended on it.

"How did you get Willie to turn the ice cream freezer?" she said to her husband. "I offered him 2 cents to do it, and he wouldn't."

"You didn't go about it the right way, my dear," replied her husband. "I bet him a cent he couldn't turn it for half an hour!"

Pretty Ancient.

"What is the oldest form of literature?"

"I dunno, but I guess some of th' musical comedy jokes must reach back pretty nearly that far."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BALLINGTON BOOTH TALKS ON HIS WORK

General Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, accompanied by his junior staff of bell ringers, conducted the service at the First Baptist church, last night. The edifice was well filled with worshippers and all listened with great interest to the earnest words of Gen. Booth as he told of his work, and incidentally relating pathetic stories in connection with the prison work which is carried on so successfully by his wife, Mrs. Maude Ballington Booth.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, was in charge of the service and after the opening exercises, during which the bell ringers rendered several selections and Gen. Booth played a number of hymns on a concertina, the latter spoke for about an hour. He did not take any text, but delivered a strong talk on the importance of Christian people giving the other fellow another chance and thereby helping to reclaim him from a life of sin and shame.

The speaker related several stories to show how by giving a fellow another chance, his whole life had been changed and he had become a useful member of society and had been the means of helping others to lead a Christian life.

In conclusion, Gen. Booth made a strong appeal for funds with which to carry on the Volunteer work, especially in the care of people in Volunteer hospitals. The congregation gave a generous contribution to this work.

SEWER LOCATION

A lengthy hearing on Senate bill No. 41, which is aimed to prevent North Plainfield from locating a sewage disposal plant in the Greenbrook section, was held this morning by the Senate committee and at the time of adjournment it looked as though the lawmakers were not disposed to legislate against North Plainfield in the matter. Senators Frelinghuysen and Johnson declared that new legislation would affect North Plainfield adversely and that at this time it was unnecessary.

Representatives from Bound Brook, Piscataway township and Bridgewater township were there in force to oppose the location of a sewage disposal plant at the place designated at Greenbrook, but several residents of North Plainfield, backed by the opinion of James Fuller, engineer for the borough, fought for the location.

It was expected that the Senate committee would hear further arguments on the bill this afternoon and woud reach a final conclusion before adjournment for the day.

Those who appeared in behalf of North Plainfield were Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Edward Boyer, Charles H. Lyman, Alexander Milne and Sherrard Depue.

The bill in its present shape provides that no sewage disposal plant shall be "established, operated or maintained" without first obtaining the consent of the State Board of Health. The measure if enacted would probably prevent North Plainfield establishing a plant at the location selected, and moreover, would threaten Plainfield's plant for on complaint of citizens the State Board would have power to order its abandonment though maintained for many years.

FORMER RESIDENT PASSES AWAY AT GREEN VALLEY, ILL.

Edwin Frazee, who was born at Scotch Plains, January 21, 1822, and who, it is claimed, made the first tissue paper in the United States, died last week at Green Valley, Ill., a fact which will interest many of the older residents.

When he was thirty years old he married Ann Eliza Fitz Randolph and shortly after the Civil War removed to the west. Mrs. Frazee, who died last year, was a niece of Jacob F. Randolph, father of Mrs. T. O. Doane, of West Fifth street. The Frazee family was well known throughout this section during the early days.

UNION CO. SPENT $100,000 ON ROADS

The automobile, it is declared, is the most responsible for the large sums expended for the repairs and improvements of the State highways. In his last annual report submitted to the Governor, State Road Commissioner Frederick Gilkyson, of Newark, shows that $100,000 were appropriated from the Union county fund for highway repairs. Cutting out fractions the number of miles of improved roads built under the State aid laws in Union county since 1892 is twenty-eight.

The total cost in the State for repairs in the improved highways in 1910 was $1,421,746.87. Of this sum $335,577.83 was paid from the motor vehicle fund, leaving $1,086,169.04 to be met from county funds provided for the taxpayers.

TO BUILD SCHOOL ON KENSINGTON AVE

The Board of Education has purchased the vacant lot on the east side of Kensington avenue for a new school. When the Board found it was necessary to have a new building, it was decided that it should be so located as to relieve both the Bryant and the Franklin Schools; i. e., that it must be about equally distant from these two buildings, and not more than a mile away, so that the small children should not have to walk too far. It was determined that the lot ought to be at least 200x300, in order to give ample space about the building. The only lot in the neighborhood that seemed to meet these conditions was the large vacant lot on the east side of Kensington avenue, near Prospect avenue. This location will serve not only the two schools, but also to accommodate one of the most rapidly growing sections of the city.

The only vacant school room in the city today is in the new West End School, seven of the rooms in that building having been occupied by classes as soon as the building was opened. In the Franklin School, there are two classes on half time, while the Bryant School is filled to its capacity, and the attendance indicates that more half time classes will have to be opened next Fall.

THIEVES NABBED BY BORO POLICE

Borough Clerk Frederick A. Martin visited his bungalow on Johnson's drive Saturday and discovered that somebody had broken into the place and ransacked it generally An inventory disclosed the fact that a fine phonograph, eleven boxes of cartridges crackersatsHiib ism iruco cartridges, crockery and various other articles were missing. Entrance had been effected by forcing a window.

The burglary was reported to Chief Marshall Weiss, of the borough, and from the nature of the affair he immediately suspicioned John Polen, of Jennings lane. The chief went to the home with Mr. Martin last night, and proved his belief by finding the phonograph. Polin, at first, denied stealing the things but afterward admitted his guilt and implicated Charles Chapman, of Grove street. Both were arrested and taken to the borough jail.

Polin was arranged in the Somerset county court last fall for burglarizing the Ackor store on upper Somerset street. He was fined $50 and placed on probation for two years. The police believe he entered the Nier residence on Johnson drive and stole peanut vending machines that were reported missing last week. He is twenty-two years old and bears a generally bad record.

Chapman, who is seventeen years old, told the chief that he had been at the Martin place last Wednesday, and refused to help Polen steal the phonograph. They carried away a number of articles and Polen returned alone Saturday and secured the instrument.

Met With Accident.

S. Frederick Smith, organist of Grace Episcopal church, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon while playing basketball with the business men's club at the Y. M. C. A., spraining the tendons of his left hand. The injury will not incapacitate him for the coming organ recital on Sunday afternoon.

'UPLIFT OF THE MASSES' KEYNOTE OF SPEAKERS WHOSE BRILLIANCY THRILLS COMMERCE CHAMBER

Solution of Industrial Field's Problems Offered by Master Minds, Affords an Intellectual Treat to 250 Business and Professional Men at Chamber's First Annual Banquet—George W. Perkins, William J. Moran, George A. Post and Wm. G. Besler Provide Food for Thought—Senator-Elect Martine Eulogizes Lincoln —Wm. L. Saunders Toastmaster.

An ovation was given Senator James E. Martine as he marched up to the speaker's table on the arm of former William L. Saunders at the first annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce last night,, in Truell Hall. The whole gathering of 250 representative men rose to their feet and gave him three cheers and a tiger before he was allowed to sit down. "Jim" responded by bowing and acknowledging his great reception by raising a glass to his lips and drinking to the crowd. Later, when the new Senator arose to speak on Abraham Lincoln he was received with vociferous cheering and hand clapping.

Martine Lionized.

Martine shared the honors of the evening with George W. Perkins, whose speech held the audience's closest attention. Senator Martine declared his appreciation of the reception tendered him by his friends and said that if he were to be taken away from them he would be prompted to decline the honor of representing the people of New Jersey in the Unitd Stats Snate. "I am now Senator, representing the greatest commonwealth on God's footstool. Abraham Lincoln was born in 1809 and at the age of 25 sought office and was elected. Just think what that means," he said, "elected and the first time he tried for it too." (laughter) He didnot deliver a specially prepared speech on the tariff.

Mr. Martine's Speech.

"How many times have I fought against "cash" (pointing to Mr. Perkins) and against 'oil' (indicating Col. Fuller) but today victory sits perched upon our banners and we are ready to do battle for the right."

Mr. Martine pictured the conditions confronting the South when the Civil War broke out. How Abraham Lincoln was hated by many and how today that hatred has been turned into love and admiration. "No one can tell," he said, "what Lincoln has done for the uplift of humanity. It cannot be figured in money. He stood for what was right and was ready to die for his convictions, yet he was burned in effigy for his utterances. I grew to hate the name of Lincoln and I am ashamed to tell of of it now. But ah God has let me live my hate has turned it to admiration and love for Abraham Lincoln was the grandest man this country knew in 100 years. His death was the saddest calamity the nation has ever suffered. For the south itwas a tragedy untold. For thesouth is was a tragedy bringing a regime which as a blot upon our escutcheon as a nation. But it was Lincoln's mission to bring our country to a higher plane just as much as it is your duty today to bring this glorious city of ours to a higher plane.

Uplift Movement.

"We are not destructionists. We are not revolutionists. We realize and are proud of our industrial enterprises, but we say to you captains of industry that your genius would have counted for nought were it not for the toil of the laboring masses. We pray yu to aid us in establishing an employers liability act. Let it no more be said that a child's life is worth but a dollar. Join us in the uplifting of our commonwealth and help us to make our flag stand for God, for country and for justice."

George W. Perkins, who followed Senator Martine, prefaced his address by saying: "In the light of recent developments in New Jersey politics I would say that the voice of Lincoln has been heard and the hand of Roosevelt felt among you. You have chosen as the head of your splendid Chamber of Commerce the son of the man who gave to the world the non-explosive boiler, one of the greatest inventions of this or any other age." He continued and in part said:

Mr. Perkins' Talk.

"The problems of the day are those between capital and labor, between business and the State. In many quarters business wants to be freed from what it regards as the tyranny of the State; labor wants to be freed from what it regards as the oppression of capital. Many of our statesmen and politicians have vied with one another for years in enacting laws that have as their tendency the restriction, contraction and limitation of the business man's activities. During these same years our inventors have vied with one another, with unprecedented success, in placing in the hands of business men various instruments which have broadened and expanded the business man's activties. The clashing of these two great forces is largely responsible for present conditions. While laws have been enacted, having as their purpose, the prevention of business from getting together, we have had the uses of steam and electricity so perfected that the business world has been irresistibly drawn together; and the attempts of man to make laws that will nullify conditions that have come about through the conquest of the mysteries of nature will never permanently succeed.

George A. Post.

World Becomes Smaller.

"Inter-communication has been causing a mighty revolution. In a little more than a handful of years the civilized world has been drawn together by bands of steel and streams of electricity, and while thus being drawn together education has taught people to think, to think independently. The day is gone when people lived apart from one another without inter-communication; gone is the day when they were told by the church and the State how they were to think; gone never to return. If the world had had the tremendous development that it has had in methods of intercommunication, and had not had coincident with it the great educational movement among the masses, we would be in a sorry plight indeed, for we would have had forced upon us, because of improved methods of inter-communication, the necessity of getting on together without the ability to do it that comes from education

Three Solutions.

"Those of us who have watched the trend of events with deep interest and some concern for a number of years, and who have believed that the causes that were creating present conditions were those above stated, have felt that there were only three ways out of the situation:

"First: The adoption by business men of a broad co-partnership method of doing business.

"Second: A rapid drifting toward government ownership of many branches of business.

"Third: Socialism.

"No thoughtful man having the real interest of his country at heart can doubt for a moment that the choice of these three methods should be the first one, an honest, determined effort at co-partnership. We have reached a point through intercommunication and education where one can no longer fool any part of the people much of any of the time.

Profit-Sharing Remedy.

It is, therefore, of first importance that any attempt at co-operative or co-partnership methods must be frank, open and eminently fair. The crux of the wage question, for instance, is not so much whether a man doing a certain form of manual labor should have $1.50 or $1.60 a day, as whether or not the sum he receives is his fair proportion of the profits of the business in which he

SOMERVILLE'S "DESPERADO" WAS ONLY A DOVER COP.

Why Marshall Russell Lott, who constitutes just one-third of the regular police force of Dover, failed to report for duty Friday night, giving Chanceman Joe Duckworth an opportunity to do police duty in his stead, is no longer a mystery. Lott had some business in Somerville Friday and when he got through he decided to get a shave. He sat down in the barber's chair with his coat off and the butt of his revolver protruded in plain sight of some half dozen Somervillians. One of them slipped out and apprised a policeman of his suspicions that there was a desperado in town. The result was that Lott was arrested and taken to the Somerville lock-up.

Lott thought they were springing a practical joke on him and when the desk sergeant ordered that he be searched he obligingly held up high both arms while the "frisking" was going on. Then he stopped to take off his shoes so that the search might be thorough.

It soon dawned upon him that the Somerville police were in earnest. The sergeant ordered him to be taken to a cell to "cure him of his levity."

"Why I'm a cop myself; I'm from Dover," Lott explained, but they laughed. It was not until three hours later that some one called up the Dover police station. Duckworth answered the phone and when he found that some one wanted to know about Lott he denied in fun all knowledge of any one named Lott. When he found out about Lott's predicament, he amended his reply, with the result that Lott was discharged and the freedom of Somerville was given to him. He says that the next time he goes away from Dover he will take his badge with him.

Texas Giant is Dead.

Lamb Graves, the largest man in the State of Texas, is dead at his home near San Antonio. Graves was a giant in stature, standing seven feet and three inches tall and weighed, when in health, 350 pounds. He was a farmer and resided in Baxter county five years, having gone there from Centreville, Tex. It is said of him that he possessed the strength of three ordinary men and could tame horses and other animals into submission by sheer force. But while he was a giant both in size and strength, he was known as a most kindly man and avoided notoriety. It is believed that Graves was the tallest man, not only in Texas, but in the United States. He was fifty-three years old and unmarried.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church will meet in the church parlors this afternoon. The subject for discussion will be "South America." Nominations will be made for the officers to be elected in March.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., February 14, 1911.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

Never in the history of Plainfield and possibly on very few occasions of the sort in the State at large has an assmblage of business and professional men enjoyed such "a feast of reason and flow of soul" as that which marked the Chamber of Commerce's first banquet, last night. It was by far the greatest and most successful event of the kind ever held in this progressive municipality. When a gathering of 250 men representing various avocations will listen attentively, and applaud enthusiastically, for three hours or more, chieftains of industry as they soberly and learnedly discuss the problems of capital anl labor, it cannot be gainsaid that "the world do move." And when such lords of finance, transportation and trade will deny themselves hours of needed rest when naturally mentally fatigued after their day's work and come to Plainfield to expound their views and suggest remedies for the amelioration of life's struggles and for the betterment of human conditions, surely the day of the real brotherhood of man is fast approaching. It is but a sign of the times, a time when there will be a perfect understanding and when all will work in peace, concord and supreme happiness.

To Organize a Third Court.

Plans are under discussion for the institution of a third Court of Foresters in this city, and it is proposed to perfect the organization early in April. Several Foresters, who are interested in the proposition, have held a few meetings for the purpose of considering details. There are now courts here, Plainfield and Watchung, with a total membership of about three hundred. That there is room for another court is believed by the Foresters who have become interested in the matter.

Westfield Club's Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Westfield Riding and Driving Club will be held Thursday evening, March 16, at the North Avenue Hotel, Westfield. Councilman Harry Evans will be the toastmaster, being president of the club, and covers will be laid for seventy-five guests. The banquet committee comprises E. S. F. Randolph, formerly of this city, secretary; John G. TenEycke, first vice-president; W. R. Hutchings and Dr. H. H. Butler.

Annual Gathering of Children.

The anual gathering of all those who are interested in the younger children of the Crescent Avenue church will be held in the church parlors, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. William D. Murray, leader of the primary department of the Sunday-school, will speak on "Some Lessons from the Child Welfare Exhibit," in New York.

THE Laundry Bag says:

"Two collars wandered into my place one day last week. "One was cracked and broken at the ends. The other wasn't. "Said the latter: 'What happened to you?'

"'Usual thing,' answered the broken one; 'and this is only my second trip to the laundry!'

"'Great collar buttons!' exclaimed the other; 'this is my ninth, and look at me. No cracks. No broken ends. I tell you, you started wrong. Now, I was made especially to stand the racket—that's why I, and all other Corliss-Coon Collars, can beat you all out in the number of trips to the laundry.'" is engaged. Inter-communication and independent thought, as the result of education, have brought us face to face with this question. Merely to raise a man's wages and raise them again and yet again will not answer the question. The only way to answer it is to let the man know what the business he is engaged in is earning. Then he knows what proportion of the profits he is receiving, and if, in addition to his regular wage, he is in some way receiving from time to time a reasonable percentage of those profits, his intelligence has been appealed to and a basis for fair argument has been established.

'UPLIFT THE MASSES'

Harmony's Keynote.

"Practical experience in recent years in certain large industrial companies has shown that a fair wage, supplemented by a profit sharing plan, will go a very long way toward promoting harmony between capital and labor. By 'profit sharing' is not meant bonuses or gratuities but rather a definite statement made to an organization at the beginning of a year as to what is expected of it, and that if such expectations are realized certain extra compensation will be paid, not in cash that can be immediately spent, but in some form of security that represents an interest in the business in which the man is working, thus making the man an actual partner in the business in which the man is working, thus making the man an actual partner in the business in which he is engaged. It is only through such methods as these, practically applied, that the workman can obtain the liberty he seeks, the equity that is his due.

Business a Trust.

"If the business man wishes his freedom from government he must pursue an equally honest, open and frank course in his relations with the government. Business men have for years pretty generally fought the idea that business should in any way be interfered with by the State. In my judgment this has been a mistake. If we are to have huge business concerns we can only have them because the capital is provided by the public, thus making them semi-public institutions; and the manager of any such concern should fully realize this fact and appreciate that he is a trustee in the broadest sense of the term. Our large business concerns are popularly called 'trusts' and in one sense of the word the term is more aptly applied than many of us have taken thought to realize, for the managers are entrusted with the public's funds for investment, are entrusted with the public's labor to manage, are entrusted with a substantial percentage of a given commodity which is to be supplied to the public; and if they discharge their trusteeship in a broad, statesman-like manner, with equity and fairness to all interests, the good, rather than the harm they can do is almost incalculable.

The Responsibility.

"The problems of the day are the business man's problems. They are problems that strike at the root of our every-day life; problems that affect the material prosperity of our entire country. They have grown out of the two great new forces that have come into men's lives in comparatively recent years, viz., better inter-communication and broader education. If the business man would handle them for his own ultimate, pecuniary good and profit, for his country's good, for the good of his fellow-men, he must have a broad vision; he must realize that we are living in a "get-together" age and that business in the future can only be conducted on a "live and let live" basis. He must be mindful of his responsibilities to all those with whom he has relations. His relations with labor must be more nearly those of partner and friend, than hireling and enemy. His attitude toward the government must be that of having nothing to conceal rather than one of 'it is none of you business.'

"It is for the business man to say whether or not the smouldering fire shall break into flame. The need of the hour is statesmanship in business."

Mr. Moran's Speech.

William J. Moran's remarks principally related to the great changes that are impending in the relation of employer and employee. He said that the two bills introduced into the Legislature, one by Senator Edge and the other by Assemblyman Ford, were but local expressions of a movement that was already an universal one. He attempted to show the meaning of the old liability law, and then to contrast it with the meaning of the proposed compensation law. He said in part as follows:

"In the days of Lincoln the relations of employer and employed were comparatively simple. The relation was intimate and personal. A good man injured in the course of his employment was not regarded as a cog in an intricate corporate machine, to be cast aside when it could no longer perform its function. Nowadays in the great and hazardous work, the workman is largely a cog, and if it be the inevitable result of modern industrial conditions that any man is to be considered merely a piece of machinery, then he shall have the rights of machinery, one of them is to be repaired at the expense of the industry.

Basis of Compensation.

"Compensation is largely based upon the sad thought that a workman in modern industrial conditions is a piece of machinery, and that when he breaks down he or his dependents must be repaired,—in their fortunes at least, by the industry that takes the toll of a life or a limb.

"This great industrial State of New Jersey was invited by its distinguished Governor in his first message to enact a compensation law. He said:

"'We must have a workingmen's compensation act which will not put upon him the burden of fighting powerful composite employers to obtain his rights, but which will give him his rights without suit, directly, and wthout contest, by automatic operation of law, as if of a law of insurance.'

Human Rights.

"What did Lincoln say about taking property without the consent of the owner? What did he say in his Emancipation Proclamation when he took away from thousands of persons their vast property in chattels called slaves?

"Property rights are sacred things and government is organized to protect them. But in the movement for laws of 'compensation,' in the relation of master and servant, the right of property is not the right being considered. The right up for consideration is the right of the people to suppress a public scandal, the scandal of industry producing a huge by-product of useless men and women, the scandal of the itigation between masters and servantsl with its attendan perjury and ambulance chasing, the scandal of the uneven administration of the laws giving much to some and nothing to others, the scandal of wiping out the frugal savings of a small employer by an exorbitant verdict, the scandal of throwing an honest deserving workman, through technical and obsele rules of law upon the cold charity of an indifferent world."

Mr. Post's Address.

Hon. George A. Post, former Congresman from Pennsylvania, humorously depicted the various phases of the political life and referring especially to Senator Martine declared that he had "charged off" the latter's eccentricities and had credited him with a full line of patriotism and human love. Like Lincoln, Martine has the love of his fellow countrymen no matter what has passed and in the coming years he predicted for the new Senator a life of usefulness for which the people whom he will represent ought to be grateful. He urged everyone to uphold the man who has fought so long and so faithfully for the exalted position he has finally won.

Mr. Post held his hearers spell bound, at times jumping from the humorous to the sublime heights of oratory. It was conceded that as an after-dinner speaker, Mr. Post has few equals if any. His stories were fresh and his finale absolutely unique. None of those who were fortunate enough to hear him will ever forget Mr. Post's peroration.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, Col. Charles W. Fuller was unable to deliver the speech he had prepared and after an introductory by Toastmaster Saunders, William G. Besler brought the proceedings to a close with a speech on the "Railroads and Business."

Mr. Besler Speaks.

Mr. Besler's speech was largely de-

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Mrs. Cora V. Johnson, eighty-two years old, mother-in-law of Mayor Samuel H. Ladd, of Woodbury, was buried yesterday.

Gloucester county will elect a senator and a sheriff the coming fall. Efforts are being made for peace between the Republican factions.

A Chinese of high rank, chief inspector of a Chinese warship being built at the New York Shipyard, Camden, is staying in Woodbury.

Rev. J. L. Sturtees, pastor, announced in the State street M. E. church, Camden, Sunday that, with the aid of Andrew Carnegie, a $3,000 pipe organ will soon be installed in the edifice.

So mild was the weather in Atlantic City Sunday that three men in bathing attire were watched by hundreds of visitors as they played in the surf, remaining fully five minutes.

Four hundred Trenton Democrats, including Mayor Walter Madden and former Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., will tender a complimentary dinner Thursday evening at the Hotel Windsor to Charles H. Gallagher, of Trenton, a member of the Democratic State committee. It is expected that the dinner will develop into a Mayoralty boom for Gallagher.

Former Captain William Hartman, of the Second Police Station, Trenton, who was retired on half-pay several years ago when he lost his leg, has been cut off the pension list because he has been drawing $1,500 annually as a county detective. It is held by the Police Board that if the captain is able to hold down the county position he is not incapacitated and cannot draw a pension.

Four Monmouth county townships, which with the townships of Brick and Dover, in Ocean county, are the owners of the Shark River Poor Farm, want to sell that valuable property. The farm consists of 700 acres and has several miles of water front on the south bank of Shark River. The Ocean county people who are interested are inclined to go slow. The poor farm has not been a success. There is a sentiment in favor of selling if a fair price can be reached.

Vincent Conover, of Trenton, who has been an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad forty-seven years, running between Philadelphia and New York, has resigned. Mr. Conover has enjoyed the best of health and never lost a day in all these years excepting vacation periods. He entered the employ of the company as a brakeman, later became a fireman and in a short time was advanced to engineer. He never had but one accident, which was slight.

It is expected that the special committee of the Camden county Board of Freeholders will this week meet representatives of the Pennsylvania and the Reading Railroad companies concerning two-cent ferriage between Camden and Philadelphia. Solicitor Bergen, of the board, has rendered an opinion that the board has the power to regulate the rate of ferriage. If a satisfactory arrangement cannot be made with the ferry companies, a member of the committee stated yesterday, the matter will be taken to the courts.

H. J. Thompson, a master stevedore of Philadelphia, reports the mysterious disappearance of his son, W. J. Thompson, who left his home, 61 North Second street, Camden, last Friday, since which time he has not been heard from. The missing youth was fifteen years old and is slightly lame. When he left he wore a blue coat and plaid trousers. He said he would return in a few minutes for his overcoat, but he never came back.

In the ballroom connected with Hilbig's cafe, at 265 Passaic street, Passaic, last Sunday, fifty guests were entertained at the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hegmann, of 273 Madison street, Passaic.

RED MEN'S GREAT COUNCIL.

The sixtieth great sun council of the great council of New Jersey Improved Order of Red Men, will meet in Trenton Thursday, February 23, and the sessions will continue two days.

Great Sachem John Thomson, of Avon-by-the-Sea, will preside. The new chiefs to be elected to succeed the present officers: Great prophet, John Thomas, of Avon; great sachem John B. Wright, of Camden; great senior sagamore, Charles M. Curry, of Camden; great junior sagamore, Harold T. Blinn, of Burlington; great chief of records, Daniel M. Stevens, of Camden; great keeper of wampum, William J. Smythe, Jr., of Long Branch.

Among the candidates for junior sagamore is John Hackett, a Millville business man.

There will be an election for four representatives of the great council of the United States, there being eight representatives from New Jersey. The four representatives who were elected last year for two years are: Harry J. Rathbon, of Trenton; Frank P. Jackson, of Camden; Jacob Stetser, of Gloucester; Joseph M. Snyder, of Bayonne.

YOUNG CHINESE WOMEN URGE NATIVE UPRISING.

Two educated young Chinese women, Mrs. J. Jung, a graduate of the Canton Normal School, and Miss D. Loo, graduate of the University of California, addressed a revolutionary meeting under the auspices of the Young China party in San Francisco Sunday night, urging their male bearers to take up arms and fight for a republic in China.

The young women were cheered during their appeals, after which the audience joined in singing the Chinese Marseillaise "Choong Gwan."

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"And you have not told the police—said the doctor.

"No," he said calmly. "I thought the first thing was to get the poor fellow under shelter."

"As a man—what is his name, by the way?" asked the doctor sharply.

"I know no more than you do. I never saw him before."

"Well, since he is in imminent danger of death I think a magistrate should be sent for to take his dying deposition," said the medicine man as he drew on his thick gloves.

"That, I presume, will be for his daughter to decide," said Guy stiffly.

The doctor said no more till he was on the point of leaving the house, and then he turned and remarked to Guy:

"Of course you understand that it will be impossible for me to sign a death certificate. There must be an inquest."

"Really, it is no affair of mine. You must do as you think best," Guy answered, shrugging his shoulders.

He was about to follow the doctor, and in fact was only waiting to pay the cabman, whom he had sent for a priest, when he heard the voice of the wounded man calling and stepped across to the door of the room.

"What was that the doctor was saying?" he demanded.

"He said that a magistrate should be summoned."

"I'll have nothing of the kind, and you may lay your oath to that!" exclaimed the man with such vehemence that his wound began to bleed afresh.

"It is quite necessary that the police should be informed of what has happened, and you may take your oath of that," said Guy firmly. "What reasons you may have for wishing that the man who shot you down should escape rather than give information to the police I neither know nor care. But the doctor has just shown me clearly enough, and my own common sense tells me, that I ought to have told the police at first when I went for a cab. I must do so on my way home, and as soon as they learn the facts they will bring a magistrate."

"They may bring whom they like. I shan't say a word."

"That may make the task of the police a little more difficult, but the truth is sure to come out, for, as you know, my poor fellow, you may not recover, and if you don't there must be an inquest."

The man in the bed uttered a groan. "I had forgotten that," he muttered to himself. Nora was standing by her father's pillow.

"Do you see this girl?" asked the sufferer, with a strange kind of suppressed fierceness. "She has never done you any harm, has she?"

Guy glanced hastily at the pale and lovely face, white and clear as a cameo.

"How could she? You know I never saw her in my life before."

"Look at her! Look at her well! She is my only child. When I die she will have neither father nor mother, neither brother nor sister, neither kith nor kin, in this strange land. Would you ruin her? Would you take away the only chance she has of finding friends that would never see her want? Would you bring shame and disgrace on her, so as to make her wish the earth would open and swallow her or that she could drown herself in the deep sea? Do you want to do that? If you do you've only got to tell what you know to the police. But I tell you this—if you do, my curse, the curse of a dying man and the curse of the fatherless, will be on you. What for did you ever interfere with me? What for did you not leave me lying where you found me?"

Guy felt that it was impossible to argue with him. "God knows," he said to himself, "I have no wish to harm the girl; quite the other way. But how can I help the facts coming out?"

The sound of wheels broke on his ear, making a reply needless. It was the cab returning with the priest.

CHAPTER II.

A MYSTERIOUS TRUST.

A tall, stout man in a rusty black overcoat that came down nearly to his heels entered the room. This was the priest. He made the sign of the cross and muttered, "Pax vobiscum," then looked around, frowning.

"Hum, no preparations, I see."

"There has been no time, father," began the girl.

"Well, well! You had better leave us now." And he drew near to the bed. Guy thought it was a good time to slip away, his presence being no longer required. He went up to the dying man and held out his hand, but a loud knocking at the street door interrupted him.

"The cab! He will want to be paid," gasped out the sick man. "Can we do it, Nora?"

A gleam of tears came into the girl's eyes. She bit her lips and shook her head.

"Don't bother about that," said Guy hastily. "I shall drive back to Teddington, and I will settle with the man."

"But you won't go yet, not till— I have something I must say to you." And the wounded man seized his hand and clung to it.

"I am sorry, but I think I must go," said Guy firmly.

"You wouldn't refuse a dying man's prayer, would you?"

Guy looked at him, but could not meet the reproachful eyes. In Nora's, too, he fancied he saw mute entreaty.

"Well, since you wish it, I will stay," he said abruptly, and went into the outer room. Nora followed him, leaving the priest and his penitent together. Guy paid the cabman and went back to the sitting room, where Nora sat near the empty grate, staring into the black cinders as though they had been red and glowing. She evidently did not know that the fire had gone out. From time to time she put one hand to her eyes as though wiping away a tear.

Guy thought he had never seen a more beautiful creature. And soon he began to wonder at her silence. There was no eager questioning to know how her father had come by his death wound—no inquiry as to where he had been or who had been his companions. The short, bald account Guy had given to the doctor seemed to be enough for her. It was unnatural.

Was it sorrow for her father or the thought of her own future, dark, perhaps, and uncertain, that caused her tears? He wanted to ask, but shrank from intruding on her sorrow. He rose and paced softly down one side of the room and back again. He noticed that it was very poorly furnished. The girl sighed.

"Have you any objection to tell me your name?"

The words escaped his lips before he was aware of it. "I beg your pardon," he added hastily. "Never mind. I spoke without thinking."

"My name is Nora Kildare," she said quietly, ignoring the apology, without altering her attitude in the least. But the ice once broken Guy felt impelled to speak.

"Has your father—has Mr. Kildare—friends in London?"

Our Political Postoffice

John Wanamaker was Postmaster General; Senator Boies Penrose is chairman of the great Postoffice Committee of the United States Senate; Thomas H. Carter, Senator from Montana, has served many years on that committee.

No three men in the United States are better versed in postoffice affairs and needs than these.

On February 9, 1911, the Senate Postoffice Committee, under the leadership of Senators Penrose and Carter, reported favorably to the Senate for action the Postoffice Appropriation bill, containing a provision, put in without allowing public hearing or open consideration, but under political pressure from the White House, that increases the postage rate on magazines and periodicals to such an extent that it practically absorbs all the profits of the publishing business of the country and makes the further production of popular-priced magazines impossible. It imposes a tax that is confiscatory.

Notwithstanding, within the year Senator Boies Penrose said, referring to the Carter-Weeks bill:

> "These are some of the big features of the bill. The whole intent is to systematize and to modernize the entire postal system. It is idle to take up such questions as apportioning the cost for carrying second-class mail matter or the proper compensation of railroads for transporting the mails until we shall have established business methods in postoffice affairs by a reorganization of the whole postal system.
> "The commission unanimously recommended the passage of the projected bill. Personally I have been very much interested in all the details and, of course, am heartily in favor of the changes to be made."

Senator Carter said last March:

> "But I must forego further pursuit of details. The bill was cordially approved by Postmaster General Meyer and his assistants, and likewise has the approval of Postmaster General Hitchcock. It failed of passage during the last Congress owing to lack of time for its proper consideration, but I have reintroduced the bill, which is now designated Senate 6287, Second Session, Sixty-first Congress. The Committee on Postoffices and Postroads will favorably report the bill to the Senate, and it should be enacted into law before the close of this session. I believe not only that it will increase efficiency, but that, after the expense of installation is absorbed, it will result in such economies in the administration of the department and service as will ere long wipe out the deficiency. In operating under it the department will be able with almost unerring certainty to determine the actual cost of each service performed, thereby reaching a sound basis for legislation such as is neither available nor obtainable under the present system.
> "I deeply sympathize with the earnest desire of the department officials to get rid of the deficiency they are fated to encounter each year, but I submit that the first real movement toward that end must begin with the substitution of a modern, up-to-date business organization for the existing antiquated system, which rests upon a few sections of law enacted in 1835, supplemented by statutory fragments added from time to time since that year."

John Wanamaker said recently:

> "With Mr. Hitchcock's suggestion, however, there will be no general agreement. The magazines are supported, not by the price paid for the magazine by the readers, but by the advertisers.
> "In a sense, magazines are private concerns; but they have a public function to perform—an educational function. To tax the advertisements is to tax the quality of the educational matter contained in the pages, for the advertisements enable the publishers to pay high prices for literature and educational articles. The price paid for a magazine does not pay for the printing and the paper. If Mr. Hitchcock's suggestion should become part of the President's plan it would mean that the public would suffer in the loss of much educational material that the publishers then would be unable to buy."

We urge every friend of honest politics, economical government and a free press to telegraph or write an immediate protest to their Senators and Representatives at Washington.

voted to railroad matters. He made a reply to the assertion made by Mr. Brandeis before the Interstate Commerce Commission, at Washington, wherein he claimed that a million dollars a day might be saved by the railroads in their operating expenses, Brandeis basing his assertion on the report that American railways are "very inefficiently operated."

"Has it suggested itself to you," said Mr. Besler, "that this contention involves the abandonment of the theory upon which Mr. Brandeis' clients, the shippers, have heretofore opposed advances in freight rates? Their contention has been that the railroads have so greatly increased the efficiency of their properties and methods of operation during the past ten years, that in spite of the advances which have been made in the cost of labor and high prices paid for material, they do not need any higher rates to overcome such additional costs."

Economical Management.

Continuing Mr. Besler said: "Let me say that the railroads of the United States, with the smallest capital expenditure per mile of any railroads in the world, are carrying freight and passengers at the lowest rates in the world, and are paying at this time the highest wages for labor and the highest prices for material in the world. Does this not absolutely refute the thought of inefficient management?

"The manufacturers of the United States are paying the highest wages of any manufacturers in the world, and I think it will not be seriously questioned when we say that they are charging the highest prices of any manufacturers in the world for their goods. They have to! Now, one of two things is true. Either these factories, which Mr. Brandeis cites, are not efficiently operated as American railroads are operated, or there has been no justification for the manufacturers raising their prices as much as they have in the past ten years, while at the same time railroads have remained practically stationary.

Co-Operation Needed.

"The greatest obstacle in the way of effecting even the economies that are possible is that the railroads cannot secure from the shippers, the public, and their employes the co-operation which is necessary to render them practicable.

"The difficulties in the way of introducing efficiency methods," said Mr. Besler, "in railroad shops and in railroad service are very much greater than in any other shops or kinds of service. If a manufacturer wishes to adopt efficiency methods and his employes object, he can shut down his plant until they come to terms, or he may close his works and leave the community. Not so with the railway, which, being a public service corporation, cannot close its shops, nor shut down its service, nor move from the neighborhood. The law and public opinion would permit neither."

Mr Besler declared that before some of Brandeis "better methods" could be introduced "it would be necessary to go through the worst railroad strike this country has ever seen." He added that in such event "we would find that a misguided public sentiment would side with the labor unions instead of with the railroads."

The Government's Duty.

In closing, Mr. Besler declared that "the only public policy which will tend to promote railway efficiency will be for the government to take a position that the railroads must not charge higher than reasonable rates and that they must give good service, and if this is done they are to be allowed to earn whatever profits such a regulation may enable them to produce. The only incentive that has ever been effective in promoting the efficiency in the management of private enterprise, whether it be railways or manufacturers, has been the hope and prospect of increased gain to the owners, and until human nature has all changed it will continue to be the only effective incentive."

At the speakers' table were: Mayor N. B. Smalley; Rev. G. A. Warner; W. G. Besler; E. R. Ackerman; W. J. Moran; Former Mayor W. L. Saunders; G. W. Perkins; G. L. Babcock; J. E. Martine; G. A. Post; Mayor G. W. V. Moy; C. W. Fuller; Rev. B. M. Bogan and John Ulrich.

K. OF P. CONVENTION

INTEREST IN THE ELECTION.

Schreiner a Candidate—Ulrich and Van Winkle on Committees—Both Local Lodges Represented.

Members of the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias banqueted at the Hotel Sterling, Trenton, last night, thus beginning the annual session of the organization to be conducted in Masonic temple in that city during the balance of the week.

Covers were laid for 500 persons. John H. Conger was toastmaster.

The speakers included: Grand Chancellor Lewis A. Drucker, Grand Keeper of Records and Seals Elmer E. Margerum, Harry C. Keeler, of Henry Clay lodge, Newark; John Patrick, of Ruterford; Charles Linder, of Hoboken; W. G. Quick, of Somerville; George H. Hild, of Morristown; Henri A. Heinrichs, of Paterson; De Witt C. Cobb, of Silverton; William G. Cogwill, of Saulsboro; Abram Kleinert, of Paterson, and Walter E. Hayhurst, of Lambertville.

The report of the grand chancellor and grand keeper of record will show the organization to be in a flourishing condition, and a handsome increase in membership will also be noted. The grand chancellors of Vermont, Pennsylvania and New York are expected to be in attendance, and this evening a feature will be the exemplification of the unwritten work of the order in regular session, after which prizes awarded by the Grand Lodge will be presented.

Several resolutions amending the constitution will be offered. The most important amendments to be offered are that the grand inner guard and the grand outer guard shall be appointed by the chancellor, instead of being elected and the abolishing of the committee on grand chancellor's report, and the substitution of a committee on distribution.

Joseph Baker and B. J. Schreiner, of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, and Alfred Causebrook and Jeremiah VanWinkle, of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, are the local delegates.

The vote of the subordinate lodges for elective officers develops contests for only two offices, grand outer guard and supreme representatives. The candidates for outer guard are H. W. Jerrell, of Bridgeton; Sarino Bechnizer, of Perth Amboy; Berthold J. Schreiner, of this city; J. K. Sheridan, of Newark; J. F. Stryker, of Rockaway; Stewart Neighbor, of German Valley; Max J. Solinsky, of Bayonne.

The subordinate lodge vote for the other officers resulted as follows: Grand chancellor, Harry C. Keeler, of Henry Clay lodge, of Newark; vice-chancellor, W. G. Quick, of Somerville; prelate, Samuel A. Dobbins, of Mount Holly; keeper of records and seals, Elmer E. Margerum, of Trenton; master of exchequer, John Patrick, of Rutherford; master-at-arms, George H. Hild, of Morristown; inner guard, Charles Linder, of Hoboken.

Former City Judge John Ulrich, of this city, is chairman of the committee on legislation. Jeremiah VanWinkle, also of this city, is a member of the committee on uniform rank.

Somerset Teachers' Meeting.

The regular mid-year meeting of the teachers of Somerset county will be held in the public school building, Raritan on Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock. George C. Baker, of North Plainfield, will read a paper on "Medical Inspection in our Public Schools." The discussion following will be opened by Dr. W. H. Merrell, of Somerville. There will also be an address by some prominent educator. Union County Superintendent J. J. Savitz, of Westfield, will discuss "Language Work in the Grades."

The large attendance at the last meeting held in North Plainfield, in spite of the violent storm, indicated that deep interest that the teachers of Somerset county have in this association. Lunch will be served in the school building.

It Was Not Amerigo.

It was E. M. Branciti, of Prescott place, who acted in the capacity of interpreter for the Italians in the Sunday closing cases heard by City Judge DeMeza last Saturday morning, instead of Amerigo Brancati, whose name was mentioned.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SUPT. BURKE RESIGNS

Coincident with an announcement made by Rev. Thomas B. Shannon, of Newark, to his congregation Sunday, that he was about to resign as pastor of the Kilburn Memorial Presbyterian church, to engage in the work of the Anti-Saloon League, it has become known that J. Frank Burke's resignation as superintendent of the league had been accepted.

Mr. Burke declined to give his reasons for giving up his work. It is understoood, however, that his health and that of his family prompted his determination to quit. Six months ago the superintendent sent in his resignation to the committee, but the latter refused to accept it.

Instead the members prevailed upon the superintendent to take a leave of absence to rest up, and G. Rowland Munroe was named to assist him in the work. After the last election, Mr. Munroe found it impossible to continue in the capacity in which he had been serving, and Mr. Burke was urged, it is said, to take full charge again. He, however, declared that he could not do so.

Rev. Mr. Shannon was born in Manasses, Va., and was graduated from the Princteon Theological Seminary.

EAST END CHURCH VALENTINE PARTY

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Netherwood Reformed church held a St. Valentine's entertainment and supper at the church last night. There were nearly one hundred people present to enjoy the affair. During the evening the Misses Florence and Maude Disbrow, Ruth Wahlig, Iona Wood, Lillian Mattell and Anna Smith gave an amusing sketch entitled "Six Cups of Chocolate," the scene of which was laid in the room of a College girl and it eventually turns out that all are in love with the same young man. The sketch was well done.

The cast for the sketch follows: Adeline VonLinden, German girl, Miss Anna Smith; Hester Beacon, New England girl, Miss Ruth Wahlig; Dorothy Green, Bostonian, Miss Lillian Mattell; Marian Lee, South-VanCortlandt, Miss Florence Disbrow; Jenaette Durand, French girl, Miss Maude Disbrow.

Other features of the evening included piano and mandolin duets, after which refreshments were served. No admission was charged, but at the close all the cakes left over were auctioned at good prices. Miss Maude Disbrow was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair. Assisted by the Misses Lillian Mattell, Anna Smith, who were assisted by the Misses Iona Wood, Florence Disbrow and Ruth Wahlig. Tomorrow night the society will hold its monthly business meeting and social at the home of S. O. Rush, of Leland avenue.

GIRLS TO CONDUCT A PRAYER MEETING.

This evening the mid-week meeting of the Congregational church will be held under the auspices of the Girls' Mision Band who will have as their guest Miss Olive Gibson, a missionary from New Mexico. Preceding Miss Gibson's address she will be entertained at supper in the church by members of the club.

Miss Gibson's address will have to do with the misionary work done in New Mexico along educational lines. She is one of the best speakers that have been heard in the East in many days and is sure to interest all who attend the meeting at 8 o'clock. She knows all about the results of the work and knows how to tell her story.

Will Lecture on "Mexico."

A stereopticon lecture on "Mexico" will be given by Arthur M. Harris in the First Baptist church, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The ruins of Mitta are more mysteriously wonderful than the acropolis of Athens. Mexico's scenery is unsurpassed. The plough and ox cart seen in Mexico's fields today, ante-date the time of Moses. The pictures are clear, many of them colored.

Couple Separate.

An agreement reached between Arthur A. Keiderling, of East Front street, and his wife, provides for the support of their child which will be taken to the Children's Home where both parents may see the child. Keiderling and his wife will live apart. The matter was settled this morning before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court.

Conditions Described in Lecture on Community Action for Wage Earner.

MISS VAN KLEECK'S LECTURE.

Local Suffrage League, Which Hears Talk Will Soon Have Headquarters in the Frost Building.

Miss Mary VanKleeck, of New York, addressed the members of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield at the home of Mrs. Samuel Huntington, yesterday afternoon on "Community Action for Women Wage Earners." She has for several years devoted herself to the study of women wage earners and the conditions by which they are surrounded and is particularly well qualified to speak on this subject. She held the closest attention of her hearers and said in part:

"There is a great lack of information about women wage earners. Such facts as we have from the government investigations and from scattered private studies indicate an unwholesome condition, a social maladjustment, to be set right, not by private effort, but by community action. Here we face the question: Is our government democratic enough and efficient enough to be equal not only to the task of preserving order but to the larger work of conserving the human resources of the nation?

"In the old report of the New York Board of Education we find reference to the sewing machine and the threatened danger that because of this invention women will be forced out of their employment as seamstresses and the like; and the board advises that these women find employment in the department stores. There was at that time not the faintes conception of the sewing trades that the machine would make possible and of the conditions that would develope out of those trades and the army of seamstresses who followed them. Today in New York matters stand like this: Of every 4 women one is a wage earner; of every 2 women between 10 and 25 years old 1 is a wage earner; of every 5 women over 25, one is a wage earner; of every 10 women one works in a factory and the average wage in factories is $6.54 per week.

Miss VanKleeck described in minute detail the results of the sweat shop system, of long hours and small pay imposed upon young girls and the consequent health deterioration. She declared that the law in New York State was so framed that it was difficult of enforcement to the advantage of the girl. She said that the problem thus presented could only be safely solved through community effort. She declared that the problem of their lives will eventually be solved by the women workers when the necessary practical program of study is understood by them.

The discussion which followed the speech was lively and brought out the ideas of all those present on the question. It was unanimously agreed that Miss VanKleeck had made an impression that will result in much good to the working women here as well as elsewhere in the State just as soon as her suggestions can be put into practical use.

The Equal Suffrage League expects to soon have its headquarters in the Frost building where meetings, both social and business, can be held as well as political gatherings. The largely increased membership makes the obtaining of the room necessary and the League feels that in securing these rooms they are making a big step forward in their work. Reports from California and Kansas show what is being done in those states regarding legislation for the cause and a consequent feeling of encouragement has been passed along throughout the league. Special mention of the action of the recall in Seattle, Washington, was made and approved. Souvenirs of Valentine's Day were distributed in the form of a heart, bearing sentiments touching upon the objects of the league.

Manager for Large Estate.

Elmer Dixon, of Sherman avenue, a former roundsman in the New York police department, has accepted the position of general manager of the large estate of President Thorn, of the Trust Company of America, at Millbrook, N. Y., and will remove to that place next week. Mr. Dixon has been a resident of this city since his retirement from the metropolitan police department and regrets leaving here.

J. C. Field, Jr., New Secretary.

COUNTY BONDS FOR HOSPITAL ARE SOLD

By submitting a bid of $52,734 Harris, Forbes & Company, a New York firm yesterday were sold the county tuberculosis hospital bonds amounting to $50,000. Twelve bidders, two of whom were from Elizabeth, submitted to County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt the amounts they were willing to pay for the bonds.

The bidders and the amounts they offered to pay based on a bond issue of $100,000 (double the real issue) follows: H. K. Stokes, of New York, $104,514; A. B. Leach & Company, 104,514; John D. Everett & Company, $104,610; Harris, Forbes & Company, of New York, $105,468; National State Bank, Elizabeth, $105,10; Kountze Brothers, of New York, $105,111; R. M. Grant & Company, of New York $105,209; E. H. Rollins & Son, of Boston, $104,-276; Outwater & Wells, of Jersey City, $103,351; J. W. Whelan, president of the Union County Savings Bank, $104.

The bids were received during the past week but were not opened by the county collector until yesterday. Each bidder enclosed in his envelope a check for $1,000 to be used as part payment in the event of his bid being accepted.

The sum of $2,734 over the par value of the bonds reduces the original interest of 4½ per cent. to 4.20 per cent. That is one of the reasons why the people interested in the matter are congratulating themselves on the large bid which will save the county a considerable sum of money, and at the same time show that its finances are in good condition.

The bonds were dated Jaunary 3, 1911, and are due on Jaunary 3, 1941.

HIS LOSS IS BITTER; 25 BBL. OF VINEGAR

Has anybody seen twenty-five barrels of vinegar rolling around anywhere? That's the question agitating the police and John Phillips, of Fanwood. And this is the reason. About three years ago, Mr. Phillips stored in the cellar of Fred Dunn's former grocery store, at the corner of North and Park avenue, twenty-five barrels of choice cider vinegar, paying for the privilege the sum of $1 per barrel. Yesterday Mr. Phillips wanted to get some of this vinegar for a customer but when he went to the cellar he found that the vinegar had disappeared.

Non-plussed for the moment, Mr. Phillips hastened to see Fred McDonald who was trustee for Dunn but Mr. McDonald was totally unaware that any vinegar had been stored in the cellar or that it had been sold.

During the three years just passed the property has changed through several hands and so far as could be ascertained today no one has seen the precious stuff. The value of the twenty-five barrels is placed at $287.50, which would make Mr. Phillips' total loss $312.50 including the $25 paid for storage.

POLICE GET MORE FACTS AGAINST POLEN

John Polen and Charles Chapman, the two young men arrested on a charge of burglarizing Borough Clerk Fred Martin's bungalow, were not arraigned before Justice Snape this morning as planned. Chief Weiss secured evidence yesterday that Polen also broke into Charles Neier's summer place on Johnson's drive last October, and delayed proceedings to make a second charge against him. The two defendants will be given a hearing at 4:30 this afternoon.

Polen denies that he ransacked the Neier place, but Chief Weiss sleuthed out a man to whom he had sold a Martin "pump" gun taken from the house. It had been loaned by the purchaser to a friend at Murray Hill and the chief secured it there this morning. The gun is valued at $75. Polen is also alleged to have taken a watch, a revolver and several other articles.

Mr. Neier is a New York lawyer and occupies the house only in summer. He said over the telephone last night that he would be at the hearing this afternoon.

He Took the Pledge.

George Barnes, of West End, who was found helplessly drunk on Second street last evening, got a suspended sentence of thirty days this morning on condition that he sign the pledge and keep it for a year. Judge DeMeza administered a short lecture.

MAGAZINE POSTAGE

President Taff Will Fight for Higher Rates if it Takes Two Years.

ANNOYED BY THE LOBBYISTS.

Annual Deficit Exceeds $62,000,000—Cost of Haulage Greatest Item in Government's Postal Expense.

Why should the government make a present of $62,000,000 every year to the magazine publishers? President Taft fails to find the answer and for that reason declared yesterday that he would fight the magazine lobbyists to the last ditch. When speaking of the "magazine" interests he did not exclude any of those which have taken advantage of the postal law which permits the sending of a pound of magazine through the mails for one cent while for packages of merchandise other people are forced to pay sixteen cents, or one cent an ounce.

President Taft is quoted as saying yesterday that he believed the magazine interests were fighting along lines that would eventually revert upon themselves in self condemnation, quoting reasons that no one immediately interested could deny being correct. The proposition from a business viewpoint is so simple that there are those among the business communities of the country who laugh at the consideration publishers have had for so many years without a single protest from any previous administration.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has shown to the President where a deficit of more than $62,000,000 may be charged to the haulage of magazine matter from New York to various destinations. Of course, New York is not the only city in the United States where magazines are published, but the majority of those that count with the reading public are printed there and from the metropolis must come the bulk of the revenue to the government from this source. But if it costs 9.23 cents a pound to haul the thousands of magazines each month to their destinations why should not the publishers bear their part of the expense.

In order to find out how the magazine business affects the local postoffice a reporter for The Daily Press interviewed Postmaster Elias Bird this morning with the result that some interesting figures were presented. A bag of magazines, for example the Ladies Home Journal, weighs in the neighborhood of 175 pounds. It takes two men to place this bag on the sorting table and it takes approximately the time of two men for half a day to sort the stuff and deliver it. Uncle Sam gets one cent a pound for the work which over and above the haulage from the place of publication costs him more than the original postage charge under the present law.

The other magazines apparently are subscribed for in a similar proportion to the one mentioned and taken all around the business of the local postoffice may be taken as a criterion in estimating or calculating the actual cost of handling. It is safe to say that for every pound of magazine matter for which the government receives one cent it pays out in freight and wages ten cents, and it seems only logical that a continuance of such poor business will ultimately result in putting the postoffice department in the bankruptcy class without the privilege of hiding part of the assets.

President Taft has the support of the great business men of the country in his effort to have the bulk rate increased so that publishers must meet the expense of circulating their product half way. It is not considered unsound or unreasonable doctrine to believe that the government is entitled to the added revenue on the basis suggested by Postmaster General Hitchcock—one cent a pound on purely literary matter and four cents a pound on advertising matter, the latter forming probably two-thirds of the contents of the average magazine.

LAKE STREET HOUSE DAMAGED BY FLAMES.

A frame house at 1334 Lake street occupied by George Alexander, caught fire at 8:15 last night, while the family was absent. The fire department responded to an alarm from box 27 and found the flames working their way to the roof by means of the walls. The structure was saved after a two-hour fight.

The loss on the building, which is owned by Charles Bikneil, is placed at $800. There is insurance of $1,-800. Alexander's loss on furniture is about $300. The origin of the blaze is not known.

5TH ANNIVERSARY OF RESCUE MISSION

At the fifth annual meeting of the Plainfield Rescue Mission last night, reports of the work done during the past year were read by Superintendent LeMatty and approved by the members. During the year there were held 315 gospel meetings at which 12,000 people attended. The superintendent said that during the twelve months he had made personal calls upon non-church going people and that in the same period seventeen men had confessed conversion all of whom have adhered to the new life.

He mentioned the most satisfactory results of these conversions was the reuniting of two men who had become estranged from their families through over indulgence in liquor and in this work though the mission was worthy the support of the entire community. In a short address, Mr. LeMatty said that the year's work was the most satisfactory and successful in the history of the mission and that the outlook for the coming year was bright.

Treasurer W. L. Wright reported a balance in the treasury of $14.14. The total receipts were $548.62 and the expenditures $534.48.

VALENTINE SUPPER OF FIRST BAPTISTS

Under the auspices of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, a successful St. Valentine's supper was held in the lecture room of the church last night. Despite the storm there wae a large attendance and the supper was liberally patronized. On account of the serious illness of Miss Helen Armstrong, who has been threatened with pneumonia, her place as chairman was taken by Mrs. Frank Jones, and all the members of the society assisted in making the affair a success.

The room was appropriately decorated with hundreds of red hearts, large and small, while each one of the eight tables was also decorated attractively. The women who presided at these tables included Mrs. George H. Robins, Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan, Mrs. Norman H. Probasco, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. Gifford Cooley, Miss Bessie Flanders, Mrs. George White.

Others assisting in the preparation of the supper were: Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. Morris A. Zook, Mrs. Frederick S. Thompson, Mrs. Robert W. Barnes, Miss May Shreve, Mrs. W. B. Vail, Mrs. Frank Bach, Mrs. Robin Brown, Mrs. John G. Mac Laughlin, Miss Lillian Dodge Miss Alice Drake, Miss Marguerite Lee, Miss Carrie Demler, Miss Nash. The young men members of Dr. Norman H. Probasco's Bible class acted as waiters and others who assisted were Miss Ruth Day and Miss Lillian Teeter. The proceeds from the affair will be used for mission work.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT T. J. McGANN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Thomas J. McGann, whose death occurred at his home on Lincoln place after a brief illness with pneumonia, was held in St. Joseph's church this morning. The mass was celebrated by Father Miller in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The North Plainfield Exempt Firemen attended in a body and as the funeral procession passed from the house to the church, the borough fire bell tolled solemnly as a mark of respect to the memory of the man who had so often responded to its call. A profusion of floral tributes included two handsome set pieces, one from the Exempt's and the other from Plainfield lodge, Loyal Order of Moose.

Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery the pall bearers being six of the exempts: David Allen, James Daley, Lewis Feiring, Julius J. Stahl, William Rickert and David Allen.

GOSZEWSKI'S CASE

Complaint of Embezzlement Changed to Desertion by Wife.

TO BE ARRAIGNED TOMORROW.

Actual Crime Committed in Jersey City—Prosecutor Garven to Push Case—Flynn Complimented.

Owing to the fact that the last place of residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goszewski, the former of whom is being held in Brooklyn on a charge of desertion, was Jersey City, County Prosecutor Pierre Garven, of Jersey City, will undertake the prosecution of the husband on the charge made by the wife through her counsel, Robert Newton Crane.

Goszewski is in jail awaiting the disposition of his case and is charged with deserting his bride within three days after their marriage. Incidentally the husband induced his bride to hand over to him the sum of her savings amounting to $725, with which he proposed to go out and buy two tickets to Poland. He went out from the hotel in Jersey City and bought one ticket for his native land and left the woman without the necessary funds to pay her hotel bill. This action occurred in Jersey City hence the prosecution in Hudson county.

Yesterday Councellor Crane accompanied by Detective Sergeant John Flynn, of this city, J. M. Donell, of Brooklyn headquarters, and Detective Flory, of Jersey City, appeared in the Adams street court, in Brooklyn, before Magistrate Nash and asked that Goszewski be remanded for forty-eight hours in order that the necessary papers calling for a remand for thirty days might be prepared and presented tomorrow morning. Extradition will follow these demands. The prisoner, through his counsel, J. W. Hopkins, of Brooklyn, demanded his release yesterday morning, declaring that the original charge of embezzlement could not be sustained against him and that ample time had been afforded his wife's lawyer to prepare the case against him. Judge Nash denied the motion for a dismissal of the case and will hold Goszewski until Prosecutor Garven and Counsellor Crane present their papers tomorrow morning.

While in Brooklyn the detectives from Jersey City and the City of Churches took occasion to compliment Detective Sergeant Flynn upon his sagacity and prompt work in catching Goszeski who would long ago have beep upon the high seas bound for his old home.

CAMP EXHIBIT AT SPORTSMEN'S SHOW

The summer boy will be a big element in the new International Trap Shooting Tournament and Sportsmen's Show, March 7-13, at Madison Square Garden. "The summer girl" is not so popular and prominent under that title as she was until people tired of it, but the summer boy is increasing in popularity with himself and others; he is a camper. The boy camp is already one of the most important figures in the realm of boyhood and just now he is looking forward to the Boys' Camp Exhibit which will monopolize the Assembly Room at Madison Square Garden, while the new Sportsmen's Show is on. The exhibition will consist chiefly of groups of photographs mounted on parallellograms of grey cardboard 22 x 28 inches to be installed vertically, or groups already framed, on burlap-covered walls, with camp flags and trophies for decorations. Model tents and equipments will otherwise represent the camps. At four and nine o'clock p. m. each day of the show after the opening day there will be forty-minute lectures by eminent and expert authorities on important phases of boy camp life and management, some of these illustrated with stereopticon pictures.

The camps to be represented already include forty camps of the county department work of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, located throughout the United States and Canada. SHUBERTS SENDING FIRST SHOW HERE

The presentation of Eugene Walter's newest play "Homeward Bound," at the Plainfield theatre Saturday afternon and night, will mark an important event in the local amusement field. It will be the first time since the playhouse opened that a production belonging to the Shuberts has held the boards. Those who keep in touch with things theatrical know that a bitter fight for supremacy has been waged between the Shubert corporation and Klaw and Erlanger for supremacy in the amusement field and each has its respective circuits. Plainfield's attractions have been booked by Klaw and Erlanger but by special arrangement Mr. Saunderson has been enabled to secure "Homeward Bound," the first of a series of Shubert successes to be seen in this territory.

"Homeward Bound" was orignially produced in Buffalo by Charles Dillingham with Arnold Daly in the leading role. The Shuberts had been making negotiations for the drama and finally secured it. Daly was replaced by William Courtenay, who is well known to Plainfielders, and Miss Dorothy Tennant assumed the opposite part. The production is now playing to capacity business every where, a matter that is easily understood when it is recalled that the author of "Homeward Bound" wrote "Paid in Full, "The Wolf" and "The Easiest Way."

CURFEW ORDINANCE FAVORABLY RECEIVED.

Three clergymen appeared before the Somerville Borough Council Monday night with a petition signed by 719 citizens, asking for the enactment of a curfew ordinance that will cause the arrest of children under the age of sixteen years found on the streets of the borough after 9 o'clock at night.

An ordinance, which had its first reading, and was favorably received by the Council, was presented by Rev. C. C. Sylvester, rector of St. John's Episcopal church; Rev. R. J. Ryan, of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl, of the Second Reformed church. The ordinance also had the indorsement of the Somerset Branch of the State Charities' Aid Association.

According to the terms of the ordinance, children will be taken before the borough recorder, who will send them to their homes, escorted by a policeman, with a warning to their parents to keep them off the streets.

A second offense will result in a fine of $5 being imposed on the parents or guardian of a child, unless the parents declare the child incorrigible, when it will be placed in charge of the local probation officer, or sent to the State Reform School.

Promised to Do Better.

Norah Dunavan, who it was alleged had violated the terms of her probation, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court yesterday morning and upon her promise to observe more stristly the requirements of the law was allowed to go.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MEMBERSHIP IS TEN CENTS.

William Dutcher, of This City, is President of the Alert State Organization.

The New Jersey Audubon Society of which William Dutcher, of Plainfield, is President, has taken its place in the front ranks of organizations of its character with a bound. Since the last meeting of the Board of Trustees this newly-organized and incorporated society has acquired 124 members, including two patrons and four life members. It has taken in $673.25 and has paid out $214.52 The plans for the winter's work are quite ambitious. They include the very material development of bird study in the schools, and as a menas to this end the preparation of colored bird charts and of a guide to the birds of New Jersey are under discussion.

The junior membership of children under eighteen years of age is only ten cents, which is designed to help stimulate the interest of the children and to cover the expense of the Audubon button that is to be issued to each junior member. The bird chosen as a design for the buttons is the American Goldfinch, which has not appeared on any of the buttons of the other State Audubon Societies and which is a bird both bright and attractive in color and possessing the other qualifications to make it an ideal representative of the society, including the fact that it is a permanent resident in the State.

The Society also proposes to be actively take up the subject of legislation. The so-called Audubon Plumage Bill, which was introduced into the Legislature at its session last winter, will be re-introduced and actively backed. This bill, in addition to the present wording of the plumage law, interpolates the following:

"For the purpose of this act, plumage includes any part of the feathers, head, wings or tail of any bird and wherever the word occurs in this act reference is had equally to plumage of birds coming from without the state, but it shall not be construed to apply to the feahers of birds of paradise, ostriches, domestic fowl or domestic pigeons. The fact that any birds or game belong to a different species from that native to the State of New Jersey shall constitute no defense to the possession thereof, provided such birds or game belong to the game family as that protected by this act."

As the law now stands, it is necessary to prove that the plumage of a robin or bluebird, which is had in possession for sale, was actually taken from a bird killed within the state. As dead birds tell no tales, it is obviously impossible to distinguish between the plumage of a robin or bluebird killed in New Jersey and the same bird killed in Mexico or Canada. The amendment will cover this defect in the present law. It is probable, too, that the society will endorse in the main the recommendations made to the Legislature in the report of the Fish and Game Commission.

The citizenship of the State of New Jersey is of a character that will doubtless insure the new Audubon Society a very large membership. While it has made a very good showing for the brief period of its existance, the public will likely flock to its standard and multiply by many times its present numbers. The official office of the society is in Trenton, but the correspondence is addressed to the secretary, Beecher S. Bowfish, at Demarest, N. J.

RECOMMIT EDGE AUTO RECIPROCITY MEASURE.

Senator Edge had his automobile reciprocity bill recommitted to committee yesterday. The bill was on the table on a motion to reconsider, and that motion could have been called up and killed at any time by the opponents of the reciprocity idea. It was only courtesy to Mr. Edge which kept the opponents of the bill from taking such action.

The reciprocity idea seems doomed for the present. The supporters of the idea had hoped to convert Senator Nichols, who, during the campaign promised to vote for reciprocity, but later changed his mind. Mr. Nichols said yesterday morning that he was irrevocably opposed to the reciprocity bill.

Senator Brown, of Monmouth, who was absent when the bill was voted on last week, and who has been counted on to vote for the bill, has decided to vote against it.

In moving that the bill be recommitted, Senator Edge explained that a number of amendments had been suggested and he thought they could be handled better in committee than on the floor.

BASEBALL.

The National League owners gathered ye terday afternocn for a schedule pow-wow at the Hotel Breslin, New York. There was a sneaking suspicion that the meeting would be marked by the brevity and peace which are characteritic of the American League assemblages. This suspicion raises from the fact that the annual meeting last December was merely adjourned subject to the call of the chair. Therefore anything discussed at that meeting may come up for consideration again before the schedule is taken up. This being the case, it is more than likely that there will be one or two sessions before the owners get down to the playing dates. It is intimated that the new ball questions will be the chief bone of contention. Rival manufacturers are pressing their claims, and while the league has a contract with one firm to run throughout the coming season, the question of a new contract is likely to be settled. Among other announcements which will be made is the list of new umpires which President Lynch has appointed. The umpire question was satisfactorily settled at the meeting in December, and it is unlikely that there will be any complaints raised as to new appointments to the staff.

Charley Murphy, of the Chicago Cubs, has not changed his opinion of Ban Johnson, the czar of the American organization. Ban failed to appoint a rules committee to confer with the Nationals.

"Johnson has violated the national agreement," said Murphy hotly. "He should have named a committee to represent the American League, but just because he knew I had called upon the fans for ideas he didn't do it. Why, the rules ought to be revised once a year, if only to make them more clear. I believe the raised pitcher's box should be eliminated and so do other club owners I can name, including Mr. Russell, and Mr. Ebbetts, for instance. Then again there should be a rule prohibiting a coacher from grabbing or touching a base-runner at third base. I could go on showing you a number of plausible suggestions made by fans, but what is the use? Johnson won't have it! So we are stumped.

President Ban Johnson, of the American League, said in Chicago yesterday that he failed to appoint a committee on playing rules to meet a like committee from the National League, becaue he did not believe there would be anything for it to do. Regarding the playing rules he said: "I understood that it was agreeed no changes were desired in the playing rules, consequently I appointed no committee, as there would be nothing for it to do. Besides, no one seemed to want to serve on the committee, even in the National League, as two members appointed by Mr. Lynch resigned from it."

With the word that Shafer is in San Francisco on his way home, rumors of the Shafer-Shean deal between the Boston Nationals and New York Giants were revived in connection with the schedule meeting in New York. Incidentally the management of the Boston Nationals will be in New York to try to make any other deals possible to their advantage with New York, Pittsburg, Brooklyn or other teams.

President Horace Fogel, of the Philadelphia Nationals, spent yesterday rounding up some of his New England players. The first fruits of his work he announced was the signing of Pat Moran, who had been a hold-out.

It was announed yesterday that Third Baseman Burg, formerly of the Chicago White Sox, had been sold to Utica for a cash consideration.

Who is boss of the Phillies? Manager Clymer, of Wilkes-Barre, says he bought Pitchers Girard, McBride and Outfielder Wherell from President Fogel. Manager Dooin says he knows nothing of the sale.

Mike Kelly is claimed by many good judges of baseball to be the greatest player the game ever produced. In speaking of Kelly recently, Connie Mack said:

"Kelly knew everything. He could catch, play first, get into the outfield—yes, and pitch in a pinch and do everything in the individual roles as well as the stars. He knew more baseball than any man who lived, and he had more brains than any other player.

"Talk about base-stealing! Why, you could put the ball in front of Kelly by twenty or thirty feet, but he would make the bag by his peculiar twisting style. The baseman could not touch him, and when he straightened up, there was Mike perched on the base. Trick plays were his specialty, and he was always pulling off something which puzzled even the umpires, and they had to allow the play to go Kelly's way because they didn't know what else to do.

"Plays that are pulled off today as wonderful were invented by Mike and used by him. He was a slow runner and still a better base-stealer never lived. His head was full with brains and he knew how to use them."

GOLF.

J. A. Worth, E. R. Perkins, E. D. Floyd, A. D. Tuttle and H. E. Kinght, have been appointed a committee by the Westfield Golf Club to confer with the Cranford Golf Club, upon the proposition to build a clubhouse and an 18-hole golf course at Echo Lake. The Cranford club has already decided to go ahead with the project, and it is proposed to raise $80,000 by a bond issue to finance the plan. Many of the Westfield club members are equally as enthusiastic as the Cranford golfers over the proposed 18-hole course. The Westfield Golf Club will vote upon the proposition to join the Cranford club project just as soon as the committee is ready to render its report to the club.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Edward Wallington, son of the late Dr. E. M. Wallington, of Vineland, has passed successfully the examination for West Point and will enter the coming June.

Superintendent Lovell, of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad Company, has announced that the signal tower at the Wilmer street crossing, Glassboro, will be removed. This will eliminate one of the most dangerous death-traps along the line.

After suffering four days of terrible agony as a result of being severely burned by her clothing catching fire while sifting ashes, the eleven-year-old daughter of Mrs. Hattie Williamson, of Hopewell, died Monday. Her father was drowned in the Deleware River three years ago while fishing.

Joseph, the nine-year-old son of Michael Kelly, of Roebling, had his left thigh broken when his foot caught between a rail and a planking at a crossing leading to the Pennsylvania Railroad station at Bordentown, Monday afternoon. The boy attended St. Mary's school, and was on his way to take a train home.

Sheriff Worrell, of Burlington county, has in his possession all the goods necessary to furnish real life for almost any kind of a liquid celebration. Monday he received thirty cases of beer and various kinds of liquors that are to be the substantial evidence in the speak-easy raids Sunday in Riverside, Riverton and Palmyra.

Some anxiety is felt over the disappearance of John Hola, seven years old, of South River, who has been missing since early Sunday morning. Hola and his wife and child went to Trenton to attend a wedding Saturday night at 25 New York avenue. Early Sunday morning the child went out to the street to play and disappeared.

The City Hospital in Jersey City Monday received Gustav Pullache, forty-four years old, of 333 Johnson avenue, who was found suffering with a broken leg and a badly battered face at the Burns Brothers' coal chutes. He said he had been assaulted by a gang of men and had been lying where he was found for several hours, unable to move.

Committees have been appointed by the Hudson County Branch of the Diocesan Federation of Holy Name Societies, it was announced Monday, to get evidence against improper dance halls and moving picture shows in Jersey City. Monsignor John A. Sheppard, of St. Michael's Roman Catholic church, recently charged that the police are not doing their full duty against such places.

The office of Detective-Sergeant E. M. Griffin, in Bayonne Police Headquarters, resembled a conservatory Monday. In a cell was Ignatz Hojmacki, of 86 East Twenty-second street, charged with larceny. Last fall palms, rubber plants and six century plants were stolen and the police say Hojmacki took them all. One of the century plants had been in the possession of its owner for eighteen years and was about ready to bloom. The stolen plants were sold for trifling amounts to poor persons, from whom the police recovered them.

As the New York train due to leave the Pennsylvaina station in Atlantic City at 4:45 p. m. was about to pull out Monday, Detective Thorpe standing on the station platform, caught a monentary glimpse of a waiter hurrying through the train dining-car carrying a tray of food for a party of passengers. Thorpe recognized the waiter as a man wanted in Atlantic City on a charge of robbery at a beach front hotel in October, 1909. When confronted by the detective the waiter became so nervous that his tray crashed to the floor of the car. The waiter, who said he was Trazwell Mitchell, was locked up for a hearing.

SOMERVILLE VAMPS ANGERED AT COMMON COUNCIL.

The fight between the Somerville Borough Council and the Volunteer Fire Department has reached a stage where the disruption of the fire companies is threatened. The four companies were turned down last night when their petition for the right to elect a chief and assistant, as has been the custom for years, had been ignored, and an ordinance enacted which gives the Council the power to appoint the heads of the fire department and to pay them a yearly salary.

The Council recently re-elected the heads of the fire department who were under charges of inefficiency and neglect at the Bellis fire. The chief resigned and the Council was given to understand that the assistant was about to do the same and that the firemen would elect new officers if further action against the old chief was dropped. After this agreement the firemen sprung a surprise by re-electing the old chiefs.

Ever Notice It.

"You know, Miss Hobble, that yawning is caused by a deficiency in the air supply of the of the lungs," said the tiresome young man, settling himself back on the sofa.

"Well, it does seem strange," was the young lady's reply, between yawns, "that there always seems to be a deficiency in the air supply to my lungs when you are here, and at this time of night."

SHOULD SUPPORT TAFT.

What a sorrowful spectacle is presented at Washington where the magazine forces are gathered to do the very thing that they condemn in others—lobbying against the people's interests and for their special interests! Suppose for one moment that some of the so-called trusts, which they so roundly denounce, were fighting to make the Government sell for one cent something that costs it nine cents, what a howl would go up among the Lincoln Steffens, Ida Tarbells and Cleveland Moffets! More than half the bulk of a single copy of some of these magazines represents fat advertisements and it is only for that section of the publication that the government is demanding a fair charge for transportation. Think of it, last year alone, the Government lost sixty-two millions of dollars by carrying magazines through the mails. And these publishers are brazen enough to demand that the Government shower a favor upon them at the expense of the people to which many of them preach against special interests. Some of these magazines are educational but the bulky pages of no small proportion are filled with fiction of no genuine merit or benefit. All of them, however, should support President Taft's measure if only for consistency's sake.

PUBLIC TO BE HEARD ON THE WATER REPORT

The public hearing on the water question which has been arranged by the special water commission for Friday night at the Common Council rooms is considered of unusual importance. Before undertaking condemnation proceedings, however, the councilmen are anxious to give all interested full opportunity to express themselves for or against the proposition.

There is every reason to believe, so it is said, that it is the intention of the Common Council to begin condemnation proceedings, unless an overwhelming sentiment against the proposition is expressed by citizens.

Charles H. Hand, one of the largest taxpayers in the city, and one who has made a study of the water question, has sent out hundreds of letters to taxpayers requesting them to attend the meeting Friday night. The letter of Mr. Hand, who opposes municipal ownership under the circumstances, follows:

"The Common Council will hold a public meeting on Friday night at the Common Council chamber on the following mentioned subject: 'Do we want a municipal water plant or a contract with the present water company?' Will you kindly make a special effort to be present at this meeting to let the members of the Common Council know whether or not you are in favor of municipal ownership?"

Struthers offered resoultions, which were adopted, commending the action of Ensign Bagley Camp, No. 21, United Spanish War Veterans in suggesting to the school superintendents in New Jersey the ceremonial recognition of the American flag at the opening and closing of school.

The resolution conveyed the belief that the love of country and of the flag will be brought nearer to the hearts of pupils by bringing them in contact with it in their daily routine and making the care and management of it an honorable duty.

It was urged that the several superintendents of schools adopt as soon as possible the suggestions of Ensign Bagley Camp as far as each school is prepared for them, and that Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., endorse the action of the camp and will be glad to co-operate with the members, if desired, in promoting this work.

THE WRECK MASTER.

He Clears the Track Regardless of What Undestroyed but Obstructing Freight Cars May Contain.

When a wreck blocks the line the wreck master is the biggest man on the railroad. Even the president, if by unhappy chance he happens to be there, steps aside and keeps silent after the wreck train halts with a jerk of grinding brakes and hissing air before the indescribable confusion of shattered wood and twisted steel which clutter the tracks. The wreck master's feet are on the ground before the shrieking wheels have ceased turning. There follow at his heels a half score of men, all experts, but of less degree than their leader.

He shouts an order that seems as unintelligible as a drillmaster's command, then another and another. There is instant action. At one end of the train a locomotive begins to creep cautiously away with the coaches that have stayed on the rails. An express car up-toward the forward end of the passenger train is tilted tremblingly on its trucks. It is loaded with bales of silk perhaps or with other costly merchandise. The wreckers do not stop to inquire. To them it is simply an obstruction that has to be removed immediately. There is a heaving chorus, and it plunges down the embankment. A hundred yards away a loaded freight car in the opposite train is hanging over the edge. Fifty crowbars give it a tip that sends it down to the foot of the hill. As it lands there is a crash of discordant, tortured strings, an inharmonious outburst as though half a hundred cats had landed simultaneously on half a hundred keyboards. "Pianos," remarks one of the panting workmen to another standing at his shoulder. They do not pause even to grin. An instant later they are heaving away at something else.—Thaddeus S. Dayton in Harper's Weekly.

CHINA'S GREAT WALL.

It Would Be a Mighty Task to Duplicate It Today.

What man has done, we are told, man can do. But to erect today a great fortification comparable to the Great wall of China would be a heavy tax on both the resources and the resolution of Europe. A score or two of warships are all very well, but the cost of labor and the will involved in building fleets can hardly be compared to those devoted to the building of that great barrier about two centuries before the coming of Christ, when Rome was struggling with Hannibal.

Two thousand five hundred and fifty miles, including spurs, arms and loops, is the length ascribed to it by Dr. W. E. Gell, the only white man, we believe, who has traveled the whole length of it. It has been said that the Great wall is the only object of man's handiwork which could be discerned from the moon, and one calculation has it that if the material of the wall were disposed about the globe at the equator there would be a wall girdle eight feet high and three feet thick around the earth.

One can believe that to this day the name of the Emperor Chin is cursed all along the wall by the posterity of the wretches who were forced to the gigantic task of building it. In the days of its greatest importance, when it was still holding back the Tartar hordes, it is believed to have had on its line 25,000 towers, each capable of holding 100 men, and 15,000 watchtowers. Even today there remains 20,000 towers and 10,000 watchtowers, with some 2,000 miles of wall that could, with moderate repairing, be made into a formidable military work.—London News.

Giants and Dwarfs.

In the seventeenth century all the abnormally large and small folks of Austria were assembled in Vienna in response to a whim of the empress. As circumstances required that all should be housed in one building, there was a fear that the imposing proportions of the giants would terrify the dwarfs. But the dwarfs teased and tormented the giants so that these overgrown mortals complained with tears in their eyes, and as a consequence sentinels had to be placed to protect the giants from their pygmy persecutors, for the smallest men had the biggest brains and the longest tongues.

Corrupted His Style.

"The late Richard Watson Gilder," said a New York poet, "always opposed the reading of light literature. A poet, he said, could not read such literature without corrupting his literary style.

"He once told me that the poet in this respect was like Brown's parrot.

"Brown bought a parrot for $20 from a pet stock dealer and a week or two later returned to the shop and insisted that the bird be taken back.

"'What's the matter with it?' the dealer asked.

"'W-w-why,' said Brown, 'the durned c-c-critter st-stutters.'"

Expert Opinion.

"What do you think made Hamlet so suspicious of the ghost?" asked Mr. Stormington Barnes.

"He probably thought," answered the psychic researcher, "that no well regulated ghost would manifest himself without ringing bells or tipping tables."—Washington Star.

Putting Him Wise.

"I'd like to make you my wife," said the practical young man, "but they tell me you can't keep house."

"Don't you believe all they tell you," rejoined the girl in the case. "You get the house and put it in my name, and I'll prove to you that I can keep it."—Exchange.

A Masquerade

A Story of the Eighteenth Century

By EDITH B. GOLDWIN

"For shame! You, the son of an earl and a member of one of the proudest families in England, to make a highwayman of yourself. Our betrothal is at an end. Leave me."

The Hon. Alfred Tillotson, younger son of the Earl of Enderby, withdrew without offering a bit of defense, keeping his face while retreating toward the Lady Clara Travis, the plume of his hat trailing on the floor. But, though his bearing was humble, he was not without hope. Did he not know by her heightened color, the tremor in her voice, even a slight moisture in her eye, what she suffered in dismissing him? But would her heart triumph over her resolutions? Clara Travis was not a prude. She was a light hearted girl who could dance till morning at a ball, ride across country, taking fences and ditches by the way, but she would never stoop to injure even an enemy. Indeed, men said of her that her standard of honor was that of an honorable man.

Months passed, and Tillotson saw no alteration in Lady Clara's treatment of him. He looked in vain for the slightest sign of relenting. But if she grieved she did not believe in seclusion. She hunted, danced, played at cards with no trifling stake, just as she had done before her disappointment. Tillotson when he met her looked in vain for even recognition. She paled or colored slightly at his approach, but evidently considered one who had taken purses even for amusement unworthy of her acquaintance. When months had passed and there was no reconciliation the lover became despondent.

During this period, the latter part of the eighteenth century, Venice set the fashion in all matters of amusement, just as under the second empire in France Paris set the fashions in woman's dress. From the City of the Sea a mania for masquerading and gambling spread over Europe. In London people were accustomed to go about to gambling and dancing houses, and matters finally came to such a pass that the city government decided to raid a notorious dance house in Soho. A few hours before the raid was made the lord mayor, dining at a fashionable club, revealed the proposed descent to a companion. The latter begged to be permitted to accompany the force sent for the purpose disguised as a policeman, and leave was given. By the lord mayor's order he was enrolled and uniformed as a special policeman.

Revelry was in full swing at the dance house when a policeman, followed by others, entered the place, locked the door behind him and posted a man at each point of egress with orders to permit no one to pass out. Nearly all those present were masked. The dance came to a sudden halt, the dancers standing stock still in their places. Then the officer of police called:

"All unmask."

Some endeavored to pass the policemen at the points of exit, but were driven back. Some endeavored to hide under the furniture or behind curtains, but they were pulled out. It was a slow process, but one by one they were all pushed on to the open floor and forced to uncover their faces.

What was the amazement of the police to discover that at least a third of the company consisted of ladies and gentlemen of the highest aristocracy. A policeman stepped up to a lady, furious at her exposure, her eyes snapping, her foot stamping the floor, and, doffing his hat respectfully, said to her:

"My service to your ladyship. I've come to ask which is worse, taking purses on the highway or frequenting low dance houses?"

The lady looked at him, stupefied for a moment, then exclaimed:

"Alfred Tillotson, what does this mean?"

"That a highwayman has joined the police. You would not have me as a lawbreaker, so I became one of those whose business it is to punish lawbreakers."

"How dare you speak to me when I have persistently cut you?" she cried angrily.

"Clara, I can get you out of this."

"Oh, Alfred!"

"I knew you the moment I entered the room. You have not been recognized. Put on your mask and come with me."

Donning the mask and slipping her hand on his arm, the two walked out of the hall and, entering a carriage, were driven away.

"Who was your escort to this select party?" asked Tillotson.

"Father. I forgot all about him."

"He won't suffer, being in good company. Nearly all our best families were represented. But, Clara, if one who attends dance houses is too good for a highwayman, don't you think she could condescend to marry a policeman?"

There was no reply. He felt for her hand, found it, and it was not withdrawn.

The next morning all London rang with the news that the nobility had attended a dance house in Soho, and many names were mentioned as participants in the festivities. But the name of Lady Clara Travis was not among them. She never afterward forgot this service of her husband.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"He is not Mr. Kildare. He is my stepfather. My mother was a widow when she married him. No, we have no friends out of Ireland—or anywhere, for that matter."

He noticed that she did not mention her stepfather's name.

"But surely you must have some one—some relations?"

"No, I have no one." It was not said with any accent of sorrow or self pity, but as the mere statement of a fact.

What could he say? He could not offer her money, and he knew no Donna Quixote who would be willing to adopt or befriend a penniless orphan. Yet he could not leave her to wander forth unfriended into the wide world.

"Would you like to go back to Ireland?" he said at last.

She seemed to hesitate a moment, then sadly shook her head.

"You don't ask me how I came to find your father in such a state," he said after a pause, determined to drive her out of the citadel of indifference to which she had retreated. "You don't care to know what chance there is of the police bringing the crime home to the murderer?" he said in a voice of surprise.

"No," she said simply, letting her gaze fall again on the empty grate.

"You can't care for him very much. But I forgot; he is not your own father." It sounded brutal to him, even as he said it, but he was resolved to make her speak.

"He has been a good father to me, as well as he knew. And if he had been my own father it would have been just the same."

"Why? I don't understand you."

"Maybe you don't. Why should you? What have you to do with the life of plotting and spying and betraying and guarding and watching for fear some one you ate and drank with should be an informer? Didn't I tell him what the end would be? Haven't I warned him? Didn't my mother warn him? Didn't she beg him with her last breath to let secret societies and politics alone? But there; it's not for me to abuse him. Since my own father died he has been my best friend."

Her listless attitude was gone. She sat upright in her chair, her eyes flashing, her head poised on her neck like a statue's. Guy wondered at her vehemence. But he remembered the tiny revolver he had picked up, and it struck him that it was not the kind of weapon a conspirator was likely to use.

He drew it out of his pocket and examined it by the light of the lamp. It was a dainty little thing, scarcely bigger than a toy pistol, silver plated and fitted with a delicate hair trigger. On the stock was a name plate of rather unusual shape without any monogram or initials. A prettily carved scroll-work of peculiar pattern ran spirally round the stock, or handle. It struck Guy that the thing could not be of English manufacture, and he was bending down to look for the maker's name when a shadow fell upon the weapon. He looked up and saw Nora. She was looking at the revolver with surprise and something of suspicion in her eyes.

"Where did you get that?" she said in a half whisper.

"I picked it up close to the spot where your father was shot," said Guy gravely.

"Oh!"

She grew pale and shrank back. Then suddenly she seemed to change her mind.

"Let me see it, please," she said. Guy offered to place it in her hands, but she could not bring herself to touch it. She made Guy hold it for her, and she examined it carefully for more than a minute. "I think it must have belonged to a rich man," she said.

There was a stir in the inner room. Guy slipped the revolver into his pocket, and Nora glided back to her chair. The door opened, showing the burly figure of the priest.

"Don't forget, father!" called out a weak voice from the bed.

"No, my son," the priest answered gravely, half turning as he spoke. "I will not forget."

"You had better go in now," he said in a low tone to Guy as he passed out. "But don't be with him longer than you can help. I think the end will come soon."

He went out, and the next moment the sound of wheels told them that he had gone.

A glance at the face of the dying man warned Guy that the great change was nearer than he had imagined, and a new thought occurred to him. How was it possible that he should leave that inexperienced girl at that time of night alone with the dead? He went back into the outer room and closed the door.

"Your father needs a nurse; he must have one. Can you find some one who has experience in such cases? Do try, and I will watch with him while you are gone."

"There is one woman I might ask," she said as if speaking to herself, and, taking a shawl from the back of a chair, she threw it over her head and shoulders and passed out.

The wounded man questioned him with his eyes.

"I have sent her to fetch a nurse," Guy answered.

"It's a little nursing I will need, for my time is short. But raise me up a bit that I may speak to you. Open that drawer, and you'll find a key," he continued, pointing to a small chest of drawers that stood behind the door. "Now put your hand under the bed, and you'll find a bit of a box. Open it wid the key."

Guy obeyed, and at the bottom of the box, covered with a miscellaneous collection of shabby clothing, he came upon a packet in a large, stout envelope. It was addressed to "Nora Kildare," and immediately underneath the name were the following words: "To be opened by my stepdaughter Nora after my death."

"Open it," said the sick man. Guy tore off the envelope, and there appeared a sheet of close writing and a second envelope containing papers. The wounded man took this into his own hand and said to Guy, "Burn these," pointing to the sheet of writing and the wrapper.

Guy went into the outer room, placed them in the grate, lit a match and reduced them to ashes.

"Now, will you do me and my little girl a great favor? Will you earn the blessings of a dying man?"

Guy said bluntly: "What is it you want me to do? I don't give any absolute promise till I know what it is."

"It's only to deliver this letter."

"Then why make such a fuss about it?"

The dying man's eyes took on an expression of cunning which changed with ludicrous suddenness into one of regret and resignation.

"Sure, I intinded that it would be a bit of a provision for the young girl till she could come by a husband and a home of her own, but I can't help that now. I'm too near another world to play with the devil again. So you take it and deliver it"—

"But to whom?" The packet bore neither name nor address.

"Sure I'm after telling you," said the sick man fretfully. "On the third night from this at 10 o'clock you'll go into Bushey park, going in by the Teddington end. Walk down the avenue slowly and you'll meet a lady wid a veil on.

"She will most likely say to you, or you can say to her, 'Are findings keepings?' And you say, 'They are, betwixt you and me.' That's enough for you to know her by and for her to know you by.

"And then you hold out the packet to her, and you can say: 'This is what you have been praying for, your ladyship, these many years back, and now it comes to you unasked, without fee or reward.' Mind you say them words or my spirit won't rest—without fee or reward. 'But,' says you, 'there's my stepdaughter, a stranger in a strange land, that has no provision made for her and no friends in this country. And maybe,' says you—'maybe your ladyship will be remembering your ladyship's promise concerning her and give her a few pounds to keep her out of the workhouse,' says you.

"You'll make no bargain with her grace's ladyship, for his reverence was very particular about that. 'But what she likes to do she can do,' says he, and that's what I want you to get out of her—that she does something handsome."

Guy was half amused, half irritated. If it had been possible he would have told the man to find some one else to carry his mysterious letters.

"It may be that her ladyship will give you something in the way of gold or bank notes, and then you will give her the letter, and you will hand over the money, be it gold or be it bank notes, to my stepdaughter Nora."

"And I may not give her the letter till I get either money or the promise of money?"

The question was disconcerting to the dying man.

"You can say, 'This that I've got belongs to your honor's ladyship, and I'm bound to give it to you, but I'd be curious to l'arn what your intentions might be in the first place.' Wouldn't that do, now?"

"Perhaps it would," said Guy dryly. "And if she offers nothing? What am I to do in that case?"

The man on the bed twisted himself this way and that.

"That won't ever happen," said he.

"I should say it was very likely, and I want to know what I am to do if it does happen. Am I to give up the letter for nothing?"

The dying man did not answer. A sharp conflict seemed to be raging in his mind.

"I can't say it," he cried out at length, "and I dursn't say no." And then as a final compromise between conscience and interest he added, "Let her think you mean to stick to it unless she promises to treat the girl handsomely; but, if she won't, give it to her and tell her my curse will light on her and stay by her to the end."

"I doubt if her ladyship will care much for that," said Guy. "And a hanged unpleasant job it is," he added to himself.

"And, mind you"—Guy bent down his ear to listen, for the voice of the dying man became weaker every moment—"beware of the man with the droop in his left eye. Mind him!"

"Who is he? I don't know what you mean?"

"He is—he is the man—you've got—to mind."

It was evident that the poor man's mind was wandering. It was a relief to Guy when Nora returned, bringing with her an elderly woman who said she was a nurse.

Nora went straight into the sick room, and at the first glance she got of her father's face she gave a little cry of alarm and ran to him. Guy was slipping out of the room, but the dying man gave him a beckoning look which forced him to remain.

"You will do what you can for her?" he said anxiously to Guy. "She has no one, but you to look to."

"I will do my best," said Guy, and he seemed to be satisfied.

The end came soon. A few unconscious, convulsive struggles, and the spirit of Dennis Molloy had passed behind the veil.

CHAPTER III.

AT THE INQUEST.

The inquest held on the death of Dennis Molloy did not attract as much attention from the press or the public as might have been expected.

Of course Guy was the principal witness, and he had some difficulty in making up his mind as to what he should tell and what he should leave untold. The revolver he had picked up he had given to the police on the next morning as a matter of course, and he left them to draw what conclusions they liked from the fact of its being found on the scene of the crime.

The inquiry was held at Kingston, and Guy was pleased to see that few of the public had sufficient curiosity to be present. But there was one man who presented a striking figure and arrested Guy's attention at once.

He was an aristocrat, every inch of him, from his smartly trimmed gray hair to the tip of his patent leather shoes; an elderly man, belonging to a past generation, but evidently retaining a keen interest in the present. His face was thin, white and well shaped; his eye keen, bright and quietly alert. His hands lay on the table in front of him, one daintily gloved in kid, the other bare, white and delicate, yet unmistakably the hand of a strong man.

Guy was the first witness called by the coroner, and from his position in the witness box he had this man full in view, and as the coroner's pen traveled deliberately across the page of his big notebook he could not help wondering what the gentlemanly stranger was doing there. It seemed to Guy as if he were watching for some particular witness to step forward or for some special piece of evidence to be given. All the time Guy was giving his evidence the stranger kept his keen blue eyes fixed on his face, totally ignoring the efforts Guy made now and then to stare him out of countenance.

When the revolver was produced the aristocratic looking stranger exerted himself to get a sight of it and sank back into his chair with an air of satisfaction. To Guy, watching him keenly, it seemed that he had expected to see that particular weapon.

"This is not an ordinary revolver," said the coroner, handling it in gingerly fashion. "It is not the kind of weapon one would expect to find in the hands of a member of the criminal class."

"Good articles occasionally find their way to pawn shops," said a juryman, with a smile.

"That is very true," observed the coroner.

Guy looked at the distinguished stranger. He seemed pleased. And as Guy retired from the corner where the witnesses stood when being examined the pleased look broadened and deepened till he was actually smiling in Guy's face.

"It is plain that what I have said or not said has suited him down to the ground," thought Guy, and as he passed the stranger he met his look squarely. The aristocratic looking man treated his gaze with the indifference of contempt. His smile changed its expression. There was now in it a touch of mockery.

At that moment the coroner's voice was heard: "Is Miss Kildare there? Will you please step up here for a moment?"

The tall, slender figure dressed in black came slowly forward.

"So far as you are aware, Miss Kildare, had your father any private enemy?"

"Not that I know of, sir."

"Was he to your knowledge a member of any secret society?"

"Not to my knowledge, but I have sometimes thought that he had relations with persons of that kind, because he was so very reserved about his doings."

"Have you any reason to think that he met his death at the hands of a member of one of these secret societies?" asked the coroner after a pause.

And the witness paused, too, before she replied, "No; I have no reason for thinking that, except that just before he died I heard him make use of the expression 'I might have expected this.'"

A sound of indrawn breath was audible all over the room. It seemed as if the much wanted element of mystery and tragedy was at length to be supplied.

"You have gone through your father's papers?"

"Yes."

"Is there anything in any of them that can throw light upon this sad affair?"

"Nothing whatever. There were scarcely any papers."

"You said your father had been a farmer. Had he been long out of a farm?"

"Ever since we came over from Ireland, about three years ago. My father couldn't pay his rent, and we had to leave."

"What, then, did he do for a living?"

"He had a knowledge of many small trades, and he used to work at them if he could get a job."

"And you know of no one that could have injured your father or could have cherished a grudge against him?"

"No one, sir."

The girl's sincerity was written large in her innocent face and clear, candid eyes, but she threw no light upon the mystery, and the coroner was compelled to let her go.

The verdict, as a matter of course, was "willful murder, against some person or persons unknown."

As he left the building where the inquest had been held Guy looked around for Nora. She was a little way ahead, alone and walking rapidly.

"May I walk a little way with you?" he asked. It was intolerable to him to think of this friendless creature going back alone to her desolate home. She gave him permission with a look, and they went on together almost in silence till they reached the cottage in which Molloy had lived.

"May I come in for a minute?" he asked. "There is something I would like to say to you."

They went in, and Nora seated herself by the window, Guy standing near her. Signs of poverty were everywhere.

"You will forgive me, I hope," he said, "for asking what you intend to do, where you mean to live. Do you think of keeping on this house?"

She shook her head.

"I can't do that. I have no money to pay more than the month's rent. I did that yesterday. The landlord was very kind. He said that in the circumstances he should not expect any notice and that I could stay on for two or three days after the—after the funeral."

"Where do you mean to go when you do leave?"

"I cannot tell."

"Your father, I must tell you, intrusted me with a—a commission. I am to see some one who may, he thought, do something for you. But in my opinion he was building on a very uncertain kind of hope. I don't think you can trust to the person I am to meet doing anything for you. Suppose that it is so, how will you earn a living?"

"I can do nothing. I might be a servant, perhaps, if I could find a place."

Guy looked at her delicate fingers and thought that her life in the kind of situation she could expect would be almost unbearable.

"Have you no relatives in Ireland who could help you?"

"Not one that I know of. They are all either dead or gone to America or very poor."

"Well, we must wait and see whether the person your father wished me to see will do anything to help you find such a situation as you need. I will come tomorrow and tell you whether I succeed or not. And you must let me lend you a trifle in the meantime just to meet necessary expenses."

The girl drew back as if he had struck her and pushed his hand gently away. Her face was scarlet.

"Forgive me. I did not mean to hurt you," the young man said humbly. A slight shake of the head told him that he had not been misunderstood, and for that he was thankful.

"Goodby," he said, holding out his hand, this time empty. She gave him her hand frankly, but her look was like that of an offended princess as he moved toward the door.

CHAPTER IV.

THE TRYST.

A few minutes before 10 o'clock that night Guy entered Chestnut avenue by the Teddington gate. It was a dark night, and there was some fog. The avenue was quite deserted. He walked on slowly, keeping to the right hand side of the broad highway till he had passed the spot at which Molloy had told him the meeting would take place, and as yet he had met no one.

After pausing for a moment he retraced his steps, but the only person he passed was a stout elderly man wearing a short overcoat and a muffler about his neck. Again he turned and walked at a leisurely pace in his original direction, peering through the fog for the lady who, Molloy had told him, would meet him. But no woman was to be seen. Once more he passed the trysting place, and then he saw some one moving toward him. It was the elderly gentleman returning. Just as he approached Guy he stooped, and, picking up something that was lying on the ground, he said in a courteous tone, "Is this your handkerchief, sir?"

Guy felt in his pocket and answered "No."

"Then I suppose the old saw, 'Findings are keepings,' applies," he said, putting the handkerchief into his own.

Guy started. He had been told to expect a lady. Could this be a mere coincidence?

"So far as I am concerned—between you and me, that is—it is so," he replied.

The elderly gentleman, whose attitude had suggested his moving on immediately, stood still. He and Guy looked at each other in silence.

"I did not expect to find you mixed up in an affair of this kind, Mr. Lorimer," said the stranger.

Guy turned hot, and his fingers twitched, but he restrained himself. "May I not retort the same upon you?" he said quietly.

"By no means. I am a solicitor and am here only in the interests of my client."

"Who is she?"

"You ought to know, seeing that you came here, I suppose, prepared to do business with her. And if you do not know I certainly shall not be the one to tell you. But we are wasting time. I believe you have certain papers to deliver to me."

"Not to you, Mr. Merivale," said Guy sharply. "My instructions are to deliver them to a lady."

"So you know my name?" said the lawyer, with a smile, pushing the muffler down from his mouth.

"I did not recognize you at first, though I thought I knew your voice."

"Well, it is not the kind of business I am accustomed to," said the old gentleman stiffly. "But I like to oblige my clients if possible. You will be quite safe in handing the packet over to me, Mr. Lorimer."

"I have no doubt of that, but it is necessary that I should see your client."

"I am afraid that is just what you can't do, Mr. Lorimer."

Guy allowed himself to be piqued at the cool, not to say supercilious, manner assumed by his senior, and he replied sharply, "Then I am afraid it is of no use for us to continue this conversation."

"Upon my word, I am inclined to agree with you," said the lawyer. "I wish you good evening." And he turned away.

Guy replied in the same tone and turned in the opposite direction.

But before he had taken a dozen steps he began to ask himself whether he was acting wisely. He remembered that, although Molloy had been very anxious that he should get something for Nora, he had expressly said that it was not to be a condition of the return of the papers. They were to be returned unconditionally, and this direction he had promised to carry out. How could he do so if he let this opportunity go by?

These reflections made him slowly turn round, and it was some consolation to see gradually approaching through the fog the comfortable figure of the lawyer.

"It seems we both obey the law of attraction that draws us to this spot," began Mr. Merivale cheerfully. "The fact is we both want to deal, don't we? Well, I am prepared to pay any reasonable sum for certain papers"—

"Pray understand me," broke in Guy. "I have not the ghost of a notion what papers they are you speak of, and I don't even know that the papers I have with me are the documents you have in your mind. I can only say that I was asked by a dying man to deliver a certain packet into the hands of a lady who would meet me here at this hour and give me the signal which you gave me. I was to deliver the packet unconditionally—I admit that—but at the same time he was anxious that I should if possible secure some sort of terms, something that might be a slender provision for his stepdaughter, who is left almost destitute. That is the reason I was so anxious to see your client. I want to make a personal appeal to her on behalf of this girl."

The lawyer burst into an unpleasant chuckling laugh.

"And you really think it likely that my client will open her purse on behalf of the stepdaughter of a scoundrel who has been blackmailing her for years?"

"Blackmailing her for years!" echoed Guy.

"Now, you can see that it of no use for you to persist in seeing the lady," said the lawyer. "But I have no wish to be unreasonable, and I'll tell you what I will do. When I deliver the papers to my client I will tell her what you say and see whether I can get a few pounds for your client, if I may call her so. Is the young person quite without resources?"

"Absolutely. She has no relatives who can help her, and she is without money or friends or means of support."

"I will bear it in mind, Mr. Lorimer. What are the young woman's name and address?"

Guy gave the address and at the same time handed over the papers. Then the two men shook hands and parted.

On the following afternoon Guy left the Temple before his usual hour and took a train at Waterloo for Kingston. He was going to call on Nora and tell her of the ill success of his mission. And he intended at the same time to force her to accept a small loan from him to enable her to live until some definite plan could be made for her future.

He was drawing near the side street in which Molloy's cottage stood when he saw before him at a little distance a lady getting into her carriage.

"Can that be Lady Roscommon?" he said to himself. "Impossible! And yet the height, the figure, the shape of the lady's head and shoulders remind me irresistibly of her. What can she be doing in such a neighborhood as this? Well, it is no business of mine." And he went on his way.

Nora received him with her usual quiet, impassive manner, but he imagined from her heightened color that she was expecting good news, and he was grieved to disappoint her.

"I have no good news"— he began.

"Mr. Lorimer," interrupted the girl impulsively, "I behaved badly to you yesterday. After all your goodness too! I'm ashamed when I think of it, and I thought of it all last night and all this morning. It has seemed so long today till I could see you and beg your pardon."

"What on earth for?"

"For being so ungrateful and rude to you." And a quick blush stole over the girl's face and even tinged her tiny ears. Guy laughed.

"That's all nonsense," he said. "But it was naughty of you to refuse to borrow a trifle from me, and I hope you will show your penitence by taking it now."

"Oh, no, thank you very much. I have no need of it now. A lady has promised to take me to be her maid and I am to go to her tomorrow, so that really I am in no need of money. The lady gave me a quarter's salary in advance."

"Really? Well, Nora, you are in luck's way, and I congratulate you with all my heart. By the bye, who is the good fairy who has stepped in so opportunely?"

The girl's blush deepened till it became painfully intense. "She wished me not to mention her name," she stammered out.

"Oh, never mind," cried Guy hastily. "I ought not to have been so indiscreet as to ask questions."

"I am sure I have no objection to your knowing," Nora protested, almost in tears. "I would ever so much rather tell you, and it seems horrid not to"—

The Butcher Telephones

"YES, we have just received a car-load of fine Vermont turkeys; yes, I'll pick you out a nice one—about 10 lbs.? All right! Anything else to-day—celery, cranberries? We have some splendid cape berries. Four quarts? All right, much obliged. I'll see to putting up the order myself."

The enterprising butcher solicits business over the telephone. He tells his customers what he has.

The local Bell Telephone System helps him to get trade and the long distance helps him to hold it.

MINISTERS' APPEAL FOR HOSPITAL SUNDAY

As a committee of the Plainfield Ministers' Association, Revs. Drs. J. S. Zelie, J. A. Chambliss and Rev. C. L. Goodrich, today requested the publication of the following appeal for "Hospital Sunday:"

Editor, The Daily Press:—

You will be willing, we are sure, to grant space in your columns for a word from the Minister's Association. The association at the request of the finance committee of the hospital have arranged to have the third Sunday in February as hospital Sunday, hereafter, instead of the last Sunday in December. The under signed were appointed at the last meeting of the association to call the attention of the public to the fact that, in most of the churches, the annual offerings for the hospital are to be received next Sunday; and also, to suggest that the needs of the hospital require that the people should take these offerings more seriously. That they are not taken very seriously, is shown by the fact that the sum total of these offerings in all the churches is less that $1,000, a year. Each year the hospital expenses exceed the income from all regular sources by over $5,000. The deficit has been made up in the past by means of carnivals, fairs and kirmess. That these are wasteful and harmful methods both the finance committee and the Minister's association agree. The desire is that this needed five or six thousand dollars shall be secured without resorting to such methods. As one step to this end, the finance committee respectfully asks the churches to contribute at least $2,000 on these hospital Sundays. The asociation heartily endorsesthe appeal and urges all the churches to double their offerings for the hospital this year. The good work of the hospital needs no argument to the Plainfield public.

Respectfully,
J. S. Zelie, J. A. Chambliss, C. L. Goodrich, committee
February 14, 1911.

BUILDING ORDINANCE TO BE READ TONIGHT

The Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting under the direction of the councilmanic fire and building committee onight, when the proposed new building code will have its first reading. It is a lengthy document representing work covering a period of over a year and it will require the whole evening to read the code. Taxpayers are invited to attend the meeting.

The new code has been revised with great care, it being the purpose of the committee to bring it strictly up to date, providing for regulations for present-day methods of building constructions. The committee has held numerous sessions to which contractors have been invited to offer suggestions and in a great many instances ideas offered have been incorporated in the code. No action will be taken tonight, it being the intention of the committee to take the proposed ordinance up sometime in March.

Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the home of Mrs. A. C. Nickerson, 768 Kensington avenue.

PLAINFIELD ELKS WIN GREAT BOWLING MATCH

When the New Brunswick Elks bowling team left this city last night they carried with them the knowledge that Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, has a bowling team that is not to be sneezed at. The last game of the series of three was won by New Brunswick, but only by sixteen points while the other two games went to the home team by safe margins.

The defeat of the visitors was the more stinging because it was their first of the season. No other club has been able to win more than one game in any series until last night. The fine victory of the locals was due in large measure to the magnificent work of Johnny Campbell and V. W. Nash, Jr. Campbell went up from fourth place to second in the high average column while Nash jumped over the heads of thirteen of his competitors.

More than 150 men watched the game and it is safe to say that rooting such as was seen last night has never before occurred in a game on local alley. New Brunswick came over 60 strong in automobiles to root for their team, but none of their rooters was half so strong as those who were out for Plainfield. Time and again the fortunes hinged on the rolling of a single ball and in these tight squeezes, with the exception of the last frames 885 came out winner. The locals go to Rutherford for a game tomorrow night.

HOW HE GOT EVEN

With a Girl Who Refused Him

By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

"Your action toward me throughout this affair has been dishonorable," said Shotwell.

"I see no occasion for you to make any such charge. You proposed to me, and I asked for time in which to make a decision. Meanwhile I was studying you. Had you not accused me of treating you dishonorably I should not have given you the result of my observations. As it is, I will say that I have discovered traits in your character that I do not fancy."

"This is simply an invention to cover your duplicity. You know very well that you encouraged me, then threw me overboard."

With that he withdrew, inwardly vowing revenge. The girl, instead of considering a man who would take the position he had taken contemptible, was crushed at his charge, weeping hot, bitter tears.

Shotwell was suffering from what he considered unfair treatment and in no mood to look at the matter dispassionately. Had he done so he would have recognized the fact that no contract had been made between them. Miss Gwynne had not accepted him, and even if she had and afterward dismissed him he should have remembered that it is a woman's privilege to change her mind. But in this particular case the lady had refused him for reason. Beyond all this no man should take revenge on a woman for refusing him, whether for or without cause.

The rejected lover's path led across a district of the city where the lowest part of the community lived, or, rather, existed, for in such crowded tenements as are occupied by the poorer classes people cannot be said to live. Coming toward him he saw a man whose face and bearing belied his torn and dirty clothing.

"That fellow resembles Belding, the multimillionaire, for all the world," mused Shotwell. Then, suddenly caught by an idea, he turned and called:

"Hi! You there!"

The man faced about. Shotwell beckoned to him, and the two stood together on the sidewalk, when Shotwell began a series of questions.

"Have you ever been told you look like any one?"

"Not that I remember."

"Want a job?"

"What kind of a job?"

"Well, there's a bit of personation in it."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I know a young lady who I think wouldn't mind marrying a fortune. You very much resemble Howard Belding, the millionaire. How would you like to try it?"

The man looked Shotwell square in the face, but Shotwell could not tell how his proposition was received. For a moment he thought he saw a flash of indignation, but the first remark that came from the ragged man reassured him.

"I couldn't play a game like that in these rags."

"I'll dress you up like a gentleman."

"But how would I pass myself off for one with such ignorance as mine?"

"Oh, you've seen better days! I can tell that. Something has broken you down. What was it—liquor?"

"No; I don't drink."

"Well, do you accept?"

The man appeared to be thinking. Presently he asked:

"What is there in it if I don't succeed in marrying the girl?"

"I'll give you $500, besides what you need for spending money."

"All right. When shall I begin?"

Shotwell gave him an address at which he was to call at a certain hour the next day. When he appeared Shotwell had a wardrobe ready for him, and when properly dressed he certainly looked like a refined and intelligent man. Shotwell told him that Howard Belding, whom he was to personate, had inherited an estate of several million dollars, which he was giving to charity.

Having coached his man, Shotwell sent him away to form the acquaintance of Miss Gwynne. He instructed his decoy so far as possible as to the lady's idiosyncrasies, recommending him not to go too fast with her, and that he might not want for funds he instructed him to draw on his employer for reasonable amounts. The decoy was to report regularly through the mail.

Shotwell waited in vain for a report. A week passed, and he became impatient; two weeks, and he began to think he had been duped. The man had doubtless taken the good clothes and the money furnished him and decamped. But why no drafts came Shotwell could not imagine.

Unfortunately for Shotwell, he had broken with Miss Gwynne and therefore had no occasion to visit her. He knew several of her intimate friends and would have asked them if she were receiving attentions from any one, but he was himself known to have been attentive to Miss Gwynne, and any such questions from him would of course be impertinent. He went so far as to hang about the Gwynne domicile at hours when a visitor might be expected to call, but discovered nothing. He listened to all the gossip he heard, hoping he might hear something pertaining to the case. He was disappointed in all his attempts to learn if the man he had employed to do his work was doing it.

Finally he made up his mind that if a man resembling Mr. Howard Belding were paying marked attention to Miss Gwynne it would be known and he (Shotwell) would certainly hear of it. There was but one inference—the man had either gone off without even an attempt to make Miss Gwynne's acquaintance or he had betrayed his employer with a view to making capital with the young lady. Either of these propositions was sufficient to throw Shotwell into a fever. He fretted and worried and pried till at last he could stand the strain no longer and concluded to get away from it by making a trip abroad.

He came to this conclusion not only because he wished to get the matter off his mind, but because, having somewhat cooled, he felt that he had risked the respect of all good men and women who knew him. If the matter should be known he would rather be where he could not be called upon to face it. Perhaps by the time he returned, if any trouble came of it, it would have blown over. These considerations, however, did not seem to him of great importance, for he had little doubt that the fellow he had hired to personate Belding had simply pocketed the perquisites and left the job to take care of itself.

Three months after Shotwell had laid his plan for revenge upon Miss Gwynne he went to Europe. There after a time the matter he had come away to get rid of ceased to occupy the greater part of his attention, and eventually he thanked heaven that the man he had employed to revenge him had gone off without doing so. He was feeling much relieved when in Venice he met an acquaintance from America, who said to him, among other things:

"I hear your old flame, Virginia Gwynne, is to marry the rich young philanthropist Howard Belding."

Shotwell was astonished, terror stricken, that so long after he had repented of his meanness the damage had yet been done. He questioned his informer as to when the wedding was expected to come off, but received no satisfaction.

One desire now took possession of Shotwell—to reach America before Virginia Gwynne should full irrevocably into the trap he himself had laid for her. Making for Genoa, he found a steamer about to sail for New York. For two weeks he paced the deck, looking out on the same watery waste trying to stifle his impatience. They were the longest two weeks he had ever known. But at last the voyage was ended, and he hastened ashore, his first object being to learn if Miss Gwynne had married.

The wedding had not yet taken place.

Shotwell wrote his former love a note telling her that he had something of great importance to her welfare to communicate to her and asking for an interview. He received a brief reply appointing the next afternoon at 5 o'clock at her house. The clock was striking the hour when he mounted the steps leading up to her home and rang the bell. He was all of a tremor when he entered the drawing room, where he had had many happy tete-a-tetes with Miss Gwynne and where he had parted with her in anger. Presently she came in and stood with her hand resting on the back of a chair. He rose and stammered:

"Thank heaven I am not too late."

"For what?"

"To save you from marrying a man whom you suppose to be a gentleman, but who is really"—

"Heavens!"

"I am here to make a confession. On the day I left you I felt much aggrieved. I did that which, I admit, was unworthy of me. Seeing a man in rags who was the perfect image of Howard Belding, I persuaded him to personate that person to win your heart. But I never intended that the matter should go so far. And, not hearing from my man, in my cooler moments I congratulated myself that he had disappeared without taking any action."

Miss Gwynne stood for a moment as if trying to recover from the blow; then with one word, "Wait!" she left the room. In a moment Shotwell heard the ring of a telephone bell. He remained where he was for some minutes, when the front door opened and Miss Gwynne entered with her fiance.

"We've met again," said the man who had come in to Shotwell. "What have you to say against me?"

Shotwell was astonished at the man's assurance.

"You know what you are and of the bargain I made with you," said Shotwell.

"I know of the bargain most assuredly. As to myself, I am Howard Belding. When you met me that day I was endeavoring incog. to find out the needs of the poor. I was succoring. I could best do this in the costume of that region—rags. I have to thank you for being the means of my winning a lovely girl. I have never told her till now of her own escape by making known your contemptible conduct. Will you oblige me by vacating these premises?"

Shotwell stood for a moment looking at the man, wondering if there could be truth in his assertion.

"Prove what you say," he said presently.

The man turned to his affianced. "Do you require proof?" he asked.

"Proof? No. If that man said you were Mr. Belding I would require proof that you were what he said you were."

"Then, sir, I see no reason for you to interest yourself further in our affairs."

VERBAL MISHAPS.

Some Bad Breaks, of Which Charles Dickens Made Two In One Evening.

Charles Dickens once wrote to a friend: "I have distinguished myself in two respects lately. I took a young lady, unknown, down to dinner and talked to her about the bishop of Durham's nepotism in the matter of Mr. Cheese. I found she was Mrs. Cheese. Later I expatiated to the member for Marylebone, thinking him to be an Irish member, on the contemptible character of the Marylebone constituency and the Marylebone representative."

Two such mishaps in one evening were enough to reduce the most brilliant talker to the condition of the three inside passengers of a London bound coach who beguiled the tedium of the journey from Southampton by discussing the demerits of William Cobbett until one of the party went so far as to assert that the object of their denunciation was a domestic tyrant, given to beating his wife.

Much to his dismay the solitary woman passenger, who had hitherto sat a silent listener, remarked:

"Pardon me, sir. A kinder husband and father never breathed. And I ought to know, for I am William Cobbett's wife."

Mr. Giles of Virginia and Judge Duval of Maryland, members of congress during Washington's administration, boarded at the house of a Mrs. Gibbon, whose daughters were well on in years and remarkable for talkativeness.

When Jefferson became president Duval was comptroller of the treasury and Giles a senator. Meeting one day in Washington, they fell to chatting over old times, and the senator asked the comptroller if he knew what had become of "that cackling old maid, Jenny Gibbon."

"She is Mrs. Duval, sir," was the unexpected reply.

Giles did not attempt to mend matters, as a certain Mr. Tuberville unwisely did. Happening to observe to a fellow guest that the lady who had sat at his right hand at dinner was the ugliest woman he had ever beheld, the person addressed expressed his regret that he should think his wife so ill looking.

"I have made a mistake," said the horrified Tuberville. "I meant the lady who sat on my left."

"Well, sir, she is my sister."

This brought the frank avowal, "It can't be helped, sir, then, for if what you say be true I confess I never saw such an ugly family in the course of my life."—Youth's Companion.

A SMALL WORD.

It Has Only Two Letters, Yet It Is Not Easy to Define.

To define one word in the English language one modern dictionary takes eighteen columns of small type. And this solitary word upon which the dictionary bestows such a wealth of elucidation is one that hardly anybody except a dictionary maker can define at all. The ordinary educated, English speaking person's knowledge of it could be expressed in about half a single line.

This fecund word is "of." If you were asked to define it—unless you are a dictionary maker or of an allied trade—probably you would have to reply: "Of? Why, of just means of." You might add defensively, "I always comprehend perfectly what it means when I see or hear it and can use it correctly in speech, so what do I want to define it for anyway?"

But if you were a child your actual mastery of "of" would stand you in no stead whatever. You would be set to digging out and memorizing the things the dictionary had to say about it, or the driest and least informing of them, as, for instance, that in some cases it is such a kind of preposition and in other cases some other kind and that prepositions have such and such properties when they don't have some other, every bit of which you would absolutely and mercifully forget at the first possible moment. Look over a child's grammar or "language" lesson, with its ghastly array of useless bones.—Saturday Evening Post.

Persian Prayer Rugs.

About 200 years ago small embroidered rugs were largely made in Persia, chiefly at Ispahan. These were prayer rugs, and on each of them near one end was a small embroidered mark to show where the bit of sacred earth from Mecca was to be placed. In obedience to a law of the Koran, that the head must be bowed to the ground in prayer, this was touched by the forehead when the prostration was made, and so the letter of the law was carried out. The custom still prevails. The Persian women who weave the finest prayer rugs seldom weave any other kind of rug.

The Acme Eradicator

By CORNELIUS BARRY

"George," said Mr. Skinner, "you're an excellent young man, but you have no business shrewdness about you. When my girl marries I don't wish her to marry a man who is liable to slip up on providing. I wish her to have a husband who can make money. When I was your age my father gave me a thousand and told me to use it and my wits together. Out of that thousand I've made $20,000. No; I can't give you Grace. You're not sharp enough."

"But I haven't a father to give me $1,000," said George. "I haven't a father at all."

"Well, George," said the other, "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll lend you a dollar. Come and see me at the end of a year, and if I find you've done well with it I'll lend you a thousand. The dollar is only to try you without making any serious loss. The thousand will be to set you up. Then if after another year you have made your thousand grow I'll throw in Grace. I don't mean that you must make something out of nothing, but you must come pretty near it."

George took the dollar and his departure without making any further remark.

"Grace," said Mr. Skinner one day some months after this, "a man came into the office the other day and sold me a bottle of some stuff for getting grease out of clothes. I've spilled some gravy on my coat. You'll find the extractor in my bedroom closet. I wish you'd bring it and take out the gravy."

Grace brought a box containing a white paste and a small bottle. After reading the directions for application on the label she scraped some of the paste on to the grease spot on her father's coat, poured some of the liquid from the bottle on to the paste and rubbed it with a cloth. The mixture formed a frothy substance, which, on further application of the liquid, was easily rubbed away. But the grease spot remained.

It occurred to Mr. Skinner that he had been done by the man who had sold him the grease eradicator. Nothing in the world irritated the old gentleman so much as to find a man sharper than himself. "Acme Grease Eradicator!" he exclaimed contemptuously, reading from the label. "I'll bet it is a swindle, and if it is I'll go for the company that sells it. I'll have Ben Humiston analyze it." Humiston was a young chemist and Mr. Skinner's nephew.

A few days later the analysis came in. It was this: "Soap and water."

"Soap and water, eh! I reckon I can get a few thousand for keeping still anyway," remarked the old gentleman, and, sending for his lawyer, he commissioned him to see the Acme Grease Eradicator people and find out what they were willing to give for keeping their secret. The attorney did so and reported that the company were now using a different eradicator, that they would pay nothing for secrecy and were too rich for Mr. Skinner to punish. They were turning out tons of their eradicators daily, and it was sold in every city, town and hamlet in the country.

A few weeks after this his daughter reminded him that the year he had accorded her lover to make the dollar he had given him sprout was about to expire. Mr. Skinner remarked contemptuously that the dollar had doubtless long ago gone for cigarettes. That evening George called and tendered the loaned dollar.

"Well, George," remarked the lender, "I confess I never expected to see it again."

"You said, Mr. Skinner, that if I made it grow you'd lend me a thousand and if I made that grow you'd give me Grace."

"So I did, boy. Well, what have you done with it?"

"Made a million."

"A million grains of sand?"

"A million dollars."

Without regarding Mr. Skinner's puzzled look George told his story. With the dollar he had received he bought two cakes of white soap for 5 cents each. The soap he cut into candles and ran a wick through each candle. Five cents more he invested in a bottle and filled it with pure water. Fifty cents more went for a table. Then he went to a circus and began to take grease spots off the clothes of the people outside the show. The spots he made himself by spilling his "candle grease" on the clothes, and on the application of water resulting soapsuds washed it out. Such a demand was made for the grease eradicator that dozens of boxes could have been sold if they had been on hand to sell. But George took a partner and the next night did a good business."

"What did you call it?" asked Mr. Skinner eagerly.

"The Acme Grease Eradicator."

"Sold!" exclaimed the old man.

"We are now selling a real eradicator on the demand worked up with the soap and water, and a million wouldn't buy the plant and the business."

It took Mr. Skinner a long while to awake from the stupor occasioned by his wonder, a long while to realize that George was the Acme Grease Eradicator company and still longer to realize that he was not dreaming. Then he said:

"George, you're a razor. You may have Grace."

SAVED BY A PARROT

But There Were Links Between the Bird and the Outcome

By ANDREW C. EWING

On either side of New York harbor, commanding the Narrows, is a fort. That on the east shore is called Fort Hamilton, that on the west Fort Wadsworth. These forts are at all times garrisoned by United States troops.

There lived some years ago near Fort Hamilton a widow named Hammond, whose boy, Robert, growing up in close proximity to an army post, imbibed a taste for a military life. When he became eighteen years of age he went into the fort one day and enlisted and then went home and told his mother what he had done.

Robert Hammond was a steady young fellow and, having received a pretty good education, resolved to try for promotion through the noncommissioned to the commissioned grades. He had become a corporal when that happened which sometimes makes and sometimes breaks a man—he got a sweetheart. Nancy Alvord was about Hammond's age and a lovely girl. Nevertheless she was the cause of his getting into trouble.

Famous Coney Island, where there is a multitude of shows, is but a few miles from Fort Hamilton, and one summer day when the young soldier had leave to go where he liked between midday and 9 p. m. he called for Nancy, and together they stepped on an electric car for a visit to the island. Robert had money enough in his pocket to enable them to take in most of the shows, and so great was their enjoyment that the time passed more rapidly than they realized. The days were at the time at their longest, and this, too, had something to do with their mistaking the hour. At any rate, when there was still twilight they heard a clock strike 9.

Robert's heart sank within him. His leave had expired, and he would not be able to reach the fort in less than half an hour. He would be "broken"—that is, reduced to a private—and his dream of becoming a commissioned officer was at an end. At any rate, he would be obliged to begin all over and by a long period of good behavior get again in line.

"Very well, Nancy," he said; "I may as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb. We'll stay here as long as we like."

Nancy endeavored to induce him to go back at once, but he would not. So they ordered a supper and after that continued to enjoy themselves at the various places designed for the double purpose of giving people pleasure and getting their money. When the money was mostly spent they took a car and went home. Passing a saloon kept by one Murphy, Robert wished to go in and get a glass of beer, but Nancy dissuaded him. Robert left her at her house, then went to his mother's.

Though it was late, Mrs. Hammond was just about going to bed. Robert told her that he had broken his leave. Mother-like, she persuaded him to go to his own room that he had occupied as a boy and remain there overnight. He did so and in the morning overslept. Then his mother begged him to take breakfast at home. By the time he reached the fort it was long past reveille roll call.

Robert was put in arrest. And what was his astonishment when told that the saloon keeper, Murphy, had been murdered the night before, that some shreds of blue uniform and several army buttons had been found near the body and a soldier answering his description had been seen near the saloon.

The young soldier was troubled only at the prospect of being reduced to the ranks. There could be no doubt of his proving that he had not been in Murphy's saloon and that he had been with his sweetheart and later with his mother. He gave the captain the address of both women and told him to go and ask his mother and Nancy if he had not been with them during the night of the murder.

The officer, in order that there might be no collusion between Robert and the others, said nothing about the charge of murder to either woman in order to better conceal his object. He told them that the soldier was in danger of being tried for desertion. Both women knew enough of army offenses to understand that desertion was a serious charge. Neither knew what reason Robert had given his superiors for his absence, and both feared to say anything about him for fear of disproving what he had himself said. The consequence was that both denied having seen him the night before.

This was quite enough to convict him, if not of the murder, certainly of falsely accounting for his absence. He was turned over to the civil authorities to be tried for murder.

It would be impossible to give an idea of the anguish of the mother and sweetheart when they learned of the real charge that had been made against the son of the one and lover of the other and that they had put it out of their power to prove an alibi for him and in this way establish his innocence. They were visited by Robert's attorney and questioned. It was evident to them that he did not believe the reason they gave for telling his captain that they had not seen him during the night of the murder, and it would not have made any difference if he had believed them. They had made a statement and could not contradict it before a jury and expect the contradiction to be considered evidence.

Nancy Alvord, after her terror at her lover's position and her chagrin at having denied that she had been with him had in a measure subsided, began to think of some way to prove the untruth of her first story. This led her to read carefully the newspaper accounts of the murder, and she saw that Murphy's watch, which was found in his vest pocket, had stopped at thirty-seven minutes after 10. She remembered hearing a clock strike 11 while on the car returning from the island. This was fixed in her mind by the fact that she expected a scolding on her return home for having stayed out so late.

The civil authorities considered that Murphy's watch marked the time of his death. The murder occurred in an upper room used for card playing, no one but the murderer and the murdered man being present. That there had been a scuffle was evident from the shred of uniform and buttons picked up on the floor. The watch had undoubtedly stopped during this scuffle. At thirty-seven minutes after 10 on that eventful evening, with a limit of ten minutes either way, Robert and Nancy had been among the shows at Coney Island. They had passed Murphy's saloon at about twenty minutes past 11. Had Nancy not been handicapped by her first statement she could have told a perfectly straight story that would have tallied with the facts and exonerated her lover.

The next move she made was to go to Coney Island and visit the attendants upon the various shows with a view to finding some one who had seen her there with a soldier and if possible to secure that soldier's identification as Robert Hammond. She went over the ground, but found no one who remembered her or her soldier escort.

As the day for the trial drew near the result looked black for the young soldier. His mother was in agony over the situation, which was rendered more excruciating by the fact that in her effort to shield her son she had put it out of her power to save him.

The morning before the trial Nancy was sitting by her open window overlooking the lower bay, trying to think of her problem. A woman came to a window of the house opposite and hung a parrot cage containing a parrot beside the window. The woman left, and the parrot began to chatter.

Nancy jumped from her seat, dashed into an adjoining room, seized her hat, flew downstairs out into the street and boarded a car for Coney Island.

What she did there will appear at the trial, which was called in the criminal court the next day.

A jury had been impaneled and the prosecutor had stated the case for the state and had produced his witnesses. They were but few and stated only what has been thus far given. Then the prisoner's counsel took up the case for the accused, calling him to the witness stand. He asked Robert a number of irrelevant questions not apparently bearing on the case, requiring him to give long explanations. Finally the state attorney objected to the questioning as irrelevant, and the judge sustained the objection. Then the counsel called Nancy to the witness stand and pursued exactly the same course with her till another objection was raised and sustained.

"Where were you," asked the counsel of Nancy, "on the night of the 16th of June between 10 and 11 o'clock?"

"At Coney Island."

"Who was with you?"

"The accused, Robert Hammond."

"That will do."

At a sign from the attorney a phonograph was brought into court and set on a table. An operator put its machinery in motion, and a voice, plainly Nancy's, began to talk. What had been spoken in the machine was of no importance, detached sentences expressive of the pleasure to be derived at visiting Coney Island.

Then another voice was switched on. Every one started. It was the voice of Robert Hammond.

"I'm a soldier, I am. Got leave till 9 o'clock, and here I am at 10:30 talking into a phonograph machine. I'll be broke tomorrow, I will. My chevrons will come off, and I'll serve the balance of my enlistment as a high private in the rear rank. Come, Nancy; let's get along to the next show."

"Your honor," said the counsel for the defense, "I made the jury familiar with the voices of my two witnesses that they might recognize them in this phonograph, which I propose by its operator to prove received the voices at Coney Island about the time the murder was committed."

Robert was acquitted. He had been saved by the squawky voice of the parrot that had brought to Nancy's mind the phonograph, thus suggesting that they had talked in one on that eventful evening.

Robert Hammond's captain was so chagrined at the jeopardy in which he had placed the young man by the way he had approached his mother and sweetheart for evidence that he interested himself in the soldier's behalf, promoting him rapidly as a noncommissioned officer and coaching him for his examination for lieutenant. Hammond, with his wife, Nancy, are now stationed on the Pacific coast.

The murderer of Murphy turned out to be a militiaman who had been off on an excursion with his company. He had gone to Murphy's saloon, played and lost to Murphy himself and in a burst of passion killed him. Acting suspiciously, he was finally accused of the murder, tried and convicted.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 19, 1911.

Topic.—Serenity; how to get it; what it accomplishes.—John xiv, 1, 27; xvi, 33. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Serenity is a new word in the Christian language, but its meaning is well understood. To thoughtful and observing people it is just as evident that serenity is a Christian grace that is greatly needed in the present age. If we had more serenity and less strenuosity in our lives we would live longer and enjoy it much better while we do live. "The strenuous life" is a good gospel to preach to a few people here and there who are always serene, sometimes to the verge of laziness. But Christ in speaking of the serene life, as when he said, "Let not your hearts be troubled," had no such idea in mind. The American darkies as a class are about the most untroubled race of people in the world. It may rain or shine, prices may be high or low, they may not know where their next meal is to come from or where they are to sleep the next night, they may meet with losses and bereavement, yet their hearts are ever light, and they sing on with their fine musical voices just the same. Their improvidence could not be surpassed, yet it never stops the joyous laughter, yet it peals forth, ofttimes as sweet as the chimes of silver bells. They seem like children, totally incapable of appreciating the seriousness of the responsibilities of life. Such serenity Christ did not speak of, and yet sometimes we could almost feel a desire, for awhile at least, to just throw off life's cares and sorrows, forget them all and have no troubled hearts and wearied minds.

Life is strenuous, and the honest man who wishes to support his family and meet all their obligations simply could not throw off thought concerning them. But the trouble is over mental anxiety. It will pay no bill nor advance business; rather the reverse, for it unfits for the best efforts of our lives. Worrying throughout the night and tossing sleeplessly about weaken a man's working ability for the next day. The brain is not clear and the nerves at their best after a night of tossing and worrying through the night. Yet these, through refreshing sleep, help us to greater cheer and give us great power to face the problems of life and overthrow them. A cheerful heart is better than medicine and an untroubled mind a greater help than all the worried minds in the world. Business men do not fail or become nervous wrecks or die of heart disease as a result of overwork, but over worry. In this age we are living too fast, craving for greater daily results, and under such circumstances we should mingle serenity with strenuosity. Leave business behind when the office door or factory or business house is closed. Then spend the evening serenely with the family at home or among congenial friends. Seek Christ's help to make you forget the day's labors, retire early and get a good night's sleep. The next day a new man will enter the place of business, and it will not be found to be such a bugbear after all.

When troubles and sorrows come through the loss of loved ones or adversities do not shut them up in your hearts. Speak to friends about them, get their sympathy, feel the thrill of "Cheer up" and "The Lord bless you," and these things will quiet your minds and hearts. Above all, go to Christ and by faith in Him study His words, "Let not your heart be troubled," "Peace I leave with you." Divine grace is man's greatest comfort in the midst of any trial or tribulation, and through this we win the white robes of our Heavenly Father's home.

READ BLDG. CODE

Proposed Ordinance is Placed Before The Common Council.

IT MEETS WITH APPROVAL.

Measure Likely to Be Passed in Its Present Form at March Meeting of the City Fathers.

The new building code which has been in course of preparation for more than a year by the councilmanic fire and building committee, received its first reading at an adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night. It was simply read for general information by Clerk J. T. MacMurray, it being the intention of the committee to move action on the code sometime during March.

During the months that the committee has been working on the code, it has invited contractors and builders to meet with them from time to time so that they might offer suggestions and some of these suggestions have been incorporated in the code.

The code is drafted to meet present-day methods of construction in this city, many new ideas and materials having been adopted during the past ten years. The committee believes that the code covers all essential points fully, placing the proper restrictions on construction work.

The provision referring to the storage of explosives and combustibles is not included in the code, it being drafted in a special ordinance.

Although the committee was guided in a measure by the old building code in drafting the present one, this code did not provide for the construction of such a structure as the Frost building, but the new one covers it in all important details.

The new code is important especially in this particular that it clearly specifies what can and what cannot be done and gives specific details to follow the same as an architect's plans. This was not true of the old code. It clearly sets forth the duties and powers of the building inspector, giving him the power to deny any application without a hearing, or may fix a date for a hearing upon such application, but shall, as soon as a decision is rendered, enter an order thereon.

The code also covers applications, plans and drawings; ordinary repairs without notice; demolishing buildings; classification of buildings and construction; quality of materials; specifications for timber required; general requirements; test of materials, strength of columns and temporary supports, excavations, footings and foundations, adjoining party walls, bearing capacity of soil; classification of soils, masonry, existing walls, chimneys, flues and fire places; heating pipes and apparatus; valuts, areas and cellars, cellar partitions in buildings; entrances, stairs, fire stairs and escapes, fire shutters, stand pipes and sprinklers; enclosures for elevators, stairways, dumbwaiters and shafts; mansard roofs, roofings, cornices, gutters, metal fronts, tanks, pent houses, bulkheads and scuttles, skylights and floor lights.

The code is further intended to cover light and ventilation, sheds over sidewalks, outside scaffolds, structural steel and iron, fireproofing and fireproof buildings, floors, fire profing columns, girders, and fireproof partitions; reinforced concrete construction and test of fire profing; timber construction and woodwork; frame structures; builders' huts, piazzas, balconies, bay windows, spires and towers, and at great length provides for the construction of theatres and places of amusement, the provisions being unusually strict and safeguarding the public in every way possible against fire or accident. The code further makes provision for the erection of frame buildings within the fire limits.

There is nothing in the code to prevent the erection of what are commonly known as "shacks," and according to Building Inspector T. O. Doane, the city cannot prevent persons from putting up these "shacks." So far as known the code meets with the approval of a majority of the contractors and builders of the city.

A Birthday Surprise.

Twenty-five friends from this city, Somerville and Dunellen tendered a surprise party to Mrs. John Cope, at her home on Prospect avenue, Dunellen last night. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Benjamin Snyder, of Plainfield, and was in honor of the guest of honor's birthday. Music and dancing were enjoyed and as special features, piano solos were given by Mrs. Henry Phillips and Mrs. Helen Homan, while Henry Phillips and Ben LaVere contributed recitations. The party terminated at midnight with the serving of refreshments.

ITALIANS BOUGHT HARD CIDER, WHY?

The cider mystery has been solved. The disposal of the twenty-five barrels of cider (which may have turned into vinegar) is no longer enshrouded in doubt and "thereby hangs a tale."

When Frederick Dunn failed in business about three years ago and after the goods had been sold, he turned over his lease to the owner of the building leaving it and whatever may have been its contents in her absolute possession. Mr. Dunn evidently forgot the stock of barrelled "delight" in the cellar.

A tour of inspection of the building's owner revealed the presence of the cider and she immediately took steps to have it removed. The janitor, John Lasker, offered to dispose of it for money when the owner of the building suggested letting the stuff go out through the sewer and given permission he proceeded to sell the good barrels to several Italian shop keepers in the city obtaining for the stuff about $18, of which he received $1.50 from the building's owner for his part of the sale.

The carting of the barrels was done by a local man. It looks very much as though Mr. Dunn were responsible for John Phillips' cider or vinegar.

SPEAKING CONTEST AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Preliminary declamations preceding the final selection of contestants in the prize speaking contests in the Plainfield High School took place Tuesday afternoon and resulted in the selection of four boys and four girls whose speeches are limited to prose and blank verses. The final contest will be held at the annual Alumni reception on February 22.

These are the contestants and subjects: Pauline Gates, "The Unknown Speaker;" Alice Mehl, "A Perfect Tribute;" Margaret Russell, "Toussaint L'Overture;" Dorothy Smith, "Chariot Race from Ben Hur;" Frank Cullen, "Rienzi's Address to the Romans;" Edward Hanrahan, "Spartacus;" Wilbur Tovell, "Cassius speech to Brutus;" Sewell Ulrich, "The American Flag." Others competing in the class were Grace Gray, Rosamond Carey, Benjamin Burse, Sidney Karr and Fred Van Heusen. The winners were chosen by a committee of the faculty.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT IONA'S DANCE

The annual masquerade dance of Iona Council, No. 32, Degree of Pocohontas, was given in Sebring's Hall, last night, and proved successful in every way. The attendance was close to 200, several out of town delegations being noted in addition to the local contingent. Many of the dancers were garbed in fanciful costumes.

Music for the occasion was furnished by Suhr's Imperial orchestra and an attractive program was on the card. Refreshments were served during the evening. Among the neighboring councils represented were Menemoosha and Opeechee, of Elizabeth, and Nariticong, of Somerville.

Those in charge of the affair were the following: Charles L. Holstein, chairman; Mrs. Violet Ludgate, secretary; Charles F. Meyer, Jr., Jerry Griffin and Frank Schropfer, floor committee; Miss Ella Sebring, Miss Viola Stults, Miss Anna Bowden, George Ivins and Evan Pearson, reception committee.

WHIST PARTY IS HELD BY THE LOCAL Y. M. H. A.

Under the auspices and for the benefit of the Young Men's Hebrew Association and by the direction of Mrs. W. Newcorn, a successful whist party was held in Sebring's Auditorium, yesterday afternoon. There were twelve tables and the play was spirited throughout. There were many handsome prizes, all being donated by merchants for which the women in charge are thankful.

Aside from the whist, the social features were greatly enjoyed. After the play refreshments were served by a committee. Mrs William Newcorn was awarded a silk skirt, and among the prize winners were Mrs. Arthur Dreyfus, Miss Nettie Newcorn, Miss Leichtentritt, and the Misses Cline and Mrs. Heckle, of Somerville; Mrs. Schneider, Mrs. Milton Mendil, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Beidelman. Mrs. Schneider was also presented with a fine cake. The net proceeds to be given to the association are $75.

LICENSE PROTESTS

Ministers' Association and the W. C. T. U. Make General Remonstrances.

BOTH ARE ORDERED FILED.

Common Council Will Meet on Monday February 27, When All the Present Licenses Will Be Renewed.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association, in a communication sent to the Common Council, last night, entered a protest against the granting of liquor licenses, "but if in the judgment of the councilmen the time has not yet arrived for refusing to grant all licenses," it urges that the present policy of refusing to increase the present number be continued, and that no new licenses be granted. It also favors the appointment of a Board of Protectors, as suggested by the Mayor. A similar protest was received from the Women's Christian Temperance Union, representing two hundred women. Both communications were received and on motion of Chairman Wilson of the license committee, were ordered filed.

The Council also received a communication from Frederick Martin, clerk of the Borough Council, inclosing the resolution recently adopted by that body, putting itself on record as opposed to any further action relative to the consolidation and annexation of Plainfield and North Plainfield. The communication was filed.

Mr. Mygatt moved that the rules of the Council for 1910 be adopted as the rules of the body for 1911. This action was in accordance with a notice given at a meeting early in January.

After the meeting, the members of the license committee held a meeting to consider further the liquor applications, which were presented last week. It is the purpose of the city fathers to meet on Monday night, February 27, to take action on these licenses.

It is the general opinion that favorable action will be taken on the twelve applications, the same number as last year. There is only one new applicant that of Peter Floersch, of Perth Amboy, who applies for the Iroquois Hotel, where Jerome Leary is now located.

TWO TRAVELING MEN MEET IN ODD WAY

The oft-repeated expression that "the world is a small place after all" was demonstrated in an odd way at Timbo's restaurant yesterday afternoon. Galen Thatcher, salesman for the C. H. Bishop Company, of Newark, who is well known to Plainfielders, dropped in the place for lunch and while waiting for his order to be served began conversing with Archie Davie. He mentioned the fact that he had just returned from a trip to Eureka, Montana, when he visited his brother, the chief of police in the town.

"I beg your pardon," said a diner nearby, "but might I ask the name of your brother?"

When told it was Thatcher he inquired further, "Harry Thatcher?"

"Why, yes," was the surrpised exclamation of the Newarker, "do you know him?"

"Well, I should say I do," the stranger replied, "and I shall never forget him. Harry Thatcher did me a good turn when I got stranded in Eureka some time ago and I won't forget him in a hurry. I'm delighted to meet his brother under these peculiar circumstances. Have a cigar."

The weeds were passed and Mr. Thatcher and the inquisitor formally introduced themselves. The latter was also a traveling man and after giving the usual sign of Knights of the Road the two enjoyed a reminiscent chat.

Sunday-School Class Social.

Sunday-school Class, No. 2, of Trinity Reformed church, of which Philip A. Vroom is the teacher, held a Valentine sociable, Tuesday evening, at the residence of Mrs. John Hoffman, 686 West Front street, one of the members of the class. There were eighteen members present. During the evening the members were given fifteen minutes in which to make a valentine. Mrs A. K. Willett received first prize and the booby prize was given to Miss Amelia Schnelendrussler. Refreshments were served and all had a jolly good time.

POLICE COURT ROW

Chief's Suggestion Incenses Judge Who Says He May Prefer Charges.

"MY COURT" SAYS DEMEZA.

Kiely's Statement That He Would Give His Share of Fine as Informant to Charity Arouses the Court.

Some commotion was caused in court this morning when City Judge William G. DeMeza, taking offense at an offer by Police Chief P. S. Kiely to divide the fine imposed on John V. Madden for keeping a gambling place by giving his share to some charitable institution, rebuked the chief.

The proposition plainly angered Judge DeMeza, who told Chief Kiely that such a suggestion in court was distinctly out of place.

"I only offered it as a suggestion," responded Kiely.

"This is my court, not yours, Mr. Kiely, and I don't want any suggestions from you."

The chief immediately repaired to his office and it was necessary for Judge DeMeza to halt court proceedings in another case in order to call the chief in again to swear witnesses.

Later in the day Judge DeMeza declared that he was resiously considering the matter of preferring charges against Chief Kiely before the Police Board.

CALL FOR PASTOR

Dutch Church of Colombo and Ceylon After Rev. Mr Broek.

CONSIDERED A BIG HONOR.

Foreign Flock Wants to Know Whether Trinity's Pastor Would Consider a Formal Call.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has received a letter from the Dutch Church of Colombo and Southern Ceylon, asking him whether he would be willing to consider a call to the pastorate of one of the churches there. Mr. Broek has made no decision in the matter, but it is understood that if he will consider the call favorably he will receive a call. This is considered flattering as these Dutch churches are among the oldest in the world, in fact, it is stated that the oldest Protestant organization in all the Orient is the Wolfendaal Consistory of Colombo.

Organized in 1642 it has had a continuous existence since and its records tell of baptisms and professions of faith from that date to this. The present church building, built in 1749, when the first building was declared unsafe, is a large, stately building that can accommodate 1,200 people if necessary.

These churches are now more or less isolated, but are desirious of uniting with the Reformed church in America. The congregations are made up of the best people, men prominent in all the best professions and women who are active in leading affairs.

POLEN AND CHAPMAN COMMITTED TO JAIL.

John Polen and Charles Chapman, the two borough young men arrested for breaking into Fred Martin's bungalow, were arraigned before Justice Snape, yesterday afternoon. They pleaded guilty and were committed to the county jail to wait the action of the grand jury. Bail may possibly be fixed by the higher court.

Polen was also accused of breaking into Charles Neier's summer home on Johnson's drive but refused to admit his guilt. He declared the gun taken from the place had been sold to him by a man named Martin, but the police cannot locate the latter. Chapman told chief Weiss, last night, that Polen is guilty of another affair that of stealing the copper telephone wire leading from the King's Daughters camp, to Somerset street. This is being looked into and will be used against him.

"Mammy's S'prise."

"Mammy's S'prise," will be presented by the Junior Auxiliary of the Holy Cross church in the parish house, Thursday evening, February 23, at 8 o'clock. There will also be a candy sale.

RAID A POOL ROOM

Its Proprietor, John Madden, Fined $25 in the Police Court.

CRAPS WAS THE GAME THERE.

Sixteen are Caught in the North Avenue Place But are Discharged by the Court.

Seventeen young men including John V. Madden, proprietor of a billiard and pool room on North avenue, were arrested in a raid conducted in person by Chief of Police Kiely, yesterday afternon and this morning arraigned in the city court for sentence. Madden was fined $25 and warned that a second conviction would result in a fine of $100 and a stay of thirty days in the county jail. The others were given suspended sentences.

Many complaints have been received lately against Madden's place but is has been almost impossible to get evidence against it. The complainants stated that gambling was a sort of continuous performance in the room and that young men of all ages were in the habit of gathering there for the sole purpose of risking their money on the throw of the dice in a game known as craps.

There was always a lookout stationed in front of the place or in the window which is piled high with cigarette advertising boxes, but yesterday the sentinel slept at his post and gave the chief the opportunity he has so long sought. In company with Patrolman George Dobson, he opened the door suddenly just after 4 o'clock and so thunderstruck was the crowd that none could move for a moment and that instant was just enough to give the chief all the evidence he wanted. The lookout however, escaped.

The whole gang was placed under arrest and marched to headquarters and Judge DeMeza sent for. He accepted a plea of non-vult from Madden and discharged the rest and this morning imposed sentence on Madden.

Edward Carty who was taken with the rest of the prisoners, it is said, happened to be unfortunate in being included. He had just left the train at the North avenue station and had stopped at the cigar counter to buy a cigar when Chief Kiely popped into the door.

MRS. ZOOK'S TEA GIVEN FOR GUEST

Mrs. Morris Alexander Zook, of East Sixth street, gave a delightful reception and tea, yesterday afternoon in honor of her aunt, Mrs. L. C. Schenck, of Vevay, Indiana, who is visiting her for several weeks. The house was attractively decorated, the color scheme being red and white. There were also a profusion of flowers.

Mrs. Zook and Mrs. Schenck were assisted in receiving by Mrs. H. B. Coombe, Mrs. Thomas S. Davis, Mrs. W. K. Mackey. Those in the dining rom were Mrs. Charles Franklin, Mrs. Arthur M. Harris and Mrs. L. H. VanBuren and those assisting were Miss Ethel Colton, Miss Lucie Budlong, Miss Helen Davis and Mrs. George Endicott, Jr.

MASQUERADE BARN DANCE FOR ST. JOSEPH'S BENEFIT.

A masquerade barn dance was given in Debele's Hall, last night for the benefit of St. Joseph's church building fund. It was largely attended by young people from the city and borough and other places. The first women's prize for women's costume was awarded Miss Anna Miltner and second to Miss Mary Caulfield. Lawrence Exner won first men's and M. V. Mersch second. Music was furnished by Paroubek's orchestra.

The affair was arranged by Mrs. M. J. Whelan, assisted by a committee from the church.

Miss Vroom Breaks Her Arm.

Miss Wilhelmina Vroom, of 334 East Sixth street, is detained at her home with a broken arm, the result of an accident Friday night, when she fell on the slippery sidewalk near her home. The broken bones have been set, but it will be some time before Miss Vroom will again have the use of her arm.

HOSPITAL PUBLICITY FAVORED BY MAYOR

Mayor G. W. V. Moy, an ex-officio member of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, attended the monthly meeting of the board, Tuesday night, and spoke of the good work the hospital is doing. He said he believed it would receive greater support if the people were kept fully informed of its activties.

The finance committee reported many new subscriptions in response to the recent appeal by circular, and it was hoped that many $5 or even $1 subscriptions would be received. It was stated that in the last six months of 1910, 45 per cent. of all the work done at the hospital was absolutely free of cost to patients who could not afford to pay, and it was the opinion that it is this kind of charity the people should interest themselves in and feel some responsibility for.

Attention was also called to the fact that next Sunday will be "Hospital Day" in the churches and it was hoped that a generous amount would be received for the work. Last year the operating expenses of the hospital were $38,000 and the regular income $2,000. It was also reported that the contract for installing the refrigerating plant had been made and the work will be started soon.

TARDY IN CLEANING SNOW OFF SIDEWALKS

An advertisement from the Street Commissioner in this issue shows that the work of removing snow from sidewalks is not being attended to as promptly as formerly. Part of this neglect may be ascribed to carelessness, part to the idea which prevails that it is cheaper to have the city do the work, even if the public is inconvenienced by the delay, and part (only a small part, it is believed) to the desire on the part of tenants to have the cost of the work charged in the taxes of the owner of the property.

There will always be vacant properties requiring the attention of the city men, but the intention is to have all persons attend to the removal of snow in front of their respective properties.

There are four gangs, one in each quarter of the city, at work clearing the snow away today, but it will be several days before they can finish the work.

TO PAY $8 PER WEEK FOR FAMILY'S SUPPORT

Henry F. Johnson, 404 New street, was put under bonds this morning to furnish his wife Annie F. Johnson $8 per week for the support of herself and her 13 months old baby. The complaint was made against Johnson by Overseer-of-the-Poor Alexander Ayers who was represented by S. S. Swackhamer. Johnson's council was Daniel F. Applegate, who made his first appearance as a lawyer this morning.

In answer to the complaint, Mr. Johnson said that on September 6 last he had offered his wife a home with him at his present address and that she had absolutely refused the offer. He also said that he had voluntarily paid his wife $8, $5 for the wife and $3 for the support of the baby. These payments had been kept up until December 22 when it was finally seen that his wife would have nothing further to do with him.

Mr. Ayers said that Mrs. Johnson had made application to him for support for the child owing to the fact that she was not receiving anything from her husband and she was a burden upon her father, J. H. Borman, of Warrenville. Mr. Borman corroborated Mrs. Johnson.

Johnson declared that his reason for wanting to leave the old address, 414 West Third street, was that he was constantly having trouble with his father-in-law. The trouble was evident from a letter which was offered in evidence by Mr. Swackhamer in which Johnson told Mr. Borman that he was going to leave his house and that he might go ahead and make all the trouble he wanted. The other parts of the letter disclosed financial difficulties of Johnson in which Mr. Borman was interested as a creditor.

Mrs. Emma Nelson and Mrs. F. A. Weber, of West Fourth street, corroborated Johnson's statement as to offering his wife a home, but Judge DeMeza said that the defendant should support his wife and child and ordered the bond made out. Meantime Johnson was put in a cell.

TEACHER IN DEBT

George F. Murphy, Files a Petition in Bankruptcy in New York.

HIS LIABILITIES $129,882.

While neither creditors, tenant, employees nor the Board of Education seemed to have any idea today where to find George Francis Murphy, a teacher in the New York public schools at a salary of $1,425 a year, who has filed a petition in bankruptcy, giving his liabilities as $129,882 and his assets as $83,205, he is taking life easy at his home, No. 842 East Front street, here. When seen last night by a representative of this paper he claimed that his name was Franklin Murphy and that he did not even know any George Francis or George F. Murphy. Denial was also made by him that he is a New York school teacher and when asked the question as to his occupation he said bluntly that "it is none of your business."

Mr. Murphy, who has resided at the East Front street address for two years with his wife and sister, asserted that he lived there off and on with a sister. In answer to the question, Mr. Murphy alleged that he had not failed and that he knew nothing about the matter. He denied that he owned any property in New York.

Later in the evening, when the teacher was asked for over the telephone, he answered the call by saying: "Mr. Murphy has gone to bed." When told that the speaker was Mr. Murphy he did not deny his identity but all he would say was to refer the newspaperman to his New York lawyer.

Murphy gives his address in his petition as No. 2756 Third avenue, New York, and this is his address on file at the Board of Education, as well as the address appearing in the New York City Record. But no one about the place would admit knowing where he lives, and it was said there he only comes around occasionally to get his mail.

In his list of assets are the row of six-story apartment buildings, No. 1443 to No. 1474 Washington avenue, the Bronx, valued at $80,000 and mortgaged for $66,000; life insurance policies amounting to $2,600 and debts due amounting to $200. Of the claims against this $91,664 are secured and the balance unsecured. The Consolidated Board of Brokers, No. 320 Broadway, New York, appears as creditors in the sum of $36,000, unsecured.

The janitor at the Third avenue building in New York, said Mr. Murphy once owned the building, but he couldn't say whether he still owned it. One mail-box in the hallway has the names, "Cooper-Murphy," but a person living in the apartment said Murphy did not live there and could only be communicated with by mail. He said he knew nothing about him except that he called occasionally for his mail.

At the Washington avenue houses the janitor gave the name of a man who collected the rents, but this man, who said his name was Galvin, declared he hadn't seen Murphy for a month. He declined to tell where the money collected for rents was sent.

In the City Record George F. Murphy appears as assistant instructor at Public School No. 147, at Henry and Gouverneur streets, appointed Dec. 1, 1904. It is intimated that steps will be taken by the department to obtain something a little more definite.

A co-partnership directory says that the officers of the Consolidated Board of Brokers, which appears as Mr. Murphy's creditor for $36,000, are Herman Feinberg, president, and Maurice I. Strunsky. Both of these men said yesterday that they are no longer connected with the organization, and had never heard of Mr. Murphy.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Attacked by a dog Tuesday, Harry N. Wilson, fifteen years old, of Gloucester City, was bitten on the right arm, and the wound was cauterized at Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Taking poison in mistake for indigestion tablets, Mrs. J. Hermann, twenty-three years old, of 202 Burns street, Camden, was removed to the Cooper Hospital Tuesday night, where she was revived in a short time.

The Business Men's League of Atlantic City have called upon the United States Senators from New Jersey and the Congressmen to vote for the parcel post bill for its immediate application all over the country.

At the reorganization of the Camden County Republican executive committee Tuesday afternoon, Harry Reeves was re-elected chairman; Harry C. Sharp, treasurer, and Chas. A. Wolverton, secretary.

William Fox, of Indian Mills, had a leg broken and was injured internally when his horse ran away. The animal tumbled down a steep embankment, thirty feet high, fell into a creek and swam out again without injury.

With the purpose of raising funds for the completion of the new wing of St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson, in which will be located an up-to-date operating-room, members of the advisory board of the institution Tuesday night inaugurated a campaign to secure $65,000.

The family of William J. Thompson, fifteen years old, of North Second street, Camden is much exercised over his continued and unexplained absence from home. With his companion, Russell Pray, of the same age and address, he left home last Friday, apparently to play. Neither boy has been heard of since.

By a vote of 11 to 10 the Mercer County Board of Freeholders Tuesday afternoon adopted a resolution introduced by Mr. Hough, directing County Collector Black to pay County Solicitor Kulp his salary, thus indorsing the solicitor's contention that he was elected for a term of two years and not only until last January, as Messrs. McCullodgh, Middleton and Tams had held.

Trial of Cyrene L. Hammond, a negro, charged with killing Henry Foote, also a negro, as the latter stepped from a doorway on Arctic avenue, Atlantic City, on October 1 last, will take place at May's Landing today. Hammond, according to the police, shot Foote down while looking for an enemy who resembled the victim of the tragedy. Hammond did not even know the man he killed.

Following a severe arraignment of the Jersey City Police Department by Monsignor Sheppard, vicar-general of the Newark diocese, who alleges that the regulations for dance halls and moving picture shows are not enforced, Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn has summoned the Exhibition Committee of the Board of Alderman to meet him tomorrow to discuss means to eradicate the evils asserted to exist.

Two burglars to escape capture leaped through a five by seven foot plate glass window in the saloon of Young Lee, at 16 West street, Paterson, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The proprietor, aroused from his sleep by his wife, discovered the men and followed. He was armed with a heavy shovel and felled one of the fellows, who was able to arise again and after a tussel with Lee managed to escape, together with his companion.

Attracted by the wails of an infant, a colored man, whose identity could not be learned, glanced through the window of a house at 1 Myer terrace, Atlantic City, Tuesday, and in the midst of flames which were rapidly filling the room, saw a child lying in a cradle. With a blow of his fist the negro shattered the glass and through the opening thus made crawled through into the room and passed the infant out to neighbors who had gathered on the scene. Then the negro disappeared.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"Has a man the moral right to take advantage of the loose end of a badly drawn contract" might be called the theme of Eugene Walter's play, "Homeward Bound," formerly Arnold Daly's great success which will be presented at The Plainfield theatre on Saturday night, February 18. The Messrs Shubert are directing the tour of the Walters play, and in the stellar role will be found William Courtney, late star of "Arsene Lupin," who will create the part of "John Maxwell" a young chemist who is debauched by "big business," and who finds easy money an incentive to secure more of it, only to find himself runied at the very beginning of his career. "The grease of Graft," as a Pittsburg boodler aptly expresses it, sticks to Maxwell's fingers, and smears everything he touches with its insiduous filth. Walter's play is a powerful arraignment of the sharp practices which many of our modern business men resort to in order to add to their profits, and illustrates to a nicety how fine the margin is between graft and legitimate gain. A fine company will support Mr. Courtney in which will be found Dorothy Tennant as the wife; Frederick Burton, as the financier and William Rosell, as the friend in need. Marion Ballou will have the part of a chattering neighbor, and a new type of slavey will be portrayed by Amy Somers. Plainfield is rapidly achieving more than local fame as an appreciative theatrical city, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Courtney's presence here next Saturday night will demonstrate that fact.

Chief's Novel Toast.

Timothy J. Quinlan and Miss Mary Agnes Reardon were married Tuesday in St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Perth Amboy, by Rev. Peter B. Corr. Chief P. J. Burke proposed the following toast to his subordinate: "I congratulate you, Tim, on the arrest which you have just made, it being the greatest one since you have been on the force, and I also commend you for arraigning the prisoner before the judge, Father Corr, who sentenced her for life, after which he paroled her in your custody."

BASEBALL.

Frank C. Bancroft, sixty-six years old, business manager of the Cincinnati baseball club, was operated on for appendicitis yesterday. Bancroft is one of the most widely known baseball men in the country, having managed several major league teams of two decades ago. He was in charge of the trip of the Philadelphia Athletics to Cuba this winter.

Jack Warner, the old Giant catcher, who has met with a succession of reverses as owner and manager of several minor league clubs, has signed to catch for Erie, Pa., of the Ohio and Pennsylvania circuit. Billy Gilbert, former Giant star second baseman, of world's championship fame, is manager of the Erie forces.

Willie Keeler says he has finally decided to go to Toronto with his old side-kick, Joe Kelley. "There's nothing else left for me to do," mused the former idol of the Yankees, shifting a few thousand dollars of his Brooklyn rents to an inside pocket, where it would be safe from the scribes.

William Hepburn Russell, the new owner—or president—of the Boston Nationals, declares he went into baseball because he realized that major league franchises meant immense fortunes in the near future. "Baseball values have more than quadrupled within the past ten years," says Russell. "I do not expect to make a fortune in the get-rich-quick manner, but I do hope to make money, and good money, eventually.

A Canadian enthusiast, who came to the meeting with Joe Kelly, wagered a suit of clothes with Willie Keeler that the midget outfielder would lead the Toronto Club in hitting next season if he played regularly. Keeler says he'll throw in an overcoat if he happens to lead the league.

Harry Steinfeldt tells a famous story about the gamest ball player in history.

"The gamest player that ever wore a spike was a fellow named Sharpe, who played second base with me when I was on the Fort Worth team.

"We were playing Dallas one day, and in the first inning their centre fielder, a fellow named Grant, who was a dirty ball player, tried to steal second. He was thrown out by at least thirty feet, and, seeing that he was out, he took a flying jump, feet first, at Sharpe, and sprawled all over him with his spikes. Sharpe limped around for a minute, picked up his glove again and went on playing. I never saw any one play as he did that day. He had eleven chances, seven assists and four putouts, and nary an error, and made three hits, one of them a triple to left centre.

"After the game he and I were walking out toward the clubhouse, when he remarked: 'I believe there's something in my shoe.' He stooped down, untied his shoes and shook out two toes."

Baseball is beginning to shape up well at the Plainfield High School and under the coaching of Jack F. Martin candidates for the pitcher's mound and the mask are rounding too nicely in the gymnasium. Captain Runyon is attending all the preliminary practices in the gym with a view to keeping his eye on the boys and making the best selections for the positions on the nine for the coming season. It is expected that when outdoor work can be indulged in there will be material enough to make a first class team. Terry and Woodhull, last year's box artists, are getting their arms in shape. Two other candidates who look good to coach Martin are Ludlow Vandeventer and Arthur Grisley. Sidney Karr, James Nash and Russell Burdick are looked upon as promising backstops.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

George F. Brown had charge of the mid-week prayer-meeting at the First Baptist church last night.

Arthur M. Harris will deliver an illustrated lecture at the First Baptist church, this evening on "Mexico."

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue church will meet tomorrow night for mission study.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, conducted the prayer-meeting and fourth quarterly conference at Grace M. E. chuch last night.

The sewing meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church will be held tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, who recently underwent a severe operation in Rochester, Minn., will have something to say about his experience at the morning service on Sunday.

ANNEXATION SCARE AT CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

England is aroused over the fear of ultimately losing Canada, in case the American-Canadian reciprocity agreement is ratified.

The press is particularly disturbed because of the statement made by Speaker Champ Clark in the House Tuesday that he had no doubt that the time would soon come when England would gladly look forward to the turning over of her possessions in North America to the United States.

The conservative press is exhibiting the nearest approach to "Americophobia" it has ever displayed, and even papers friendly to reciprocity are censuring Clark for his so-called indiscretion.

The Westminster Gazette, which has led the fight for reciprocity, said yesterday: "Clark must be singularly innocent if, desiring this consummation, he imagines it will be promoted by such a frank avowal at the present moment. But he will probably get the right kind of measure despite his utterance."

"The speech will surely make Canada pause before assenting to the tariff agreement," the Globe, anti-American, declares.

The Times says that if its correspondent is right in stating that it is doubtful whether the American people take the annexation talk seriously, "the Americans show their good sense."

The Pall Mall Gazette asserts that "Englishmen cannot much longer be blind to the fact that preference signifies union and Cobdenism and that reciprocity is a long step in this direction."

An appeal to the English people to "save the empire" is sounded by The Morning Post. It declares that there is no longer any attempt in America to conceal the ultimate aim of annexing Canada.

Other papers "play up" Clark's words in their news columns, but they are evidently waiting until they have recovered from the shock before making editorial comment.

WANT ALL WIRES PUT UNDERGROUND

The Councilmanic fire and building committee is anxious to have all overhead wires in the business section of the city put underground, and about the only ones overhead are the fire alarm wires, which belong to the city. Chairman Duncan W. Taylor, of the fire and building committee has been considering the matter and he estimates that it would cost about $2,000. He would like to have this expense come out of the regular budget, if possible, but is not so sure that it can be done.

There will be a conference of the committee with a representative of the New York Telephone Company, on Thursday night, February 23, to which Mayor Moy will be invited, when the committee hopes to get definite figures as to the cost of placing these wires underground through an arrangement with the above company.

The Public Service Corporation also has some wires overhead, notably on Second street and on Madison avenue, between Front street and Fourth street. Chairman Gloak of the street committee has arranged to meet L. D. H. Gilmour, of the P. S. C., in this city on Thursday, March 2, and he will take this matter up with the P. S. C. officials with a view to having these wires removed. It is estimated that it would cost $6,000 to put all city wires underground, including the residential section but the committee does not favor this action at present.

SKIRT SKITS.

Indianapolis Star: Is the new pantaloon skirt following the lead of the skin tight trousers?

Jackson, Miss. Clarion-Ledger: The harem skirt is the latest. Why not combine it with the hobble and call it the harum-scarum?

Washington Post: The Women could make a hit with their husbands by adopting a style that'll give twice as much dress at half the cost.

Duluth News-Tribune: Fashion authorities say "the hobble skirt is passing." If it is or wants to, then for goodness sake let everything else stand still and give it a chance.

Cleveland Press: Hat, Turkish turban; jacket, Spanish bolero, but with Japanese kimono sleeves; skirt, high-waisted empire with "loud perpendicular convict stripes." There you are, and what a combination! Still it will go with women because Paris says so, and it will go with the rest of us because—well, because there's a woman inside of it and not even the fool dressmakers of Paris can make her anything but what she is, God bless her, penitentiary stripes and all!

SIMPLE EVENING BAG.

Here is an evening bag which is both simple and pretty; so simple that you can make it at home in an evening, and so pretty that you will spend several evenings more showing it off to your friends and giving them directions for going and doing likewise.

You will need a lining of silk ribbon 6½x16 inches, and a covering of Irish crochet lace edging, a piece 8x16½ inches.

Take the length of ribbon and put an inch-wide hem on the two ends, and sew the sides together, leaving the hem part unstitched. This makes the silk lining easy and quick work as you see.

Then join the cut ends of the lace, thus forming one side of the bag, the other side having no place of joining whatsoever. Next sew the pointed ends together in a straight line across the bottom, where the lining touches the lace.

Insert the silk lining in the outer lace cover, and sew on the top edge of the lace to the hem of the silk lining. Put in a drawstring of half-inch wide ribbon the color of the lining, winding it in and out of the lace mesh. Each drawstring is abut 24 inches long.

Mean.

"You used to say," she complained, "that you could hear the rustle of angels' wings whenever I was near you."

"Yes," he bitterly replied. "I thought that was what it was, but I have since learned that it was merely the creaking of your corset."—Chicago Record-Herald.

MAKING A VALANCE.

The main difficulty in making a valance is to keep it in place without putting tacks into the furniture or having it on narrow strips that pull out from under the mattress. One woman has hit upon a plan of having heavy unbleeched sheeting cut just the size of the bed, or a little within the line of the sides. The sheeting is shrunk before being used. The valance is sewed to it on each side and across the end.

The cover is then spread over the springs and under the mattress, which holds it firmly in place. If the valance is of thin material, that needs frequent washing, it is a good idea to put it into a narrow band, provided with button-holes at intervals close enough to prevent sagging. Buttons are sewed to the sheeting in places to correspond.

PILES OF DYNAMITE NEAR LIBERTY STATUE

A startling disclosure was made last night at the beginning of the coroner's inquest at Jersey City to place the blame for the death of an Italian named "Mike" Maeffi, who was killed in the dynamite explosion at Communipaw on Feb. 1, which killed thirty and injured hundreds, and that was that at times there were over 100,000 pounds of dynamite stored on one boat in the New York Bay close to the Statute of Liberty.

This information was obtained from Fred Lindholm, an employee of the National Powder Company, on cross-examination by Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven. About a dozen witnesses were examined at the inquest, which was conducted in the old Court House before Coroner James M. Houghton and a jury of six men. They volunteered very little information that proved of any account.

Lewis Ealadetta, dockmaster of Pier 7, Central Railroad of New Jersey, where the explosion occurred, said that he was positive the explosives carried from the cars to the powder boat Katherine W. on the day of the explosion were boxes of dynamite. When asked why he said that he answered that he ought to know, because he kept tabs on the "stuff" when it is unloaded from the cars to boats. Coroner Houghton asked him how he could account for pieces of boxes marked "black powder" found on the pier after the disaster and his answer was he couldn't tell. Both Coroner Houghton and Prosecutor Garven tried their best to rattle Lindholm, believing him to "know something," but he rather awkwardly squirmed out of everything, leaving his inquisitors at sea. The witnesses examined were Ealadetta, Trygoe and Anderson, second mate on the boat Ingrid, damaged in the explosion; William Duncan, a general boatman; Sigrid Neilson, deckboy of the Ingrid; Arthur Rassmuss, another member of the Ingrid's crew; Charles Rieter, checker on the Central Railroad pier; Henry Iseberg, a boatman, and Fred Lindholm. The latter was the last witness and then the hearing was adjourned until Friday night.

Lindholm said, too, that there are tonight on board one of the National Powder Company's boats near "Miss Liberty" about 800 boxes of dynamite, each box holding either twenty-five or fifty pounds of dynamite. Prosecutor Garven and his assistant George T. Vickers, tried to get Lindholm to explain what two small paper board boxes that were taken aboard the Katherine W. in New York Bay on the morning of the explosion contained. They wanted to know whether they contained "caps" or "detonators," used to set off explosives of dynamite, which it is against the law to carry aboard a boat or train when other high explosives are being carried. Lindholm admitted seeing these boxes taken aboard the Katherine W. from the powder boat Keystone, but he couldn't tell whether they were removed from the Katherine W. when she tied up to Pier 48, New York.

As each witness was called Prosecutor Garven, in his cross-examination, tried to find out what color smoke was seen at the time of the explosion, for the purpose of determining whether it was an explosion of dynamite or powder. Very few of the witnesses could tell the color of the smoke, saying that when the explosion happened everything was dark to them and "black as night." Charles Ritter, the checker on the pier, who said he lives at 12 Columbia street, Newark, said he was down on the pier near the Katherine W. when he aehrd the explosion.

"I crawled under a box car," he said, "and all around me I saw flashes like lightning. When it was all over I started to help the people who were cut and bruised and a man who fell overboard."

He said he ran about looking for his father, who also worked on the pier. He placed the time of the explosion at about 11:45. He was examined and cross-examined about the relative position of the Katherine W. and the Whistler, the other powder boat destroyed in the explosion, as compared with other boats near the pier. He said he knew the members of the crew of the Katherine W. and identified them on a photograph shown to him by Prosecutor Garven. He said the crew was unloading the boxes of explosives, as he called them, from the cars on the pier and placing the maboard the Katherine W., which apparently was the only boat being loaded, when the explosion occurred.

He said there was a long board plank stretched from the door of the car to the boat, and as two men passed out a box it was slid down the planking to the side of the boat, where a man caught it and then this man slid it down another planking to another man on the boat, who stacked the boxes on the boats. He could not tell whether the boxes contained dynamite or powder, nor could he tell what the color of smoke was at the time of explosion.

When asked who came to him to have the explosive bills receipted when the Katherine W. was accustomed to being loaded with powder or dynamite he said a member of the Katherine W.'s crew and sometimes the captain himself.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

One of the season's chief offerings at the Plainfield theatre is the two-act musical comedy "The Soul Kiss," which comes there Thursday, February 23, brings out the services of a large force of fun-makers, singers and dancers, numbering in all, a cast of sixty people. The comedy has a distinct plot and abounds in many comic scenes and colorful stage views. The scenes are laid in the Latin, as well as the fashionable quarters of Paris, and the story involves adventures of a young artist, who is in search of a "Soul Kiss," which he describes, as a "kiss that rises from the heart to the lips."

CHATTANOOGA SOCIETY MEETS MRS. PROBASCO.

The Chattanooga, (Tenn.) Times, contains a story of a card party given by Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sholar, of Chattanooga, a week ago today, in honor of Mrs. J. B. Probasco, of this city, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Chambliss. The house was adorned with a profusion of gift flowers sent by the friends of the hostess. The Times says:

"American Beauty roses were placed in the hall, while massed in the parlor were many Killarney roses. Pink carnations made the dining-room fragrant. Mrs. Sholar received in a becoming gown of white embroidered marquisette over a slip of white and pink. Mrs. Probasco's handsome toilette was of black and gold lace draped over old rose messaline. She wore a corsage bouquet of California violets. Mrs. Chambliss was gowned in a dainty gray marquisette over pink messaline. Following the play, a hot buffet supper was served." Mr. and Mrs. Chambliss who are entertaining Mrs. Probasco are well-known here, Mr. Chambliss being the son of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church.

A Child Wife

By EMILY B. PARKHURST

The daughters of all good families in India must be married. It would be a public disgrace as well as a crime against the Hindoo religion for an Indian family of good rank to keep a daughter unmarried. Since it is difficult for their parents to find husbands for them the daughters are made away with. Those of high birth, called rajpoots, are put to death by men especially employed to do so. The British government having passed laws against these murders, the parents of those girls who have not found husbands have resorted to a method of marrying them in name, though not in fact. There are a number of Brahmans, old and decrepid, called Kulian Brahmans, who go about with the object of hiring themselves out to go through the ceremony of the "seven steps" with young girls upon being paid for doing so. After marriage they leave the country and never see their young wives again.

In Allahabad there lived one of these rajpoot men who had a daughter over twelve years old.

In the next house lived another family, in which there was one son, aged eighteen. The two children had been brought up together, and their childish friendship had grown into love. The parents of the youth were very proud of him and destined him to marry some girl who should be not only of high caste, but whose parents would be able to bestow on her great wealth.

One evening after it was dark he was walking in the compound (garden) about his father's house when he heard a low call from the compound of the next house. Going to the fence, he descried the crouching figure of his sweetheart, evidently suffering from some great misfortune.

"What is it, dear girl?" he said, springing over the fence and taking her in his arms.

"I am to die."

"To die!"

"Yes. Today a man—a horrible looking man—came to the house and talked with my father. I had been told to go on an errand, doubtless that I should be away at the time and not hear what passed between my father and this man. But I had not yet gone. I have been suspecting that, not being married, I would soon be made away with in some fashion, though father and mother have tried to keep the awful knowledge from me. So when I saw this frightful creature come to the house I concealed myself behind a bamboo screen and heard every word."

She gave way to her feeling and was unable to proceed. Her lover kissed her again and again, begging her to tell him all.

"My father bargained with the man for a hundred rupees to strangle me."

"When—where?"

"Tomorrow night father is to take me out for a walk by the river, when this man is to come upon us suddenly as if to rob, seize me and after he has killed me throw my body into the river."

The agony of the youth was equal to that of the girl. Both knew that their separation and her death were not to be prevented. It would be of no avail for her to refuse to go to walk with her father or to try in any way to escape her fate. The young man dare not disobey the commands of his parents. Should he fly with the girl the sleuths of the Indian police would follow and surely capture them. They spent what time that remained for them together, not laying plans to prevent the calamity, but weeping in each other's arms. At last the girl heard her mother calling her, and after one clinging embrace she ran into the house.

The next afternoon an old man leaning heavily on his staff stopped at the house and asked for a bit of bread and a little wine. The girl, who was to die that night—knowing the secret, though her parents were not aware that she knew it—went to the cupboard by her father's order and brought the refreshment.

"Is your daughter married?" asked the visitor.

"No," replied her father. "We have no husband for her."

"But you cannot keep a girl like that longer. Our religion forbids."

"No," whispered the father; "we shall not keep her longer."

The look that accompanied the words was not lost on the old man.

"How much will you give me to marry her?"

"You are a Kulian?"

"I am."

"I will gladly give you your price if it be not too much."

"What say you to a hundred rupees?"

"I will give it gladly."

The girl was listening, and hope sprang up in her heart. She loitered near till she saw her father count out the money to the old man and then swooned.

When she came to herself she was told that she was to be married to the visitor. Death, which had been so near, seemed worse to her than living in separation from her lover, and she gladly went with her father and the old man that the ceremony should be performed. After it was ended the husband went away, and it was understood that he was never to return.

From that day the young lover was missed. Long after his love received from him the means to take her to America. He and the old husband were one.

THE NEW OBSESSION.

Oh, it's motoring here and it's motoring there—
It's motoring, motoring everywhere!
The babies in motoring carriages go,
The kids soon will coast on the silvery snow
In automobiles up steep automoslides
In wildly hilarious automorides.
Our dancers are dancing gay automoligs
Our doctors drive round in their automogigs,
And those who would perch on fame's highest bars
Now hitch up their wagons to automostars.

The farmer is smiling his harvest to gain
When loading his hay on his automowain,
Or scarring the earth with his automoplow,
Or milking his gasoline automocow,
Or sending the choreman with automolegs
To gather each morn the fresh automoeggs
Neath the automohens in the automocoop
To the tune of the rooster's shrill automowhoop.
While he who plays golf will rejoice at the call
Of the automocaddy who chases his ball.

The automocamel will soon lead the van
From Automoshebs to Automodan,
And down in the kitchen, by hook or by crook,
Some day we'll rejoice in an automocook,
Who more than a week in the household will stop
To joy in the jests of the automocop
Yes, it's motors by day and it's motors by night;
Wherever we look there's a motor in sight.
All over the land they are quite the fromage,
And every old barn has become a garage!

—H. D. Gastitt in Success.

Ill Timed.

Eugene Higgins was taking tea on a warm January afternoon on the sun drenched terrace of the Hotel Royal at Nice.

"This bright, hot sunshine, that sparkling sea, these palms and flowers, all tend to make me gay," Mr Higgins said, "yet, fresh from the loss of my beautiful yacht, my gayety seems to myself as ill timed as the gayety of John Marchmont."

"John Marchmont's wife had died and Mary Smith, the bosom friend of the dead woman, had asked the afternoon off to attend the funeral.

"On Mary Smith's return from the funeral her mistress said to her, with gentle sympathy:

"'And did you get on all right at the obsequies, Mary?'

"'Indeed, ma'am, I had an elegant time,' Mary answered. 'I sat in a fine cab with the corpse's husband, and he squeezed my hand all the way to the cemetery and back, and he told me, said he, "Mary's there's no doubt about it; you're the belle of the funeral."'"—New York Tribune.

What He Missed.

Wedderly—How is it that you never married, old man?

Oldbach—Fate stacked the cards against me, I guess. When I was a young man I proposed to three different girls, but each of them came back at me with a "No."

Wedderly—You're to be congratulated. Just think, one of them might have said "Yes."—Chicago News.

The Cowardly Kind.

"When I arose to speak" related a martyred statesman, "some one hurled a base, cowardly egg at me, and it struck me in the chest."

"And what kind of an egg might that be?" asked a fresh young man.

"A base, cowardly egg," explained the statesman, "is one that hits you and then runs."—Everybody's Magazine.

Young Medicus—The effect of hasheesh is peculiar. It destroys distance and time. A man addicted to it cannot tell the difference between one hour and ten.

Miss Languid (yawning)—How did you get the habit?

Lapse of Memory.

"Hello," said the former prominent financier as he placed the telephone receiver at his ear. "Give me 7462."

He waited patiently for a few minutes and then said:

"Oh, I beg your pardon. It was my mistake. I want 7538. I was thinking of the number I had before I was pardoned."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Admiration Revived.

"Do you like my new hat?" asked Mrs. Brooke.

"Yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Lynn. "I had one just like it when they were in style."—Lippincott's.

Which seems to resemble a pain.

Feet Tired—So Tired?

TIZ Makes Sick Feet Well, No Matter What Ails Them.

TIZ acts at once and makes tired, aching, swollen feet remarkably fresh and sore proof.

It's the sure remedy, you know, for everything that gets the matter with your feet. It's for sore feet and for sweaty, bad-smelling feet, and for corns, callouses and bunions, too.

"For years I have been troubled with sore and tender feet; suffered intense pains. Have had the assistance of physicians without relief. I bought a box of TIZ, which worked a perfect cure, as it has with a great many of my friends. I would not be without it. All it requires is to be known to be universally used." A. F. Dreutzer, Chicago.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other fot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet, and is the only remedy that does. TIZ cleans out every pore and glorifies the feet—your feet.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain, and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person.

TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25 cents per box, or it will be sent you direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

MESSAGE TO HER HUSBAND.

The Number of Side Tracks a Woman Can Put In a Talk by Phone.

Give me main 345, ring two. Hello there! Is this Mr Smythe's office? Is he in? No? Who is this? His stenographer? Yes, I thought it was, but somehow your voice doesn't seem quite natural over the phone But, then, one's voice hardly ever does sound natural over a phone- so sort of burry or harsh Well, all I wanted was to send a little message to my husband, and you will do quite as well as if he were there I hardly expected to find him there, for I remember that when he went away this morning he said that he would have to be out most of the morning. All I wanted was to send him a little message that you can give him just as well as if he were there for me to give it to him. We had planned to meet in the lobby of the Asburia hotel at 3 this afternoon and go together to see some painting he wants to see. I forget what painting it is, but it is one he thinks is very fine, and he wants to see it again. He is a great lover of art and knows so much more about it than I do. He can point out the fine points that I never would notice. I suppose that is because one of his brothers is a very successful artist—oh, very successful. He has bad paintings hung "on the line," you know, and an own cousin of my husband's is also very successful as a portrait painter, so he is a great deal better versed in art than I am, and that is why I want him with me when we see the painting. Have you seen it? No?

Well, you may tell my husband that I rang you up and told you to tell him that I think we'd better meet in the waiting room of Brown & Simpson's department store instead of at the hotel, because I find that I have an errand up that way, and it is only a few minutes' walk from Brown & Simpson's to where the painting is, and it is quite a long distance from the hotel, and we would have to take a car, and you know how the cars are—so crowded. Of course we could take a taxicab, but that costs so much, and the drivers cheat you if they possibly can, and I think that they are dreadfully uncomfortable things to ride in anyhow, and if we meet at Brown & Simpson's we needn't take anything, and as I have to be up that way anyhow it is altogether better that we meet there, so when my husband returns I wish you would kindly tell him that I rang you up and that I will be in the waiting room at Brown & Simpson's at 3 or as near that time as I can. It may be a few minutes later, or I may get there a little before 3 But what I want him to know is that he is to meet me there instead of at the hotel, as we had at first planned, and of course if he doesn't know that I have changed my mind about the place of meeting he will go to the hotel and I'll not be there. So when my husband comes in I wish you would not fail to tell him that I rang you up and— Well, if they haven't cut me off! If that isn't smart! I don't see much use in having a telephone if one can't send a little message over the wire without being cut off. I shall enter complaint about that. I doubt if that stupid stenographer got my message clear in her mind. My husband says she is awfully dense sometimes. I'll just ring her up later and see if she understood me.—Max Merryman in Puck.

A Wild Race

By WILLIAM EASTMAN

While traveling in Colorado I dined informally with a successful mine owner. His wife was a demure little woman, who said nothing during the meal, her sole ambition apparently being to see that his children had what they wished and what was best for them to eat. After dinner, while smoking with my host, I asked him if his wife, being such a gentle, feminine little woman, did not find life in a new country distasteful.

He smiled. "I could tell you a story about that 'gentle, feminine little woman,'" he said, "that would make your hair curl."

"Do so," I replied.

"Lisa," he began—"that's my wife—was born out here. Her father came out to mine. When she was sixteen years old she was out one day with her father and brother, who were prospecting. They had with them a horse of Tennessee racing stock and fleet as the wind.

"While Lisa was flower gathering and her father and brother feeling about in the ground with their picks suddenly she heard a noise. She looked up and saw her father and brother looking at each other, both very pale. Then her father ran to Jack, calling to her at the same time to come to him, loosed the bridle rein, put her on him and said:

"'Ride for your life. A cloudburst is coming. Stick to Jack. He can outrun anything.'

"And, turning the horse's head down the gorge, he gave him a slap on his haunch, and away he went, with little Lisa astraddle of his back.

"It was not far to a canyon communicating with the gorge they were in, and if Lisa could have turned her horse into it she would have been safe. Her father and brother, who rode the other two horses, did this and had the satisfaction to see the torrent boiling past them, they being on higher ground and out of its path. But in giving her the high bred racer they had endangered her instead of giving her the best chance. Jack, hearing the torrent coming after him, became unmanageable through terror and shot right past the mouth of the canyon.

"Fortunately Lisa had been used to horses. She knew her danger too. Jack was liable every moment to fall and was killing himself in the struggle. How he ever passed over the path he did I can't imagine. I've been over it often since, and every time I wonder more. If he fell the torrent would be on him and his rider before he could get up and she mount him again, even if that were possible. If he became exhausted that meant death too.

"Once, she says, she looked back to see what had become of her father and brother. She saw great trees hurled by a mad torrent against the rocky sides of the canyon. One sight of such a scene was enough for her. She tried to soothe her horse by speaking to him and patting him on the neck. Several times he had stumbled, but recovered himself, and she knew this was her greatest danger.

"Well, here I come in. I was a tenderfoot ordered by my doctor to come out here to breathe the mountain air. At the time Lisa was coming down the canyon I was being driven in a light wagon in the opposite direction by a man I had hired for the purpose. We heard a roaring; but, I being a greenhorn in the country and the driver being stupid, neither of us knew what it meant. The road was narrow. Beside it was the waterway and on either hand the canyon's walls.

"Suddenly I saw up the gorge a horse coming lickety split and knew by fluttering skirts that a woman was on him. He couldn't pass us at that gait owing to the fact that we took up all but about three feet of the road. Lisa says he seemed to recognize the fact, for he slowed up of his own accord.

"Just before Lisa reached us my driver seemed to catch the meaning of it all and, jumping from the wagon, began to scramble up the side of the canyon. I, not understanding what was the matter, sat still till the girl came up. I had never seen her before, but I was not likely to forget the picture. Her horse was white with foam; her hair had broken loose and was flying in the wind.

"'A cloudburst!' she cried.

"I didn't know what a cloudburst was, but at that moment caught sight of its forward edge and didn't need any one to tell me. I had come west in a sleeping berth all the way from Ohio and was weak as a kitten. My cowardly driver was taking care of himself, but paying no attention to me. The girl took in the situation. She was trying to squeeze her horse between the stone wall of the gulch and the wagon, but had presence of mind to call to me to get on behind her. One glance at that coming death gave me all the strength I needed, and I was on Jack in a jiffy. Then she let him go again.

"We were a mile from her home, the horse was getting exhausted, and now he had a double load. She knew well enough that she was halving her chances at taking me on, but we managed to keep ahead of the flood, and in a few minutes Jack mounted the rising ground that led to his stable.

"And that," my host concluded, "is the 'gentle, feminine woman' you're talking about."

"She's that and a heroine besides," I supplemented.

"Please don't say another word on the subject," returned Guy. "I quite understand. But I am sorry to have to tell you that I can't hold out to you any hope of getting anything in exchange for the papers your father handed to me. I failed to see the—the person your father wished me to see. It was a lawyer I saw. I told him how you were situated, and he promised to lay the matter before his client, but I don't expect that anything will come of it."

Nora's confusion did not diminish. She looked down, then glanced timidly up at Guy and smiled.

"To the end of my life," she exclaimed, "I shall never forget how good you have been to me!"

He was surprised and touched by her earnestness. After all, he had done so little!

"Queer thing," said Guy to himself as, after bidding Nora goodby, he set out to walk to Teddington. "I suppose it is Merivale's client who is taking the girl into her service. I dare say the lady suspects that Nora may know her secret and thinks it well to have her under her own eye. Not a bad idea from her point of view."

Suddenly he remembered the lady whom he had seen getting into her carriage close to the house in which Nora lived. "By Jove," he cried, "I was right! That must have been Lady Roscommon. If it is she that has offered to take Nora into her household she must be Merivale's mysterious client. Is it her secret that Molloy learned? Is it she he has been blackmailing, according to Merivale, for years?"

Then a new thought struck him, an idea so startling that it almost took away his breath. Lady Roscommon, he knew well, lived in a large house close to the spot where he had found Molloy lying wounded and bleeding on the ground. Could it have been she he had seen kneeling at the side of the injured man? Could it have been her hand that fired the shot that had struck him down? He remembered that at the time he had felt certain that the voice and manner of the lady had been the voice and the manner of a "woman of quality" such as Lady Roscommon. But it was next to incredible that a woman so well known as the wife of Lord Roscommon should be mixed up in a vulgar and dangerous intrigue—that for years she should have been paying blackmail. Yet the fact seemed to point that way.

For some time Guy walked on in a brown study.

"I will ask Eva when I see her on Monday whether her mother has engaged a new maid," he said to himself. "If she has"—

CHAPTER V.

UNDER THE GREENWOOD TREE.

Standing a little way outside Bushey park, shut in by high creeper clad walls and clumps of trees and surrounded by old fashioned gardens, Hampton Place is one of the most charming houses in the neighborhood of London.

Lord Roscommon had taken it for twelve months. He was an Irish peer of respectable though scarcely of distinguished family, and Lady Roscommon, who had inherited the wealth of her uncle, Sir Hector MacIlvray, one of the merchant princes of India, had wealth enough for both. She was, in fact, a very rich woman.

Lord Roscommon had married rather late in life and was now an elderly man, seldom stirring from his own fireside and devoted to his two hobbies—jewels and beetles. He had a small but valuable collection of gems, and it would be hard to say whether his precious stones or his beetles were closer to his heart. He was believed to know more about the family life of the cockroach than any other man in Europe.

Three children had been born of this marriage. Terence, the heir to the peerage and the family estates, was a captain in a regiment of the guards. The second child, a girl, had died in infancy. The third was Eva, a girl about seventeen, some half dozen years younger than her brother.

Eva had spent most of her life at Castle Dare, the old home of the Fitzgeralds—Fitzgerald was Lord Roscommon's family name—in County Wicklow, and this probably was the reason that she was both in mind and in manner different from the ordinary town bred English girl. She was more simple, more natural, less apt to suspect others, less given to disguising her feelings, less affected than she would have been if she had spent her girlhood in London. It was nominally on her account that the family had come up to town. Lord Roscommon had grumbled exceedingly when his wife informed him that they must spend a year in town, and Hampton Place was taken as a compromise between Wicklow and Mayfair.

Eva was scarcely beautiful, yet no one could be long with her without feeling her charm.

Guy Lorimer had been one of the first men she had met in London, and the two had liked each other from the first. Lorimer was not rich—very far from it, indeed—and he would have admitted at once if the question had been put to him, that he could not fairly aspire to the hand of a viscount's daughter and an heiress. But he was not thinking of marriage. He had not got as far as that. All he cared for was to see as much of Eva Fitzgerald as the usages of society would allow. They had met and danced together several times during the previous winter without his ever having obtained the entree to Hampton Place. But he was only able to meet her in a casual sort of way till one day it occurred to him that he might find rooms at Teddington, and thus live in her immediate neighborhood.

Not long thereafter he had the good luck to meet Eva in the park, and he soon learned that she was in the habit of riding out most mornings before breakfast. Of course he developed a similar taste, and the two met often on those misty mornings.

On the Monday following his last interview with Nora Kildare, Guy was riding slowly along one of the glades of Bushey park. He was listening for the sound of hoofs behind him and hoping that Eva had not been late in rising.

At length the quick rhythm of trotting hoofs fell on his ears, and he jogged on slowly, allowing the riders to come up with him. In another minute Eva and he were riding side by side, the groom, with a touch of his hat and an ill concealed grin, dropping a little farther in the rear.

"I have such news for you, Mr. Lorimer," said the girl, turning her lovely gray eyes full on her companion. "Mamma is going to let me have a dance on my birthday, tomorrow fortnight. We are going to have all the rooms open, and the carpets taken up, and the floors waxed, and a string band, and heaps and heaps of flowers from Covent Garden. Won't it be splendid?"

"I have no doubt of it," said Guy ruefully. "I am sure I hope you will enjoy it," he added in a better tone, "but I shall have to stand at the gate outside, like a peri at the gates of paradise, you know."

"Nonsense! But if you cared very much to come, I have been thinking, perhaps it could be managed."

"Care to come! Miss Fitzgerald, you know I would give anything to come! It seems ages since that last night I danced with you."

"Well, I was thinking that perhaps I might give you a copy of the list of people who are invited, and if you could find that some great friend of yours was going you might get him to beg mamma for a card for you. If he does I will see that one is sent."

"How can I thank you?" said Guy in a low, earnest voice. His heart was beating wildly, for this was the most unmistakable proof of her interest in him that she had yet given.

"I shouldn't wonder if the party is as much in Sir Rufus' honor as in mine," she said, as if speaking to herself, "but I don't mind that so long as it comes off all right."

"Sir Rufus? Who is he?"

"Oh, didn't I tell you that Sir Rufus Deverll has been staying with us for the last week or ten days? A thorough gentleman of the old school, mamma says."

"And what do you say?" asked Guy, a jealous pang shooting through his heart.

"Of course I think as mamma does," said Miss Fitzgerald demurely.

"Naturally. Sir Rufus is an old friend of Lord Roscommon, I suppose?"

"No; I think he is an old friend of mamma's, though."

"An elderly man, I suppose?" Guy said in as unconcerned a voice as possible.

"Elderly? Oh, dear, no! I suppose people would call him middle aged, but he is so distinguished looking that one does not think about his age. There are a few people like that, don't you think?"

"I dare say. Can't say I ever met any."

The girl's roguish Irish eyes danced in her head, and she turned her head away to hide a smile.

"I suppose if I do manage to get an invitation to the dance—if one can call it an invitation—I can't hope for the pleasure of dancing with you?" said Guy after a moment's silence.

"Now, what do you suppose I suggested your coming for?"

"I thought your time would be so fully occupied with the other guests. You will be the queen of the evening, you know, and any little fragment of time you can spare will have to be reserved for this elderly baronet, won't it?"

"I thought I told you that Sir Rufus wasn't a bit elderly," said the young lady gravely.

"I don't see that there is much use in my humiliating myself to beg, or to get some one to beg, for an invitation to your dance if I am not to have a word with you all night."

"Who said you weren't to have a word with me? But, of course, if you don't care to come you can stay away."

This made Guy curse his own jealous folly, and he was trying to think of some way of making amends for his blunder when Eva burst in with, "Oh, by the way, I don't think I shall be able to come out riding in the morning any more now—for some little time at any rate."

"Oh, Eva!"

The word slipped out by accident. He had not yet got permission to call her by her Christian name, but the look on his face was so eloquent of keen regret that she could not find it in her heart to torment him any more.

"How am I to get the list of guests you promised me if I don't see you?" he asked.

"I thought you did not care to have it now."

"Oh, Eva—I mean, Miss Fitzgerald! You know very well"—

"Well, if you have changed your mind I'll try to ride out tomorrow morning before breakfast and give it to you, but I'm afraid it must be the last time—for awhile, at all events. Sir Rufus seems to have got wind of my going out early, and he threatens to accompany me."

"And you would not—you would not care for his company?"

For answer the girl turned her head and looked at him with eyes full of such bewitching coquetry, such a world of innocent fun and gayety, that the young man completely lost his head. For the moment he did not know where he was. Something of what he felt must have appeared in his face, for Eva, suddenly turning her head away, put her horse into a canter.

After a spell of sharp riding under the trees which made the blood mantle in her cheeks the girl pulled in, and in an instant Guy was at her side.

"By the way," she said, "mamma has got a new maid. She came the day before yesterday; Irish, of course, and such a pretty girl! If she were to go into the drawing room on the night of my dance nobody would have any eyes for me or for any one else."

"I know one who wouldn't look at her a second time," said Guy, and the girl laughed off the clumsy compliment, saying that she had a great mind to dress her up and bring her into the room to see what the effect would be. While she was chattering Guy was trying to decide whether he should say anything about his previous acquaintance with Nora Kildare, for that she was the new maid he had now not the slightest doubt.

"Is the girl's name Nora Kildare?" he suddenly asked.

"Yes. How did you know?" said Eva, staring at him in astonishment.

"I have met her once or twice at her father's," he said. "He died a few days ago, and she told me that she had got a situation as maid to a lady. She did not mention the lady's name, but I don't suppose there are many ladies who have maids in this part of the world, so I jumped to the conclusion that this was the same girl."

"Well, you are right for once. Do you see that hawthorn tree standing by itself? I'll race you for it if you like!"

CHAPTER VI.

A MAN AND A MAID.

"Mrs. O'Rourke! Are you there, Mrs. O'Rourke? I do wish you would tell the laundry people to remember that I am only a human creature like themselves, and that I don't like wearing cast iron cuffs any more than they would."

The clear, boyish voice rang through the room, lit only by the embers of a dying fire, and a figure that had been crouching on the hearth rose slowly.

"Oh, you are there, are you? Why didn't you speak? I wish you would put in these sleeve links for me. I can't with my left hand, and Peters is busy with"—

The young man, who was in his shirt sleeves, came to a sudden stop. This tall, slender figure was very unlike the plump, motherly conformation of the housekeeper. Who could it be?

"By Jove!" said Terence Fitzgerald under his breath.

A white face of wonderful beauty looked at him for a moment out of the gloom. Then the flame went out, and it vanished. But a voice, low and sweet, answered him in the darkness: "Mrs. O'Rourke is downstairs, but she gave me leave to sit in her room for a little while."

"And—and who are you, if one may ask?"

"I am Lady Roscommon's maid. Her ladyship has just gone downstairs."

"Yes, and I shall be late through those confounded laundry women, who will make one's linen like so much sheet iron." And he fumbled again at his sleeve links.

"Perhaps I can fasten them for you," the girlish voice said gravely, and she took a step nearer him. He went to meet her and held out his arm. The touch of her soft, cool finger tips had a curious effect on the nerves in the region of his heart. She had her head bent over her task and his eyes devoured the faultless outlines of her face and figure.

"You have come here quite recently, haven't you?"

"Only two days since."

"And how do you think you shall like us?"

Nora glanced swiftly upward. She saw a young, fresh, boyish face of an almost girlish softness of complexion and pleasant gray eyes. He smiled down at her and repeated his question, "How do you think you shall like us?"

"It is for her ladyship to say how she likes me."

"Oh, well," he laughed, "are you comfortable?"

"I have no reason to complain."

"Just you tell old Mother O'Rourke if you do have anything to complain of and she will put it right. She's a good sort. Do you know, I mistook you for her when I first came into the room."

The shirt cuff was fastened by now, but still he lingered.

"What do you mean to do with yourself all the evening?" he asked.

"I have some sewing to do."

"Sewing! I should think you would get sick of it! Look here! Shall I bring you up something from the library—some magazines and illustrated papers or a novel? You can put them back when you are done with them, you know."

"Thank you very much; you are too kind," stammered the girl. "But I have no time for reading."

"Oh, bosh! You have time to look at pictures anyhow," he cried, and ran downstairs. In five minutes he was back again with an armful of papers and two or three yellow backed novels, which he threw down on the table.

"Here you are," he said. "Good night. I must bolt or I shall get scolded for keeping dinner waiting." And before she had time to thank him he was gone.

As soon as the sound of his footsteps had died away Nora carried the bundle of papers and books back to the library, excepting one of the novels, which she retained. She knew that it would not do for them to lie there, for Mrs. O'Rourke would be sure to notice them and ask questions.

A few days later Captain Fitzgerald came up from town one evening to see his mother, meaning to spend the night at Hampton Place, where, of course, he had a room reserved for him.

Going to Lady Roscommon's boudoir, he knocked lightly and went in without waiting for an answer.

The room was dark and chilly, and he knew at once that his mother must have gone out.

"My lady has gone uptown to dine and spend the night and Miss Fitzgerald has gone with her," said Nora, stepping out from the adjoining room.

"Oh, confound it! I wanted to see her particularly."

The captain wanted to see Lady Roscommon particularly once a quarter at least—sometimes oftener. It depended on the behavior of his creditors.

He stood by a small table, discontentedly drumming on it with his fingers. He foresaw a wretched evening. His father had dined and was shut up in his study. Certainly he did not yearn for the company of his son. It was too late to go back to town—at least it would be a bore to go back so late. There was nothing for him to do—not even Eva to talk to.

He looked up suddenly and found Nora's eyes fixed on him. She was standing by the doorway that led to his mother's dressing room, evidently expecting him to go. What magnificent eyes she had! It was pleasure enough for any one simply to look at them. For the sake of saying something he looked at the dying fire and said with a smile, "You have nearly let the fire out."

"Yes, I was busy in the other room and forgot it. But there will be plenty of time to relight it before Lady Roscommon comes back."

"She may come back tonight, then?"

"No; I forgot. She is not to be back till tomorrow forenoon." The girl looked confused. She had betrayed the fact that she was not so completely mistress of herself as she appeared to be.

"Don't let the fire out," he said. "Let's make it burn up. You will want a fire at any rate, and I quite enjoy trying to make a fire burn up that has nearly gone out. Shall we try?"

He had already seized the tongs and was beginning to select thin chips of coal from the coal scuttle. Nora scarcely knew what to say or do. She was vaguely conscious that it was not right for her to allow Captain Fitzgerald to constitute himself her companion even for a short time, and as soon as the coal had fairly caught and there was no longer even an excuse for his presence in the room she slipped out and made her way downstairs. He waited some time, but, finding that she did not return, betook himself to the smoking room in something of an ill humor.

In an hour he was tired of his own company and felt a strong inclination to go back to his mother's boudoir.

The difficulty was to find an excuse that would look even plausible, but at length he thought he had hit upon one that would do. He scribbled a note to his mother and, taking it in his hand, went back to the boudoir.

A warm, ruddy glow from the fire, which was now a mass of redhot cinders, filled the room. No other light was needed. Nora was seated on a low footstool near the hearth, and at the sound of the opening door she passed her hand quickly across her eyes and sprang to her feet.

"Don't let me disturb you," said the young man, advancing and laying a note on the table. "I only wanted to ask you to be good enough to give this to Lady Roscommon as soon as she wakes in the morning," and he laid his note on the table. "And now that I am here don't you think it would be a good opportunity for you to apologize for your shocking rudeness in leaving the room this evening without even telling me that you were going? We are not accustomed to rudeness like that in this house, I assure you."

The girl started and blushed all over. "I beg your pardon. I didn't know—I had no business in my lady's room"—she stammered, and then she saw a faint smile creeping out round the corners of his mouth and knew that he had only been playing with her. She stopped and suddenly turned her head.

"Please forgive me!" he cried. "Didn't you see that I was only joking? It's only my stupid fun. I'm afraid I have vexed you," he continued, in a voice wonderfully gentle. The kindness and the liquid speech, reminding her of the green isle that now to her seemed so far away, shook her nerves. She hid her face and the tears would come.

In his heart Captain Fitzgerald thought her a silly girl, but he said softly:

"I am grieved to see you crying. Can't I help you?"

She shook her head.

"I have not hurt you by my foolish chatter?"

"Oh, no, no! I was crying before you came in."

"Aren't you happy here?"

"Yes. Lady Roscommon is very good to me. It is very foolish of me. Only sometimes I feel very lonely."

For the first time he noticed her black dress, and he wondered whether she was in mourning.

"Have you lost a relation lately?" he asked, instinctively lowering his voice.

"Yes; my stepfather. He was shot recently near the avenue, not half a mile from the house. I had no idea"—

NEW MEXICO LIFE

Described by Miss Olive Gibson to Members of Congregational Church.

ILLITERACY AND POVERTY.

Adopted Americans Still Steeped in Ignorance of Mediaeval Times—Passion Play and Penitents.

The experience of Miss Olive Gibson in the mountains of New Mexico told in graphic language interested a large audience in the lecture room of the Congregational church last evening, and at the end of the address doubts were expressed as to the sanity of the United States government in permitting mediaeval conditions to exist in a State of the Union. Some of the hearers were shocked at what they heard in relation to the practices of the natives, most of whom are Mexicans transplanted onto American soil. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Girls' Misionary Club, of which Miss Frances Newell is president. Miss Gibson was entertained at supper previous to the meeting.

Miss Gibson said that New Mexico was larger than all the New England States put together and had some 1,000 square miles to spare and the villages where she first began her educational work was made up sometimes only of sunshine, silence and adobe — of the 365 days of 1910, 321 days were absolutely cloudless, and the place is so silent that the only sound one is able to hear at times is one's own heartbeats.

As to the people, Miss Gibson said, they were relics of the time and regime of Mexico and it is not surprising that they are ignorant and illiterate. What is most surprising is that there is so much good in them. In relating her troubles in getting someone to go with her to Seboyita, Miss Gibson said that she appealed in vain for one of the missionaries from the Congregational Society and was finally glad to accept a young Baptist woman who was so pretty and so lovable that she was soon carted off as the wife of a minister.

Some of the vermin for which New Mexico is famous and other inconveniences with which the new missionaries had to contend were well calculated to frighten timid women, but Miss Gibson and her Baptist friend, Miss Davis, managed to survive by placing the bedposts in tomato cans partly filled with water. A squaw who had been educated at Carlisle, befriended the two women and made their earlier days brighter for them. "This Indian woman," declared Miss Gibson, "was worth all the other women put together that the government ever sent to that part of the country."

Not a soul in all that part of the country could speak English when the two teachers arrived there, but things have changed for the better during the past nine years. Warnings against loaning money were disregarded by Miss Gibson and she declared last night that she never lost a cent by being kind to the Mexicans. When they first arrived they were looked upon as medical missionaries as well as teachers and were called upon to minister to everything from gunshot wounds to sick cows. Once they vaccinated the children of Saboyita and prevented an epidemic of smallpox.

The men school teachers sent out there became worse than useless through indulgence in drink and pure laziness and as the school board was made up of saloon keepers the money was easily kept in circulation betweet them. One sheep herder who came to the school at night when he was 15 years old soon became proficient in mathmatics and secured a position on the Santa Fe railroad. A passion play is given every year in spite of the law against it and penitents are known to travel for miles on their bare knees seeking absolution for their sins. Paganism was no worse than the conditions in New Mexico.

Miss Gibson said that people east should never send trash to the missions of the far southwest as the Christians of the evangelical churches are judged as much by what they send as by what they do. She ended her talk with an appeal for funds for a hospital addition to the new training school at Albuquerque.

In the audience was Rev. Dr. Boardman, of Plymouth, N. H., who was a great friend of Rev. Charles L. Goodrich's father when the latter was teaching in Pembroke Academy in New Hampshire.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ELECT STATE OFFICERS

The forty-fourth annual convention of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, was opened at Masonic Temple at Trenton, last night. There were delegates present from 131 lodges throughout the State. The morning session was taken up with the reading of reports from the various officers and the day's business concluded with the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The business of the convention went along smoothly until action was taken on an amendment to the by-laws which provided that hereafter the offices of grand inner and outer guards be appointive instead of elective. The amendment was lost, the principal opposition coming from the northern end of the State. The reports from the various officers were enthusiastically received. All showed increases in income and membership.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Grand Chancellor, Harry C. Keel, Newark; grand vice-chancellor, William D. Quick, Somerville; grand keeper of records and seals, Elmer Margerum, Trenton, grand master of exchequer, John Patrick, Rutherford; grand prelate, Samuel A. Dobbins, Mount Holly; grand master-at-arms, George H. Hill, Morristown; grand inner guard, Charles Linden, Jr., Hoboken; grand outer guard, Howard W. Jerrett, Bridgeton; supreme representatives, John H. Conger, New Brunswick, and past grand chancellor Henry A. Heinrich, Paterson.

One of the most important questions considered by the Grand Lodge was that pertaining to the insurance department of the order and the changes affecting the fourth class members of the department. The matter was the subject of a deep discussion yesterday and definite action will be taken today. At the session last night the unwritten work of the order was exemplified and an address was delivered by Past Grand Chancellor Meekan, of Utah, and a short talk by Grand Master-at-arms, J. J. Cohen, of Delaware.

At the meeting of the Pythian Sisters these officers were elected for the coming year: Past grand, Miss Theresa Morgan, South River; grand conductor, Miss Mary Decou, Sayreville; grand junior, Miss Charlotte Clark, Jersey City; grand manager, Mrs. Pauline Westling, Passaic; grand outer guard, Miss Mary Kemp, Kearny; mistress of finance, Miss Mary Duncan, Asbury Park; mistress of records, Miss Lillian Bacon, Bridgeton; supreme representative, Mrs. Mattie Wilson.

Plainfielders On Petit Jury.

The following Plainfielders have been chosen for petit jury duty at the coming session of court: Joseph H. Harkin, Henry B. Peterson, Daniel H. Pound, Henry P. Talmadge, William E. LaRue, Albert A. Holly, Edwin R. Mills, Joseph Lufburrow, Gustave B. Keller and Frederick R. Smalley. William H. Lake has been chosen from Fanwood and William Allen from Union Township.

Major Champlin Buried.

The remains of Major Charles B. Champlin who died in Newark on Monday were brought to this city yesterday for burial in the North Plainfield cemetery. The body was escorted by members of Lincoln Post No. 11, G. A. R., and a detail from the First Regiment, N. G. N. J., from Newark.

PLAINFIELD DOGS WIN MANY PRIZES

The Westminster Kennel Club show which closes tonight at Madison Square Garden, New York city, is undoubtedly the largest and finest aggregation of dogs ever gotten together in the world, surpassing in both numbers and quality the magnifinest exhibition given by Cruft and the Crystal Palace Show at London, England, which are the two great shows of England. The New York show has almost 2,200 dogs on the benches making over 3,000 entries with a list of twenty-six judges from all over the U. S., and several from England. In fact the aristocrats of the canine world are on view. Plainfield dogs were prominent winners and the fame of the Meadowview Kennels, owned by A. G. Hooley, and the Midlothian Kennels of E. L. Mackenzie, brought large crowds to the ring side during the judging of these two kennels. The Boreas Kennels of Russian Wolfhounds, owned by Rupert Anderson and Dr. Hoguet, also made a large Plainfield exhibit, their stalls being very handsomely decorated.

The English setters of the Meadowview Kennels again won the cup for the best English setter in the show against 125 entries, this being the third year they have brought to Plainfield this most coveted prize.

They also won the beautiful trophy Venus as the "Thorockmuter" special for the best setter in the open class and a number of the English setter club specials. Judges stated that this was the most beautiful and valuable collection of setters in the world today. Six recorded A. V. C. champions being benched by them:

The Midlothian Kennels showed their Deerland Matchless of Midlothian and mistress of Midlothian, conceeded by all experts to be the most perfect of this noble breed that are living today. They won all the specials of value offered by the breed and their benches were surrounded by crowds during the entire day.

ON THE SHORES OF THE MEDITERRANEAN

Under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Society of St. Peter's Lutheran church last evening Dr. C. E. Moldenke delivered his famous lecture illustrated with a hundred stereopticon views of the places "On The Shores of the Mediterranean," before a large and appreciative audience.

The narrative in itself was worth hearing, being intensely interesting, showing as it did in word pctures the historic places of that part of the world. Not the least attractive were the views of the great rock of Gibraltar and the frowning forts of the British the interior of which is not accessible to the photographer.

One could almost imagine oneself aboard the gigantic ocean liner watching the coast line go by. To those who have never visited the Mediterranean the lecture was a revelation and full of valuable geographical knowledge. The shores of Greece were also visited as well as some of the ancient ruins of that interesting and always mysterious country.

The lecture was for the benefit of the church.

A Novel Entertainment.

An entertainment entitled "the festival of the brides of all nations, accompanied by the kitchen band," will be given in the South Plainfield Baptist church tomorrow night. It will be given under the auspices of the women's Bible class and will be for the church fund.

Frank Fitzgerald.

Frank Fitzgerald, aged nineteen years, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at noon today. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzgerald, of 1214 Clinton place, and had been undergoing treatment for Brights' disease.

The regular monthly meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society will be held at Warren chapel tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

President R. I. Tolles, of the Common Council, is slowly improving from his injuries the result of an accident at the North Avenue Station while trying to board a New York train.

TALLEST AND SMALLEST MAN

French Giant Is Nine and One-half Feet, and German Midget Is Twenty-eight Inches High.

Berlin.—This is a vivid illustration of the saying "Extremes meet."

Standing in full military regalia is Joseph Dusere, the French giant, who in his stocking feet measures no less than nine feet and a half in height.

But whom is he smiling at so benignly? Let us look closely. This young man whom we see perched on a chair, which in its turn is standing on a table, is one whom they call Prince Atom. Quite an appropriate name, isn't it? For be it known when Prince Atom rises in his full princely height he measures just twenty-eight inches.

Dusere and Prince Atom.

Prince Atom is sixteen years old, and when the troubles of this world besiege him he just goes over to see his friend Dusere, who is twenty-six and therefore so much more experienced in the ways of the world, and seeks his advice. Even now we can see him whispering into the giant's ear. Perhaps he has done something naughty and is seeking the big fellow's protection.

WOMAN CIVIL WAR CAPTAIN.

Was Commissioned by Jefferson Davis and Is Sole Survivor of Nurses and Physicians Then Active.

Richmond, Va.—Captain Sallie L. Tompkins, the only woman commissioned by the Confederate States and sole survivor of the physicians and nurses who ministered to the dying and wounded in the old Robertson hospital during the civil war, stood on the site garbed in her old nurse's outfit and unveiled the tablet placed there by the Confederate Memorial society.

The matter of Miss Tompkins' commission is of interest. Several private hospitals had sprung up here, and, realizing the importance of having the ill and wounded immediately under government control, these were ordered closed. An investigation of the Roberts hospital followed, with the result of its establishment as the government hospital, while to avert an infringement of orders the secretary of war drew up a commission for its head, Miss Tompkins, and she was made a captain of cavalry, the commission being duly signed by Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy.

The precious paper was mislaid some years ago by Miss Tompkins, but recently was found in an old trunk. It now hangs framed on the walls of the Confederate museum here and is a treasured relic.

TO BUY MARK TWAIN'S HOME.

Missouri Legislature Also Asked to Appropriate Money For a Monument to Great American Humorist.

Jefferson City, Mo.—One and perhaps two measures will be introduced in the general assembly early in the session, calculated, if adopted, to commemorate and honor Mark Twain.

Senator Frank McAllister of Monroe will present a measure for purchasing the boyhood home of Samuel L. Clemens, which now stands within the corporate limits of Hannibal. Representative Frank Sosey of Marion has prepared a bill appropriating $10,000 for the erection of a monument to the humorist.

Judge Roy, secretary of the Hannibal Commercial club, said that if the legislature will provide for a monument the citizens of Hannibal will furnish the most conspicuous point in that city as a site.

This will probably be "Lover's Leap," a big bluff overlooking the Mississippi river, which is close to the cave Mr. Clemens made famous in "Tom Sawyer."

Uncle Sam's Good Memory.

Chardon, O.—"Uncle Sam has a good memory," says Orlando B. Chamberlin of Chardon, who has just received a check for $88.50 as compensation for clothes while serving in the civil war.

Mr. Chamberlin enlisted in the Thirty-fourth New York infantry at the age of seventeen years on June 1, 1861. He was wounded April 29, 1863. He then re-enlisted Dec. 29, 1863, in the Fourteenth New York artillery. He was the first man to carry a regimental flag into the crater at Petersburg, at which battle he was taken prisoner. He was released in Richmond May 29, 1865.

Mr. Chamberlin made application for his clothes account nearly two years ago and the bill, nearly fifty years old, has now been settled.

SENTENCE THIEVES

Justice Acts Swiftly in Disposing of Pair Who Looted Bungalow.

BOTH PLEADED GUILTY.

John Polen Sent to Reformatory and Charles Chapman Fined and Placed in Probation Officer's Charge.

In the Somerset County Court at Somerville, this morning, John Polen and Charles Chapman, of the borough, pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering the Frederick A. Martin bungalow on Johnson's drive. Polen was sentenced to the Rahway Reformatory, while Chapman was fined $25 and also placed in charge of the probation officer for two years.

When first arraigned, Palen made a feeble attempt to deny the charges made against him but it carried no weight. Judge Clarence Case informed him he had been before the court last fall on a similar indictment and had then been placed on probation. The parole had been broken, therefore, the court said, he was entitled to no leniency. Chapman made a clean breast of his part in the affair and was given the opportunity to do better. It was easily seen he was the victim of evil associations.

The arrest of the two defendants and the disposal of the case was a record-breaker for quickness. The theft of various articles from the bungalow was discovered Saturday night and Chief Weiss took Polen and Chapman in custody Monday night. They were kept in jail two days for a "sweating" process, as the former is implicated in several burglaries. They were arraigned before Justice Snape Wednesday, committed to Somerville yesterday and sentenced this morning. Polen will commence serving his term tomorrow.

William Jackson, colored, of South Bound rook, was arraigned before Judge Case this morning, on a charge of stealing twenty-one chickens from Fred Wall, of South Bound Brook. The prisoner also stole a wheelbarrow to carry the fowls away. It lead to his undoing as there was a light snow the night of his raid and the barrow track was easily followed to where the plunder was disposed of. Jackson told the court he stole the chickens because he was hungry but had nothing to say when Judge Case remarked he must have had a most ferocious appetite when it took twenty-one chickens to satisfy it. He was sent to jail for three months.

REV. AND MRS. McKELVEY "AT HOME" RECEPTION.

Rev. and Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey held the fourth "at home" reception at Warren chapel, last night, and like the previous affairs, proved to be enjoyable. A slight deviation was made in the reception last night by providing an informal program, which consisted of violin selections by Martin A. Korff, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. McKelvey, and dialect stories of southern life by Mrs. George H. Campbell, of Grove street, which were well receivd by the large number of people present.

Mr. and Mrs. McKelvey were assisted in receiving by the members of the Home department of the Sunday school, which was also an additional feature. The refreshments were in charge of Mrs. Joseph W. Gavett, and she was assisted by other women of the chapel. The social features were marked, serving to help all to become better acquainted.

AN "UPLIFT MOVEMENT" AMONG HOTEL GIRLS.

Through the efforts of Mrs. Isabella C. Davis, of this city, prominent in King's Daughters' work, the girls employed in the Martha Washington Hotel, New York, have become identified with the King's Daughters and have joined what is called the "moral uplift movement," for the betterment of their condition.

Mrs. Davis was to have attended a meeting yesterday to provide for the signing of the enrollment blanks, but was detained. The young women plan to study sewing, cooking, typewriting and stenography.

CHIEF TO RECEIVE SHARE OF REWARD

It was reported this morning that Chief of Police Kiely had made a formal demand upon City Judge William G. DeMeza for the half of the fine collected from John V. Madden on Thursday.

"Are you familiar with the ordinances of the city?" asked the chief of the judge, it is reported, shortly after his arrival at headquarters this morning.

"Yes," replied the judge, "perhaps more familiar with them than you are."

"Well," Chief Kiely is alleged to have said, "I demand my share of that fine."

"All right," responded his honor, it is related, "I'll send you a check for it and you may give it to charity or dispose of it as you see fit." Then the incident closed.

ADVISES OTHERS TO GET MARRIED

Adjutant and Mrs. George A. Jackson, of the Salvation Army celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of the marriage at the Army Hall last evening and with five of their six children were the recipients of many congratulatory speeches and well wishes. In speaking of his married life Adjutant Jackson declared that notwithstanding the many untoward events in his life he believed that there is no other state more to be desired than the married state and his wife corroborated him. He was thankful that of their six children all were alive and doing well. One of the eldest is taking the course at the Army training school.

The question of the desirability of being married was discussed by many of those present and while it was generally admitted that to be married is one of the chief ends of men (and women) it should not be entered into without due consideration and serious, prayerful thought. Captain Hewitt who acted as chairman of the meeting, had little to say preferring that his wife should tell of her impressions after the short married period of two years. Mrs. Hewitt declared that she heartily endorsed married life and urged all the unmarried ones to seek their right partners and become yoked together for life.

Captain Hewitt warned the young people of the seriousness of the step and urged them to make it a matter of prayerful consideration. The whole meeting was one in which happiness prevailed and congratulations were mingled with the good nights as Adjutant and Mrs. Jackson departed for their home.

Braider, organist of the local church, has engaged Mrs. Daisy Stone, formerly of All Angels' church, New York, to sing here for the next three months, taking Miss DeCant's place.

FRANCES E. WILLARD MEMORIAL SERVICE

Under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U., a "Frances E. Willard Memorial Service" was held in the rooms on Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon, it being the anniversary of the death of the great temperance leader whose memory is always revered. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, president of the Union, was in charge of the service, which was given up to the reading of extracts bearing on the life and work of Miss Willard, telling what she accomplished during the years she was at the head of the White Ribboners.

Other members, including Mrs. T. C. Bodine, Mrs. P. H. Bennett, Mrs. G. H. VanNest took part in the service and there were solos by Mrs. L. A. Udell. Several prayers were offered that the temperance work might progress and that prohibition might prevail throughout the entire world.

MASTER APPOINTED FOR BARTON DIVORCE

In the action for an absolute divorce brought by Mrs. Mabelle A. Barton against Louis O. Barton, the matter has been referred to John H. VanWinkle as special master in chancery and owing to the latter's illness the hearing will probably be delayed for a week or so. Robert Newton Crane represents the petitioner.

After a search extending over several months it has been impossible to locate Barton and service of notice in the suit has been by publication.

Mr. Barton was formerly a local lawyer.

ARTHUR M. HARRIS TALKS ON MEXICO

Arthur M. Harris, of the First Baptist church, gave an entertaining and instructive illustrated lecture on "Mexico," at the church, last night, under the auspices of the Junior Mission Band. The proceeds of the affair will be used towards establishing a mission in Mexico, At a great deal of expense and pains, Mr. Harris secured many fine views, which were shown. They included several secured by Mrs. Reuben Knox, when she was in Mexico, which showed Miss Linda D. Butler and Miss Marie Bourgeios, formerly of this city, who are now living in the Federal District at Mixcoac, Mexico.

These pictures of the former Plainfielders, together with views of the interesting places in the vicinity aroused the large audience serving to interest those present more than ever in missions. Mr. Harris gave a delightful talk concerning Mexicans and conditions to be found in that country and all felt as though they had spent a profitable evening in the further study of Mexico.

HORACE CODINGTON AFTER REFORMERS.

Horace Codington, who was convicted of misappropriating the funds of the township, is trying to reform the reformers in Warren township, and in his efforts is getting into hot water or getting others in.

Just now Mr. Codington appears to be after the scalp of Robert Zergiebel, whom he accuses of building unnecessary bridges at the expense of the taxpayers just so that Mr. Zergiebel's friends may have steady employment. The latter is said to have resented the implications of his erstwhile friend and there is a pretty mess to straighten out. The Somerset County Board of Freeholders is making an investigation.

Francis Fitzgerald's Funeral.

The funeral of Francis T. Fitzgerald, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday, will be held at his late home on Clinton place tomorrow morning at 8:15 and St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery. The young man was nineteen years old and employed as clerk in a local grocery store. Beside his parents he is survived by several brothers and sisters.

MAJ. CONRAD DEAD

Confederate Veteran Passes Away Here Aged Sixty-Six Years.

MRS. J. D. RANDALL'S FATHER.

He Located Lehigh Valley Route and was a Brother of Former United States Solicitor General.

Major Charles F. Conrad, sixty-six years old, formerly of Winchester, Va., died last evening at the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. J. Randall, 88 Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, after a short illness. The remains will be taken to Winchester tomorrow and the funeral will be held in that city on Sunday. He is survived by his daughter who is his only child. His wife died several years ago.

Major Conrad was a Confederate soldier and a son of Robert Y. Conrad, an eminent lawyer of Virginia in ante-bellum days, he was a brother of Major Holmes Conrad, of Virginia, solicitor general of the United States under President Grover Cleveland. He made himself famous as a civil engineer after the war and was known as one of the most proficient in his profession. It was his proud boast that he located the right of way of the Lehigh Valley Railroad from Wilkes Barre to New York and this had remained as a monument to his fame.

The work of laying out the route of the Lehigh Valley road was attended with many engineering difficulties and only the persistent and conscientious work of Major Conrad brought the stupendous undertaking to a successful issue.

The Major had made many friends in this city through his genial and kindly disposition and all who knew him appreciated and loved his splendid character. The news of his death shocked many of the friends he had made here in recent years. He also had a large acquaintance among the engineers along the New Jersey Central especially in Somerville where he loved to visit.

There will be no funeral service in this city.

WOMEN TO HOLD MISSION JUBILEE

The Women's Boards of Foreign Mission, of New York city, is preparing for a national jubilee to be held March 27, 28, 29 and 80, and Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has been requested to lend his support and that of others. The affair will be called "A Pageant of Missions," and will take place both at the Metropolitan Opera House and Carnegie Hall. A missionary luncheon will be held at the Hotel Astor, March 29.

Mrs. Samuel Broadwell, of 37 East Sixty-fourth street, New York, is the general chairman of the affair. Denominational rallies will also be held during the jubilee and it is quite likely that nearly all of the local churches will be represented at one or more of the meetings as the program will cover the whole field of missions.

Rev. Mr. Broek's invitation was extended through Mrs. Susan P. DuBois, of Belvidere avenue, who is deeply interested in the work.

CHINAMAN FOUND DEAD IN HIS BUNK

Hong Wah, one of the oldest Chinese laundrymen in the city, was found dead in his bunk at the laundry of Gee Wah on North avenue, this morning, shortly after 8 o'clock. Dr. C. A. Gesswein, who was called by the proprietor of the laundry, found nothing suspicion surrounding the demise of the aged celestial, but notified County Physician Westcott.

When Dr. Westcott arrived here shortly before noon he could not get into the laundry and had to wait until the other Chinamen connected with the place could be rounded up. The opinion of the coroner was that Hong Wah had died of heart disease and had been dead for several hours when the body was found.

It is probable that following the usual custom the body of the dead man will be removed to New York and buried with the customary Chinese ceremony.

SENATOR MARTINE VISITS GOV. WILSON

For the first time since his election as United States Senator, James E. Martine was in Trenton yesterday for a conference with Governor Wilson.

In talk with newspaper men Senator-elect Martine declared in favor of immediate tariff revision to correct the high prices of food, spoke strongly in favor of the Canadian reciprocity bill, which has passed the House of Representatives, and said the Senate should pass it without delay. He expressed himself as against any increase in the price of postage on magazines or other class of mail.

Mr. Martine held a conference with Governor Wilson at the State House during the day.

MR. MURPHY TO PAY DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR

When Geo. F. Murphy, of New York, was seen today at the home of his sister in East Front street by a representative of The Daily Press, he made a statement regarding his petition in voluntary bankruptcy which places a very different light on the actual facts concerning his business reverses. It appears that the liabilities as stated in the published reports are grossly exaggerated and that instead of the total liabilities being $139,000 or thereabouts, they do not amount to $1,000.

Covering this, his assets, he says, are ample. Mr. Murphy has surrendered his insurance policies for $2,600 and judgments and debts due him aggregating $250. The report of his possessing large realty holdings in New York appear equally erroneous. He does own a flat building at St. Paul's place and Washington avenue, Bronx, which has been turned over to the trustee in bankruptcy.

Mr. Murphy's voluntary petition was filed to prevent ligitation and to thereby protect his just creditors and himself. He declared that before his discharge in bankruptcy he would pay dollar for dollar and would owe no man when free to resume business. His position, his friends assert, is entirely honorable and the situation he finds himself in is due to a chain of unfortunate circumstances, caused by depreciation of realty values in some localities in New York.

GOSZEWSKI HELD PENDING EXTRADITION

Councellor Robert Newton Crane appeared before Magistrate Nash, in the Adams street Police court in Brooklyn yesterday, on behalf of Mrs. Mary Goszewski and asked that Charles Goszewski, the woman's runaway husband be remanded for thirty days pending the issuance of extradition proceedings on a charge of desertion. Mr. Crane's petition was acted upon favorably by Judge Nash and Goszewski was held.

Through the courtesy of Hudson County Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven, Mr. Crane was appointed special prosecutor of the case against Goszewski and it is likely that within two weeks the extradition papers will have been signed by Gevornor Dix, of New York State and the man brought to trial in Jersey City.

HE SANG AND TOLD OF FAMOUS SONGS

A capacity audience gathered at the Washington School auditorium last night to enjoy the third number in the free public course, a lecture recital on "The Famous Songs of Many Lands," by Lewis W. Armstrong, a baritone soloist. The recital was so unusual that everyone was pleased and throughout the program Mr. Armstrong was given hearty applause. While these lectures were not originally intended for children, they have been permitted to attend. Last night there was only one regret and that was the unnecessary disturbance on the part of so many children, which had a tendency to mar the pleasure of the entertainment for the older people. Once Mr. Armstrong had to stop his lecture to admonish some youngsters.

Mr. Armstrong gave a program of exceptional merit and possessing a fine voice, he sang characteristic songs from Scandinavia, Russia, Austria-Hungary, Bohemia, France, Ireland, Scotland, England and America. The songs of each country were prefaced by a few remarks of an explanatory nature, which added interest to the historical, literary and musical features of the entertainment. There were a number of native born foreigners in the audience and they fully enjoyed the singing of the foreign songs, chiefly the national songs of various countries. Mr. Armstrong selected one or two of the most popular songs of the different nations and they proved popular with the audience.

The program was concluded with the singing of such songs as "Rory O'Moore," "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," and selected as one of the best American songs, "'Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," the audience joining the chorus following the second verse. The next lecture will be given at this school on March 28, and will be on "Bird Life," being illustrated with a great many fine views.

EAST END CHURCH C. E. SOCIETY MEETS.

Several matters of importance were taken up at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Netherwood Reformed church last evening at the meeting held at the home of Mrs. S. O. Rush, at 257 Leland avenue. Reports were read showing the society to be in a flourishing condition. The matter of a printing press was taken up by the society and it is expected that the press will soon be available for printing the church calendars. Already $10 has been subscribed toward its purchase. A new cut of the church is in course of preparation and it is hoped that within a short time the congregation will have its calendar every Sunday morning.

Miss Mattell was the hostess last evening and after the business meeting refreshments were served. It was decided to hold a soecial on Washington's Birthday.

There are bicycle and bicycle acts, but the Heuman Trio is considered the best. Their tricks are clever, the comedy good and racing finish exciting. This is a headline act at Proctor's this week. W. STUDY WIRELESS

Boys Organize Here and Movement is to be a State-Wide One.

LECTURE COURSE IS PLANNED.

Members Pledge Themselves Not to Interfere With Government Messages and to Study Wireless Telegraphy.

Seventy-eight embryo wireless operators gathered in Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening and organized what is to be known as the Union County Wireless Association. The purposes of the organization are to protect the learner as well as the government and other wireless business concerns and to promote the study of the science looking toward its development and improving of the system. These officers were elected: President, James J. Watton; vice-president, John Maier, Jr., of Bound Brook; secretary, Charles G. August; treasurer, Robert Lee. At the next meeting President Watton will appoint a committee to draw up the necessary constitution and by-laws to which each member must subscribe. It is proposed to make the organization State-wide with this city as the headquarters.

Thirty-eight charter members were received at last night's meeting with a prospective increase of at least forty more. Altogether there are twenty wireless stations now in Plainfield operated by boys from 12 to 17 years old all of whom can send and receive, although not with the ease of experts. It is to train these boys and at the same time prevent them getting into trouble by "butting in" on government stations and thus getting the government "sore" on them.

Each boy who has a wireless sending apparatus will be required to honestly abide by the by-laws, which will prohibit anything that will in anyway interfere with the study of the system or conflict with any governmental regulation. At the same time by keeping within the bounds of a one-inch spark with its consequent small radius of effectiveness they hope to prevent any interference by legislation with what they deem to be a legitimate study.

There are several expert operators among the boys and these will help those who want to learn both the Morse and Continental codes. In the erection of apparatus any boy will have the assistance of those who are more experienced and those who have not any apparatus at all will be helped to get one. One of the main objects of the organization will be to foster the inventive genius of the boys and develop the best ideas from suggestions made by them.

Interest centered last night in the descriptions of several of the outfits now possessed by boys who have been doing considerable studing for the past two years. The apparatuses have increased in number and effectiveness until it is not unusual for conversation between distant points being caught here and enjoyed. But when one young fellow who is an expert sender started to talk with the government station in the Brooklyn Navy Yard he was summarily cut off.

It will not do for the youngsters to try to interfere with established stations and it is not believed that any of hem will attempt to do it now that the seriousness of the offense has been so plainly pointed out.

A list of those who now have wireless stations is being made and their individual calls tabulated so that when one boy gets the signature of another he will know with whom he is talking. It is not at all unlikely that an aerial may be established on top of the Y. M. C. A. building, which will give those who attend the meetings opportunity of studying with those who are enough advanced in the science to teach. There will be a social end to the organization which includes a "feed" of some kind every month. Good speakers and experts on wireless will be engaged to talk to the members. A. B. Cole was mentioned as the first lecturer. Mr. Cole is at the head of a large electric concern and according to Mr. August is well qualified to speak to the boys. The yearly dues of the association will be $1.

BASEBALL.

Hereafter the schedule meeting of the National League will be held each spring in New York on the second Tuesday of February. On motion of Charles H. Ebbetts the constitution was amended to comply with this idea. Heretofore there was no fixed date, the president calling the meeting at such time as suited the joint convenience of the two major leagues.

Charles W. Murphy returned to Chicago quite happy. He corralled Heine Zimmerman, his crack utility player, who had been a hold-out, and after an hour's straight talk induced the recalcitrant athlete to get aboard the Cub wagon for the coming year. Heine whispered to some friends that Chubby Charles raised the ante before he signed.

August Hermann and Barney Dreyfus will journey to Boston today to attend a banquet given by the Elks. Garry, of course, will be the guest of honor.

The first train squad of Giant recruits will leave tonight for Marlin Springs. Arlie Latham and the scribes only will pull out of this town. Several Colts will be picked up at various places before the train reaches St. Louis. At St. Louis the main squad will be assembled. There will be in all about fourteen players in the squad before Marlin is reached.

Fred Merkle, the first baseman of the Giants, wired Secretary William Gray yesterday that he would be in New York today. Merkle will sail next week for New Orleans with the regular Giants, who will take the water route to Marlin Springs.

Manager McGraw, of the New York Nationals, yesterday signed Maurice McKnight, of Kansas City, an eighteen-year-old outfielder, for a trial this year. McKnight has never played professional ball. Last year he led the City League in batting and base running, hitting .366 and stealing twenty-eight bases in thirty games. He will report in Marlin Springs, Texas.

When Bill Bergen threw out six Redlegs who tried to steal on him in a game in Cincinnati last season he did not establish a major league record for turning back would-be thieves.

Arthur Irwin, scout of the Highlanders, says that Duke Farrell, who is to go South with the Hilltoppers this spring and coach the young pitchers on the Farrell combination, once nipped eight men who attempted to filch second.

According to the Peerless Scout, Farrell, who played under him as a private in Boston in 1891, turned this great trick in the season of 1897.

"If my memory is not at fault," says Irwin, "the Duke of Marlboro was then with the Washingtons, and the Senators were playing against the Orioles. In those days the Birdlets were the speed boys of the universe, and once a man got on first he would hike for second on the first ball that was pitched. I am not romancing when I say that Charley turned back the first eight men who tried to steal on him.

"Later two men made the attempt and got away with it. As I recall the game, it was won by the Orioles by a score of 6 to 3, Joe Corbett being Baltimore's pitcher and Win Mercer being on the slab for the Senators."

GOLF.

The Western Intercollegiate Golf Association was formed this week. Plans were made for a systematic campaign through Western schools to interest students in the organization and tentative plans were made for tournament dates.

The organization of the Western Association is the result of the refusal of the Eastern Association to permit Charles Evans, Jr., Western open champion, to participate in Eastern events. Evans was named president of the Western organization.

The new organization will affiliate with the Western Golf Association. Thruogh the expansion of the Western Golf Association at its last meeting, students of Canadian schools will be eligible to the new body. At present the association will include the Universities of Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Chicago, Minnesota and Northwestern University.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, will hold class initiation on Tuesday night, February 21, when the work will be performed in the handsome new robes of the castle. Delegations will be present from all the nearby castles. On Tuesday evening, February 28, the local castle will celebrate its tenth anniversary.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., February 17, 1911.

CONSOLIDATION.

In discussing the rather unusual and unexpected resolution of the North Plainfield Council against agitation of consolidation of city and borough at this time, the Somerville Unionist-Gazette takes the position that such a merger could be brought about without any change of the county lines. This, it claims, would be satisfactory to all concerned. But as to annexation, it takes a quite different viewpoint for that would means a "serious loss to Somerset county." Therein is the real secret of Somerset's opposition to secession revealed.

Were it not for the heavy revenues flowing into Somerset's treasury from North Plainfield, which gets little in return, it could be depended upon that Somerville would be the first to help rid Somerset of North Plainfield. No love has ever been lost between the two and doubtless none ever will. Somerville puts up with North Plainfield because North Plainfield "puts up" for Somerville.

The Unionist-Gazette is correct when it declares that the North Plainfield Council "has not sidetracked" consolidation. All the "whereases" and "wherefores" of that or any other legislative body in Somerset can not stifle public sentiment.

ONE FORM OF GRAFT.

Hearty approval of Mayor Moy's ban on free amusement tickets for municipal employes is given by the Brooklyn Standard Union, whose opinion is that the city executive's edict establishes a new standard of official ethics. "This is a hard blow to a time honored custom," the Brooklyn paper submits, "that has not yet been generally associated with the word 'graft,' though it undoubtedly should be."

Hitting the nail squarely on the head, the Standard Union says: "When a circus or theatrical company comes to a small town, and those in official life are presented with tickets for their families and intimate friends, it is not because the show people have any particular love for them, but because they expect favors of some sort. The new rule will not be popular with the Plainfield administration, but it sets a higher standard of official conduct, which is more important."

NORTH POLE ROW NOW IN CONGRESS

Declaring that Captain Robert E. Peary should be driven from the naval service, Representative Macon, of Arkansas, made a sensational attack yesterday upon the naval officer, who he designated as a "faker," and "idle loafer." The attack was made during the course of the debate in the House at Washington, on the naval appropriation bill. The speech has aroused much resentment among the friends of Peary.

Dr. Cook will give an illustrated lecture on his alleged discovery of the North Pole at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night. The Arkansan expressed the belief that Peary and Cook, on one of the trips to the North when they were companions, figured out that it would be easy for a man to "fake" a discovery of the pole, and he charged that they both started out at the same time to claim the discovery. He declared Peary's feat was, at best, worthy of only a medal like those awarded to Marathon runners.

Dr. Cook's press agent today gave out the following letter to show that the doctor still has some friends who believe in him:

"1826 I Street,
"Washington, D. C.,
"January 7, 1911.

"Dear Dr. Cook:

"I thank you very much for your kind letter, and I would assure you that I have never varied in the belief that you and Civil Engineer Peary reached the pole. After reading the published accounts daily and critically, of both claimants, I was forced to the conclusion from their striking similarity that each of you was the eyewitness of the other's success.

"Without collusion it would have been impossible to have written accounts so similar, and yet in view of the ungracious controversy that has occurred since that view (collusion) would be impossible to imagine.

"While I have never believed that either of you got within a pin-point of the pole, I have steadfastly held that both got as near the goal as was possible to ascertain considering the imperfections of the instruments used and the personal errors of individuals under circumstances as adverse to absolute accuracy.

"Again I have been broad enough in my views to believe that there was room enough at the pole for two; and never narrow enough to believe that only one man got there.

"I believe that both are entitled to the honor of the achievement.

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "W. S. SCHLEY."

"Dr. Frederick A. Cook,
"New York City."

PERHAPS THE STRONGEST

abstract element we have put into our Shoe Sales has been INTEGRITY. It must be a pretty good thing to put in; for it has bound a whole lot of customers to us. It is a fine thing to hold a sale annually for fourteen years and during the most part of it semi-annually, and still feel that at the end of that time the magnitude and power of the sale is increasing and that we shall be called upon to give service to more and more people as the years go on.

Tomorrow (the last day of sale); we have gone carefully through the stock and have put on sale some exceptionally good values throughout every department.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

American love of fair play will insure a large attendance at the Plainfield theatre next Monday night when Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer gives his vision of the controversy that has been waged regarding his claims to the first discovery of the Pole? The reason given by Dr. Cook for appearing upon the stage after having refused repeated offers coupled with glittering financial inducements is that he has caused to be made a moving picture showing in a most striking way his version of what actually transpired in connection with the now famous controversy, of which he had been the central figure, and that he is actively interested in having the story shown by the picture presented to as many of the American people as possible. Dr. Cook has just closed an engagement at the Manhattan Opera House in New York city, where the pictures were praised for their seeming accuracy. His lecture was most interesting and the verdict of all the critics were in praise of the Doctor's diction and of the interesting way in which the events of the journey were set forth. These pictures were obtained at great expense and under personal supervision of the doctor, and are a graphic illustration of the events of the exploration party.

BLIND BABIES WILL BE CARED FOR AT SUMMIT.

Hereafter blind babies may be committed as wards of the State to the home at Summit maintained by the International Sunshine Society. This was practically decided Wednesday afternoon, when Commissioner George B. Wight, of the department of Charities and Corrections, and Mrs. Cynthia Alden, of New York, president of the International Sunshine Society, called upon Governor Wilson to ascertain his views upon caring for blind children.

According to an opinion given some time ago by the attorney-general, children might be committed to the Summit home as wards of the State and an allowance made for their maintenance and support. The question, however, was left open as to whether the full allowance of $330 might be made for each child. This was taken up at yesterday's conference and Governor Wilson said he would sanction the commitment of blind babies to the home, allowing it the full amount which has been paid by the State to institutions in New York and Pennsylvania.

The Governor appeared much interested in the work which is being accomplished by the International Sunshine Society. He promised to aid it by any means within his power. Six children have already been placed in the Summit home with the sanction of Dr. Wight, although only a partial allowance has been made for their support. Hereafter the home will receive from the State $300 a year and an additional allowance of $30 a month for each child.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Gloucester City Socialists have established a newspaper.

A nine-pound chicken bought by a firm of Woodstown poultry dealers has four well developed legs and feet.

Slipping on ice, William V. Dutton, seventeen years old, of Second and Spruce streets, Camden, was badly injured and was cared for at the Homeopathic Hospital.

The South Jersey Farmers' Exchange has elected E. T. Ridgway, president; Clement B. Richman, vice president; Frank Davis, treasurer, and J. Oram Heritage, secretary.

Camden police are seeking Alton L. Cleveland, a real estate dealer, of 412 Kaighn avenue. They have a warrant charging him with obtaining $200 from Charles Grosskopf, of 506 Kaighn avenue.

The Princeton Alumni Association of Hudson county will meet next Monday night at the home of Dr. Howard S. Forman, 640 Bergen avenue, Jersey City. Professor John Grier Hibben, head of the department of logic at the university, will address the gathering.

The Mercer county courthouse was well filled Wednesday with potatoes, apples, fruit and vegetables exhibited at the annual convention of the Mercer County Board of Agriculture. There were addresses by agricultural experts and demonstrations for the benefit of the farmers.

Judge Joline, of the Camden Common Pleas Court, met the situation that presented itself in the case of Choo Soo, a Chinese, who entered a plea of non vult to selling opium, by fining the Celestial $350, which was promptly paid by a Chinese society, which also agreed to take Choo away.

Accused of highway robbery, George Swan, twenty-nine years old, was held in $500 bail in the Camden Police Court Wednesday. Testimony showed that J. N. Redmond saw Swan leaning over Lawrence Haines and going through his pockets, but Haines told the court he believed Swan was acting as a friend and did not want him to lose money from the sale of a load of hay.

It was announced Wednesday that the first charity ball to be given by the Third Regiment, N. G. N. J., in the Camden Armory next Tuesday night will be graced by the presence of Governor Wilson. He sent word to that effect Wednesday. On that night Governor Wilson has an engagement at the Bellevue-Stratford, and after he is through there he will go to Camden.

Rev. Antoni Korona, aged twenty-five years, pastor of the Polish Independent Catholic Church of Bayonne, was arrested Wednesday, charged with libel by Rev. Sigsmund Sweder, pastor of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Polish Roman Catholic Church. Father Korona was released in $500 bail for a hearing. Father Sweder declares that Father Korona had published in a recent issue of The Straz, the organ of the Independents, an article that attacked his character, held him up to public ridicule, and alleged he attempted to misuse funds of his church.

ASKS ENDEAVORERS TO OPPOSE SUNDAY BALL.

Urging the defeat of the anti-Sunday bill, introduced in the Legislature, Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Johnson, of Washington, this State, chairman of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union Christian Citizenship department, has sent a communication to the State societies requesting that a vigorous war be made against the bill. The letter says:

"The usual anti-Sunday bill has again been presented to the State Legislature. This time it has a new sponsor, but the intent of the bill is the same. It seeks to destroy the Sunday law by weakening its sanctions; by creating irreverence for the holy day. It would legalize games—baseball and football—and this doubtless in the interest of professionals. This bill must be defeated; we must pursue it and strike it at every point. If made a law, it will create a spirit of lawlessness in the State, destroy reverence, and will rob the Sabbath of its restfulness and sanctity. The Legislature of this State, in this pleasure-seeking, money-mad age, cannot afford to tarnish by legislative enactment a law that was given by the Almighty at creation, and which is such a blessing to mankind.

"Let your society at its first meeting after receipt of this circular enter vigorous protest against this bill. Do this by petition or resolution, and mail a copy of the same to your Senator or Assemblyman; also to the secretary of the Assembly, at the State house, Trenton."

The State executive committee, it is said, will act favorably on the matter at its next meeting and the executive committee of the Essex Endeavor Union at its monthly session next week will take similar action.

District Court Case.

The suit brought by Nicolas Soupos against George Futuros for a wagon valued at $70, brought before Judge Newcorn in the District Court yesterday, was postponed until February 27, at the District Court in Elizabeth and will be tried by Judge Whittemore.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

With a fine company, of which William Courtney is the star, Eugene Walter's play entitled "Homeward Bound," will be presented on tomorrow night at the Plainfield theatre. The Messrs. Shubert have cast Mr. in the leading roles will be found Dorothy Tennant, Marion Ballou, William Rosell, Amy Somers, Frederick Burton and Henry B. Stillman. Miss Tennant is best known by reason of the fact that she was the original "College Widow" in Ade's play of that name, while Mr. Burton is likewise identified with that funny play as he was the original "Buck Hicks." Mr. Courtney has been starring in the Parisian play, "Arsene Lupin" for the past two years, and is too well known to demand a lengthy biography. Mr. Walter's play deals with a phase of everyday life which illustrates most strikingly the tendencies of the times. A poor young chemist is persuaded by his friend, a successful business man, to pass upon a certain grade of cement to be used in a big construction job. The cement is not up to the required standard, and a huge sum of money is thereby saved. The "hit" coming to the chemist puts him on Easy street, but easy money leads to other forms of questionable methods, and a tragedy impends at the big climax of the third act. The chemist and his wife realize their mistake, and by a heroic effort, recover their mental balance and in their proper environment, again take up the straight and narrow way which means honest money, won with honest toil. Mr. Walters deals sharp practice in business a smashing blow, but is never preachy in so doing.

"The Soul Kiss" with its record of 300 nights in New York City, will be seen for the first time in this city at the Plainfield theatre on Thursday evening, February 23. The play has been given a handsome mounting. The scenery is elaborate and full of color. The chorus is strikingly costumed and in good taste. The many young men and women in the background are much more personable than the usual run of musical play choristers.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Charles Frohman, in presenting at the Garrick this week "The Zebra," the new farcical comedy from the French by Paul M. Potter, and J. M. Barrie's "The Twelve Pound ($60) Look" with "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," in which Ethel Barrymore appears in a double bill, has twenty-four productions to his credit for this season. This number includes the four Gillette revivals, Kryle Bellew's reappearance in "Raffles" and the new production of "Trelawny of the Wells."

Billie Burke surprised the New York modistes last week by appearing on the stage of the Lyceum theatre, in that city, where she is presenting "Suzanne," in a dress literally made of wood. It was made from the first bolt of the newly invented wooden cloth turned out by a Liverpool mill. The cloth is manufactured by a process which extracts a thread of cellulose from spruce wood. The dress resembles fine muslin that is unusually strong in texture.

Unbusinesslike.

A Berlin financier, who had celebrated his eightieth birthday about a quarter of a year previously, fell very sick. His business friends visited him and tried to cheer him up.

"You, with your strong constitution, will come out of this sickness all right," said one. "God will leave you with us until ninety at least."

The sick financier smiled and said: "Why should he wait to take me at ninety when he can have me at eighty and a quarter?"—American Hebrew.

REMOVING FACIAL BLEMISHES

Flesh Around Pimples or Blackheads Must Be Softened by Hot Compresses.

Immediate application of a strong astringent will often prevent formation of large pores that frequently come after pimples are removed. This is especially true when an eruption has been opened so the matter it contains may be ejected; also the manner of opening such a pimple has much to do with surface smoothness later.

Before taking out a lump the skin should always be softened by heat. If the spot is punctured while the surface is hard and unyielding all the secretion will not be thrown off and there will probably be another gathering.

To warm the flesh hot compresses are the best form of treatment. To put on these hot applications a woman may either stand with her face over a basin and keep applying a wet cloth or cloths may be wrung out of hot water and laid on the face. There should be ready to use an entirely new cambric needle. If there is the slightest doubt of its perfect cleanliness the point should be dipped into alcohol and a lighted match applied immediately. The needle will be ablaze for a second or more while the spirits burn off. The flame kills any germ that might adhere and in this way the steel is antiseptically clean.

A knife or any instrument that must be put into the flesh should always be first treated in this manner.

As soon as the skin is soft, at the end of five minutes or more, it is to be patted dry and the needle thrust straight into the swelling. The pain will be slight. Then the skin surrounding the spot may be gently pressed that all secretion shall be ejected, but care must be taken not to bruise the flesh. A soft piece of old linen should be used to wipe the spot.

The instant that the matter has been entirely pressed out the open spot must be touched with a drop of pure alcohol or spirits of camphor or any toilet water. Any liquid containing alcohol is a pronounced astringent.

If pimples recur a lotion that is commended to apply immediately after opening such sores is made from two drams of sulphur precipitate, ten grains of gum camphor, twenty grains of acacia gum and two ounces each of lime and rose waters. When this is used application of any other astringent becomes unnecessary.

The cause of pimples would be difficult to tell. Not infrequently, however, defective digestion or overindulgence in sweets causes them, and care should be given to abstemious diet. To prevent facial eruptions the liver should be made to perform its functions and the skin kept free from dust.

TO PROTECT THE COLLAR.

A Solution of the Problem of Collars Soiled by the Coat In Winter.

One of the torments of winter is the soiled collar that results from wearing a coat on top of a light waist. Not even a white lining entirely overcomes the difficulty, and various methods are resorted to for protection.

There are shaped bands of pique, white and ecru that can be bought to button inside the coat collar. The chief objection is in sewing the buttons so it will fit exactly.

Pique banding in bias folds is also sold by the piece. This is basted inside the coat collar, so it just shows a line of white on the right side.

Some girls wear a band of black ribbon around base of collar of blouse. The coat rests on this and protects the dress from soiling. The ends are crossed in front and fastened at each side with small cuff pins.

Newest of all are the gay stoles. These are made in straight bands of flowered satins in rich all over effects. Use five inch ribbon and turn over edges on a lining of white satin.

Make the stole a half yard and finish the ends with black silk knotted fringe three and a half inches deep.

Worn inside the coat these stoles are a protection to delicate frocks, and if artistic silk is chosen they add a smart touch under dark furs.

One valuable aid to health is to flush the stomach with one or more glasses of moderately cold water. If the water can be taken warm it is all the more beneficial.

Stimulation means hurrying and should be followed by resting to equalize matters, for it is impossible for the heart and other organs to work without sufficient rest.

Weak heart action may be cured by judicious exercise. Weak muscles are strengthened by exercise, and the heart is a muscle and when in perfect condition is capable of enormous exercise. If it is only weak—that is, with no organic difficulty—the desired strength may be obtained by any form of exercise that causes deep, slow, rhythmic breathing.

In cases of sore throat a cold compress is one of the best known remedies. Wring out of cold water a piece of flannel long enough to go around the neck and two inches wide after folding once. Wrap it around the throat and cover with a piece of dry flannel a little wider. Leave it on overnight and in the morning bathe the neck thoroughly in cold water.

$23 "Ostermoor" Mattresses $12.95

THE REASON FOR THIS REMARKABLE PRICE CONCESSION IS: THE COVERS ARE SUPPOSED TO BE SLIGHTLY RUBBED. WE HAVE FAILED TO DISCOVER THE DAMAGED ONS, HOWEVER.

The makers of the famous "Ostermoor" cotton felt mattress, for which we are sole Newark agents, came to us a few days ago and offered us a surprising price concession on a large lot of their regular $23.00 mattresses. They claimed these mattresses had become slightly rubbed in some way and in consequence thereof were willing to pretty nearly cut the price in two if we would agree to take a solid carload. A big purchase, it is true, but the price concession was so great that we could not, in justice to you, refuse. Every one knows what the Ostermoor is and every one knows that the price is rigidly maintained. We consider this one of the most remarkable deals we have ever consummated in our famous bedding store and we hope you will be able to take advantage of the sale. These mattresses are heavier by five pounds than the usual run of Ostermoors—which adds to the attractiveness of the bargain. Made with round corners and a border one inch wider than the ordinary grade. Choice of blue and white striped ticking, satin stripe or French art twills. Regular $23.00 grade

EVENING WRAPS.

Some Suggestions For Making Them at Home.

Braids, Furs, Laces and Even Golden Tapestry Are an Important Part of the Makeup of These Elaborate Garments.

Protecting, warm and lovely are the evening wraps of this season. Last year we marveled at and accepted the beautiful models offered, but they were but promises of the wealth of color and fabric and the beauty of line that this year throws over the shoulders of womankind.

If you are in the least inclined to home dressmaking the illustration offers a suggestion. It looks elaborate, but can be copied by any woman with an eye for combination and a hand for applying. It is loose in cut, full length and depends upon the incorporation of lace, braid and fur with the main body. It is not difficult, then, and it is decidedly worth while to look before you leap into the circle of making this important garment.

Satin of a soft shade of golden tan is veiled with brown chiffon. This must be done before the shoulder seams are sewed together. There is a suggestion of a kimono line in the extended shoulder line. The straight sleeves reach to the wrist. At the lower edge the fullness is gathered into a band of ecru lace that is edged with brown fur. A flat collar and straight cuffs are of fur, and a satin scarf ties the wrap at the top. Buttons outline the side seams, and, although jeweled forms are effective, you can cover molds with satin and then with lace and embroider with coarse silk. This is a touch that brings the model into a distinctive class.

Here is another suggestion. Braid furnishes the trimming of this satin wrap. Huge revers are heavily soutached on both surfaces, so that when crossed, as shown, or when closed at the top there is an evidence of the popular trimming. The deep cuffs and the square patch at the back are braided, and large buttons are used for elaborating the scheme. Notice the high line of the waist and the long revers that swings over to one side. The effect of braiding on plain satin is always rich, a hint for you.

Velours plays an important part in wraps this season. It is shown in a full circular cape with flowing sleeves, and it suggests the leopard's skin. No trimming is required by this covered surface, so what is saved in the trimming can be comfortably paid in material. A satin lining finishes it.

Golden tapestry, which, if you are a very clever woman, you will find in the upholstery department, is suggested for a straight wrap that falls to the ground and is edged with a double band of fur. The sleeves are cut in one with the bodice, and revers are edged with fur and tassels. Golden lace outlines the edge and is applied on the turned back cuffs. A side fastening is used, with jeweled buttons. The wearing quality of tapestry commends it to you, and the material comes so wide that a wrap is not such a luxury after all.

How would you like a white military coat? It is extremely simple in line, depending on a black velvet circular collar at the back and huge pointed revers in front for the effect of Napoleonic style. Gold buttons weight the revers and trim cuffs and skirt. White broadcloth is used, but pale gray or tan or even scarlet might be more serviceable.

A three-quarters length coat of satin is the last suggestion. The lines are loose, and the distinction depends on the square revers, the flowing sleeves and the turned up hem, all braided with narrow silk soutache. A huge braid motif is placed at the front. The crossed line here is very effective. Peacock blue trimmed with gold and green braid is a suggestion rich and durable.

TARIFF ISSUE TALK

Miss Richards Discusses Reciprocity Agitation Here and Abroad.

DAY'S POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Situations in the Far and Near East and Magazine Postage Question Are Explained by Gifted Woman.

Before a large and attentive audience, Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, D. C., gave her fifth talk on "Current History" in the Hartridge auditorium, yesterday afternoon. She devoted part of the afternoon to the discussion of foreign affairs and briefly outlined the tariff policy as opposed to free trade in Great Britain. There the Liberal Government, at present in power, warmly supports free trade and the movement for reciprocity between Canada and the United States. There the Conservative opposition in the words of Austen Chamberlain view with apprehension "Canada swung from this imperial orbit into the vortex of American affairs"—a view which has only been strengthened by Champ Clark's recent statement that Canadian reciprocity was the first step towards waving the Stars and Stripes from the North Pole to the Gulf. England has, however, by a majority vote in the House of Commons, shown herself in favor of this, the first step since 1890, for reducing the existing high tariff in this country.

The Irish party, led by John Redmond, voted in favor of reciprocity and are expected to vote in favor of vetoing the power of the House of Lords, and as payment for this support the government is pledged to grant them a measure for "Home Rule."

Miss Richards spoke briefly on the near and far Eastern questions. In the Near East hope had been raised that the Young Turks' party, which started out so auspiciously, would help greatly to solve the question of good government for Turkey and those countries under her influence but these hopes have been dashed by the deplorable retrograde movement now taking place in this party. In the Far East the terrible plague in China, supposedly imported by means of a microbe found in the pelts of certain small Manchurian animals, is making deadly headway and the matter of checking it grows more difficult as the Chinese view with great suspicion any efforts made by the Japanese or Russian medical faculty to help them. The Chinese believe that the plague was imported by these two nations for the purpose of killing them off in such numbers that Manchuria and other suitable parts of China might be exploited and colonized by Russians and Japanese.

Turning to home affairs, the question chiefly occupying the horizon is that of reciprocity, a matter strongly urged by the President, who by a speech-making tour is endeavoring to warm up public opinion in favor of it.

The bill has passed the House by a large majority, specially supported by the Democrats and may probaby be in time come to be known as a Democratic measure, though perhaps not strictly speaking originating with that party.

Miss Richards, in commenting on the movements of the Democratic party, highly praised Governor Wilson's choice for his commissioner of roads. The postal deficit was another reform measure which Miss Richards dwelt upon. The proposed change for magazine postage of four cents a pound has drawn forth a storm of protest from every magazine in the country. They claim such a postal tax would not only take all their profits but leave them annually in debt and if put into effect would mean the death of many of the magazines. A rumor is current to the effect that this measure is but a means of retaliation for the muckraking of various big Wall Street and other monied interests and notably the Mormon Senators who are pledged to defend the Mormon cause so openly exposed in the magazines at present.

The agitation over the silver service for the Battleship "Utah" is an indication of public sentiment regarding the polygamous practices of the Mormon population of the middle Western States. Miss Richards was most heartily and deservedly applauded at the close of her lecture.

She looked up, and her words died away involuntarily. Even in the ruddy firelight the captain's face showed a ghastly white, like the face of a man at the point of death. Surprise made her silent. He noticed that she left her sentence unfinished, and her looks showed the cause of it. He felt that he must be looking deadly pale and commanded himself with an effort.

"You were going to say that you had no idea we lived so near, or perhaps you might not have come to us?" he suggested. "I quite understand your feelings, and so, I am sure, would my mother. But now that you are here don't you think you had better try to forget the unfortunate situation of the house?"

"I wish I could," said the girl, looking down. "It is impossible," she was saying to herself, and her mental tone was that of passionate conviction—"impossible that he can have had anything to do with my father's death! He is too good, too gentle, to hurt any one. And an assassin—a cold blooded murderer! He? No! A thousand times, no!"

He said something that she did not hear, for her mind was absent. She was listening, almost against her will, to a voice that whispered in some dark corner of her brain, a voice that said, "Why did he turn so pale when I said that my stepfather was killed near this house?" And aloud she said, "Did you know my stepfather, Dennis Molloy?"

"No," he answered, but she thought there was a trace of hesitation before he spoke.

"He was shot down by a cowardly murderer," said the girl.

"You don't know—why should you say that?" he asked, almost sharply.

"Because none but a murderer and a coward would shoot down an unarmed man."

"It may have been—an accident."

His voice was faltering strangely. His face was still white and very serious. All the brightness had vanished from it as sunshine vanishes at the coming of a thundercloud.

"An accident!" the girl exclaimed scornfully. "A very convenient accident, perhaps, for some one—an accident that made me an orphan a second time! I had no one but him," she added simply, and the tears started to her eyes.

A great wave of pity rose in Captain Fitzgerald's heart—of pity for this girl, so beautiful, so friendless, so suddenly deprived of her only protector. He tried to speak a few words of sympathy, and, though his words were far from elegant, scarcely even grammatical, they were spoken in a tone of such obvious sincerity that the girl's heart went out to him in gratitude. Then by degrees she was led on to speak of other things, of her old home beside the roaring Atlantic, where the sound of the breakers was heard by day and by night; of the removal of the family to the east of Ireland, of her father's eviction and finally of his migration to England. Terence Fitzgerald sat and listened, caring less for the words the girl spoke than the low rich voice that uttered them, and well content to listen to anything so long as he might gaze unrebuked, unsuspected, into those wells of soft light in which her soul lay hid and devour the hundred beauties of her face.

An hour went by, and Nora came to herself with a start. She had been talking as she might have talked to an old friend. The creeping suspicions that had troubled her were laid to rest. His voice rang true, she told herself, even as his hand grasped hers firmly and warmly when she bade him good night. It was not till he had gone that she reflected upon the impropriety of shaking hands with her mistress' son. She laughed and blushed a little as she asked herself what Lady Roscommon would say, what Mrs. O'Rourke would say, if they knew. And then she discovered that she was gazing thoughtfully into the fire, and the fire was nothing but black cinders and white ashes.

CHAPTER VII.

AT THE BALL AND AFTER.

Eva was as good as her word. She met Guy one morning and handed him a list of the people who were invited to her birthday dance, and among them he found the name of a man named Brooke, with whom he was sufficiently intimate to ask him to beg for a card for Lady Roscommon's dance. The request was granted as a matter of course, and Guy was among the first arrivals.

After much anxious thought he had ventured to send Eva a birthday present—a beautifully chased silver flower vase, quite small and unpretentious, but of some value. His hope was that among the multitude of presents his would pass unnoticed by all but Eva herself. When Guy arrived there were but few guests present, and he soon managed to get Eva to himself for a few moments.

"Thank you very much for the lovely vase you sent me," she said when he had offered his congratulations. "It is really one of the very prettiest pieces of silver I ever saw. I mean to keep it on my dressing table."

Guy flushed with pleasure, but the next moment a doubt that ruined his new found satisfaction and chilled his blood crept into his mind. What was he? A briefless barrister with a small private income, just enough to enable him to maintain a decent appearance in the world. His fortune was yet to make, and the chances were about a thousand to one against his ever being able to raise himself to a position in which it would be anything but presumption for him to ask Eva Fitzgerald, the daughter of a peer and an heiress, to be his wife.

With these thoughts in his mind he looked at the radiant girl before him and sighed.

"Why are you sighing? You ought to be in the best of spirits," she said, laughing. Then in a moment she became serious. "Perhaps you have something on your mind—something that is troubling you?" she said softly.

"Yes, I have," he answered in the same tone.

"Do you think it would do you good to speak of it?" she said in a hesitating way. "Or perhaps it is something you can't tell any one."

"Yes; I am afraid my trouble belongs to that category; at least it would do no good to speak of it."

At this moment a lady came up and said a word or two to the girl in a low tone, glancing as she did so at Guy in a way that was scarcely friendly.

"I must go now. I ought to be with mamma, receiving our guests," she said to him. "Suppose you take me to her?"

"You will spare me one dance?" he whispered as they moved away, her hand resting lightly on his arm.

"I am afraid—there are so many who expect the same thing—I am afraid to promise anything so soon."

"Then I might as well not have come!" The words escaped him before he knew, in the bitterness of his disappointment.

Eva looked surprised. "I thought you would like to come—I thought you always liked dances," she said simply.

"Yes; but now I don't care to dance with any one but you."

It was done; the words were spoken! The words which he had just told himself could never be uttered! He had not meant to speak them. He did not dare to look at her, but he knew from the trembling of the little fingers on his coat sleeve that she had understood him. But she made him no answer.

There was, indeed, scarcely time for her to reply, for a few more steps brought them to the top of the great staircase, where Lord and Lady Roscommon were standing to receive their guests.

"Where have you been, Eva? Your absence at such a moment is most ill bred—quite inexcusable," said Lady Roscommon in a low, angry tone. "Where have you been? Who is that young man you were with?"

"A Mr. Lorimer, mamma," and the girl saw with secret joy that there would not be time for another question. Quite a crowd of people were on the stairs, and it was necessary for her mother to attend to her duties as hostess.

Lord Roscommon stood a little in the background, as was his invariable habit whenever such a position was possible to him. He was a short, spare man of sixty-two or sixty-three, rather short-sighted and very disinclined for exertion of any kind. He hated society and social "functions" of all kinds, and never was happier than when he was discussing with a brother enthusiast the merits of his collection of beetles or showing his gems to an appreciative friend. The rest of his time he spent in smoking and reading in his study, and he took care to leave all the troubles of domestic management to his wife and worries connected with his estate to his land steward. He formed in public estimation a complete contrast to his wife. She had energy enough and determination enough for both or for half a dozen couples.

She was still a fine looking woman, and everybody said that in her youth she must have been strikingly beautiful. But there was little of the delicacy and none of the softness of beauty in her face now. She smiled a hard, unvarying smile as one guest after another approached to offer congratulations with smooth tones and smiling face. People said that she had no heart, but there they wronged her. Her heart held but one idol, and that was her son—her handsome, frank, high spirited boy. There was nothing that she was not prepared to do for him. Eva knew that her brother held not only the first, but one might say the only, place in her mother's heart, yet she herself loved him none the less. Was he not her brother, the best of brothers, ever since the days when they had been children together in dear old Ireland?

Hall, staircase and reception rooms were now as full as they could hold. The eye was filled with the sheen of silk and of snow white satin, with the glamour of ivory white shoulders, of swaying forms and whirling mazes of color.

Everything was there that could dazzle and enthrall the senses and charm the spirit, but Guy looked on and heard nothing, saw nothing. What would she say when next they met? Would she meet him again? Was she angry?

The very thought made his heart leap in his breast and beat so as nearly to suffocate him. He turned away and met his friend Brooke face to face.

"Well, old man, you don't look ecstatically happy now that you are here," said Brooke.

(To be Continued).

Who Will?

"I understand that the hair grows after death?" said the man in the chair.

"Yes," replied the barber; "but, remember, it will not be me who will singe your hair in the next world."—Yonkers Statesman.

The Pip and the Slip.

Too much mince pie had done the trick.

Little Maimie got a pain in her sash and had to go to bed.

The family physician and his top hat called and prescribed a pill. Maimie's mother said very well, but the family physician did not know Maimie, and she was quite sure Maimie would not take the pill. The family physician said he would make it a sweet pill, but Maimie's mother replied that so long as it was a pill it would be no use.

Then the family physician was struck with a brilliant idea. The pill should be craftily concealed in the center of a preserved pear and sent up to little Maimie to eat.

An hour later Maimie's mother went to see how her sweetest dear was going on. She appeared to be going on excellently.

"And did my pet eat all her pear?" inquired the fond mother.

"Yes, mumsie," replied the little darling, "all but the nasty seed."

There's many a slip 'twixt the pear and the pip.—London Answers.

Bituminous Coal.

The first bituminous coal mined in the United States, states the United States geological survey, was taken from what is usually termed the Richmond basin, a small area in the southeastern portion of Virginia, near the city of Richmond. This basin is situated on the eastern margin of the Piedmont plateau, thirteen miles above tidewater, on the James river. It lies in Goochland, Henrico, Powhatan and Chesterfield counties. The coal beds are much distorted, and the coal is of rather low grade when compared with that from other districts with which it has to come into competition. The occurrence of coal was known in the Richmond basin as early as 1700, and in 1789 shipments were made to some of the northern states. At present what little coal is produced in this field is for local consumption only.—Scientific American.

Movement of Icebergs.

In the investigation of the currents round the coast of Newfoundland it has been observed that there is at times a wide difference in the direction of the drift of icebergs and that of the flat or pan ice, which, having no great depth, is governed in its motions by the surface currents and the winds, whereas the icebergs, the larger parts of which are submerged to a great depth, follow only the movement of the ocean water as a whole and are uninfluenced by the winds. In consequence a huge berg may often be seen majestically maintaining its slow advance in opposition to the wind and across the general motion of the fields of flat ice surrounding it. The sealers often take advantage of this fact by mooring their vessels to an iceberg in order to prevent a drift to leeward.—Philadelphia Record.

Hunting the Kangaroo.

When brought to bay the kangaroo jumps like a flash for the hunter's chest and tries to crush it in with his fore feet. To prevent this each man wears across his breast a two or three inch thick matting. Armed with a spear, with a club attachment at the other end, they ride upon swift horses into a herd. With the agility and equipoise of circus riders they stand erect upon their horses and use their spears and clubs.

The kangaroo is able to jump clear over a horse. As the game is bagged it is skinned, and the skin is stretched on the ground and pegged down to prevent shrinkage. The flesh furnishes meat for the camp. Each man places his private mark upon his booty, and when they have 100 apiece they return back to civilization.

Why He Searched.

The old man had evidently dropped something in the muddy road, and he began searching for it. In three minutes about thirty strangers had joined in the search, and every additional minute brought additional searchers, till at last one, bolder than the rest, plucked up heart and spoke:

"What are you looking for?" he inquired.

"My friend," mumbled the old man, "I have dropped a piece of taffy candy."

"But, great Scott," cried another of the crowd angrily, "why do you go looking for it when it will be covered with dirt?"

"Because, my inquisitive friend," replied the old man, "my false teeth are sticking to that taffy."

Strange Hiding Place.

False teeth are occasionally used for secretive purposes. An eccentric old lady boasts of a roof plate which consists of two thin sheets of gold between which a miniature copy of her will is inserted. In a similar manner a dyer preserves a prescription which he declares he would not disclose for a large sum.—London Mail.

Envious.

"Just think of it!" said the student of immigration. "Many men who come to this country cannot write their own names."

"Yes," answered Mr. Pinchpenny, "and when I get down my check book on the first of the month I am inclined to envy them."—Washington Star.

Fixing the Break.

"They were both broken up by their separation."

"But I understand they've effected a reconciliation and are now re-paired."—St. Louis Star.

There is no teacher like necessity; it has been the making of man; it wakes up his dormant faculties and stimulates to action his latent talents.

THE GREEN SIGNAL

A Story For St. Patrick's Day

By NORA ROURKE

Why do story writers always describe the girl who is to be the heroine of their romances as beautiful? My observation goes to show that it is more often the homely than the pretty girl that catches the fellow. Pretty girls have a continued temptation to vanity. Homely girls know they must rely on their wits, and between beauty and wits let the homely girl once get her start and she will win every time.

But the strangest cases of girls who have all the lovers they want while others go begging is she who has neither beauty nor wit. And, after all, isn't the matter of a woman's fascinating powers a mystery anyway?

Kit Tiernan had no beauty. As to her smartness, I don't know about that; but, being an Irish girl, it is natural to suppose she had her share. Anyway, she could do with a man as she liked. When she came to make us a visit one spring she was barely nineteen years old, a little over the medium height, of a sallow complexion, somewhat bony and not past that awkwardness often conspicuous in girls between fifteen and twenty. Her only good feature was her eyes. They were of a dark brown, and there was something in them to set one a-wondering.

My intimate friend Tom Shea was a bachelor and a sort of woman hater. He was often at my house and used to say gallantly that when he found as good a woman as my wife he would marry, but not before. Tom was a good catch. He was in the plumbing business, and every one knows that plumbers have a way of melting lead pipe down into gold. He was thirty years old and ran his own shop.

"Kit," I said, "I wish you'd marry my chum, Tom Shea. He would be better off with a wife, and if he were married he and I would have more in common. Now, I'll tell you what I'll do. Let me see. This is the first day of March. If you'll land Tom on or before the 17th, St. Patrick's day, I'll give you a check for a thousand dollars for a wedding present."

I wished that I could tell by the expression that came into Kit's eyes how she felt about it, but I couldn't. I knew that the idea of possessing a thousand dollars was of great importance to her, but whether the husband that was to go with it moved her at all I had no knowledge.

"How should I begin?" she asked.

"Nonsense! Don't sit there looking at me that way, asking me foolish questions. How have you begun with the dozens of fellows you've had dangling about you?"

"I never did begin."

"Then how do you do it?"

"I don't know." And, looking into her eyes for information whether or not she was telling the truth, I saw only an innocent look that accorded perfectly with her words. Possibly she was unconscious of any attempt to inveigle her admirers.

Tom was at the house more frequently than ever after Kit came. He affected to regard her as a chit beneath his notice. It wasn't long, however, before he would chat with her banteringly, and my wife and I would make excuses to leave them with each other. At such times as we all came together again Tom would wear a shamefaced look, as if it were not quite satisfied with himself for spending time with so slight a creature as Kit. I could understand Tom somewhat, but Kit was as much of a puzzle as ever.

During the last ten days of the period I had given Kit to make her thousand dollars Tom Shea, who was to be chief marshal on St. Patrick's day, was very busy planning for the parade. In fact, he didn't appear at the house for several days. Then he came one evening when Kit knew my wife and I were going out.

Tom came in just before we left, manifested an embarrassed surprise at our going, which was plainly feigned and badly feigned at that, said at first he would walk along with us to the shop, where he had some figuring to do, and ended by deciding to stay a few moments to tell Kit about the parade. We returned home at 12 o'clock, and Tom was still there, still telling her about what fine things were to be done on St. Patrick's day.

That was the last seen of Shea till he came riding down the street at the head of the St. Patrick's day procession on a milk white steed, with a green sash hanging over his right shoulder and fastened at his left side with a big star.

I must digress a bit here to say that I had hired a window from which we might witness the procession. There my wife and I and Kit, with several other people whom we had invited to share our perch, went on the morning of St. Patrick's day. There was no evidence that Kit had won her $1,000 and no evidence, judging from her appearance, which was as unreadable as ever, that she had lost it. She carried a handkerchief with her of green silk to wave at the paraders.

When Tom Shea appeared half a block away I saw him looking eagerly up at our window. As he came nearer Kit waved a white handkerchief at him. A look of terrible disappointment came in a twinkling. He came opposite the window and gave one reproachful look, when Kit drew her green handkerchief and waved it. I knew in a twinkling that the green was a signal of his acceptance. And so it was. She married Tom Shea, and I paid the $1,000.

WM. L. SMALLEY HAS PASSED AWAY

Father of Borough's Mayor Dies in His Ninety-Third Year.

HIGHLY RESPECTED CITIZEN.

William Langstaff Smalley, father of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, and one of the oldest and best known residents in this vicinity, died last night at the home of his son, David C. Smalley, of East Front street. The end came at 10 o'clock after an unconscious period of twenty-four hours. His demise had been expected for several days, and several members of the family were at the bedside until the last. The infirmities of age were primarily responsible for death as Mr. Smalley had not been in the best of health for several years. He frequently experienced severe relapses but rallied each time until the present instance.

William Langstaff Smalley was born at Liberty Corner on October 12, 1818, and was therefore in his ninety-third year. His father was Daniel Smalley, a drover, who came of old English stock and was regarded all through this section as one of the most successfull wholesale butchers in the State. Young William remained at home until November 19, 1845, when he married Phoebe Jane Irving, the daughter of Daniel Irving, of Liberty Corner.

In 1850 the couple moved to Plainfield but went back after a short time, only to return in 1860. Mr. Smalley purchased the property on West Front street now occupied by the Kolb Candy Company, in which he conducted a meat market. He sold the place to the late J. O. Campbell in 1870 and moved to Westfield, where he lived one year. He then came back to Plainfield and built the residence on Craig place, which he occupied until two and a half years ago, selling the place to W. W. Warnock. Since then he has made his home with his son David.

Mr. Smalley was never identified with politics or fraternal organizations, but was devoted to his home life and a strict adherent to business. Any improvement for the betterment of the city or borough met with his support if he believed it to be for this best interests of all, but if he disaproved he was equally as energetic to defeat the move. He was directly responsible for one of the borough's chief improvements in recent years, that of widening Somerset street, having convinced his son, the Mayor, of the advisability of such a change. He retained his interest in local affairs as long as he was in good health. He joined the First Baptist church in 1860 and continued a member since.

The wedding ceremony that united Mr. and Mrs. Smalley was performed by Rev. C. H. English, father of former Countly Prosecutor N. C. J. English, then pastor of the Liberty Corner Methodist church. It was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends of whom only five are living today. They are Mrs. Smalley's two brothers, A. M. Irving, of Monhouth, Ill., and J. S. Irving, of Westfield; her two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Lewis, of Newark, and Mrs. Amanda Hayes, of Liberty Corner; also a brother of Mr. Smalley, Lewis Smalley, of Liberty Corner. All have passed the three score and ten mark in years.

Mr. and Mrs. Smalley celebrated the sixty-fifth wedding anniversary of their wedding last November and at that time held an informal reception. The later is now in her eighty-fourth year.

Twelve children resulted from the union, seven sons and five daughters. Those surviving are Mrs. Anna J. Cadmus, Mrs. David King, Mrs. H. C. Dunbar, David C. Smalley, Alfred I. Smalley, Mayor Newton B. Smalley and William L. Smalley, Jr.,, all residing within this city or borough. There are twenty grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The sons and daughters in the family who have passed away are Martha, Hattie, Daniel, John and Jedidiah. The first named at the time of her death was Mrs. George F. Brown.

The funeral of Mr. Smalley will be held at his late residence, 524 East Front street, Monday afternoon at 2:30. Burial will be in the Plainfield cemetery.

Stores to Close.

At a meeting of the Merchants' committee of he Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon it was decided to have the stores closed all day on Washington's Birthday.

'HOSPITAL SUNDAY' IN LOCAL CHURCHES

"Hospital Sunday" will be observed tomorrow, when the collections in most of the churches throughout the city will be devoted toward the support of Muhlenberg hospital and everyone who attends service will be aiding by a contribution in the maintenance of this absolutely indispensable charitable institution.

During the six months ending December 1, 1910, 439 patients were treated in the wards and private rooms, to the extent of 6,220 days treatments. Forty-five per cent. of this work was absolutely free, and thirty-three per cent. from which only $1 a day was received. In addition 1,140 visits were made to the Dispensary. There can certainly be no more direct and practical way of contributing to charity than by contributing toward the support of this institution which does so much toward the relief of the sick of the city.

It cost $17,842 for the six months ending December 1, 1910, to operate this hospital and the revenue from patients was only $6,321 leaving a deficit of $11,520, therefore estimating the expenses and revenue for the second six months on the same basis the deficit for the year will be at least $23,000. To make up this deficit or shortage $1,500 is received from the City, $5,250 from the Freeholders of Union county, and about $1,250 from invested funds, leaving at least $15,000 which must be raised by voluntary contributions. The churches have been asked to contribute at least $2,000 or less than one-seventh of the amount which will have to be raised by voluntary contribution.

Muhlenberg is non-sectarian, representing the co-operation of all religious and creeds, and when the large amount of services rendered free, to those unable to pay, is considered the response should be as hearty as the need is great.

ST. JOHN HIS SEC'Y.

Senator-Elect Selects Able Newspaperman as Private Secretary.

APPOINTMENT EXCELLENT ONE.

Former City Editor of Daily Press, Who Brought Martine Out as a Candidate, Gets Responsible Position.

United States Senator-elect James E. Martine today announced that he had appointed William W. St. John, of Trenton, as his private secretary.

Senator-elect Martine and Mr. St. John have been intimate friends for sixteen years, during which time they have been associated together a great deal in Democratic politics. Mr. St. John was not a candidate for the secretaryship and personally was reluctant to accept the place.

It was Mr. St. John who personally induced Mr. Martine to become a candidate for United States Senator in the direct primaries. He took an active part after the November election in the campaign leading up to the choice by the Legislature of Mr. Martine as a successor to John Kean. He has been engaged in newspaper work in New Jersey since 1895, at which time he became city editor of The Plainfield Daily Press. In 1901 he founded the Elizabeth Evening Times and edited and managed that paper for three years thereafter. He was also editor of the Plainfield Courier News for three years.

Since 1908 Mr. St. John has been engaged as a legislative correspondent and New Jersey political writer in Trenton, where he maintains a news service for a number of New Jersey, Philadelphia and New York papers.

Mr. Martine's selection is gratifying to the Senator's admirers and supporters. Mr.St. John has an exceptional knowledge of the current political issues and has a wide and intimate acquaintance with men in political life not only in New Jersey but in the country at large. He has made a long and earnest study of politics and his devotion to Democracy is not surpassed by that of the Senator himself.

CONFERENCE BEGINS AT GRACE TOMORROW

Reverend Charles Fiske, of Baltimore, Md., begins a Conference on the Religious Life at Grace church tomorrow morning, which promises to prove of interest and of value to the community generally. Mr. Fiske's broad experience of life adds much to his well known and generally recognized intellectual attainments. He began active life in the business world, as a newspaper man working on the staff of one of the dailies. This early literary experience has many times been called into requisition by the church; and within recent years Mr. Fiske has acted as associate editor of The Churchman, New York.

Leaving the business world, Mr. Fiske decided to give his life to the ministry of the Church. He was a student of the General Theological Seminary, graduating from the institution about fifteen years ago. He has directed several parishes with success. He came to the Diocese of New Jersey as rector of St. Paul's church, Westfield; later he was called to St. John's church, Somerville, and after some years of successful service was transferred to St. John's, Norristown, Pa. While there Mr. Fiske was called to the city of Baltimore to become rector of a parish of sixteen hundred communicants and at this church of St. Michael and All Angels' he is winning most substantial popularity and wide influence. Mr. Fiske as a speaker is not of a class of popular orators. He is a student, a keen and logical thinker, and a very practical and direct speaker. He is sure to help as well as interest all who will have the good fortune to hear him.

The subjects for the sermons tomorrow are: In the morning at 11 "Christ in Common Life;" in the evening at 4:30, "What Seek Ye?"

An invitation is extended to the public to be present.

Ling Young's Funeral.

The body of Ling Young, the Chinese laundryman who died yesterday, will be shipped to New York this afternoon. A funeral will be held there tomorrow and burial will be in the Chinese cemetery in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Catherine Hill's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Hill, wife of James Hill, will be held at the late residence, 840 Richmond street, Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

TO TEACH YOUTHS

HEADMASTER IS FORTUNATE.

Clergyman Confirms Report and Says He Will Retain Rectorship of Church of Holy Cross.

It is understood upon reliable authority that John Leal, headmaster of the boys' school which bears his name, has entered into an agreement with Rev. George A. Warner whereby Mr. Warner will take charge of and reorganize the junior department of the school. The reorganization will be effected on a basis suggested by Mr. Warner, enlarging the scope of the work and providing for boys from seven years of age and upward. Such assistance as additional teachers and facilities for the enlarged work in the department, it is said, will be at Mr. Warner's disposal as needed.

On being questioned by a representative of this paper as to the reliability of the report Mr. Warner admitted its substantial correctness. "It is not entirely new for me to be teaching," he said. "I spent several years as private tutor to boys during my seminary course and one year after graduation as headmaster of a boys' school, a position I resigned in order to accept an especially advantageous trip abroad acting as tutor in a well known New York family."

This year Mr. Warner has been teaching in the boys' department of the Hartridge school, where he has been successful and made many friends.

The information was vouchsafed furthermore that Mr. Warner had no intention of giving up his present office as rector of the Church of the Holy Cross.

It would seem that the peculiar fitness of Mr. Warner for the boys' work influenced the vestry of the church in seconding his wish to engage in it. Members of his church know well and assume that the church and its interests have never been nor will they be neglected. It seems to be a matter for congraulation that a man peculiarly gifted for educational work among boys should have time to devote to it and still be free to carry on the work of his high calling.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT THE EAGLES' BALL

One of the largest crowds of the season attended the ball of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., in Saengerbund Hall last night. Delegations were present from aeries in all the nearby towns.

The decorations as arranged by Charles Ryder and Daniel Guinee were the most elaborate yet seen in the hall. The stage was a solid mass of palms and plants intertwined with colored electric lights. Over 450 bulbs were used all told. The sign "F. O. E., 866' and the initials of the order's principles, Friendship, Truth, Equality and Justice were displayed above the stage. Bunting and flags were also used.

Daniel Guinee was floor manager and the committee or arrangements was composed of Charles L. Ryder, Jr., chairman; F. Stranzenbach, H. A. Wierenga, John Vardon, D. J. Guinee, James Conway, J. Mahoney, P. W. Guinee, E. . McCann and C. Anderson. A. G. Adams headed the reception committee.

She was found in the latter city by a policeman Thursday night, having gone there to seek work. Chief Kiely was notified and at the request of the girl's father, Charles Ferris, he had the girl sent back.

Funeral of Francis Fitzgerald.

The funeral of Francis Fitzgerald was held in St. Mary's church this morning. A requiem mass was said by Rev. Father Sciolla. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall bearers being John McCarthy, 1st; John McCarthy, 2nd; John Kyle, Frank Cullen, Jr., Joseph Diver and Joseph Green.

Mrs. Henry Keiderling.

She is survived by a husband and nine children and all but two reside in this city. The funeral will be held at the late home at 2:30 o'clock

SENTIMENT AT HEARING FAVORABLE TO NEW CONTRACT WITH WATER CO.

Councilmanic Committee Hears Property Owners Voice Sound Reasons Against Public Ownership of Supply Under Present Conditions—New Light Shed on the Situation.

There was an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the city making another contract with the Plainfield-Union Water Company, at the public hearing held in the Common Council rooms, last night, as against the proposition to establish a municipal ownership plant, as recommended by the special water investigating committee. The opinions were quite in contrast to those expressed three weeks ago when a similar meeting was held. At that time the weight of opinion was in favor of municipal ownership. It was practically admitted last night that the water committee has a difficult problem to solve.

There was a feeling after last night's meeting that if the committee was governed by the sentiment expressed, it would make another contract with the water company and not attempt at this time to acquire a plant for the city either through condemnation proceedings or by building an independent plant. Eighteen citizens spoke on the subject at the meeting and of that number, fourteen favored the making of another contract with the water company believing that the time is not right for acquiring a water plant and possibly bonding the city for a million and a quarter or two million dollars.

Those who spoke in favor of making another contract were: L. B. Woolston, George P. Mellick, W. H. Sampson, David T. Kenney, James F. Buckle, Jacob Sachar, Judge William Newcorn, Leighton Calkins, Daniel Dugan, Robert Rushmore, A. C. Rogers, Charles H. Hand, Winfield S. Angleman, Amos Andrews, while those who favored municipal ownership to a certain extent were R. Henry Depew, H. H. Williams, W. A. Garrigues and Howard C. Tracy.

The public hearing was held under the direction of the special water investigating committee, Councilman F. E. Mygatt, George S. Clay, Duncan W. Taylor and W. L. Gloak, all of whom were present. Mr. Mygatt was chairman and simply invited the citizens to express their opinions, the councilmen did not enter into a discussion on the subject.

L. B. Woolston was of the opinion that the special election held last year gave the Council full authority to go ahead, investigate and acquire a water plant either by condemnation or build a new plant. He then quoted the assessed valuation of the city at the time the vote was taken, explaining that of the 1,545 votes cast it represented a little over fifty per cent. of voters who were not property-owners. He did not consider this a fair sentiment, and besides he did not think that the city has as yet obtained the information it wants on the subject. He thought the engineer's report was a good one but you could argue the essential points to suit yourself.

Te be exact, Mr. Woolston quoted definite figure showing that when the special election was held the assessed valuation of the city was $23,603.029. The voters represented a personal tax of $112,825 and real estate amounting to $5,005,985, a total of $5,118,810. The total vote was 1,545, of which number 559 were property-owners and in the case of 192 the property was in the wife's name. The registry list at that time was 4,742.

Mr. Woolston raised the question that the amount of taxes received from the water company by the city about offset the amount paid by he city to the company. Mr. Mygatt took exception to this saying that he thought the city paid about $4,000 more than the company paid the city. Today, Mr. Woolston secured the exact figures showing that the water company pays the city yearly $6,500.35, while the city pays the water company $6,308.01 and in addition the company furnishes water free in a number of cases.

Mr. Woolston stated that he favored the city, not the water company and if it could be shown that the city would get cheaper water or as cheap at a reasonable expense, he would favor municipal ownership. However, he believed that condemnation proceedings would mean a great expense and if the present plant is purchased, a heavy bonded debt.

W. H. Sampson, of East Fifth street, spoke strongly in favor of continuing the present arrangement, adding that he did not favor a "change of drinks." He believed a satisfactory contract could be made with the water company and quoted former Mayor Alexander Gilbert as being of the same opinion.

Speaking in favor of the municipal ownership idea, R. Henry Depew, stated that both reports of the committee, the majority and minority, were clear on he subject, but in his opinion the majority report would seem to solve the problem better. He had no patience with the voters who remained away from the polls, those who would go off and play golf or do something else on election day and said that they should not be considered. Mr. Depew said that the council had been given full power and authority in the matter and he thought it would be a short-sighted policy to halt at the expenditure of a few thousand dollars to ascertain what the city could do when the future welfare of the city is at stake.

"Now is the time to go into the matter thoroughly," said Mr. Depew. "They say that a contract could be made that would button things up so that they could not be pulled apart. This cannot be done. There are lawyers who will pull them apart, that's what they are in business for. Water is what we want. I own considerable property and would willing to pay my proportionate share of the expense of a city plant. Of course, we don't want a big bond issue hanging over the city, but a water bond issue is different from others."

Calling attention to the fact that many of the largest property owners live outside the city, David T. Kenney was not so sure that a municipal plant would be advisable. He suggested that the city acquire a suitable tract of land upon which a plant could be located at some future time. He did not think Mr. Depew's argument a good one. Another important point made by Mr. Kenney was that many of the largest property owners live out of the city and should be considered.

"I did favor municipal ownership of water at one time," said James F. Buckle, "but at that time the city failed to assume its responsibility, and I have been blessing the present water company ever since. They furnish me with the best water possible to get at five cents a day. The company has always lived up to its agreements and that is more than you can say of the city. I believe that my neighbor is entitled to water the same as we are. If the city is going to buy the plant, let it pay a fair price and I will contribute my share."

Judge William Newcorn discussed the matter at great length, arguing strongly against the municipal ownership idea. He said that for twenty years Plainfield had been getting wholesome water and the cost was equally fair. He was a member of the previous water investigating committee and said that he knew something of conditions. Little was to be gained by making a change. He did not favor placing a burden on the city that would run for the next seventy-five or one hundred years. He quoted figures to show that city ownership would not be advisable, even from the engineer's point of view. He stated that the water company would agree to stop the diversion of water if it were shown that the necessity demanded this. He spoke of the expense of condemnation proceedings, which he said would be at least $20,000 and possibly $50,000. He believed that the question of garbage disposal and that of properly lighting the streets to be of far more importance than municipal ownership of water.

Howard H. Williams spoke briefly on the subject from an economical point of view, and while he believed that municipal ownership might be a good thing, he thought that sufficient light had not been thrown on the subject. In his opinion the people were anxious to do the thing that would be the most economical. In answer to his questions it was stated that it wold approximately cost about $10,000 to bore test wells. He cited conditions that existed in his home town in the Berkshire Hills, where a plant cost about $400,000 but in that case water was obtained by gravity not so easily secured in this city.

WORK THAT TELLS.

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Plainfield.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a emdicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Plainfield. People who testified years ago to relief from backaches kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure prefect. How can any Plainfield sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Mrs. S. Driscoll, 1009 South Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says. "There was a dull pain across the small of my back and in my sides that clung to me constantly and any hard work made my condition worse. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells, especially when stooping and I felt weak and run down. I tried plasters and various remedies, but nothing helped me until I procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug Store. They did such good work in correcting my trouble that I heartily recommend them." (Statement given August 25, 1908).

RE-ENDORSEMENT.

Mrs. Driscoll was interviewed on January 29, 1911, and she added to the above: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I have been for the past five years. They made a lasting cure in my case."

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Henry Miller has long ranked as the leading exponent of realism on the American stage, but in his new success, "The Havoc," now running at the Bijou theatre in New York, Mr. Miller introduces a little touch of fidelity to life which arouses comment even from the audiences accustomed to Henry Miller's methods. In the first act of the play, laid in a modern New York flat, the family in the stage story partakes at a supper which last twenty minutes. Instead of the empty dishes and makebelieve which audiences are accustomed to see on the stage, Mr. Miller, Miss Crews and Mr. Byrne, the three principals of the play, sit down to an expensive supper served from a famous Broadway restaurant. Hot chops, just from the grill, smoking-hot creamed potatoes, crisp fresh bread and steaming coffee, send an appetizing aroma through the theatre.

"The Boss" at the Astor theatre is the season's sensation on Broadway. Guy Bates Post who originated the role of Philip Morrow will be seen in his original character, and others in the cast include Florence Rockwell, J. M. Colville, Maud Durand and other well-known players. "The Nigger" is one of the most absorbing plays ever seen on the American stage, and has created remarkable discussion. The story concerns a refined, educated man who learns he has negro blood in his veins, and who is compelled for that reason to abandon public life and relinquish the woman he loves.

At Nazimova's Thirty-ninth street theatre, "Baby Mine," Margaret Mayo's delightful farce, continues its successful run. It will remain in New York the balance of the season.

After teaching school in Bucks county, Pa., for six years he entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, where he graduated in 1886. BILLS FOR COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

Trenton, Feb. 18.— Judge Frederick W. Gnichtel, of the Mercer County Court of Common Pleas, has prepared two drafts of a bill to permit cities of the State to adopt commission form of government and has submitted them to the Trenton Chamber of Commerce commission government committee.

One of the bills provides for simple commission form of government and the other ambraces the recall, initiative and referendum.

Bill "A" permits the adoption of a commission of five without any of the features deemed necessary by students of commission government such as the recall, initiative, referendum and the latest ideas injected into the charters of Spokane and other cities. It includes not only cities, but towns, boroughs and other municipalities; provides for election at large of five commissioners for a term of two years; grants the Mayor, who shall be elected by the commissioners as a presiding officer, no veto power. It designates the departments distributed among the five commissioners as follows: Public affairs, accounts and finances, Public safety, public improvements, parks and public property. It fixes the salaries of the cities in accordance with the population as follows: Over 200,000, $5,000 for commissioners, $5,500 for Mayor; 100,000 to 200,000, for the commissioners, $3,000, and Mayor $3,500; 40,000 to 100,000, the commissioners, $2,000, and Mayor $2,500; from 20,000 to 40,000 commissioners $1,500, Mayor $1,800; 10,000 to 20,000, commissioners $1,200, Mayor $1,500; less than 10,000, commissioners $600, Mayor $900.

The second bill increases the term from two to four years for the commission of five. It adds the recall feature by permitting the petition of twenty-five per cent. of the electors to provide for a special election covering a recall of any elective officer. It also provides for the initiative and also for the referendum.

UNCLE SAM NEVER SO RICH BEFORE

Washington, Feb. 18.—Uncle Sam has more gold in his possession today than he has ever had before in his life. Treasurer Lee McClung, looked over his balance sheets yesterday afternoon and found the government had over a billion dollars in gold coin, to say nothing of $126,000,000 in bullion. Never before in the history of the government has it had so much gold piled up in its coffers.

Not only is this a record-breaking amount for the government to have but there is more gold in the treasury now than in the vaults of Great Britain and France combined, or of Great Britain and Germany combinde, or of Great Britain and Russia combined. In other words, this government has more gold, in gold coin and bullion, than any other two nations.

This vast golden hoard represents the accumulation of a long series of years. It is not ascribed to any particular financial development of recent occurrence. By no means all this gold coin and bullion is stored in Washington. Any burglarious gentleman who thinks he can tunnel under the treasury and find all this gold in that institution some dark night is in error. The gold is partly in the vaults of the treasury here in Washington, some of it is in the vaults of the sub-treasuries, and some of it in the mints of Philadelphia and Denver. As a matter of fact, the greater part of it is at the two mints named.

About $935,000,000 of the total coin is held in trust to redeem outstanding gold certificates. It is expected Congress will put through legislation this session to enable the treasury to issue gold certificates against gold bullion in the proportion of three to two. That is, for $200 in bullion it would be possible to issue $300 in gold certificates against the bullion. This would lessen the amount of mintage necessary. Three years ago the government transferred $275,000,000 in gold coin from San Francisco to Denver. That task was accomplished at a cost of $275,000.

COUNT APPONYI LIKES PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.

Princeton, Feb. 18.—After his lecture to the students of Princeton University Thursday night Count Apponyi, of Austria, said he "would like nothing more than to be a student in such surroundings. In fact," he added, "I think I shall send my young son to your university. He is only about twelve years old now, but when he is older I think nothing would be better for him. Your American surroundings would make a man of him."

Count Apponyi addressed an audience of about 1,500, made up of the faculty and students of the university in Alexander Hall. His subject was "Some Practical Difficulties of the Peace Problem in Europe." He highly complimented President Taft for his efforts looking to peaceful arbitration.

But Apponyi went on to explain that the small nations of Europe do not favor such proposals because they fear they would end their sovereignty if put in practice.

The Count constantly emphasized his declaration that international law must recognize and provide for the individual as well as the nation. He appealed to the world, to solve all "arduous problems that require co-operation, patience and clear-sighted action."

HOUSEKEEPING AIDS.

Flatirons should not be allowed to become red hot, for they will not retain the heat properly afterwards.

Before broiling a steak dust it with salt and pepper and rub it with salad oil. This will greatly improve it.

Tomatoes should be skinned before being used for salad. To do this easily place the fruit in a basin and pour boiling water on them.

When cutting new bread heat your knife by dipping it into a jug of hot water. In this way you may cut the thinnest bread and butter from a new loaf quite easily.

Toast should always be thin and crisp. Cut the slices from a stale loaf and dry in the oven before toasting them.

Examine the bread pan three times a week in case crumbs left in should become mouldy. These would speedily affect the whole contents of the pan.

A damp room or cupboard may be dried by keeping in it a jar containing quicklime. The lime will absorb the damp and keep the air dry and pure. It must be frequently renewed as it loses its power.

A porcelain sink can be quickly cleaned with parafine. Dip a flannel lightly into the paraffin and rub the sink till all the stains are removed, then thoroughly wash it with soap and soda water.

SEWING CONVENIENCE.

If you can do even the simplest sort of crocheting, you must make yourself and your friends one of the little crocheted silk embroidery scissors holders. These consist simply of a cork crocheted around in silk everywhere except the top surface, and with a crocheted string or handle to which the scissors are attached. Then when they are not in use the points are stuck into the cork and they are out of harm's way.

An accompaniment of this, not quite so new, but very useful, is a tiny glass medicine vial without a lid, crocheted all over finely. Into it are dropped broken needles and bent pins, and they are far safer there than thrown careless on the floor or in the wastebasket. When the vial is full slip off the silk—a little drawing string at the bottom permits this—and empty it, burrying the needles in the earth or throwing them in the fire.

These two little sewing conveniences, attached by a bit of ribbon in the same color, will make charming favors for the next luncheon of your sewing society.

THE COLOR NOTE.

One noticeable difference between white and neutral tinted frocks of last season and those of the coming is the introduction of a brilliant note of color in the new models.

A gray cloth is relieved by an ornament of coral, a jeweled buckle or button of other brilliant stones or a simple knot of brilliant emerald green or king's blue.

It is frequently this touch of color that proclaims the true artist back of the gown. The making (and, alas! the marring) of a costume often depends upon the details that many foolish ones consider too small to notice.

Look, therefore, to your last note of brilliant color, that must be placed at just the right place, in just the right amount of contrast and in a form that will speak eloquently of the individuality of the owner.

A NEW PLACE CARD.

Among the season's place cards are Chantecler effect so arranged as to give a novel touch to a table. A card of white pasteboard four by three is doubled horizontally so it will stand. On the right hand corner facing to the left is pasted one of the various members of the barnyard drama.

In the set are the pheasant, the peacock, Chantecler himself, the plump squab, and various others. Each is dressed in its appropriate garb of colored feathers, to which is added the now well-known face of man or woman.

The fowls stand well above the cards which are used more as a prop than as anything else. Such a set could easily be made by an ingenious hostess who has the knack of drawing faces.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Timothy Woodruff, a retired Milliville merchant, was stricken with paralysis Thursday, and is in a critical condition.

Eight candidates for sheriff in Cumberland county are soliciting support from the voters, although the election will not occur until fall.

Harry Rulon, of Glassboro, fell from a window while working on the new gas plant Thursday, and broke one of his legs so that it will probably have to be amputated. He was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Judge Scott Thursday appointed Justice of the Peace James Strachan, of Passaic, to act as probation officer of that city, without pay. Police Justice Costello made the recommendation, as Passaic has long been in need of a probation officer.

Former Freeholder and Mrs. Peter E. Smith celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home in Quinton, Wednesday. They have had two sons and two daughters, with twelve grandchildren, and there has been but one death in their immediate family since the marriage.

Word was received in Passaic yesterday that Joseph Ratzer, forty years old, of Harrison avenue, that city, employed as a towerman at Jersey City for the Erie Railroad, was injured several days ago by being caught between a shifting engine and the dock, and that he is now in a precarious condition at St. Francis' Hospital, in that city. An examination showed that he had sustained three broken ribs and a punctured lung.

Nearly 1,000 persons attended the annual banquet of the Mt. Ephraim and Haddonfield Detective and Pursuing Association in Haddonfield Thursday. Because of the large number, the banquet started at 4 in the afternoon and lasted until nearly 10 o'clock. Prominent Camden county officials made speeches. The association is more than forty years old. Three of the charter members were present, Ezra Bell and James Bell, of Haddonfield, and Edward W. Hunt, of Kirkwood.

Joyce Turner, colored, wanted in Camden for fourteen months on a charge of shooting his wife, Minnie Turner, and Clara Shorts, was arrested at Chester, Pa., Thursday. He was taken to Camden last night, and will have a hearing today. Joyce lived with his wife in East Camden. On December 12, 1908, they quarreled after Turner had accused her. Mrs. Turner got a bullet in the mouth and one in the wrist, and the Shorts woman, who was making a friendly call, went down with a bullet in her hip. None of the wounds proved serious.

Remove Guard From Pier.

Jersey City, Feb. 18.—The last of the police on guard at pier 7 of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Communipaw, where the dynamite explosion that resulted in the death of a score of persons occurred, were withdrawn yesterday. Headquarters Detective Sergeant Coyle and Feehan, who had been on guard at the pier since the explosion took place on February 1, were ordered to other duty yesterday by Chief of Detectives Dan Lee. The uniformed police were all withdrawn from the pier last week. The two detectives stayed on the job to watch the work of raising the Katherine W. and the launch Whistler, to obtain additional evidence to be used in the office investigation to place the blame. The last piece of the Katherine W. was raised by divers Thursday afternoon. No bodies or dynamite was found on the river bottom.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will occupy his pulpit tomorrow morning and evening, after an absence of several weeks.

THE FORUM.

Site for Library.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Sir: It is certainly very desirable that Plainfield should have a new library building, and if there is not enough public spirit among its citizens to build one wihout outside aid we might as well have some of Mr. Carnegie's money as to let it go to another community. But will it not be well to have some discussion as to its location? The present library is too far from the people to whom it should be most beneficial. The reading room is to too large an extent used by children, and cannot aid those whose time for reading is too scant to permit them to go up to Eighth street and Park avenue. It seems to me that the situation should be treated in a broad spirit, and that the library should be so planned as to reach those whose means do not permit the purchase of desired books. Now if the new building were to be erected on Second street, somewhere between Watchung and Madison avenues, it would be far more accessible to North Plainfield, and the east and west parts of the city; it would offer an opportunity to the employes of the business places to drop in at the noon hour, and after work is over. Then plans should be made looking to the establishment in the not distant future of effective branches in the neighborhood of the Pond Tool Works at the West End, Berckman street at the East End, and somewhere on Somerset street, beyond the public school in North Plainfield. These branches should be equipped with reading rooms and books should be delivered from them to borrowers

The present library would then become a branch and a store place for books for which there is little call, and for such as by the terms of bequests are required to be kept apart.

In this way the circulation could be greatly increased, and the library made a far greater intellectual and moral force in the community than is possible under the present circumstances.

It seems to be an insufficient reason for limiting the library to its present work that the city owns the land fronting on College place. Doubtless the fifty thousand dollars offered by Mr. Carnegie would be insufficient for such an institution as I have suggested, but is it not worth while to endeavor to discover whether the residents of Plainfield and North Plainfield have not enough interest in the future welfare of these communities, likely soon to be one city, to give a larger usefulness to the Public Library by adding to the proposed fund? Will not somoene else express his views on the matter.

APPEAL IS MADE FOR THE HOSPITAL

Forty-two per cent. of the work done by Muhlenberg Hospital is purely charitable, in the sense that there is no returns from the poor of Plainfield who are freely treated and never turned away in the time of their great need. There are however, only about 500 individuals, in Plainfield who regularly subscribe each year, a certain amount for the support of this charitable work. They contributed last year a total of about $6,500, or an average of approximately, $13 each. This is a very generous average; but what is needed is a larger number of regular subscribers, even at small amounts of five dollars or even less. It would seem as if two or three times as many persons, in a city of the size of Plainfield, ought to be expected to contribute one or two dollars a year, in order to help on an institution of this character. What is wanted is a large number of small subscribers, each doing (within his means) what he can to enable the hospital to meet its demands among our deserving poor in the time of their illness and distress.

It is expected that there will be a generous response to the recent request from the finance committee, for additional subscribers, as well as increases from those who already are so willingly assisting in this work.

MONTCLAIR'S GIRLS DEFEAT P.H.S. FIVE

The basketball game at the High School yesterday afternoon between the Plainfield and Montclair High School girls' teams was one of the fastest and most exciting contests ever played on the local court. Despite the fact that the Montclair girls hold the State championship and have only been defeated once this year, the local five tied the score in the first half and was only defeated in the last few minutes of play. The final score was 14 to 11.

The game was a fine exhibition of endurance on the part of both teams and was played without a lull in the whole contest. The game was fast with a great many fouls. In the first half Miss Wean, of the local team, started the scoring by throwing a basket from the foul line. Miss Durar soon followed with a foul goal, as did Miss Stewart. Another foul by Miss Wean and a field goal by Miss Durar completed the scoring in this half for the local squad. The Montclair five scored from fouls and two field goals making the score 8 to 8.

In the second half, the local team was outplayed. It was only the fast work of Miss Stiles and Miss Wean at guard that kept the Plainfield five from an overwhelming defeat. A field goal by Miss Durar and a foul by Miss Stewart was the only scoring for the home team in this half, while the Montclair team made two field goals and shot four fouls. Both teams played hard until the end but the accurate foul shooting and fast play of Miss Young won the game for Montclair in the last minutes of play.

Miss Durar starred for Plainfield, making three field goals, and Miss Young was the star for Montclair, shooting two field goals and eight folds. The lineup follews:

Plainfield		Montclair
Durar		Young
Stewart		Carter
	Forwards
Phillips		McChesney
	Center
Wean		Pliphant
Stiles		Fentzlaff

Referee: Miss D. T. Day.

That Habit.

"What galls me," said the man with the disturbed eyebrows, "is one of these fellows who tell you a joke and then repeat the point. Honest, though, it's funny, when you think of it. He'll tell the joke, then after you've laughed he'll repeat the nub of it and laugh again."

"Yes?" comments the man with the pointed nose.

"Yes. Tells the joke, then repeats the point. Ha, ha! Funny habit! Tells it, then repeats it!"

"Um! I see," says the other. "I see."—Judge.

DRY CLEANING TALK
Number 1---EXPLANATION

During the next few months we will give Dry Cleaning Talks regularly, which articles will make you more familiar with our work and service. These talks will also familiarize you with the dry cleaning method of cleansing and rejuvenating all kinds of fabrics—both wearing and household—that are too valuable or too delicate to be washed by soap and water.

Our object, while selfish, is educational. There are thousands in this vicinity who are not our patrons either for Dry Cleaning or Pressing because they do not understand our service and the benefit Dry Cleaning is to soiled delicate garments.

We will try to impress upon you that the best place to send your Dry Cleaning work and pressing is

HEBREWS' RECEPTION AND DANCE, FEB 22

Plans are completed for the reception and dance which is to be given at Saengerbund Hall on Washington's birthday, Wednesday night, February 22, by the Hebrew Social Club. The arrangement committee is composed of Irving Kunzman, chairman, L. Rothberg J. Abrams and J. A. Feldman. One of the features will be the appearance of Madamoiselle Marie Osso, a French soprano, now of New York city, who will sing the Aria frm Cavellaria Rusticana, by Mascagni and the aria from Tosca, by Puccini. Madamoiselle Osso, will be accompanied on the piano by William Zuro. Mr. Zuro is the younger brother of the popular conductor of the orchestra of the Manhattan Opera House, and those who know the Zuro brothers promise an even more distinguished career for the younger Zuro.

The ball-room will be appropriately decorated with flags and bunting and Suhr's full orchestra will furnish the music for the dances. Butterfly, shadow and snow dances are on the program. A souvenir dance order is being gotten out with handsomely embossed covers. It contains an artistic engraving representing Washington at his desk, with Liberty hovering above him with a laurel wreath in her hand.

A delegation of New Brunswick people are coming on a straw-ride and a large representation from out-of-town is expected. Among the patronesses are Mrs. M. Abrams, Mrs. M. Davidson, Mrs. K. Rothberg, Mrs. A. Kunzman, Mrs. T. Canter, Mrs. I. Shrager and Mrs. M. Baum, of Somerville.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Easiest Way to Get Consolidation.

The North Plainfield Borough Council has decided for the present not to take any hand in the discussion for consolidation with the city of Plainfield because it wants the sewer question settled first. This does not mean, however, that consolidation has been sidetracked. In fact, there seems to be much sentiment in the borough in favor of going into Plainfield. This being true, the conditions should be faced fairly and sensibly and legislation should be sought that would accomplish the object with as little discussion as possible. The question of consolidation is a very different one from that of the annexation of a portion of Somerset to Union county. There is no reason why legislation should not be secured whereby the borough could become a part of the city without a change in the county lines. The borough would then be wards of the city and would have all the advantages that may be derived from that and still remain as a part of Somerset county. A change of county lines would cause endless trouble and expense in the transfer of property, for searches in both counties would have to be made, and this would double the cost. Taxes would be increased by going over to Union county, and there are other ways in which the borough would be the loser in making the change. Somerset cannot afford to have North Plainfield sliced out of her territory. It would be too serious a loss to her and would be manifestly unfair to enlarge Union by such an addition at the expense of a smaller county. No fair minded man could look at it otherwise. We do not believe the representatives of Somerset in the Legislature would consent to such a proposition, because their constituents do not want it. The easiest way for North Plainfield to become a part of Plainfield, if she desires this, is to get legislation that would permit a municipality in one county to consolidate with a municipality in an adjoining county. This would be fair and satisfactory to all parties concerned.—Somerville Unionist Gazette.

Confiscate Pictures.

Chief Kiely, accompanied by Patrolman Daniel McDonald, visited the rooms of the Beaver Club, on West Front street, yesterday afternoon and removed from the walls of the club rooms eight or ten pictures. Later in the afternoon the Chief and Mayor Moy visited the club and made an inspection. Before they departed they gave the young members of the club some wholesome advice.

"Look a-here, Lem," said a subscriber to the village weekly, meeting its editor on the street, "when are you a-goin' to give us somethin' 'bout th' fire last Thursday?"

"I didn't reckon to say anythin' 'bout it, Jonas," replied the editor. "Every man, woman, child, and dog in the whole town knows there was a fire, saw th' fire and was ot th' fire, an' I reckon they're plum tired of it."

THE RIGHT OF SEARCH

And the Woman Who Would Try to Do a Little Smuggling

By A. S. CROCKETT

"Be sure," Mrs. Jeffreys read from her husband's letter, "to declare everything. The customs inspectors are on the alert. The new collector is carrying out the law to the letter, and there is no chance of getting a 'free entry' this year. I spoke to Senator Jones about it, and he assured me that, while he would be glad to give me the same sort of letter as last year, it would be worthless.

"Let's see," she reflected. "Of course I can wear the traveling dress ashore, and then I can also wear that dear little turban. I must muss both up a bit, and I can break the feather in the turban, so that the hat will not look new.

"Heloise!" she called.

"Oui, madame," answered her maid.

"Have you bought much in Paris for yourself?"

"Non, madame; jus' a leetle lace."

"Then you must take one of my trunks for yourself and pack some of my things in it. I will tell you which later."

Left to herself, Mrs. Jeffreys resumes her addition, subtraction and division.

"Let's see, $100 for each passenger. That makes $200 for Heloise and myself. That black silk alone cost that much, while the other dresses cost—let's see—400 francs plus 500, plus 750. That's 1,650. Five into sixteen goes three times, carry one. Why, 330 plus 200 equals $530, and, merciful heavens, that doesn't count lingerie or stockings or"— And her glance encountered two beautiful Sevres vases standing on the mantel. She gave a scream that brought Heloise to the door.

"It is nothing. I—I thought I saw a mouse."

Heloise picked up her skirts and fled.

"Ah, those vases!" Mrs. Jeffreys resumed. "How on earth am I ever going to get them in? The duty on them alone would be more than $100. Let me think. No," after a pause, "I could not conceal them. Well, let me make the best I can out of the other things. Let's see. I can put the black silk down at, say, $50. The materials did not cost more than $30, I am sure; the other dresses $30, $35 and $40, not counting the one I shall wear. That makes $155 altogether. The lingerie—well, we can change the appearance of most of that by rubbing it on the carpet, and the rest I can divide between Heloise and myself in such a way that I can list the hats and the stockings for $40."

Then she thought of the vases again. Mrs. Jeffreys was still thinking of the vases when the steamship left Cherbourg, and she thought of little else for the first three days. Women homeward bound are sometimes a little talkative when it comes to discussing great bargains they have picked up, but Mrs. Jeffreys maintained a strict silence on this topic, even when her friend Mrs. Burroughs confessed that she had bought lots of things, including yards and yards of lace, and, as for simply paying duty, she would see congress and the president in very hot regions before she would give up a cent. "I shall conceal the lace on my person," she confided. "I have a dress that I am taking home to mother, who, you know, is larger than I, and on the morning we land you will see an extremely matronly person going down the gangplank if you watch me, my dear."

Mrs. Jeffreys sighed. Ah, if she had not bought those vases!

A thought struck her. Why not carry those vases ashore, after all? She excused herself and went to her stateroom, where, after locking the door, she took the two exquisite ornaments from a traveling bag.

She removed her skirts. Then she took a strap from the bag and fastened one end to a vase and the other to a belt. The other she fastened similarly, so that one hung from the front and the other from the back. Then she put on her skirts again and walked about the room.

"I have it at last," she exclaimed joyfully, "only I must be careful about walking."

That day she ate the first hearty luncheon of her voyage, and when in the afternoon the declarations were passed about to be filled by the passengers she made hers out in the fashion she had planned in Paris.

Mrs. Jeffreys did not complete her toilet on the morning the ship arrived until the vessel was coming up from quarantine. Then she went below, locked her door and slipped into the harness she had invented.

She went down the gangway so carefully that her husband, who was at the foot, asked in great concern: "What is the matter? Hurt yourself? You seem lame."

"It is nothing," she assured him. "Just a touch of rheumatism."

While they were waiting under the letter "J" for their baggage to be assembled her husband solicitously urged her to sit on a trunk and spread a steamer rug for her.

"No," she said; "I feel much better standing." At the same time she felt as if she must sink, for the two vases, really light, now weighed a hundred pounds each.

It was an age before the trunks and bags were collected and the customs inspector began his examination. He looked at Mrs. Jeffreys' declaration, and as his eyesight was none of the best he found only what she had listed. Then he called an appraiser to pass upon the value of the goods declared.

The latter gave a sharp look at Mrs. Jeffreys, who was talking very volubly to her husband and telling him in a tone that was audible some distance away how she had taken his advice and declared everything. The official peered into the trunk that was nearest him and then wrote something in red ink on the bottom of the declaration. Then the inspector carefully placed a label on each of the packages showing that they had been passed, and Mrs. Jeffreys in her relief, forgetting her own precious cargo, plumped herself down upon a trunk.

Crash! The bottom of a vase dropped upon the pier and rolled some distance away. Mr. Jeffreys had gone to look for a porter. His wife started to make a rush for the broken piece, but as she did so a keen eyed man who was standing near anticipated her.

"Is that yours, madam?" he demanded.

Mrs. Jeffreys hesitated. "Yes," she said, with a gasp.

"Will you kindly show me the other part of it?"

The woman almost fainted. "Why, it isn't possible—it—er—it's in my trunk!" she finally managed to get out.

"I am sorry, madam, but I must see the other part of this vase. Will you open your trunk?"

Mrs. Jeffreys handed him the keys.

"Which one?"

"This—no, that—no, the other one. Merciful heavens, what shall I do?" And Mrs. Jeffreys sank weeping on one of her trunks just as her husband came back with a porter.

"What is this? Who are you?" he demanded of the other man. The latter showed him the shield of a special officer of the treasury. "I must see the other part of this vase," he repeated to the husband. Mr. Jeffreys protesting, gave him his card.

"I would advise you to make no scene," the "special" told him. "There are lots of reporters about here, and they would be only too glad of a chance for a sensational story."

He went away and returned with a uniformed inspector, not the old man who had made the previous inspection, but a younger. "Here," he told him, "get this woman's declaration and reinspect those trunks." The "special" stood by while each article was being turned out in a heap on the pier. He fingered the dresses and looked at the declaration. Then he took up several pieces of lingerie and examined them closely.

"Ha, not worn! Apparently rubbed on the floor to give them that appearance. See anything of that broken vase?"

"No," the inspector replied, "but here is a lot of lace." It was that belonging to Heloise.

"Tell the appraiser in charge to come here."

The latter was soon bending over the pile of finery. He looked at each garment separately and then put down a lot of figures.

"The total is $700," the "special" informed Mrs. Jeffreys. "Under the law we have a perfect right to seize the contents of the trunk, but to avoid unnecessary notoriety we will permit you to pay the duty and take the trunks away with you. Wait a moment; I forgot. We have not found that broken vase." He turned to Mrs. Jeffreys.

"Let me go aboard the steamship," she begged, "and I will find it for you."

"I have no objection, madam," he replied, "but an inspector must accompany you."

Mrs. Jeffreys started back. "Oh, horrors! Never!" she protested.

"A woman inspector, madam," the "special" explained. But Mrs. Jeffreys still protested vigorously. Mr. Jeffreys, feeling that the scene had gone far enough, demanded to see the official in charge of the pier.

"I regret it, sir," he said, "but your wife will have to accompany the woman inspector on board the ship and be searched."

It is best not to follow the two women into that stateroom. The inspectress came out with a broken Sevres vase and a whole one and several pairs of stockings.

"Now, madam," said the "special," "we shall not take into account the new dress and hat you are wearing. Under the circumstances I think you would prefer to have us seize what is left of the 'pair' of vases. Now, if your husband will step to the cashier's office and pay the duty on $700 worth of goods, less $200 worth allowed for yourself and maid, I think the requirements of the law will be met."

When they had got into their carriage Mr. Jeffreys turned to his wife sternly.

"Why did you not do as I told you?" he demanded.

She disregarded his question. "Oh, the horrible customs laws of this country! They are enough to make an American deny that he is such!" she exclaimed.

"Yes; that is just the way a woman would put it," her husband returned. "On the other hand, suppose the treasury agent had handed us over to the newspapers."

"Oh, don't! I can't bear it!" She buried her face in her hands and shuddered. "Oh, Gerald, I have been punished enough! Just forgive me, and I'll promise never to buy a single thing in Paris again!"

And Mr. Jeffreys, being a tender hearted man and tolerant of woman's little weaknesses and, besides, having an eye to future economies, promptly absolved her.

The Leather of the Egyptians.

The ancient Egyptians were skilled in the art of tanning leather and manufactured it in various ways and for various purposes besides that of furnishing covering for the feet. Indeed, it is to those builders of the pyramids that we are indebted for the first artistic forms of footwear, and, so far as can be ascertained from history and the researches of archaeologists, the Egyptians were the first shoemakers who were worthy of that name. It is a fact, too, that tanners of today employ very much the same methods as did the ancients. About the same materials are used, and the processes are almost precisely similar to those in vogue hundreds of years ago. It is true that tanners of the present day have found a means of greatly shortening the time required to convert a hide into leather and that steam power and modern machinery have done much to expedite and improve the processes of finishing the leather; but, after all, the principals of tanning remain the same as they have been from the first.—London Globe.

Posthaste.

He kicked off his wet boots, slid his tired feet into a pair of carpet slippers, lit his pipe, sat down in the easy chair with a sigh of relief and declared that twenty thousand wild horses couldn't make him stir from the house till morning.

"Henry," remarked the lady with the knitting needles, "you posted that letter I gave you this morning, I suppose?"

"I did, my love," he answered unblushingly.

"I asked ma to postpone her visit for awhile," his wife went on. "You see"—

Henry did see. His wife saw too. What she saw was the tired man jump from his chair, kick off his slippers, put on his boots and skip out into the street as if rain was the very thing he liked wading through.

And when, five minutes later, Henry came back with a tale that he'd just been to see how the thermometer outside the postoffice stood she smiled.—London Scraps.

Just Like Eve's Apple.

A fruit supposed to bear the mark of Eve's teeth is one of the many botanical curiosities of Ceylon. The tree on which it grows is known by the significant name of "the forbidden fruit," or "Eve's apple tree." The blossom has a very pleasant scent, but the really remarkable feature of the tree, the one to which it owes its name, is the fruit. It is beautiful and hangs from the tree in a peculiar manner. Orange on the outside and deep crimson within, each fruit has the appearance of having had a piece bitten out of it. This fact, together with its poisonous quality, led the Mohammedans to represent it as the forbidden fruit of the garden of Eden and to warn men against its noxious properties. The mark upon the fruit is attributed to Eve. Why the bite of Adam did not also leave its mark is not known, but as only one piece seems to be missing its loss is ascribed to the woman.

Constable Had the Evidence.

One of Philadelphia's leading corporation lawyers was visiting in New England, and, returning home, he told how he had been arrested there. He had not had a vacation for some years, and, getting into the country, he proceeded to be a boy again.

He struck a piece of country road and ran along for a half mile. He found a fence and vaulted it. He saw a tree and climbed it. Finally he returned to the village. Just as he struck the town a hand was laid on his shoulder, and a man said in a gruff voice:

"Come with me."

"What for?" inquired the other in amazement.

"I'm the constable, and you're under arrest. I've been following you, and I think you're crazy."—Philadelphia Times.

Cool Presence of Mind.

Debtor (to shopgirl)—It's an outrage for your employer to have you present this bill here at the railroad station in the presence of all these people! Tell him I'll attend to the matter as soon as I get home. And now give me a kiss, so the people will think that you are a relative and have come to bid me goodby!—Fliegende Blatter.

A Risky Study.

"Why have you dropped your popular astronomy?" asked the visitor.

"'Cause I got too many lickings," confided Tommy. "The other night I told pa that Mars' face was ever changing, and ma heard me and thought I meant her face. Next thing I didn't get any supper and got a licking besides."—Chicago News.

Ministers Aboard Ship.

A minister aboard ship has always been taken as a "Jonah sign" by seamen. In recent years, however, this superstition has been modified to a certain extent. A young minister, the seamen believe, will not bring as much of a "Jonah" with him as an old one.

Simplicity Itself.

"There are only two points in success."

"What are they?"

"Work and keep other people from working you."

Do It Now.

Decision never becomes easier by postponement, while habit grows stronger every day. Common sense as well as conscience says, "Choose this day."

The feet of Fate are tender, for she sets her steps not on the ground, but on the heads of men.—Homer.

WINNING A WIDOW

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

In and around what is called the Beecher settlement, which was a settlement of farmers, there were three widowers and seven young men who were looking for wives. At the same time there was a scarcity of marriageable girls, and the only widow for five miles around was the Widow Harkins, who had lately bought a farm and moved into the community.

The Widow Harkins was thirty-five. She was good looking and smart. She had a captivating way, and she had only got settled down when the widowers and the young men began to prick up their ears. It was common sense to figure that the widow would marry again if the right man came along.

One of the first Beechers to call was Lyman. He was one of the widowers. For two years he had had his eye out for a widow with a well stocked farm. He was received in a very friendly spirit. The widow looked neat and trim, and she smiled and laughed and chatted in a way that made his heart go tunking. She referred to her lonely situation and then referred to the fact that her hired man was behind with his work. There was plowing to be done, but she was afraid he would not get to it until too late for corn planting.

Lyman Beecher had never done anything for anybody without pay, but on this occasion, much to his surprise, he found himself volunteering to do some plowing as a neighborly act. He brought over his teams and prepared ten acres for corn. He worked so hard and the widow was so thankful that he was encouraged to state his case. He had a farm, four children, eleven hogs, five cows, forty sheep and several other things, and he would offer his heart and hand to the woman before him. He wasn't thrown over the fence, but was told that he must wait a year for his answer. He didn't like it at all, but the plowing had been done, and he had to grin and bear it.

Next came Goodheart Beecher, widower and cousin of Lyman. He greased his boots and made an evening call. A gallon of hard cider and a pan of fried cakes were placed before him, and the widow got his heart fluttering. There were times when she was, oh, so sad and lonely, and this was one of the times. That cornfield was ready for planting, but she was afraid the hired man could not get around to it. Goodheart Beecher had work enough on his own farm, but there was a sad mouthed little widow looking him straight in the eyes, and he almost begged that she would permit him to plant that field. She finally consented. She also consented that he should buy the seed out of his own pocket. When the work was finished he went up to the house and asked the woman to be his'n, and she put him off as she had the other. His back ached as he walked home, but what could he do about it?

The third man was Moses Beecher. In the same way she induced him to plant five acres of potatoes for her. Then he proposed and was put off for a year.

The young men had been considerately waiting for the widowers to try their luck, and now it was their turn. Young Christian Beecher came forward. He was twenty-three years old, weeded her corn for her, proposed and waited a year.

The fifth was young John Beecher. He was called John the Baptist Beecher. He calmly suggested that she hire a man who could hustle. He called again and again, but he did no work. He advocated kicking the hired man, but did not offer to exert himself.

Things were thus, and the widow was looking around for No. 6, when one day she started for the crossroads store, a mile away. She cut across lots to shorten the distance, and an old bull took after her and drove her up a ladder leaning against a haystack. He hooked the ladder down, but she had gained the crest of the stack. She was roosting there, and the bull was galloping about and making the dirt fly, when John the Baptist Beecher came along in his buggy. The stack was within talking distance of the road, and the young man halted to ask what was the matter, although the question was superfluous. Of course the widow wanted the bull driven away and to come down.

"Look here, widow," replied the young man as he got out of his buggy and found a comfortable seat on the fence, "I am head over heels in love with you."

"Yes, but shoo the bull away."

"And I'll make you a good husband."

"Yes, but I want to get down."

"And I'll run that farm bang up. I wouldn't hoe the taters, but I believe you love me a bit."

"Oh, John, John!"

"And now you are either going to marry me or be left right up there. I see Squar Beecher coming in his buggy, and he's got one of his girls with him. Will you marry me or stay up there?"

"Must—must I, John?" asked the widow in a trembling voice.

"Can't get out of it. I'm not taking any chances, though. You don't come down until you are my wife."

When the squire came up the situation was explained, and with John the Baptist on the fence and the widow on the haystack they were made one and inseparable, and the bull was driven away, and the honeymoon began, and the taters were taken care of.

A Desperate Game

"I know hardly any one," said Guy, by way of accounting for his want of interest in the affair. Suddenly he caught sight of a face, and, catching hold of his friend by the arm, he whispered to him: "Who is that tall man with the grayish hair and the drooping mustache? You see him over there speaking to Miss Fitzgerald."

"Sir Rufus Deveril. Fine looking old boy, isn't he? Yet I don't know that I altogether like his expression. Sir Rufus has gone the pace in his day, I'll bet a pony, and I shouldn't be surprised if he still keeps it up. Looks a regular old roue, now that I see him nearer."

Guy scarcely listened to Brooke's chatter. His eyes were still fixed on the baronet, for he had recognized him at once as the man who had attended the coroner's inquest and had listened to the evidence with such keen interest. It was no mere accident, then, that the murder of Molloy had taken place not half a mile from this house? It was not mere good nature that had led Lady Roscommon to offer to take an untrained girl as her maid? But what could a lady of title like Lady Roscommon or a man of fashion like Sir Rufus Deveril have to do with an obscure Irishman like Molloy?

Guy continued to gaze at the baronet like one fascinated, and as the waltz proceeded Sir Rufus drew slowly nearer him. When the two men were opposite each other Sir Rufus suddenly fixed the young man with a stony stare. It was evident that he had noticed and resented Guy's unconscious staring at him.

It was no pleasure to Guy to stand by and see the girl he loved drawn onward in this man's arms, so he abruptly left the room and did not return for some time.

When he did so his eyes immediately sought out Eva. She was dancing again, this time with a tall, inoffensive looking youth. Presently his heart gave a spasmodic throb. She had looked at him, and, more, with an almost imperceptible movement of her fan she had summoned him to draw nearer. He did so, and she threw him a whisper from behind the shelter of her fan: "There will be an extra after supper."

After supper he took care to be in the way, and they were soon gliding together over a sea of melody. Guy was conscious only of a rapture which even a whisper would have destroyed.

All too soon the dance came to an end, and Guy led his partner, flushed and breathless, into one of the passages.

"You were not angry with me for what I said?" he whispered to her.

"For what you said? What did you say? I thought I had never had such a silent partner."

"I was too happy to speak. I meant what I said early in the evening."

"Yes—no; I don't suppose I was exactly angry or I would not have given you a dance. But of course it was nonsense."

"No, Miss Fitzgerald, unhappily for me it was only true enough." He was asking himself whether he should put it to the touch, to win or lose all that made life worth living in his eyes, when a rich, clear voice fell on their ears:

"Miss Fitzgerald—Eva, my dear child, I am glad to have found you. Lady Roscommon commissioned me to bring you to her at once." With that Sir Rufus—for it was he—offered his arm.

There was nothing for it but to obey. Eva threw Guy a look and moved away, her hand on the baronet's arm.

She did not see Guy again that night, but she could not help thinking of him. She was still thinking of him as she sat before her fire in her own room for a few minutes before going to bed, when a knock came to the door, and to her astonishment her mother walked into the room.

"Mamma! Is any one ill? Is anything wrong?"

"Nonsense, child! Who should be ill? Why are you not in bed? But it doesn't matter. I wanted to have a word or two with you."

She came forward into the firelight and laid one heavy hand on her daughter's shoulder.

"How do you like Sir Rufus Deveril?" she said abruptly.

"I don't like him at all. How you can bear him I can't imagine. He is impudent, vain, selfish and— Oh, he is simply horrid!"

"I am sorry that you have got those foolish notions into your head, and the sooner you drive them out the better, for he is to be your husband."

"Mother!"

"Now, child, I want no hysterics, no protestations. I only tell you this"—and her heavy hand became yet heavier on the girl's shoulder—"either you become Lady Deveril or you bring about the ruin of your family. I cannot force you to marry him. I know that well. I am giving you a chance—the chance of saving not only your parents, but your brother, from absolute ruin and disgrace such as you do not even conceive of. You can bring dreadful disaster upon us if you choose. I do not deny that for a moment. But you won't be so cruel, I hope—of course it is not to be thought of. So, really, my dear, the sooner you change your mind with regard to Sir Rufus the better. I will leave you to think it over, and I hope that you will be able to tell me in the morning that you are going to stand between us and ruin. Good night."

"Mother!" cried the girl, as much bewildered as horrified by what she heard. "Mother, I cannot"—

But the closing door told her that her mother had gone.

CHAPTER VIII.

"WHAT SHALL I DO?"

When Eva opened her eyes next morning she recalled her mother's visit to her room, and her young cheeks turned pale as her mother's words came back to her. She must marry Sir Rufus Deveril, a man she detested, or be responsible for the ruin of her family!

Surely this must be an exaggeration, she said to herself. How could the family be in danger of ruin? Her father's title and estates were as securely his as any man's could be, and she knew that her mother was wealthy. What other kind of ruin was possible to them? Surely her mother must have been too excited to measure her words.

With such reasonings she tried to drown the cruel dread that tortured her, but it would not be silenced. She knew her mother and knew that she seldom spoke without meaning all she said, and the idea of marrying that man, of living always with him, always of having to obey him, of belonging to him—oh, it was monstrous, unbearable! She turned her face into the pillow, and a sob shook her from head to foot.

The door opened, and she looked up. Nora stood at her bedside with a cup of tea in her hand.

"My lady sent you this," said Nora, "and bade me tell you that she was coming to see you."

Eva took the cup, but her hand shook so that the tea would have been spilled if Nora had not regained possession of it.

"You are not well, Miss Eva," said Nora in a tone of sympathy. "Shall I tell my lady that you have a headache?"

"No; I had better see her."

"But, indeed, you are far from well. I can see it in your face."

The door opened again and Lady Roscommon came in. Nora silently left the room.

"How are you, my dear child?" said the mother, bending over Eva and kissing her on the forehead.

"I slept well, but, oh, mamma, I am so unhappy! Tell me that it is not true," and the big tears gathered in her eyes. "Mother, I think it would kill me if I were forced to marry that man! I detest him!"

"Nonsense, child!" said the viscountess. "Those exaggerated statements always annoy me. It is not so easy to die—or I would have been dead long ago," she added under her breath. "You don't know Sir Rufus well enough to be able to say that you detest him."

Eva shuddered. "I never feel easy till he has left the room," she said. "He looks at one as if—as if he did not respect one. I can't express it any better. The idea of marrying him is horrible. I can't do it, mother. Indeed, I can't."

"Then you prefer that your brother and all of us should be brought to shame and ruin. You prefer your own comfort, the gratification of your own whim, to the honor and the very existence of your family."

"But I don't understand!" burst out the girl. "How can we be ruined? What is the disaster that threatens to overtake Terence? And how can my marrying Sir Rufus have any effect on his future? It is not reasonable to expect me to sacrifice myself without telling me how my sacrifice can be of any use."

"I expected that you would say something of that kind," said Lady Roscommon coldly. "But I cannot enlighten you. You must take my word for it that it is true. If this marriage does not take place we must leave the country. Not only must Terence leave the army—that in itself would be nothing—he must lose all that makes life worth living. I cannot bear it! It must not happen! Eva, you must marry this man and save us all!"

Never until that moment had Eva seen tears in her mother's eyes. The mere fact that she was crying brought home to her mind as nothing else could have done the conviction that the danger she feared was real, great, imminent. Her heart sank.

"Does papa know?" she asked faintly after a moment's pause.

"He knows nothing, and it will be merely a waste of time to speak to him on the subject," said Lady Roscommon sharply.

"But it is impossible that ruin could come on the family without his knowing it!"

"He will know it if it comes when it is too late to prevent it. If you tell your father what I have told you, you cannot possibly do any good and you may do immense harm. If you speak to your father you will separate him and Terence as completely as if you had forced one of them to shed the other's blood. And there is more than that—far more! Worse than you have the smallest conception of may befall us if you remain obstinate."

"Is he—is Sir Rufus downstairs?"

"No; he is in town today."

"Then I will come down. I could not meet him today."

The poor girl spent the day in a pitiable frame of mind. Of one thing she was certain—her mother really believed that she, Eva, held in her hand the means of saving her family from some great disaster. It must be a crime that Terence had committed. What else could have the power of separating father and son as her mother had said they would be separated if she did not yield?

Above all, Eva longed for some one to confide in, and her heart gave a little leap as she remembered Guy. He was clever and he was a barrister, and he loved her. He ought to know. And if it had to be done she would like him to know that this hateful marriage was none of her doing.

So she ordered her horse to be brought round at half past 7 next morning. She had told Guy that she could ride no more with him, but he might be there.

Guy did not fail her. She had scarcely entered the avenue when she saw him riding on a little way ahead of her.

She rode up to him and called him by his name. He wheeled round in his saddle and looked at her with a bright smile, which faded the moment he caught sight of her face.

"Miss Fitzgerald—Eva—what is the matter?" he asked breathlessly.

"I am in trouble—in great trouble—and I want your advice. We can't talk here. Where can I meet you alone?"

"I suppose you could go over to Hampton Court and go round the picture galleries?"

"Certainly I could. That will be the very thing!"

"At 3, then, tomorrow, in the first gallery. I will be there!"

She threw him a grateful look, waved her hand and dropped behind in so marked a way that he did not try to stay with her. Looking round a moment later he saw a tall form on horseback riding up to her, and then he understood.

"It can't be that they want to marry her to that man!" he muttered to himself between his teeth. "Yet what else can it be? If that is her trouble, poor child, God help her!"

CHAPTER IX.

TAKING COUNSEL.

In one of the smaller picture galleries at Hampton Court there is a tall corner window with a low, broad window seat of oak, the coziest and most secluded nook imaginable.

In this window seat Guy and Eva Fitzgerald found themselves on the following afternoon. Eva had just finished her story, to which the young man had listened with the utmost astonishment. He felt chilled all over, and his hands were trembling from excitement. In as matter of fact a tone as he could assume he said:

"I don't see how you can all be ruined without Lord Roscommon knowing all the circumstances. Why don't you appeal to him?"

"Mamma said that all would be useless if papa were told. And if you knew papa you would understand. But how can ruin be the consequence of my not marrying Sir Rufus Deveril?"

"That is just what I should like to know," said Guy. For some minutes he remained plunged in thought, and Eva was careful not to disturb him. To him there was only one explanation of the baronet's conduct. He had fallen in love with Eva, and, despairing of getting her by fair means, he had resorted to foul.

He had Lady Roscommon and her son in his power—of that there could not be a doubt. Probably his hold was on the son rather than on the mother—else why should his name have been brought into the matter at all? This meant that the young man must have committed some crime. What crime? Sir Rufus had in some way got to have an inkling of the truth and resolved to use it for his own base purposes. He threatened to denounce the brother unless the sister consented to become his wife. Nothing could be more base, more abominable, but it was evident that Lady Roscommon at all events believed that Sir Rufus was in earnest. And she was willing to sacrifice the daughter for the sake of the son. One child or the other must pay the price. At first Guy had been burning with anger against Lady Roscommon. Now he was more inclined to pity her.

But the problem he was now busy with was this—how to balk the baronet's designs.

"Eva," he said, "I think you should ask your mother to tell Sir Rufus that you must first know the nature of the danger that threatens your family before you can say whether you are willing to shield them by marrying him. If your demand is refused and the bare alternative is placed before you, then say you must have time to make up your mind. If your consenting to marry Sir Rufus would avert the threatened misfortune, the hope that you will do so will be strong enough to secure a little delay. Ask for six months in which to make up your mind."

"I don't think I would be allowed so long," said Eva sorrowfully.

"Well, try for three months. You'll find that so long as he hopes you will give in he will do nothing to prevent you giving your consent."

The following day Guy had to spend at the law courts. An important case, which he fondly hoped would lay the foundation of his fortunes, was ready for trial. Fortunately, however, the case was merely opened that day; there was time for no more before the court adjourned.

As Guy was leaving the building, well pleased to be at liberty, the solicitor who had sent him his brief, a Mr. Foscombe, came up to him and said: "I have just got some additional evidence, which I am going to have added to your brief. I should like to see you about it tonight. I suppose you don't live in the Temple?"

"Just now I am living at Teddington," said Guy, "but I can stay in town tonight."

"I wouldn't think of giving you that trouble," protested the solicitor. "But as I myself live at Surbiton it would be no trouble to call on you at your rooms."

This arrangement suited Guy very well. He said so and went back to his chambers. As soon as he had thrown on his wig and gown he went to see his friend Ashton Brooke, whose advice he had resolved to ask. Brooke was an old college friend, a man of no great brilliancy, but gifted with an unusual amount of common sense. Besides the feeling of distrust in his own judgment, Guy was conscious of a great desire to confide in some one.

A disappointment awaited him. Brooke's clerk opened the door—a queer old fellow, wizened and shriveled, nearer fifty than forty years of age—and told him that his master had gone out of town and would not be back for some days. "Just like my luck," said Guy to himself as he turned away.

About half past 9 that night, as he was brooding over his solitary fire, the solicitor was shown in. Mr. Foscombe was a pleasant looking man of about thirty, fair haired, fresh colored, clean shaven and wearing a double eyeglass. He and Guy had a great respect for one another's professional ability, and Guy had in addition the respect for him that one always entertains for the man who gives one the opportunity one has long been waiting for.

After the papers had been read and discussed, refreshments were brought in, and almost of necessity the two men dropped out of the professional into the purely friendly vein.

After a silence that he feared was discourteous, Guy said impulsively, "I am afraid I allowed my attention to wander a little just now"—

"Not at all," said the other politely.

"But the fact is I am rather worried about a case—not a law case—that has been presented to me. It is simple enough, yet I don't find it easy to make up my mind about it. It is merely this: Suppose a young man of no particular position or prospects falls in love with a girl moving in a rank much above his own, and he finds that this girl's mother wants to marry her to a man the girl detests and thus avert some disaster which the mother fears is about to fall on the family—supposing that condition of things, what ought the young man to do? Should he offer to take the girl out of her difficulties by making her his wife, and let her family go to ruin if it likes, or should he decline that responsibility and leave the young lady to do what she may conceive to be her duty by her kith and kin?"

"My dear sir, that is surely one of those questions that each man must answer for himself."

"Exactly. But would you mind telling me how you would answer it?"

"Hum! A good deal would depend on what the girl was like, I fancy, and whether the threatened ruin is real or only imaginary."

"Unfortunately, the lady—the mother, I mean—won't say a word as to its nature, but she gives it to be understood that it is something very dreadful."

Guy was staring into the fire as he was speaking. He did not notice his companion give a slight start and a quick, involuntary look of inquiry, which lasted only the fraction of a second and was immediately withdrawn.

"I should say that the first thing was to ascertain what exactly is the nature of the threatened disaster. Perhaps the sacrifice may not be so great as you fancy," Foscombe said lightly. Guy only shook his head.

"I think the young lady should insist on being told something definite," said the solicitor after a pause.

"Yes; that is what I have advised," said Guy absently.

Foscombe shortly after went away, and as he walked along he muttered to himself more than once: "Can it be the same people? Strange coincidence if it should be so! And yet it is scarcely possible that two women should be in that position at the same time. The chances are that he was speaking of Lady Roscommon and her daughter."

CHAPTER X.

LOVE THE DELIVERER.

At the western side of the circular pond in Bushey park, from which the Diana fountain rises, Guy Lorimer paced to and fro one afternoon in the succeeding week. He had had a short note from Eva to say that she intended to visit Hampton Court that day after lunch, and he was waiting for her, burning with anxiety to know what news she would have to give him.

"What news have you? If you knew how anxious I have been!" he cried breathlessly when she came at last.

"Sir Rufus has gone, and I am to have four months in which to make up my mind. At the end of that time I must say whether I will marry him or not. I have given my word for that. But, oh, it is only a respite! I can see that he does not mean to let me off! And mamma looks at me in such a way. I cannot bear it. I must give way—I must indeed! Sometimes I think that Terence must have done something wrong—something very wrong indeed—and that Sir Rufus threatens to betray him or to tell the police or something of that kind. Do you think that can be true?"

"I have sometimes thought that there must be something of that kind at the bottom of it," said Guy very gravely.

Crossing the terrace in front of the palace, they made their way to a secluded part of the grounds and sat down side by side on one of the garden seats.

"You can't imagine how I feel about Sir Rufus," said Eva after a pause that had lasted some time. "When he approaches I feel exactly as though a snake or some other horrible creature had come near me, and I want to run away. And to think of living with him always!"

"You would rather live a life of poverty?" asked Guy, his voice hoarse with emotion.

"Poverty! I would rather be a beggar—I would rather be a needlewoman and live on 10 shillings a week!"

IMPROVED ROADS OF NEW JERSEY

With that attention to military etiquette which forbids a retiring officer from recommending to those responsible for the turning in of his successor, State Road Commissioner Colonel Frederick Gilkyson in submitting his last annual report to the governor, refrains from any comment on the work or makes any suggestion as to the best methods to be followed in road building. In his two proceding reports Colonel Gilkyson has given of his experience to the text of his report, but this year his report is not summed up at all.

The report shows that during the year just closed there was 62,321 miles of public roads built in the various counties with State aid, the total cost being $508,201.36, the State furnishing $169,400.44 of the lump sum and the various counties the remainder.

The mileage and cost in the various counties for the year was as follows: Atlantic county, 8,077 miles, total cost, $18,199.10; Camden, 5,-13 miles, total cost, $56,151.65; Cape May, 3,042 miles, cost, $56,-530,57; Essex, 1,762 miles cost, $19,-44.76; Hunterdon, 10.207 miles, cost, $81,377.20; Middlesex, 2.140 miles, cost, $25,460.28; Monmouth, 8.277 miles, cost, $35,137.66; Morris, 9.523 miles, cost, $87,811.60; Passaic, 0.789 of a mile, cost, $11,712.54; Salem, 3.310 miles, cost, $10,973.39; Somerset, 0.586 of a mile, cost, $6,-777.72; Sussex, 6.733 miles, cost, $53,513.19; Union, 2.843 miles, cost, $45,111.79. It will be seen by the above that the following counties built no roads last year: Bergen, Burlington, Cumberland, Gloucester, Hudson, Mercer, Ocean and Warren.

Commissioner Gilkyson shows that since the passage of the State aid road act in 1892 the total mileage of roads built in the various counties up to the end of last year was 1,562.204 and the State has expended as its one-third share towards building them $3,059,882.70. The county mileage and cost to the State is as follows: Atlantic, 11.177, cost, $110,686.18; Bergen, 34.303, cost, $118,418.33; Burlington, 189.143, cost, $298,090.61; Camden, 116.497, cost, $230,990.08; Cape May, 47.370, cost, $94,218.06; Cumberland, 1.220, cost, $14,773.23; Essex, 112.485, cost, $287,548.56; Gloucester, 890.-635, cost, $89,431.80; Hudson, 4.760, cost, $40,125.27; Hunterdon, 33,472, cost, $87,419.25; Mercer, 132,494, cost, $340,006.58; Middlesex 162.910, cost, $326,190.37; Monmouth, 116.611, cost, $211,955.37; Morris, 77.34, cost, $167,946.50; Ocean, 53.643, cost, $65,083.24; Passaic, 63.028, cost, $126,661.07; Salem, 36.223, cost, $56,727.29; Somerset, 84.052, cost, $166,666.82; Sussex, 14.531, cost, $33,254.31; Union, 27.375, cost, $83,446.20; Warren, 51.789, cost, $110,824.59.

Colonel Gilkyson shows the list of the roads on which $308,127.29 automobile money was spent in repairs, and he also shows that the various counties spent in addition $1,086,-169.04, making a total repair expenditure of $1,394,296.42 last year. The list of county appropriations for road repairs singularly shows Hudson county, which has built such a small mileage with State aid, having the very largest appropriation—$370,000. Essex county is very small considering her area—$85,-133.54. Bergen county, another county building few roads with State aid, is large—$126,000, whereas Middlesex county, over which every autoist making a run to the shore from New York and the northern part of the State only spent $45,-865.01, showing the good condition of her roads and indicating how hard they were put down to stand the enormous strain of the autos. Somerset did not spend a cent for road repair, and Cumberland is in the same condition. The former county has her roads in such superb shape that no repair money beyond the auto money, not shown in the list, was necessary for repairs. Regarding the latter county, there are but few roads built with State aid, and the roads in the main are very poor within the confines of the county.

What other counties spent for repairs, outside of the automobile money, that is counties not mentioned before, is as follows: Atlantic $52,169.74; Burlington, $23,000; Camden, $30,231.87; Cape May, $6,-561.01; Gloucester, $10,000; Hunterdon, $2,000; Mercer, $46,000; Monmouth, $89,000; Morris, $100,000; Ocean, $7,000; Passaic, $56,000; Salem, $3,606.68; Sussex, $1,500; Union, $25,000, and Warren, $6,601.19. The State also paid out $137.55 for cautionary signs along the roads.

The annual report goes over the appropriations for the Ocean parkway as follows, the work not being completed, and will not be until some of the necessary bridges are built: $10,000 for improving the road along the bluff at Atlantic Highlands, conditioned on the county spending an equivalent sum; $5,700 for building a roadway between Ocean Grove and Asbury Park and filling in the head of Wesley lake; $4,312.90 for acquiring lands and improving the extension of Ocean avenue in Spring Lake; $11,000 for improving the road between New Gretna and Mullica river bridge; $7,000 for improving the road between Lakewood and Toms River; $5,000 for straightening and improving the road between Chestnut Neck and Absecom, and $7,000 for improving of the main shore road between Cape May Court House and Cape May and the road between Petersburg and Seaville.

"The Soul Kiss," the throbbing, palpitating success of the musical stage that has been the vogue of New York and the East for months, will be presented in this city on Thursday, February 23, at the Plainfield theatre, and indicates the possibility of creating a wild sensation. All that stirs the material soul to admiration, sympathy and wonder, is contained in this strange hodge-podge of dancing and music that lays no claims to aught but entertainment for the time being—Music, dancing, beauty, color and life; these are the qualities that go to make "The Soul Kiss," the remarkable success it is.

FAVOR NEW CONTRACT

Bergen, of the water company, to show that after April 1 next there would be an abundant supply of water, and he believed that the city should go to the utmost to make a satisfactory contract with the water company. He believed that the company would live up to all agreement and not embarras the city. He was against involving the city in serious financial matters and then find that they would amount to naught. He also believed that if condemnation proceedings were adopted it would tend to deter people from making their home in this city.

W. A. Garrigues said that to his mind there were two important questions to be decided, whether the city wants to secure a permanent supply or a temporary one. If a temporary one is desired, he agreed with Mr. Mellick. Otherwise he believed that a municipal plant should be established. He thought the water business had been profitable for the present company. If a permanent supply is to be secured it would be necessary to spend a considerable sum of money.

Leighton Calkins agreed with Mr. Garrigues as to the question of permanent supply, but not as to the solution. He did not think that the city wanted to own its water plant for the fun of it, but for two important reasons, nemely that of getting cheaper water and conserving the supply for the city. If it would be possible to conserve the supply, this he thought would be a strong argument in favor of municipal ownership, but he said that he could not satisfy himself that the supply could be conserved for all time.

Howard C. Tracy spoke somewhat along the line of Mr. Calkins, that of conserving the supply through municipal ownership. He believed it would be wise to make some test. Daniel Dugan said that the present city debt is $600,000 and if a million and a quarter is added to that it would make a heavy bonded debt for a population of 20,000 people. He was sure satisfactory rates could be made with the water company.

Speaking again on the subject, L. B. Woolston said in reply to a statement, that it would be impossible for anyone to guarantee a permanent supply for all time. This had been proved in New York and Newark, where they are constantly looking for new supplies.

Robert Rushmore said that the company is as anxious to serve the city as the city is to buy, that Plainfield had grown conservatively and magnificently with the least cost and the greatest advantages, and he did not believe the interest of the city would be injured by making a new contract with the company.

Perhaps, the most important question was raised by Winfield S. Angleman, when he quoted the recent decision of Vice-Chancellor Stevens in the water suits against the East Jersey Water company. He said that the outcome of these suits would probably have considerable bearing on the question here and he thought it wise to make a cantract with the water company with the understanding that it could be terminated upon one or two years' notice. In view of the unsettled condition of the water question in the State, he urged that the city go slow and await the decisions of the court.

A. C. Rogers raised the question of unequal rates, citing his own case, where he is charged $22 a year for two cold water faucets and a closet However, he said that he had tenants in his house.

Amos Andrews, superintendent of the water company, spoke, as he stated as a citizen and not as an employe of the water company, and he declared that if he thought it to be for the best interest of the city he would favor a municipal plant. But, he did not think so. On the other hand, he said under present conditions the city has redress, but if it owned its plant it would not. He spoke of conditions in his home town in Connecticut where last summer there was no water supply at the municipal plant and the city purchased engines intending to pump from a stream. Then the Board of Health stepped in and stopped them.

Charles H. Hand was the last speaker. He said that he paid $600 in water tax annually, but if a municipal plant was established he knew it would be $800 or $900. After the meeting many remained to further discuss the question. No announcement was made for a future meeting on the subject.

PRAISE THE MAYO

A HOSPITAL FOR SURGERY.

Rev. Dr. Herring Tells His Congregation of His Experience as a Patient at St. Mary's, Rochester, Minn.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning preached, after an absence of five weeks, taking for his text the story of the illness and recovery of King Hezekiah found in Second Kings, 20: 1-7.

"I have a great interest in hospitals today," the minister said, "for I have had my first experience as a patient in one. My good friends, physicians and others, strongly recommended my going to a hospital 1,300 miles from here, and today I appreciate the wisdom of their suggestion. The legend, 'The Mayo Brothers,' means far more to me than it ever meant before. When I learned that Dr. Charles Mayo performed four or five operations on the neck every day for five days of the week with wonderful success I felt confidence in his wonderful experience and skill, and I can assure you he did not fail my confidence. It was a comfort, too, to know that the genial lady who gave the anesthetic had given it some seventeen thousand times, and had therefore had some experience in that line and knew how to give me just enough to keep me one hour and a half under its soothing influence. Another thing which gave me perfect confidence was their careful and thorough system of diagnosis, for no patient is taken to the operating table without a thorough knowledge of his trouble, so that the surgeon can proceed at once to the root of his trouble with very little loss of vitality.

"St. Mary's hospital is a Catholic institution, but like all other hospitals, its doors are open to all, regardless of creed. The head of the sisterhood is Sister Josephine, who for years has been Dr. William Mayo's assistant, and she is credited with being a most able surgeon herself. During my week's stay at the hospital, she would often stop at my door and ask me how I was getting on, and then I hoped the day was coming when all Christians would be one, and as one body, sanctified and earnest would move on to the conquest of the world.

"I have spoken of how I was helped by the skill of Dr. Mayo, but I would not forget another source of help. I knew that my friends at home were praying for the success of the operation. I believe in prayer and your prayers helped me. Some of you have told me that they remembered me at the family altar night and morning. I am grateful for the remembrance and the Lord has heard your prayers.

"While in that little western town I appreciated the helpfulness of friendship and the expressions of your friendship. Rochester, Minn., where the hospital is, seemed very near Plainfield because of the expressions of your sympathy and comfort that came with every mail. And today I am glad for the opportunity to again preach the Gospel under better conditions. For several years I have been using one vocal cord. Something had gripped the other cord but now it has been released and there is the restoration of the 'lost cord' and now I hope that the preaching of the Gospel may be doubly effective."

Studying Local Conditions.

Professor R. I. Ziv, an author who is touring New Jersey in quest of material for two books he is preparing, is spending a few days in this city, having arrived here today. He is visiting penal institutions and looking into the modes of living among various nationalities in this country to make substance for his proposed works of "Profit and Loss of Crime," and "Modern Jewish Life and Future." While here he will visit the city jail, alms house and inquire into local conditions concerning these insitutions.

Injured by Slight Fall.

SCHOOL TEACHERS ENJOYED A DANCE

Under the auspices of the teachers in the local public schools the annual dance was held Saturday evening at the high school auditorium. About fifty couples, including the teachers and friends, attended. The auditorium was attractively decorated for the occasion with large and small flags. A fine program of dances was arranged and during an intermission refreshments were served. Miss Mildred M. Parker was chairman of the committee of arrangements.

The reception committee comprised Dr. and Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Best, Miss Anna M. Day, Miss Noel J. Bullock and Miss Flora Griffin. The dancing was continued until shortly before midnight. Benjamin Evans, janitor of the school, had charge of the serving of refreshments.

RUNAWAY STOPPED BY PLUCKY STUDENT

John Uhler, of Netherwood, a student at the Plainfield High School, made a daring capture of a runaway horse at Ninth street and Arlington avenue, this morning. The young man had just alighted from a car to enter the school when the frightened animal came dashing down Arlington avenue from the direction of Randolph road. Uhler placed himself directly in its path and as it swerved to go by him, he flung himself upon its neck. The horse swerving toward the sidewalk, rearing and plunging, but was unable to break the grip of the plucky student. It was finally brought to a standstill, entirely unharmed.

The animal was atached to a business sleigh, evidently a grocer's rig, but it bore no lettering and the driver was nowhere to be found. When tied and blanketed the horse was claimed later by a clerk.

The capture was witnessed by a large number of spectators who were loud in their praise of Uhler's bravery. He is seventeen years old and an expert tennis player.

TOWNSHIP PROTESTS TO FRELINGHUYSEN

On behalf and in the interest of the citizens of North Plainfield township, W. de LaR. Anderson, president of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society, has sent a letter to State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, protesting to him and also the Senate committee, which is considering the Senate bill relative to increasing the powers of the State Board of Health regarding sewage disposal plants, against favorable action on such bill.

Mr. Anderson in his letter states that according to general opinion and to the statement of Mr. Opdyke, representing Bound Brook, the bill has for its sole purpose the empowering of the Borough of North Plainfield to remove the location of the proposed sewage beds further from Bound Brook and nearer to centre of the township and in the vicinity of Dunellen.

"I believe," says Mr. Anderson, "that a bill of such a general nature unwise. I believe the present selected location of the proposed sewer bed not to be near enough Bound Brook to be harmful. It is I believe fully one and one-quarter miles from the borough line. I believe that should the sight be removed further eastward into the township that Dunellen would have double cause for complaint."

Mr. Anderson also calls attention to the fact that a change would result in greater damage to farms in the township, the owners of which depend on them for their livelihood, and further that the township cannot and will not consent to anything that will bring these results. Mr. Anderson requests Senator Frelinghuysen to present the protest to the Senate committee, believing that the ideas expressed are representative of the general feeling of the citizens in the township.

Revival at Shiloh Baptist Church.

Rev. Edward W. Roberts, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist church, assisted by Rev. R. M. Johnson, of Pennington, is conducting a successful series of revival meetings. Thus far there have been more than twelve conversions. The meetings will be continued this week.

Oratorio of "Elijah."

The quartet choir of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will sing the oratorio of "Elijah," at the evening service, Sunday, February 26.

REAL CHRISTIANITY

AT RELIGIOUS CONFERENCE.

Sanctify Everything to God Says Clergyman at Grace Church—Meetings to Be Held Twice Daily.

Large congregations heard Rev Charles B. Fiske, rector of St. Michael's and All Angels' church, Baltimore, who inaugurated a week of Religious Conferences at Grace church yesterday. This distinguished clergyman, who was at one time rector of St. John's, Somerville, is an absorbingly interesting speaker and is considered one of the really big men in the Church. As a member of the staff of The Churchman, his writings are well known to all Episcopalians. His topic at yesterday morning's service was "A Plea for Everyday Religion or Nothing," his text being taken from Zacharian, 14-20.

"The golden age of every nation," the clergyman said, "is in the past. But Israel furnishes a marked exception. Her golden age was in the future. The prophets in the Old Testament dwelt on the coming of the great day—the coming of the Messiah. Secondly, they discoursed on the nature of His kingdom. When this would be accomplished, every thing in all life would be holy. This exactly, Christ brought to pass in common life. He sanctified all life—all conditions of life, all forces and all personalities. All were dedicated to God and His service. He lifted it from the common place and made it holy. The profane was made sacred. This was done by Him to human nature and every part of it by His incarnation effected in human nature.

"The cause of sanctification to holiness," Rev. Mr. Fiske said, "is the demand made upon us to realize that sanctification in our own lives, that is, to make the general ideal of sanctification a practical thing in the individual. Christ has sanctified everything in life and therefore it is a responsibility of Christ's followers to reproduce that sanctity in his own individual life. It means, therefore, that every man and woman must regard their daily work as God's particular vocation for them as their ministry of service for God, and therefore to idealize the ordinary concerns of our daily life in business and in the home, that is, a priesthood in the laity—'Ye are a royal priesthood.'

"Unless we have this conception of Christ's sanctification, everything in our religion is defective and abortive. This ideal of our daily work being God's particular vocation for us means that we must sanctify everything to God. The trouble with so many of us is that we have what may be called compartment religion. We separate life into various compartments, home, social, business and then religious. Into the three former, sanctification is not permitted to permeate, whereas if our religion is vital it must permeate and sanctify each one of these various forces of our daily existence.

"Because of these compartments of our life, our religion is too oft the kind of religion that the man in the street complains of—a marked contrast between profession and practise. The man in the street must be excused for sneering when the type of religion is that which is not real in our everyday life on week-days. In contrast, Christ's demand is that the very name Christian is a guarantee of character. The fact that one belongs to a certain church ought to mean that he is a man of honor in his every-day life—that men can see that he has been with Jesus. It is not necessary to preach it if you live it for your very life will win men to Christ. That is what Sunday is for. It is intended to equip you for every day of the week."

In the afternoon, Rev. Mr. Fiske spoke to the children, and again at night he addressed the congregation at Grace. This morning, he spoke on "The Excepts of Jesus." The Religious Conferences will be continued twice daily through the week and the public is cordially invited. The general subject for the evening meetings will be "A Consideration of the Soul's Perils." Tonight the theme will be "The Peril of Unreality," and tomorrow night "The Peril of Respectability."

E. E. Parvin To Lecture.

Emerson E. Parvin, of this city, who is secretary of the International Mercantile Marine, of New York city, will give an illustrated lecture at the Plainfield Business College, Thursday evening, February 23, at 8 o'clock, on the subject: "Over Seas and the Lure of Foreign Lands." Over one hundred views will be shown. The public is invited.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR 'MAINE VICTIMS'

Daniel Shay and Michael D. O'Keefe, of Ensign Bagley Camp Spanish-American War Veterans, attended the Maine memorial service held at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of Captain D. D. Mitchell Camp, No. 13, of Newark. The services included an address of welcome by Father William P. Brennan; an address by Father John P. Chidwick, chaplain of the U. S. S. Maine in 1898, and the benediction by Rt. Rev. Mgr. I. P. Whelan, celebrant.

During the services the Cathedral choir sang the "Star Spangled Banner" and "America," the music being in charge of Prof. William H. Hattersley. "Taps" were sounded by Sergeant J. A. Shawger. The Cathedral was filled with worshippers, in addition to the large representation of United Spanish War Veterans.

CRUSADE AGAINST FAKE OSTEOPATHS

Two hundred members of the Osteopathic Society of New York city conferred at the Waldorf Saturday night on a campaign against "irresponsible and ignorant persons who pretent to be osteopaths without having the slightest qualifications and who bring the science of osteopathy into disrepute." It was said that Martin W. Littleton would draft a bill for submission at Albany which would provide proper punishment for the unelect. Those who took part in the discussion seemed to think the public sufficiently aware of the fact that an osteopath before he can practise in this State has to pass the same Regents' examination as a regular physician.

Dr. Joseph H. Sullivan, of Chicago, read a paper and then, stripping a subject to the waist, showed the other osteopaths some new wrinkles in bone manipulation.

Among the diners was Dr. F. F. Wilcox, of Crescent avenue.

CO. K'S ANNUAL FAIR NOW IN FULL SWING

Company K's annual fair opened Saturday night with one of the largest crowds yet seen in the West Front street armory. From early in the evening until nearly 12 o'clock the place had all the people it could conveniently hold "and then some."

The military boys were on hand in their new fatigue uniforms to look after the interests of the visitors and succeeded in making every one feel at home. The hall was profusely decorated with the national colors, while the booths were attractively arranged and covered with flags and bunting. None of the Company K. features of other years are missing, plenty of diversions being in evidence.

The donation booth is the largest of all. It is piled high with all manner of fancy and useful articles to be offered at customary fair bargain rates. The local merchants have been very liberal with contributions, a matter of no small importance to the company.

Dancing was the big attraction Saturday night and will continue to be for all this week. Sergeant George L. Apgar is in charge of the floor and aided by a competent corps of assistants keeps things going in a lively manner. The Imperial orchestra supplies the incentive for waltzes and two-teps. A delegation of the organization's women friends are assisting at the tables, while the Kolb Company has charge of the ice cream.

Captain Harry B. Kitchell is general chairman of the fair committee, while Corporal Conklin is secretary, and Lieutenant-elect Nathaniel Hort is treasurer. AID THE HOSPITAL

Offertories in the Local Churches Yesterday for Muhlenberg.

CONTRIBUTIONS ARE INCREASED

Crescent Avenue, $560; Grace, $253; First Baptist, $228—Roman Catholics Make Special Contributions.

The various churches were generous in their annual contributions to Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday, when "Hospital Sunday" was observed in this city. In nearly every instance the contributions were largely increased over those of last year and this fact is gratifying to the Board of Governors of the hospital.

In several cases the contributions were not completed yesterday, there being more to come. In addition cards were distributed in the churches and many will return these later with the amount they are willing to give to the hospital.

Of the amounts reported, the Crescent Avenue church raised the largest, $560. Grace Episcopal church's offeratory amounted to $253.50. The First Baptist church was next with $228. Other amounts reported are as follows: All Souls' church, $112; Trinity Reformed church, $55; Park Avenue Baptist church, $50; Warren chapel, $40; Monroe Avenue M. E. church, $20; Hope chapel, 20, $10; making a total of $1,348 reported.

St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Catholic churches make special provision for a liberal contribution each year.

As stated a number of churches have not yet made their report. It is believed that the total figure will reach $2,000.

MEMORIAL PULPIT FOR HEAVENLY REST

Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, has received as a gift from Rev. A. J. Miller, rector of St. Thomas' church, of White Marsh, Pa., a handsome hand-carved pulpit of butternut wood, which was used at the church yesterday for the first time. It was greatly admired by the worshippers. The pulpit has been placed in the edifice as a memorial to Mr. Mallery's father, the late Henry Mallery, of New York.

Arrangements have been made to have the new pulpit dedicated by Bishop Scarborough, when he makes his official visit to the parish on Sunday, April 2. The pulpit is gothic in design and in placing it in the church, several other changes have been made which have added to the attractiveness of the interior of the edifice.

MRS. ELIZA BOGART, AGED 83 YRS. DEAD

Mrs. Eliza J. Bogart, widow of Stephen Bogart, aged 83 years, died Saturday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Burroughs, 326 East Fifth street, following a two weeks' illness with pneumonia. Prior to that time she enjoyed good health and was very active, especially in Christian work at the First Presbyterian church, where she was a member.

Mrs. Bogart was born in New York city and had lived in Plainfield sixteen years. Besides being a member of the First Presbyterian church, she was also identified with the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies; also the sewing society of the church. Mr. Bogart died in 1865. Mrs. Bogart is survived by two daughters, Mrs. John Burroughs, of this city, Mrs. Anna Miller, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; also three sons, Benjamin Franklin Bogart, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Peter S. Bogart, of Elizabeth, and Robert O. Bogart, of Northport, L. I. The funeral will be held from the late home tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock and the burial will be in Woodlawn cemetery, New York.

NEW JERSEY ELKS MAY BE ORGANIZED

Abe J. David, exalted ruler of the Elizabeth lodge of Elks, is working on a plan to form a State organization of the Elks, to hold State reunions and conventions for the greater convenience and benefit of the various local lodges. Such organizations are a prominent feature of Elkdom in the West, some twenty-eight of the Western States being so organized. The plan works favorably there and the movement is now coming east.

The national reunions are now the only ones held to which the Elks of New Jersey send delegates. While the big reunions of course keep New Jersey lodges in touch with their brother Elks throughout the country, they do not permit of the more intimate and more detailed knowledge among the State lodges which would result from a distinctly State reunion. The Elizabeth lodge is the pioneer in the movement in New Jersey.

Mr. David has communicated with the thirty-five lodges in the State, including Plainfield, No. 885, with a view of getting their opinion on the subject.

SATURDAY NIGHT JAGS LANDED 'EM IN JUG.

The usual collection of drunk and disorderly persons on a Monday morning were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza in police court today. Amzi Hetfield, of Fanwood, drunk on Front street Saturday night, was given a suspended sentence. The same leniency was shown Bethune Dunham, who was also picked up on Saturday night.

William Gray, colored, appeared for the third time since January 1. He was given the alternative of $10 or thirty days and will likely choose the latter. He was warned that if found intoxicated again he will get sixty days. Patrick Grimes, likewise arrested Saturday night, was given until Wednesday to appear with a pledge not to take a drink in a year.

Library to Close.

The circulating department of the Plainfield Public Library will be closed on Washington's birthday, February 22. The erading room will be open from 2 to 6 with an assistant in charge.

MAYOR IS ALARMED

Borough's Executive Fears Influence Preventing Sewage Plant Installation.

AN APPEAL TO CITIZENS.

He Urges That Taxpayers Write Senator Frelinghuysen Against Passage of a Vicious Bill.

Aroused because of political and other influences being brought to bear to rob North Plainfield of its right under existing statutes to locate its sewage disposal beds on the Zovolnck farm in the Greenbrook section of North Plainfield township, Mayor Smalley, of North Plainfield, issues an appeal to the people of that borough. He calls their attention to the grave injustice to be done the community if Senate bill, No. 52, introduced by Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, becomes a law. His appeal follows:

"I would not be doing my duty if I failed to bring to your notice a grave menace to your welfare.

"Senate Bill No. 41 has been introduced at Bound Brook's request to destroy North Plainfield's work for the past 14 months under the existing laws, to construct a much needed sewerage system. With great care and with full notice to all, we have progressed to a point where we are ready to go ahead with construction.

"Consent to locate our disposal works at the Zovolnck farm was obtained from the Township on January 14, 1910, and the State Board of Health was at once notified of this fact, and no exception was taken.

"Consent of the property owners of our borough—the vote of its people—the ordinance published and passed—all provided for disposal works on the Zovolnck site and advertised our intentions.

"Plans of the type of purification plant to be used were filed with the State Board of Health on December 5, last, but a postponement of the Board's approval was obtained by Bound Brook on the statement that they wished to examine our plans. This delay was used to introduce the Bill wiping out all we have done in full conformity to the present laws of the State.

"At a hearing before the State Committee last Tuesday, Senator Johnson, from Bergen county, did not hesitate to say that he was absolutely opposed to anything that sought to undo our past preceedings and seemed to question the constitutionality of such an attempt.

"The site selected is the most out-of-the-way imaginable and affects no one outside of the Township. The plant will be 1,300 feet this side of the Township line and our engineers state positively that no odors would be noticeable 300 feet away.

"There is one old farm house and one small house half a mile east of the site and nothing nearer in the Bound Brook direction.

"The absurdity of Bound Brook's complaint will be seen when it is realized that its border it one and one-quarter miles away from the site; in addition, the prevailing summer winds are toward the Township.

"Bound Brook has persisted in pouring its raw sewage into the river, and now tries to prevent us from erecting an up-to-date purification plant.

"I am informed that Bound Brook is now proposing to place disposal works one-quarter mile from the very centre of the town on low lands, frequently flooded. In my opinion they had far better join with North Plainfield at the Zovolnck site over two miles to the leeward of their centre.

"The principal agitation against us, purchased some property on Bound Brook's borders last fall knowing of our intentions. It would be queer justice to allow him to now upset an improvement urgently needed by six thousand people.

"Our borough has shown itself unanimously anxious and impatient for this improvement. Political pressure is being exercised by Bound Brook, and while I do not believe that the Legislature will lend itself to such an unjust proposition, North Plainfield should be heard from in no uncertain words.

"Let each voter and property owner do his part by communicating his views at once—today— to Senator Frelinghuysen upon whom we must depend to kill this most uniquitous bill."

In the Borough Court.

Edward Britton, of the city side of the brook, was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver in the borough court, Saturday, charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest at Saengerbund Hall, Friday night. The charge was made by Special Marshal Raymond Schenck. Britton pleaded not guilty and was released on bail for a hearing tonight.

17-YEAR LOCUST TO INFEST JERSEY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20.—The seventeen-year locust is to be heard ripping open the quiet summer nights of 1911, in several counties of eastern Pennsylvania and all of New Jersey, with his strident, nerve-racking cry, according to a special circular issued by the department of agriculture.

The department entomologists have been keeping pretty close tabs on this insect with a buzz-saw voice, and they know just where he is going to appear in numbers during the coming summer. They announce an all-season engagement of continuous matinee and evening performances in eastern Pennsylvania and throughout New Jersey.

The scientists call this pest the periodical cicada, and state that it will appear in two broods this year, the seventeen-year race, which will disturb the territory along the Atlantic coast from eastern New York and Connecticut south to central North Carolina; the thirteen-year race to cover the lower half of the Mississippi valley.

The twelve-year race is called brood two and occupies territory immediately east of the other brood, the thirteen-year race. Brood two is one of the best recorded broods, since its almost exclusively eastern range bring it into the immediate vicinity of the larger towns and more populated districts of the Atlantic seaboard. It has been reported in Connecticut regularly every seventeen years since 1724, and in New Jersey since 1775.

At its last appearance in 1894 it was carefully studied to determine distribution, for New Jersey by Dr. John B. Smith, for New York by Dr. J. A. Lintner and for the other States covered by its range, with the aid of State entomologists and local observers. Some of the Southern records obtained in 1894 are doubtful, and this applies especially to localities in North Carolina, because of the appearance the same year of brood 19 of the thirteen-year race, which in North Carolina may touch or overlap this seventeen-year brood.

The periodical cicada, when it appears in great numbers, naturally causes considerable alarm and arouses fears for the safety of shade trees and orchards. The actual damage, however, is usually slight, except in the case of newly planted orchards, and even here by vigorous pruning back after the cicada has disappeared much of the injury caused by the egg punctures can be obviated.

Ordinary repellant substances, such as kerosene emulsion or carbolic-acid solutions, seem to have very little effect in preventing the egg deposits of these insects. Some more recent experience, however, indicates that trees throughly sprayed with bordeaux mixture or lime wash are apt to be avoided by the cicada, especially if there are other trees or woods in the neighborhood on which they can deposit eggs. The most reliable means of protecting nurseries and young orchards is by collecting the insects in bags or umbrellas from the trees in early morning or late evening, when they are somewhat torpid. Such collections should be undertaken at the first appearance of the cicada and repeated each day.

"DAN" SLATTERY NOW A JERSEY COMMUTER.

Daniel V. Slattery, for years one of the star reporters of the New York Sun, and who achieved fame as "Slatts," Commissioner Bingham's secretary, has become a Jersey commuter. He has settled down in New Market. Slattery was known as the real police commissioner of New York, because of his intimacy with the system acquired as a news gatherer, and the tempestuous Bingham took his advice on everything. "Farmer" Slattery has received a flattering offer from a New York publishing house for his Gingham reminiscences.

—Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough, continues to recover property stolen by John Polen. On Friday he located a revolver, a box of cartridges and a sword taken from the Charles Neier place. It was discovered at Somerville on information furnished by Chief Weiss, that Pollen appeared in court in a suit of Neier's.

Where Time is a Factor

Come in and Talk it Over

Some people seem to have the impression that if their affairs are left in the hands of individuals as Executors, that they will receive more prompt attention and an earlier adjustment than would be the case if left with a Trust Company.

This is not justified by experience.

Fidelity Trust Co.,
Newark N. J.,

when adjusting the affairs of an estate makes promptness a feature. Economy alone demands this. Then again, the Trust Department, in order to give satisfactory service, MUST GIVE PROMPT SERVICE—as prompt as legal limitations permit.

Individual Executors may never have another estate to handle. They haven't therefore the incentive to prompt action that a Trust Company has.

PATROLMAN MAY BE PUT ON TRIAL

It is reported that charges may be preferred against Patrolman Tobias Nolen for refusing to obey an order given him yesterday by Mayor Moy. His honor telephoned police headquarters when Nolen was in charge and instructed him to release an offender until this morning. The policeman, it is said, asserted that he could not release a prisoner unless the city judge or mayor appeared at the station in person, but admitted that it was the mayor at the other end of the 'phone.

Later Mayor Moy was informed that no attention was paid to his order and he telephoned again to headquarters. Nolen, it is related, not only refused to take the order over the telephone, but, it is alleged, talked impertinently in a way which ended by the Mayor telling him that he was seriously considering preferring charges for insubordination and impertenance. Some time later, at headquarters the Mayor was told by Chief Kiely that the patrolman had acted according to his orders. Mr. Moy wanted to know who framed such an order and how long it had been in existence, citing the fact that but recently it had been customary to give such orders over the telephone.

When asked this afternoon, the Mayor declined to say whether he would prefer the charges, admitting that he was considering such a course.

Agitating a New Trolley Line.

Residents of Bound Brook and vicinity are agitating the question of a trolley between that place and Martinsville. A delegation of interested citizens attended the meeting of the Somerset Board of Freeholders, last week, to urge the improvement of the principal highway between the two points and the matter was laid over to the next meeting. It is believed that a trolley would result in a big boom in property improvements.

Held Successful Cake Sale.

Under the auspices of St. Ann's Guild, a successful cake sale and tea was held Saturday afternoon in the parish house of St. Stephen's church. The net proceeds were $30. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Amelia Miller, assisted by Miss Miller, Mrs. Adam Hill, Mrs. Charles Sturtevant, Mrs. William R. Townsend, Mrs. Joseph Kmosko, Mrs. Drydenor, Mrs. Adelman and Mrs. Cole. Tea was served during the afternoon.

Russell Johnson, of Newark, spent Sunday with his father, A. W. Johnson, of Duer street.

Mrs. Robert Scott, of Whitewood avenue, is very ill at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Warwick, in Bound Brook.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. John VanEss, of Arabia, will preach at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday, March 12.

The Travel Club of the Congregational church will meet at the church tonight, and "visit" the home of Shakespeare.

The improvement in the condition of Rev. John Y. Broek's mother is very slow. She is still confined to her bed and in a very weak state.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, acknowledges with thanks the gift of an extension drop light and head rest for the chair in his study.

The Men's Club of the Netherwood Reformed church will hold its annual meeting for the election of officers this evening at the home of Mrs. Noel on Leland avenue.

St. Paul's Brotherhood of Trinity Reformed church is growing. They will soon need larger accommodations. Last Sunday twenty-six men were present. All men of the church are invited to be present.

The members of Trinity Reformed church deeply appreciate the faithful work of Henry Seader and the Ladies' Christian Work Society did well to present him with a gift recently. Mr. Seader does important work and without his services the work of the church would suffer.

It was decided hereafter to hold the session of the school at 9:45 o'clock in the morning, preceding the church service which is held at 11 o'clock. This will be a permanent arrangement for the future. The change was made at the request of the Consistory of the church.

The officers and teachers of the Sunday school of the Netherwood Reformed church, held a meeting yesterday, when Samuel O. Rush, resigned as superintendent of the Sunday school, owing to the fact that he is soon to remove to his former home at Glen Gardner. There were many expressions of regret over Mr. Rush's actions and appreciation for his faithful services. Mr. Rush was the first superintendent of the school and put it on a good basis. Claud Gonod, the assistant, was elected to succeed Mr. Rush.

Borough Smoker Tonight.

The North Plainfield Association smoker and entertainment will be held in Debele Hall tonight. The committee has spared no pains to make the affair a big success and guarantees money back to anyone not satisfied. Tommy Baker's vaudeville company will provide amusement, smokers will be supplied with pipes and tobacco and refreshments in abundance will be passed.

Chosen Past Senior Counselor.

Frank W. Weed is now past senior counselor of Plainfield Council, No. 402, United Commercial Travelers, having been raised to that office by Grand Counselor Percy at a meeting held Saturday night. A smoker followed. The meeting in March promises to be a busy one, as the annual election will be held, and several candidates will be admitted.

IN MEMORIAM.

HAROLD LAWRENCE BURLINGAME MULFORD.

1891-1910.

In loving memory of my only child and beloved son, who was noble in chivalry, brave, courageous and true.

His father Samuel Potter Mulford, passed to the life beyond when Harold was very young, but left him a rich heritage of sterling qualities. How proud he must be if he knows what great brilliancy and ability his son possessed, and how noble a record he has left standing as a memento to his respected name.

The unveiling of the tablet erected by the masters and boys, the beautiful and loving tribute paid to our dear boy at the Memorial services on Sunday, the 22nd of May, 1910, held in the Pawling school chapel, at Pawling, New York, by Doctor Frederick Luther Gamage, the faculty and the boys, with whom Harold spent the last six years of his life, will always be cherished and revered by his mother, his relatives and friends. While my precious son was on earth, there was always sweet companionship between us, we were not only mother and son but closest of chums, and now although he has left me in body, his spirit is always with me.

One year ago today, my dear good boy went away, through the valley, o'er the mountains, to a happier land, where 'tis said the sun shines always, and where peace and goodness abounds. I shall never forget his never failing courtesy to all whom he met and his constant love and devotion to me, through the nineteen years and twenty days of his brief life here, from childhood hours down to that fatal Sunday morning, February the twentieth, 1910, at Plainfield, New Jersey, this date a year ago, when his spirit passed through the valley of death and was freed from its earthly cares.

I firmly believe my boy is happy and safe in Paradise in the companionship of saints, in the presence of Christ and in His all embracing love.

Plainfield Theatre Offerings Announced by Manager Sanderson.

VAUDEVILLE FOR HOLIDAY.

The "Soul Kiss" on Thursday Night and "Human Hearts" Saturday —"The Royal Mounted" on February 28.

To make up for the cancellation of "Homeward Bound" at the Plainfield theatre Saturday night, Manager Sanderson announced that local amusement seekers will not be denied the privilege of witnessing this stirring play as it will be presented at a later date. From now on until the close of the present season the playhouse will be the scene of greatly increased amusement activity as arrangements have been made to secure the pick of the Shubert attractions, as well as those booked in Klaw & Erlanger.

At the theatre tonight Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, will present his illustrated lecture, "Some Hitherto Unrelated facts Concerning the North Pole." Moving pictures of Arctic scenes will be shown and Dr. Cook will explain some details regarding the controversy in which he is a principal and which has been attracting worldwide attention for a year. As the advance copy says, "Hear the lecture and judge for yourself if Dr. Cook has had fair play." He comes direct from Hammerstein's Manhattan theatre, where he drew crowded houses all last week.

As a Washington's Birthday attraction, Manager Sanderson will present vaudeville and high class moving pictures. The program will be on the same plan as that at the Proctor house, with entirely different acts. Tickets sold at either place will be redeemed at the other, that is, patrons who buy a ticket for one and find it crowded can go to the other and present it. The prices will be the same.

Thursday night is the date announced for Mittenthal Brothers' big production of the great scenic musical comedy, "The Soul Kiss." Sixty people are required for its presentation while the stage settings are among the heaviest of the season. One scene, New York as seen by night from the Singer building tower, is declared to be a marvel of scenic and electrical art. The comedy is replete with fine dancing numbers and catchy song hits.

Saturday afternoon and night, February 25, the always popular "Human Hearts" will be seen. It is a high class comedy drama, intermingling humor and pathos in even proportions. It will be acted by a special cast.

The date for the appearance of Ethel Barrymore at the Plainfield theatre has been announced as Saturday, April 1. She will be offered in the double bill she is now presenting in the Empire theatre, New York, "Alice Sit by the Fire," and the one act play, "The Twelve-Pound Look." This attraction will be one of the dramatic events of the season.

Among the recent bookings announced by Manager Sanderson are Cyril Scott former star of "The Prince Chap," and "The Royal Mounted," who comes on February 28 in his latest success, "The Lottery Man." The Volunteer Organist" on March 11, and "Black Patti" on March 3.

DR. F. A. COOK HERE

North Pole's Alleged Discoverer to Lecture at Theatre Tonight.

HE CHARGES A CONSPIRACY.

With the Aid of Moving Pictures He Will Tell of the Organized Scheme to Dishonor Him.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who startled the world when he claimed to have discovered the North Pole, will tell his story at the Plainfield theatre tonight. His story will be illustrated by moving pictures. While the pictures throw no new light upon the famous controversy, they are of considerable interest as placing Doctor Cook on record for the first time as specifically charging unfair play on the part of certain people.

The various characters are represented by actors whose make-up reproduce with considerable fidelity the persons they are supposed to represent. The part of Dr. Cook is played by himself and those who witness the acting of the Doctor in this picture must admit that, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding, he is the man who might be regarded as capable of playing a part.

"I have almost despaired of ever being able to have placed through the usual sources of publication any story retaining the exact statement or creating the impression intended," said Dr. Cook today. "One reason why I lent myself to the making of the chief picture is that despite a long continued unwillingness to believe in the existence of a conspiracy of which I have been made the victim, the proofs have been so forcibly and adequately presented to me that I can no longer doubt. I am satisfied at last that a body of supposedly reputable men have conspired from the beginning to discredit and dishonor me, resorting to means to this end only to be expected from creatures of the lowest type. My unwillingness to believe this has led me to maintain a silence and to pursue a course of action which, I regret to say, has played into the hands of the men seeking to accomplish my ruin.

"The chief picture portrays the details of a conspiracy I am prepared to prove and the entire story will go far towards supplying reasons for apparent inconsistency of action on my part at times."

Dr. Cook arrived in town at noon and registered at the Hotel Kensington.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

At the regular meeting of the Dunellen Board of Trade, Friday night, it was reported that good progress has been made by the committee investigating the proposition to re-number the borough's houses. The block system has been decided upon and all the facts will be in hand for recommendation to the Council within a short time. It was decided to hold a smoker at the next regular meeting and if possible to secure a reputable civic speaker to discuss municipal problems. Other interesting features are also in view.

The Men's Brotherhood of the Methodist church held a special meeting Friday night. Two interesting papers were read, one by Otis M. Weber on "Lincoln," and the other by Jesse Rogers on "Washington." A general discussion followed the reading and a social time was enjoyed by the attendants.

The pupils of the Whittier School will hold Washington's Birthday exercises tomorrow afternoon.

Frank Lewis, who has been residing in the borough, has removed to New York State.

The Eleven Twelve Club will be entertained tonight at the home of Frank Peck.

Dr. P. W. Brakeley is again confined to his home by illness.

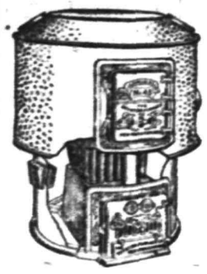
Mrs. Smalley Critically Ill.

Mrs. Phoebe J. Smalley is critically ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Dunbar, of Union street, the result of shock caused by the death of her husband, William L. Smalley, on Friday night. She had not been in the best of health and when the news of Mr. Smalley's demise was conveyed to her she collapsed. Mrs. Smalley is in her eighty-third year.

Anniversary Dinner Postponed.

The anniversary dinner of the Franklin minstrels, which was planned for tomorrow night at Deegan's hotel, Scotch Plains, has been postponed until March 24.

Heating Problems Solved



Sectional view of BOYNTON FURNACE, showing Patented square fire pot and large ash pit.

HERE is the furnace that heats the house from first floor to the attic—makes no dust—little ash, and less bother. A BOYNTON "square pot" furnace will give summer temperature in zero weather, on a surprisingly small amount of coal. It's the square fire pot that does it. The never smothers out because the fire pot is full of ash and cinder. A turn of the BOYNTON ash cutting grate clears the fire completely. The BOYNTON has a capacious square cornered ash pit, that you can shovel out clean. BOYNTON boilers—for house, school, or church heating—have this same economical fire pot. See your dealer about BOYNTON "square pot" furnaces and boilers.

FROCKS FOR CHILDREN

Ideas May Be Used For Late Winter and Early Spring.

A Wide Range of Material For the Home Dressmaker to Avail Herself of For Children From Six to Sixteen Years Old.

Here are a few Paris suggestions for dressing young girls from six to sixteen years of age.

These ideas are given for winter frocks, but if you belong to a provident class why not plan an early spring outfit?

There is, to begin with, a blue serge. A band of dark blue velvet is inserted on the skirt, and straps are used to hold the double bib effect over the shoulders. The yoke and sleeves are of lace or embroidery. Stitching gives a tailored finish at the bodice and hem of the skirt. This one piece frock is simple and appropriate, and the idea can be worked up in heavy linen, in silk or in voile.

For a little girl another suggestion is a simple velvet frock made in one piece. There is a panel of striped corded silk in the front outlined on each side with silk covered buttons. The half sleeves are bell shaped and are lined with white silk. They are slashed up at the outer seams and trimmed with buttons. A straight line is attained by plaiting in the fullness of the skirt at each side seam and holding the folds by buttons. These velvet dresses for little tots are very elegant and rely on their simplicity for their attractive style. This dress will also look well in rajah or coarse linen.

Cotton voile will be one of the most generally worn materials for children during the coming spring. It makes up well in combination with coarse lace. Cluny or Irish is suggested. The extended yoke has a straight line across the top, from which hand run tucks are placed in clusters at the side. Three tucks appear lower down on the skirt also.

The sleeves are of the kimono type, edged with a band, and the lace again appears on the bottom of the skirt.

The young girl's frock in our illustration is of blue serge trimmed with black soutache and bands of black satin. The plain satin is used as a hem and as trimming, in Russian lines, for the bodice. Braid and buttons give a military finish. The guimpe is of fine linen and is adjustable.

A child's coat for spring is suggested exploiting a few new lines. It is of tapestry blue ribbon ottoman silk and is trimmed with cord and an Irish lace collar and cuffs. The sleeves are regular coat sleeves, and the double row of crocheted buttons serve as fastenings for the corded loops at the front. An inverted side plait is held in place by buttons and cords, while a lace strap over silk holds in the back.

This little coat can also be made in green ratine striped with white, with dark green collar and cuffs and round mother-of-pearl buttons. For a summer coat heavy linen with an embroidered collar and cuffs would be a smart adaptation of these lines.

And finally we come to the last idea, which is dark blue serge with a circular collar, broad revers and cuffs of light blue ratine. The sleeves are full, the lines loose, and the style is suited to a little girl from five to fourteen years old.

Two materials for one frock are certainly less expensive when the clever shopper can combine colors and fabrics with little or no hesitation.

Fashion is kindly disposed toward the home dressmaker these days. It is her opportunity, and now is the best time to take advantage of it.

Ginger Before Breakfast.

"If you are inclined to feel heavy and bad tempered in the morning when you rise," says a well known physician, "try taking a piece or two of preserved ginger. For some reason it seems to sweeten the temper with the digestion and makes a healthful as well as a palatable before breakfast dainty."

THE MORRIS CANAL AN ECONOMIC WASTE

Memorial to the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey

Proposal to Abandon a Waterway That Has Been Useless for Half a Century—Canal Boat Can Haul Only Seventy Tons of Coal Across New Jersey in Five Days, While Steam Locomotive Hauls Two Thousand Tons in Five Hours—Lessee Offers to Abandon Operation of Property and Convey to State All Rights It May Have to Divert Water From Lakes and Streams, Free of Cost.

Statement by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company

The recent communication of Mr. Thomas N. McCarter, President of the Public Service Corporation, to the Mayor of Newark, suggesting the use of the bed of the Morris Canal through Newark for a subway for street railway purposes, was a surprise to the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, Lessee of the Canal.

The publication of Mr. McCarter's communication has led to much extravagant comment, similar to that which appeared six years ago when the report of the Commission, consisting of Ex-Governors Werts Griggs and Voorhees, which favored and suggested legislation authorizing the abandonment of navigation on the Canal, was published.

It is alleged "That the Canal Company controls three-fourths of the portable waters of North Jersey and desires to keep them after abandonment of navigation; that the property at stake is worth more than $50,000,000; that the water rights at Hopatcong alone are worth more than $5,000,000 the old Jersey City Tide-water Basin $20,000,000; etc."

The fact is the entire property and rights of the Canal from the Delaware to the Hudson are valued by the State Board of Assessors at $3,379,823, which the Company thinks excessive, especially in view of the fact that upon its entire issue of securities, which are only $2,747,237.50, not one single dollar of interest or dividends is earned.

In its operation during the last twenty years the gross losses have been $4,924,409.29, and in the last thirty-four years of its operation not one single dollar has been earned upon the outstanding securities, the contract obligations of which have been kept inviolate at the expense of the Lessee.

The expenditure of this sum of money is clearly an economic waste; a waste which the State of New Jersey ought not to permit to continue, as in its final result it injures all and benefits none. Surely it would have been of greater benefit to the citizens of New Jersey to have received some value than to have insisted upon the continuance of so useless a waste.

The water rights, which amounts to a right to divert a few million gallons a day for eight (8) months a year from the Pompton River, a small amount from the Rockaway, and enough from Lake Hopatcong to keep up the summit level and feed both ways therefrom, and some from the Musconetcong, will all vanish on abandonment of the Canal, and the waters will flow down their ancient channels as they did before the opening of the Canal in 1831. The basin in Jersey City (the only one in which the Canal Company has any interest) and the other lands in Jersey City are valued by the State Assessors at $400,000. Of the 106 miles of the right of way of the Canal four-fifths will immediately revert to the former owners on abandonment of navigation. All the Canal Company will have left of its original investment of more than $5,000,000 will be the Jersey City basin, disjointed parts of the right of way which it owns absolutely, dams and lands at Lake Hopatcong and Greenwood Lake, Cranberry Lake and one or two other points, some mules and canalboats and a few parcels of land not used for Canal purposes.—With these it must pay off a bonded debt of $500,000, satisfy stockholders holding $2,247,237.50 of stock and scrip, and the claims of the State, to which the Canal, by the terms of the charter, is to go absolutely in 1974.

The old cry is raised that the Railroad Company has ruined the Canal by diverting business from it. The fact is the Railroad Company for nearly thirty years after taking the lease of 1871 deliberately diverted to the Canal from 250,000 to 300,000 tons of coal per year to give it something to do.

The subject is important, and the facts, owing to the lapse of years are not as clearly before the minds of the people as they should be, although they were made perfectly plain by the Governors' Report in 1905, which shows the desirability of presenting these facts anew in order that many of the misstatements to which reference is made above, may be corrected and the subject made clear to the people of the State.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company believes the public is entitled to the facts, and an opportunity to verify them, and has authorized this statement, desiring to withhold absolutely nothing, and willing to add any information that may be needed for a correct understanding.

It respectfully asks a hearing for the truth from the State authorities, the newspapers and all others legitimately interested. To be reasonably brief, it is necessary to condense, but sources of further information will be indicated. The Legislative Concurrent Resolution of 1903, the report of the Commission of Governors thereunder in 1905 and Statement of Facts laid before them by the Canal Company, the numerous briefs by counsel of special interests along the Canal (such as Jersey City, Newark, Hopatcong, Greenwood Lake, etc.), and the Bill reported by the Commissioners will give any inquirer all the essential facts.

Those documents are voluminous, and it is with the hope of giving briefly the facts, so that all may be informed, that this statement is submitted.

EARLY HISTORY OF THE CANAL.

The Morris Canal and Banking Company was chartered in 1824 (P. L. 1824, p. 158) to construct a public waterway from the Delaware River (near Easton) to the tidewaters of the Passaic at Newark. The Act recited that the construction of such a Canal would "be of great public benefit and advantage to the people of New Jersey" and "for the encouragement of so great an undertaking as the erection of said Canal and in some measure to induce capitalists and others to subscribe to the same," banking powers were given to the Company for 31 years. The waterway of the Canal was perpetually exempted from taxation and broad powers were given to the Company, which was to provide and keep open a waterway which any person might use for his boats on paying certain tolls, the amount of which the Legislature kept within its own control. It was provided that the State might take the Canal at an appraised value in 1924; and if that should not be done, the charter should continue" for the further term of fifty years, when it shall cease and the said Canal with its appurtenances become the sole property of this State."

It was a difficult work. Boats had to be lifted 900 feet to the ridge on which Hopatcong is located, and again let down to the sea level. Many inclined planes and locks were used for this purpose. Shortly before the granting of the charter Anthracite coal had been discovered on the Lehigh River in Pennsylvania and its value was beginning to be understood. There was no steam railroad on the globe. The Erie Canal was only half built. Other canals were being designed or built in Pennsylvania, Virginia, Massachusetts and Ohio as the best known method of overland freight transportation.

In 1828 the charter was amended allowing the Company to extend the Canal through to Jersey City. The Canal was actually opened for business from the Delaware to the Passaic in 1831, and the extension to Jersey City was opened in 1836. The scheme contemplated that the Canal Company by 31 years' use of special banking powers and by about 138 years' use of canal powers would be able to recoup its capital with profits and to turn the Canal over to the State. The plan was similar to the plan lately adopted by the City of New York in giving a corporation power to build and operate the subway. The Company had a very small income at first; failed in 1841; was reorganized in 1844, and the Canal enlarged and deepened to five feet in 1856. Its total cost was over five million dollars. As enlarged it was designed by the engineers to have a carrying capacity of one million tons per year each way. Its business increased gradually until 1866, in which year it carried 889,220 tons—its greatest amount it ever carried—its gross earnings in that year being $616,350. Thereafter its tonnage rapidly fell off and its earnings still more rapidly, freight rates having decreased; so that in 1870 its tonnage was 707,572 and its earnings only $391,549. In 1877 its gross revenues failed to pay operating expenses, and the business has ever since dwindled in tonnage and still more in revenue until the total amount is only nominal. It has never paid cost of operation since 1876.

The reasons for this decline are thus stated in the report of Governors Werts, Griggs and Voorhees made in 1905:

> "The competition by rail appears to have about entirely eliminated the revenue received from the transportation of ores, which was formerly a large and profitable portion of the business of the Canal, and has also practically eliminted the carriage of miscellaneous freight and to have left nothing for the Canal to do, except to carry such coal as may be trans-shipped into its boats at Phillipsburg. * * * Practically of late years, the Canal has done no business of any consequence except the transportation of such coal as the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has reshipped from its cars to the boats at Phillipsburg." (Report, pp. 35, 36.)

The Commission adds:

> "Ownership of the canal as a canal would be of no value to the State."

The Canal Company's power and duty, as contained in its charter, were to provide a waterway precisely as a toll road is provided, that others might move their vehicles thereon; but not to provide or operate boats, and for a time the Canal Company owned 0 boats whatever. But no freight boats of any other persons or corporations have offered to go through the Canal for about sixteen years, so that not a ton of freight would move on the Canal to-day but for the fact that the Canal Company built boats and bought mules and began itself to conduct transportation on the Canal.

RUIN OF CANAL BY RAILROAD COMPETITION.

The Canal was never financially successful, except for a few years from about 1852 to about 1866. It paid dividents during that period but some of those were not cash but scrip dividents, the scrip becoming a debt of the Canal Company which had to be paid by the Lessee long afterwards. The reason is quite plain. While the charter was being passed, George Stephenson was perfecting the invention of a locomotive, and the Stockton & Darlington railroad in England was opened, with steam transportation, nine months after the Canal was chartered. Railroad development thereupon became so rapid that in 1830, a year before the Canal was opened for use, the State of New Jersey had chartered the Camden & Amboy Railroad Company, and thereafter proceeded quickly to charter several others. The Morris & Essex Railroad, paralleling the Canal from end to end, was chartered in 1835, one year before the Canal was opened to Jersey City. Within ten years after the chartering of the Canal the bright expectations with which the charter had been taken began to be disappointed by this new and better method of transportation. The Directors' annual reports show the constantly growing stress of this competition. After steel rails were invented and put in use in the sixties, and the Lackawanna Railroad completed through to tidewater, and the Central Railroad of New Jersey built, freights fell to a point which made navigation on the Canal perfectly hopeless.

When it is remembered that the largest boat on the Canal carries but seventy tons and consists of two sections, which must be separated at twenty-two different inclined planes and pass through more than thirty locks to get over the mountains from the Delaware to the Hudson, and that the journey occupies five days, while a single locomotive will take two thousand tons of coal over the same trip in five hours—the result of such competition is perfectly obvious. Moreover, the Canal Company has to receive and trans-ship the coal at the Delaware River from cars, and the coal has to be again lifted out of the Canal boats and put into cars and wagons when it reaches tidewater, adding another costly burden. The three railroads directly competing with the Canal—the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Lackawanna Railroad and the Lehigh Valley Railroad of New Jersey—have each a carrying capacity of not less than ten million tons annually. So low have freights fallen that the tolls on the Canal will scarcely pay the wages of boatmen necessary to conduct the boats through the Canal. The Governors' Commission in their report of 1905 (p. 36) stated that the method of canal transportation, "while ingenious and unique and in its time useful, is at present obsolete and unprofitable. Apparently the Canal cannot be operated either by the Company itself or by its Lessee or by the State without a large annual loss."

DESCRIPTION OF THE CANAL.

The Canal from Phillipsburg to Jersey City has a length of about one hundred and two miles and, including the navigable feeder from Mountain View to Pompton, an aggregate length of 106.69 miles. It passes from Phillipsburg through Stanhope, Hopatcong, Dover, Boonton, Paterson, Bloomfield and Newark to Jersey City. The waters feeding it on the west or Delaware side of the divide come from the Musconetcong River and its tributaries and its source, Lake Hopatcong. Lake Hopatcong, being at the summit, also feeds some waters eastward therefrom to the Canal. The easterly or Hudson River side of the Canal is fed also from the Rockaway River at Boonton and the Pompton River at Mountain View. The chief reservoir for the western part of the Canal is Lake Hopatcong, and that for the eastern part of the Canal is Greenwood Lake. Both of these lakes are expressly mentioned in the charter and supplements thereto, and the Company is given express authority to impound and use their waters. The State of New York by Act 1855 also gave the Canal Company express authority to use the waters of Greenwood Lake so far as they lay in the State of New York, on the making of compensation to the owners of the land flooded.

Under these powers the Canal Company acquired a considerable amount of land at the outlet of Lake Hopatcong, constructed a dam eleven feet high, thereby flooding forty-five acres of its own land and 415 acres of the lands of Riparian owners, acquiring this latter right through condemnation. At the outlet of Greenwood Lake the Company acquired 668 acres of land, built a dam 16 feet high, which flooded its own land and the lands of others to the extent of about 800 acres, greatly enlarging Greenwood Lake. From Lake Hopatcong water is drawn to the extent necessary to keep up the Canal, the draught usually being from four to seven feet in the summer, and the water passing down through a feeder a mile long to the summit level of the Canal. From Greenwood Lake water is drawn in like manner to about the same extent. It passes down the Wanaque River and Pompton feeder to Mountain View, where it enters the Canal. Formerly, boats coming into the Canal at Phillipsburg came across the Delaware River and could pass up the Lehigh River by the Canal and slack water navigation therein provided by the State of Pennsylvania, but floods destroyed the dams and the Canal along the Lehigh River, and that connection has been entirely cut off for some years.

STATE GRANTS TO THE CANAL COMPANY.

By the Act of 1828 the Legislature authorized the Company to continue the Canal "to the waters of the Hudson River at or near the City of Jersey." The City of Jersey was then what was called the Town of Jersey, and chiefly owned by the Associates of the Jersey Company which the Legislature had incorporated in 1804 and who had laid out old Powles Hook into lots and streets and had taken in a considerable portion of the Communipaw Bay in their map. To them the State had granted (P. L. 1804, p. 367) the privilege of erecting or building docks, wharves, and piers in Hudson's River and the bays thereof so far as necessary for the improvement of their property or the benefit of commerce and to appropriate the same to their own use. From them the Canal Company bought by Warranty Deeds tracts of land in Communipaw Bay reaching out to the Hudson River front, whereon they constructed the Canal basin now commonly called the "Old Basin," which remains practically as it was constructed seventy-five years ago. It is a plot of about four hundred feet wide on the Hudson River front and about thirteen hundred feet long. It is the terminus of the Canal.

In 1867 (P. L. p. 251) the State granted to the Canal Company what is known as the "Big Basin," immediately to the south of the Old Basin, being a tract of 960 feet wide on the Hudson River with a depth of 1,765 feet extending back to Washington Street. The width was reduced by the terms of the grant to 810 feet, the requirements being that a passageway through the grant from east to west should always be kept open at least 150 feet wide. This grant provided for a rental of $25,000 a year to be paid to the State, which at any time might be commuted on a seven per cent. basis on making one payment of $357,142. This was an enormous rental, by far the highest price ever inserted in any grant made by the State up to that time. The Canal Company practically made no use of this land, but paid the rent thereon until 1871, after which the Lessee, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company paid the rent. This rent was to continue during the continuance of the charter of the Morris Canal Company, after which the lands granted, with the improvements thereon, should revert to the State on the same terms provided in the original charter.

In 1869 the General Riparian Act was passed, creating a Board of Commissioners with power to lease and sell the State's interest in riparian lands. In 1888 the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company applied to that Board for a grant of the State's reserved right in the Big Basin; and on July 12th, 1889, the Commissioners made a grant in fee simple to that Company for the reserved right in the Big Basin. That Company paid said sum of $357,142, and the further sum of $48,000, being $50 per front foot fixed under the statute by the Commissioners for the reversionary interest of the State, the total payment being $405,142. The Company also paid to the Canal Company $500,000 which was immediately applied in part payment of its debts, and the Canal Company deeded its interest in the Basin to the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company. The said sum of $48,000 was the "present value" in 1899, if computed at 4 per cent. compound annually, of $1,294,320 if paid in 1974, the year when the State was to take the Canal; or if compounded at the rate of 5 per cent., it was the present value of $2,891,627; or, is compounded at the rate of 6 per cent., was the present value of $6,411,120.

On this terminal tract and the mud flat to the west of it known as the New Jersey West Line Grant, for which the Railroad Company paid the State $250,000, the Company proceeded to build the terminal of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, which has been used and operated, and taxed by the State as such, for the past twenty-two years. During the hearing before the Governors in 1903, after this property had been occupied as a terminal railroad yard for nearly fifteen years, the representatives of Jersey City raised the question that the Riparian Commissioners had no power to make the grant of July 12, 1889. The Board of Governors reported that that was a legal question for the courts and not for them.

In April, 1907, the Legislature passed a bill (P. L. p. 96) authorizing the Attorney General to attack the grant in Chancery, which he did in October, 1907. The case was tried at length and argued before Vice-Chancellor Stevens, June, 1910, and is awaiting his decision. The State does not in this attack attempt to disturb the present possession of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, but to have it now declared that, on repayment by the State of a fair sum to that Company for its expenditures (or on other equitable terms), the land shall revert to the State in 1974. The Morris Canal and Banking Company appears to have no further interest in any case and is not made a party to the suit, but the State claims that it should ultimately have back this land on terms. The State will be protected by the pending suit, whatever its rights may be; and it seems unnecessary to discuss this Basin of 1867 further in this connection. It has been thus far discussed to correct the misapprehension about it which appears to be very common. The subject has, however, been brought forward by both sides in the efforts made to reach a basis of abandonment of navigation. The State officers, as well as the Railroad Company, recognize the desirability of settling all questions that are in dispute.

THE LEASE OF 1871 TO THE LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY.

In 1855 the Legislature had passed an Act allowing the Canal Company to lay rails at Phillipsburg and connect its Canal with the Lehigh Valley Railroad, which was done. In 1871 the Legislature passed an Act authorizing the Canal Company to lease the Canal to any person "perpetually or for a shorter time;" and it was accordingly leased perpetually on May 4th, 1871, to the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, a Pennsylvania corporation. The Court of Errors and Appeals afterwards approved this lease and held that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company was a proper corporation to take the lease. Stewart vs. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., 9 Vr. 505. The Lessee took over the property in 1871, agreeing to pay a rental amounting to Ten per cent. per Annum on $1,175,000 of Prefegred stock, and Four per cent. per Annnm on $1,025,000 of Common stock.

It should be remembered that at the time the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company made this lease its line terminated at Easton, Pa.; it owned no railroad in the State of New Jersey and did not begin the construction of any until some time in 1872, more than a year after it acquired the lease of the Morris Canal. Its object in making the lease was to afford it protection from and parity with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which then controlled the route across the State of New Jersey from the Delaware River at Phillipsburg to tidewater. That company itself largely interested in the transportation of anthracite coal, made it especially difficult for the Lehigh Valley, a Pennsylvania corporation with its railroad terminating in the middle of the Delaware River between Easton and Phillipsburg, to secure fair treatment in the transaction of its business. It was believed that this lease would act as a regulator and enable the Lehigh Valley to secure equitable treatment from its competitors upon its own business. It soon became apparent, however, that the canal was inadequate, either for the volume of business or for the purpose of controlling competition, especially as at this time came the discovery of steel rails resulting in lower rates of transportation and the concurrent rapid development of railroads. The result was that to protect itself the Lehigh Valley was compelled to construct the Eastern & Amboy Railroad from Phillipsburg to Perth Amboy in the State of new Jersey. The construction of that line was begun in 1872 and formally opened for business in 1875. Subsequent to that the road was extended from South Plainfield to tidewater on the Hudson River at Jersey City.

Instead of the object of leasing the canal having been to do away with competition, the reverse was the condition. It was leased for the purpose of creating competition and protection to the lessee. The changed conditions surrounding the business of the country proved this to be an error, and in order to protect its tonnage from competing railroads the Lehigh Valley was compelled to construct its own road to tidewater.

WATER RIGHTS OF THE CANAL COMPANY.

By the charter the Company had power to take from the Musconetcong River and Lake Hopatcong and from the Pompton River and from Greenwood Lake and other places the amount necessary for navigation. By the Act authorizing the lease passed in 1871 (P. L., p. 44), it is made lawful for the Lessee

> "to use the surplus waters of the canal of said Company, or any of its feeders, not needed for purposes of navigation, in furnishing and supplying the inhabitants of any city, town or village along the line of said canal or in the vicinity thereof, with a sufficient quantity of pure and wholesome water for manufacturing or domestic or other uses; and to make contracts with the corporate authorities of any such city, town or village, or with individuals, for such supply of water * * * Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be held to authorize the diversion of the said canal from the purposes of navigation."

Just what was meant by "surplus waters" may be a matter of debate. The subject of water rights in New Jersey was not as well understood in 1871 as it now is; but it was thought that in some way the Canal Company might be authorized to use and sell the superabundance of water which was noticeable in the streams where it was taking water. Probably the scheme could not have been carried out without making compensation to the riparian owners below for this diversion for a new purpose, but this was never brought to a test, for the scheme was never carried out. Paterson and Passaic were taking their water from the Passaic River below the Canal Company's intake, as were also Jersey City, Newark and other towns; and the question did not come up for settlement at all until 1888, when Newark, by reason of the pollution of its supply of Passaic water taken at Belleville, determined to go further up stream. It was then thought that the Morris Canal was an important factor in the problem because of this provision of the Act of 1871. In 1888 Newark caused to be passed the General Water Act (P. L. 1888, p. 366), enabling municipalities to contract for a water supply. The Legislature simultaneously passed (P. L. p. 300) an Act authorizing canal companies to abandon navigation on their canals. This was undoubtedly intended to enable the Morris Canal Company to abandon navigation, the uselessness of the Canal having been already demontrated; and this Act was passed for the further reason that the Canal Company with its water rights and its right-of-way could assist in solving the problem of getting the water for Newark and other towns. So impressed were the people having to do with water matters of that day with the necessity of obtaining the Morris Canal rights that the Newark contract, which was made September 24, 1889, was made with the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, Lessee of the Canal, and the East Jersey Water Company, a corporation formed for the purpose of carrying out the contract. The first article in the contract was an assignment by the railroad company to the East Jersey Water Company of so much of the waters as might be necessary to enable it to supply Newark. The East Jersey Water Company proceeded to construct works, but it was soon found that the Canal Company had little or nothing which was really available for the work. An independent right of way was acquired and waters were taken from the Pequannock River in a way which really not at all materially interfered with the canal operation.

The Canal Company's right to divert waters from the streams was doubtless nothing more than a right to divert for canal navigation purposes, and upon the abandonment of the Canal they will flow back into their ancient channels, the Musconetcong, the Rockaway, the Pompton and the Passaic Rivers, and will flow down the same as they flowed in 1831, before the Canal commenced to use them. The mere abandonment of the canal would eliminate all water right question so far as diversion is concerned.

At Lake Hopatcong and Greenwood Lake a somewhat singular situation arises. The Canal Company owns the dam and a large tract of land at the outlet of Lake Hopatcong in fee simple, and owns a good many acres of the land under the waters of the Lake. It has flowage rights, certainly for canal purposes if not for other purposes, around the shore of the Lake. The owners have built cottages and do not want the dam taken down when the Canal is abandoned, but want it forever kept up so that the water will stand higher. The Canal Company has been accustomed to draw down the Lake about four to six feet each summer, according to the dryness of the season, and the owners prefer to have it so rather than to have the dam torn down and the Lake permanently drawn down to its old level.

At Greenwood Lake a similar situation exists. The Canal Company owns the dam, about six hundred acres of the flowed land, and the right to flow as against many, if not all, of the shore owners. The draught on this Lake rarely exceeds six feet in any season. The owners around the Lake likewise want this dam kept up.

In both cases the absolute title of the Canal Company to its dams is unquestionable and its right to take down the dams is undoubted. Probably its right to keep them up will be found to be equally clear. The dams ought not to be taken down, but maintained as desired by the shore owners of the lakes, and for the other value they have, which it would be folly to waste and throw away. Hopatcong is less valuable than Greenwood Lake. The reasonable maintenance of the water of Hopatcong for the protection of the cottage owners is desirable, and the stored water has some (but not very great) value for the use of mill and and power plants which may be built along the Musconetcong River. The amount of storage which might be drawn for power would of course be limited if the level of the water in the lake is to be reasonably maintained for the advantage of the cottage owners. The value of the Canal Company's property rights and dam thus limited would possibly be worth Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

At Greenwood Lake the storage has value for equalizing the flow to the existing mills and to the power plants which might be built on the Wan River, and also for equalizing the flow to such water supply plants as may be established along the Wanaque or Passaic Rivers. At present the only one is the plant at Little Falls supplying Paterson, Passaic, Bayonne, Harrison, Montclair, etc., a total of some twenty-two million gallons of water per day. Doubtless other plants will be ultimately established by the State or by municipalities. It is difficult to say what the Lake will be worth for these purposes, but with a reasonably limited draught such as would protect the cottage owners around the Lake, the value would perhaps be five hundred thousand dollars.

The Company's right to divert water will ipso facto cease upon the abandonment of the Canal and its only water rights remaining of any value will be its rights at the two Lakes. Indeed, it has no other water rights except as it owns the land covered by Cranberry Lake and such ponds, which may be sold for mill ponds and like purposes, but have no other value. To solve the problem of Greenwood Lake and Lake Hopatcong, the managers of the Canal propose that upon abandonment the property owned at these two lakes shall be conveyed directly to the State of New Jersey, including the lands, dams and all water rights of every nature. The State will then be in the position to dispose of them or utilize them in any way the Legislature may see fit. They are valuable and can be made much more valuable.

SALE OF WATER RIGHTS BY CANAL COMPANY.

On November 30, 1894, the Morris Canal and Banking Company, as Lessor of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, contracted to sell to the New Jersey General Security Company, upon the abandonment of the canal, all the surplus waters which it might then have for the sum of $400,000, which has been paid. In view of the present development of affairs, the Railroad Company has made a contract with the Security Company, whereby the latter is to relinquish any rights which it obtained by virtue of that contract and the Railroad Company is to pay back the consideration therefor to the Security Company, so that the Canal Company and its Lessee will be at liberty to convey to the State its remaining water rights, if any, without hindrance upon the abandonment of the Canal.

The amount of water which the Canal Company has heretofore used has been variously estimated and frequently greatly exaggerated. The most important point of intake is at Mountain View where it is supplied by the Pompton feeder. The amount taken there is probably from eleven to twelve million gallons per day during the summer months.

LANDS OF THE CANAL COMPANY.

The Canal Company owns the land constituting the 106.59 miles of right of way; 85.66 miles were acquired by condemnation or by deeds containing reversionary clauses, which, upon abandonment of navigation, will forthwith revert to the former owners. 7.82 miles were acquired by gift, occupation or adverse user, and 13.21 by absolute deed. Of this last item, 1.54 miles are in Jersey City and 1.53 are in Newark. In Jersey City the Canal Company has the Old Basin and several other parcels of land, all of which are assessed by the State Board of Assessors at $400,000. It has other small parcels along the line, the principal ones being at Stanhope reservoir, Cranberry Lake, Bear Swamp and Phillipsburg. These, with small parcels here and there, comprise all the real estate of the Canal Company.

PERSONAL PROPERTY OF THE CANAL COMPANY.

There is no personal property except a small number of boats, with mules, tools, harness, etc. The whole has an indefinite but small value.

WINDING UP THE CANAL COMPANY.

Upon the abandonment of navigation the Canal Company will have the disjointed pieces of right of way which they own absolutely and therefore will

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"The Soul Kiss," which comes to the Plainfield theatre on Thursday, is said to be in the hands of a very capable organization, which has scored heavily with both the public and press. Its presentation in our city is awaited with much interest. This delightful musical comedy by Harry B. Smith and Maurice Levi, which has to its credit a run of 300 consecutive performances in New York, six months in Chicago, and four months in Boston, tells better than words how "The Soul Kiss" pleased Metropolitan playgoers. The story is vivacious, overflowing with rich humor and hitherto untouched ideas.

Till we have reflected on it, we are scarcely aware how much the sum of human happiness is indebted to the stage. We acquire cheerfulness and vigor from mere association with our fellow men in the theatre, and from the looks of happy expectancy radiating from our neighbor's countenance, inspired by anticipation of Plainfield's prospective enjoyment of good, clean, wholesome drama, well acted and properly presented. The great success of "Human Hearts" is made possible by its interesting story of humanity and human feelings and the skillful manner in which it is told. It touches our heart strings, rouses our latent better instincts and makes us feel kinder towards our fellow men for having witnessed it. "Human Hearts" will be presented this season with an especially strong company of players, and the same fidelity to scenic and mechanical detail that made its former visit notable. The engagement is for Saturday, matinee and night.

Rev. G. B. Robinson, of New York, preached two strong sermons at Hope chapel yesterday morning and evening.

THE MORRIS CANAL AN ECONOMIC WASTE

not revert to the original owners, various parcels along the line, the Old Basin in Jersey City and the mules and boats to divide among its owners. The holdings of the owners are preferred stock, $1,175,000; common stock, $1,025,000; holders of mortgage bonds, $509,000, old outstanding dividend scrip, $47,237.50; or a total of $2,747,237.50. Under the Governor's bill which passed the House in 1905 the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company must at its own risk make settlement with all these interests, and the stockholders' shares must be condemned if they cannot be obtained by agreement. Then there is the claim of the State to have the Canal in 1974 without payment. This claim of the State ought to be waived, particularly if the Canal Company conveys Lake Hopatcong and Greenwood Lake to the State. The Governors have reported that the Canal as such would be worth nothing to the State, but assuming that it will have great value in 1974, it will be seen that the present value is small. In the Attorney General's attack upon the Big Basin grant it was proved without dispute that $48,000 paid in December, 1889, compounded annually at 4 per cent., would amount to $1,294,320 in December, 1974; compounded annually at 5 per cent would amount to $2,891,627; and compounded annually at 6 per cent. would amount to $6,411,120. It therefore will be seen that the present value of the State's interest in the property is very small. In view of the State's course with respect to taxation, hereinafter mentioned, it should be entirely waived.

EXEMPTION FROM TAXATION.

By the charter the State waived all taxation on the waterway and necessary appurtenances of the Canal, and stood by its contract until 1886, when it began to assess this property under the new Railroad and Canal Tax Act. The Canal Company protested from year to year, but the Board never gave any relief, and for many years the Canal Company paid one-half of one per cent. upon about three million two hundred thousand dollars, the value of the Canal. During the last three years the Board has continued to assess the property at about three million two hundred thousand dollars. The tax rate is now the average rate of taxation of the State, or about $1.80, making a total tax of about fifty thousand dollars. The Canal Company has appealed from this tax, but it has been sustained by the State Courts and the question is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States. The State does not deny the contract, but claims that because the tax is to be paid by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company instead of by the Morris Canal Company, the privilege of exemption is gone, and yet the State claims full benefits on its side, to wit the reverter of the property in 1974. It even claims the right to reverter to the Big Basin. There certainly is no fairness in this. That the Lessee should be compelled to keep up the obsolete canal, which is not only useless but to many people offensive and objectionable, and to pay taxes upon it contrary to its contract, besides spending a vast sum each year in maintaining this worthless property, is truly a great hardship and one which the managers believe the people of the State, when they understand the facts, will not justify. The economic waste of such a course is positively wrong. The Lessee in the forty years since 1871 has paid out $10,578,670.21 in excess of all that it has received from the earnings of the Canal, and it has done its best to make the Canal pay. It cannot be made to pay unless railroads are abandoned. While it reaches the waters of the sea at the east, it reaches no navigable waters at the west. It covers but a short haul, and its capacity is so small as to be positively ridiculous at the present day. The managers understand perfectly well that certain great ship canals connecting important waters may be made profitable, although even the Erie Canal, three hundred miles long, and connecting the Lakes with the Hudson River, became so unprofitable that the State abandoned all tolls upon it, and it has been maintained at enormous annual loss for the last twenty-five years. The freights upon it have dwindled from more than thirteen million tons to about four million tons per annum, and the State of New York is now expending one hundred million dollars to increase its depth to twelve feet, in the desperate effort to attempt freights to use it—an experiment still exceedingly doubtful. The Morris Canal, a trivial affair in size, one hundred miles in length, climbing over great hills and reaching nowhere, is an utterly hopeless proposition. No amount of expenditure can be conceived of to make it anything but a dead loss. Its only value is its salvage value, which may be obtained by judicious sale of its fragments for other uses. Its owners ask nothing from the State of New Jersey but the power to abandon what everybody in the State wants abandoned—this useless, out grown ditch.

The State has not in the past approached this question from the viewpoint of meeting its contract obligations, but has, notwithstanding the exemption from taxation provided by the charter, assessed taxes against the property since 1884, amounting to $865,102.48, the right of which the Lessee has been compelled to litigate, and the question is now before the Supreme Court of the United States. And notwithstanding the fact that the Railroad Company fully complied with all legal requirements and received from the State a deed, under the Great Seal of the State, of the Big Basin, it has been compelled to defend its rights in the Court and the matter is still in abeyance. This, however, does not enter into the question of the abandonment of navigation on the Morris Canal, but is simply quoted as an example of the injustice that in many instances has attended the present attack upon corporations. The public mind has been confused by misleading statements and sensational publications.

The Railroad Company has held back nothing with respect to the property, and it has nothing to conceal with respect to it. It is to be regretted that agitation of the subject by certain parties and newspapers, without a full understanding of the facts, has heretofore served to mislead the public in regard to what is merely a simple business proposition, and has rendered it practically impossible to obtain a fair hearing, although everything above stated was developed by a serious report over the signatures of three ex-Governors of the State six years ago; but the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company still believes that a hearing may be had and that the Legislature, when they fully understand the matter, will rise above the senseless clamor that has been raised and permit the passage of a bill in the interests of the State, of its water supply and of the stockholders of the Canal Company, to whom the State owes at least good faith. The investors in the canal project contributed first and last fully six million dollars to the enterprise. They received return for a few years only. On the first failure, their holdings were cut down to half of the former amount. The losses of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company under its lease are still more grevious. These losses grow primarily out of the profound change in methods of transportation involved in the invention of steam railroads, a change which none could have foreseen. The investors must bear their loss, but there is no propriety in their losses being exaggerated and increased by the continued listening to the silly cries of persons uninformed as to the facts and having no good purpose to serve in the interests of the public or any legitimate interest.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company asks that the Legislature pass a bill substantially as recommended by the Commission of Governors, permitting the abandonment of navigation on the Canal and the sale of the remaining fragments of property for the payment of the debts of the Canal Company and the stock holders, as far as the money will extend, and if other conditions are made satisfactory, offers to convey all land and water rights at Lake Hopatcong and Greenwood Lake to the State of New Jersey; and if desired, expressly by deed and covenant to relinquish to the State all its rights to divert waters from any streams or sources whatever in this State.

RED MEN TO MEET

ANNUAL SESSION THURSDAY.

Plainfield Tribes to Be Represented at Convention at Trenton—26,834 Red Men in New Jersey.

The Great Council of Improved Order of Red Men of the State will open its annual session in the Y. M. C. A. building in Trenton on Thursday at 10 o'clock. The session will continue two days, and the repor's show that more than 400 past sachems from all sections of the State will attend. The session will be a busy one, as there are many matters of importance to be discussed, besides the annual election of officers, which will take place on the afternoon of the opening day.

The delegates from this city are: Miantonomah, Judge William Newcorn, Charles Holstein, Jerry Griffin and J. T. Green; Wetumpka, J. A. Fass, A. E. Willard and R. W. Osland. Judge Newcorn is a candidate for great representative and it is said stands a good chance for election to the office.

The main contest at the election will be for great junior sagamore, for which there are three prominent candidates. They are Harold T. Blinn, of Burlington; John Hackett, of Millville, and David Summerfield, of Clemenon. Hackett has the support of the majority of the past sachems of the lower end of the State, while Blinn has the backing of the State officers, and seems to be the favorite, and will probably win out by a close vote, although the friends of Hackett believe that they can win. There will also be quite a contest for representatives to the great council of the United States. There are usually four to be elected annually, but this year the representation of the great council of this State has been reduced from eight to six, therefore leaving but two to be elected. There are numerous candidates, but the indications are that John Thomson, who will retire as great sachem, and Emil Schabilon, of Hackensack, will be elected. John B. Wright, of Camden, will be elected great sachem, the highest office of the order, without opposition. Charles M. Curry will be advanced to great senior sagamore.

Great Sachem Thomson will show that he instituted new tribes at Audubon, Westville, Marlboro, Jackson Mills and Ewan. Great Chief of Records Stevens, who has held that office twenty-five years, also has a long statement in book form to be submitted. It reviews the work of the tribes during the past twenty-five years, showing that 62,818 members were adopted into the order; 5,973 reinstated, 2,973 admitted by card, 44,352 suspended. The financial report shows total receipts of $4,486,151.07; paid for relief of members, $1,450,978.08; burial of the dead, $489,023; for widows and orphans, $28,511.18.

The report for this year shows that 3,079 members were admitted and 2,680 dropped from the roll of membership, making the total membership of the order in the State 26,834, an increase of 400 over the year. The receipts of all the tribes for the year were $279,613.94; paid out for the relief of members, $88,620.60; funeral benefits, $37,329.05; widows and orphans, $3,623.19.

The annual report of the great keeper of wampum, William J. Smythe, will show a balance of $6,681.06 in the general fund, $1,252.97 in the aged men's fund, and $1,341.71 in the orphans' fund.

Planning "Ladies' Night."

Plainfield Council, No. 462, The Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, is planning for a "ladies' night" in connection with the regular March meeting. At the meeting Saturday night several candidates received the degree of the order and a number of new applications were acted upon. Interesting talks upon the good of the order were made by Past Grand Counselor Percy, Past Counselor C. A. Sturtevant and Past Counselor Alfred I. Laing.

"Men's Night" Entertainment.

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a "Men's Night" will be provided at the parish house of the church, Monday night, February 27. This will be the last social function before Lent. There will be musical selections, recitations, dancing and refreshments.

SCOTCH PLAINS MAN DIES IN 87TH YEAR

George Stiliger, one of the oldest and best known residents in Scotch Plains, died at his home on Front street, that village last night. Death was due to the infirmities of age.

Mr. Stiliger was eighty-six years old and had lived in Scotch Plains since 1870. He conducted a shoe repairing shop, but retired about ten years ago, when his health began to fail. He was one of the leading members of St. Mary's church, Stony Hill, as long as he was able to attend. He is survived by two sons, George Stiliger, of San Francisco, and John Stiliger, of Brooklyn; also one daughter, Mrs. Fred Clark, with whom he lived.

The funeral services will be held at his late home, Thursday morning at 9 o'clock and St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, an hour later. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

CAKE SALE HELD AT TRINITY REFORMED.

The cake sale held at Trinity Reformed church, Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Home department of the Sunday-school, netted $12 for the purchase of fruit and flowers for the sick members. The patronage was gratifying and everything was disposed of during the afternoon.

The committee in charge comprised Mrs. L. C. Sheppard, chairman; Mrs. John Ross, Mrs. A. D. Honeyman, Mrs. William Gibson, assisted by Mrs. W. G. Leitheusser, Mrs. William Van Deventer, Mrs. John H. Whitenack, Mrs. J. L. Dolliver, Mrs. George Dufford, Mrs. E. F. Sheppard and Mrs. L. M. Dunavan.

INJURED MAN SAID HE CAME FROM BOROUGH.

A man giving his name as Jeremiah O'Donovan, aged forty-six years, of 63 Mercer street, Plainfield, fell in front of the New York post-office this morning, receiving severe injuries. He was removed by ambulance to the Hudson street hospital.

The Manhattan police notified Chief Kiely over the 'phone and the latter then informed Chief Marshal Weiss. The borough police found that 63 Mercer avenue is a vacant lot while a try at 63 Myrtle avenue was devoid of results, the family there knowing nothing of O'Donovan.

It is believed by the local police that the address may have been given as Plainfield, Conn.

LOCAL REALTY EXCHANGE; TO ERECT RESIDENCE.

Blatz, representing the Union, Somerset and Middlesex Realty Company, have exchanged a large tract of land on Lakeview and Washington avenues, New Market, for four fine lots at Edgewood and Martine avenues, this city, having a frontage of 217 feet on Martine avenue and 165 feet on Edgewood avenue. The consideration represents about $9,000.

Both Mr. Blatz and Judge Runyon may erect residences on these lots for their own occupancy. The property here was owned by the Central Park Realty Company.

'JAPS' FRIENDLY

'Jingoes' Responsible for War Talk Says John M. Whiton.

GIVES ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

Inhabitants of Flowery Kingdom are Intelligent and Sociable Race He Tells Dutch Arms of Trinity.

Despite the stormy weather about two hundred people thoroughly enjoyed John M. Whiton's delightful illustrated talk on "Japan," at Trinity Reformed church last night. The affair was held under the auspices of the Dutch Arms, Men's Association, and it was "ladies' night." There was possibly more women than men present. F. S. Cutter, president of the Dutch Arms, introduced Mr. Whiton, expressing his appreciation on behalf of the association and a vote of thanks was given Mr. Whiton for his generosity and courtesy in giving the talk.

Mr. Whiton displayed more than one hundred fine views, many taken by himself, while with Mrs. Whiton he was travelling in Japan, depicting the natives and describing their customs and peculiarities. The speaker brought out one very important point in his talk in answer to a question as to the possibility of war between Japan and the United States. He said that he did not believe there was the slightest possibility of such a conflict, he being convinced that such talk was the work of "jingoes" in this country and Japan. Mr. Whiton explained that Japan today is outrageously taxed, for instance, if a Japanese possesses $50,000 he is taxed $32,000 and other people are taxed on that proportionate basis.

Mr. Whiton paid tribute to the Japanese, describing them as an intelligent race, sociable and always willing to do everything possible for visitors to their country. He described his entrance into Yokohoma, where the Japanese and United States war vessels were at anchor in the harbor. He said that it was an impressive sight.

The speaker told his audience that if any contemplate a visit to Japan or other foreign countries they must expect some inconveniences but all things considered he enjoyed his travels and found many comforts. In the mountain regions he found the natives very particular in trying to make Mrs. Whiton and himself comfortable.

Many interesting incidents were related by Mr. Whiton, being his experience on his trip, all told in an informal way, making it delightful. Mr. Whiton's views are among the best yet seen and represent scenes not often found in the usual collection of travelers. At the close of the talk there was a social time and many of those present took the opportunity to personally thank Mr. Whiton for his interesting lecture and display of views.

CHAPMAN—ALEXANDER REVIVAL IN BROOKLYN.

The Chapman—Alexander revival movement which will hold an all day session in Brooklyn tomorrow will be joined by the Salvation Army in the work or rescue. The local corps as well as representatives of the various commands of the army throughout this part of the State will participate in the services.

The services will begin in the Brooklyn Baptist Temple tomorrow morning at 10:30, when Rev. J. W. Chapman, the noted evangelist, will preach a special sermon. Rev. Mr. Chapman was one of three noted clergymen who took a world trip three years ago, holding evangelistic meetings throughout the Far East and it is reported that over ten thousand converts to Christianity were made on that trip.

Assisting Rev. Mr. Chapman tomorrow are Colonel William Peart and Commander Miss Booth, of the Salvation Army, who will address the afternoon and evening meetings respectively. Special invitations are extended to all those interested in the cause to attend these meetings in Brooklyn. A feature will be a chorus made up of reformed drunkards.

Co. K Fair.

Another large attendance was noted at Company K's fair in the armory last night. Dancing continued the main attraction but the other features were well patronized. A roll call will be held tonight while the soldier boys will have other diversions to offer for the remainder of the week.

Dr. Cook's Lecture.

TO INCREASE WORK

Plainfield Anti - Tuberculosis League's Scope to be Enlarged.

TO SELECT FIFTY TRUSTEES.

Text Books for Children at Society's Pavilion to Be Sought—Reports are Submitted.

In order to enlarge the scope of the work of the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society, it was decided last evening at the regular meeting of the trustees to increase the number of this board and thus increase interest in the fight against tuberculosis.

William S. Tyler, president of the society, presided at the meeting and in his remarks to those present said that he thought it desirable that the membership be increased to fifty members. The idea was received with approbation. George H. Holstein, J. P. Murray, J. W. Gavett, Miss Mabelle Phillips, Mrs. S. B. Joost and Hugh F. Fox speaking in favor of the movement.

It is the intention to secularize the work and by this means interest the many who are not now affiliated many who aren not now affiliated with the movement. By adding to the membership it is believed that all classes will see the necessity of aiding the work and in creating greater enthusiasm bring the results so much desired in ridding the community of the dread disease.

It is decided to appeal to the Board of Education for text books for the children now being cared for at the pavilion near Muhlenberg hospital. With the aid of these books those who now are not obtaining any education can be helped to obtain what they are missing in the public schools.

Treasurer J. P. Murray reported that there is a balance in the treasury of about $400. Mrs. Sherman B. Joost reported that the society is in good condition and doing splendid work. The house to house work of the city nurse and others is having much desired results in teaching those who are ignorant or unsuspicious of the danger of close rooms, dirt and other enemies to health.

NO STORES OPEN ON THE HOLIDAY

Washington's Birthday tomorrow will be generally observed throughout the city and borough. The merchants will close their stores all day, while the druggists will observe the usual holiday hours, closing in the afternoon between 1 and 6 o'clock. There will be no public celebration of the day here, but there will a number of private affairs, including a dance by the Hebrew Society in Saengerbund Hall in the evening. The Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will give a Washington's Birthday supper and different societies will give a supper a Hope chapel in the evening. The Plainfield Public Library and Reading room will observe the usual holiday hours.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, The College Club will give an interpretation of "Chantecler," at the Hartridge Auditorium, and Courtney Langdon, professor of English Literature at Brown University, will give the readings.

There will be attractions at both The Plainfield theatre and Proctor's theatre, where high-class vaudeville and moving pictures will be offered at popular prices. Persons holding tickets for Proctor's theatre will be able to use them at The Plainfield theatre and vice-versa. The bills at both playhouses will be different.

The Plainfield City Market will be open tonight until 9 o'clock to accomodate those who must shop for tomorrow. On Thursday there will begin demonstrations lasting for ten days of the Walter Baker Co. products.

Hiram Horton DeCamp.

Hiram Horton Decamp, a former resident of this city many years ago, is dead at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Cliffard M. DeMott, New Rochelle, N. Y. He will be remembered by many of the older residents as the manager of John W. Laing hotel, where the Babcock building now stands. He also lived at Chester, Morris county, at one time. He leaves a brother, Alonzo DeCamp, of Westfield, and a son, Hiram DeCamp, Jr., in the west. The funeral will be held at the Presbyterian church, Chester, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

CIVIC CLUB'S STAG

DEBELE HALL WAS CROWDED.

"Bang-Up" Entertainment with Fifty-seven Varieties of Fun Takes Place "Across the Brook."

In heralding the approach of its smoker and entertainment, given in Debele's Hall, last night, the North Plainfield Association announced that it would be a "snappy" affair in the nature of an evening with old friends and neighbors." It was all that and more, too. For originality and straight-from-the-shoulder ideas it outclassed anything the borough has witnessed in a long time. The program was highly diversified, comprising numbers that brought all kinds of applause and so humorors at times that they had the people falling out of their seats.

Something like 300 neighbors and friends from both sides of the brook rallied to the call. On arriving at the hall each man was handed a long stemmed pipe and a bag of tobacco. All hands were soon enjoying a cool smoke and in cases where Duke's Mixture bit the tongue circus lemonade could be had for the asking. Meredith Dryden, chairman of the committee in charge, and President Alexander Milne, of the association, looked after the personal comfort of the guests and by numerous introductions added an "old home week" flavor to the gathering.

The entertainment was furnished for the most part by professional artists from New York. Tommy Baker, possessed of an excellent voice, sang about a dozen popular numbers as did Marie Carlton, a soprano soloist of no mean ability. Miss Helen Garmen, known as "the contagious smile," made a hit with character songs and stories, but the big feature was John J. Ronney, a monologuist, who styles himself "the Tall Talkologist." He had an inexhaustible fund of stories and kept the audience in roars. One neighbor from over Vine street was became so demonstrative the committee had to give him a severe scolding.

The singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein were down for a number and figuratively "brought down the house." They responded to an encore that was even better than the first effort and retired amid deafening applause. A musical act enitled, "Silence in Fun," given by Garibaldi and Jones, secured at bargain rates by David Carney, played the mandolin and guitar, accompanied by a manager. They played about five minutes.

The final number on the program was an exhibition of physical culture methods by Professor James Finnerty and two boxing matches. The first was between Profes or Finnerty and Chas. Winkleholze and the second Professor Finnerty and Claude Hann. The last one went two rounds and was first class. Hann is an expert with the gloves and held Finnerty down in good shape. It was give and take from start to finish and roused great enthusiasm. Meredith Dryden acted as referee and J. E. Nicol timer.

At the close of the entertainment President Milne offered a resolution endorsing Mayor Smalley's stand in the call to oppose Senate bill 41 and to place the association on record as adverse to any scheme to delay the installation of sewers in North Plainfield. It was carried unanimously.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the smoker was composed of Meredith Dryden, chairman; D. J. Carney and B. J. Phelps.

Supper at Hope Chapel.

The Men's Club, Ladies' Aid Society and Endeavor societies of Hope chapel will give a supper at Hope chapel tomorrow night. The committee in charge comprises Frank Rimmer, John B. Slorah and Walter D. Firstbrook. Supper will be served from 6:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

Royal Council Visitation.

A delegation of members from Royal council, No. 77, Sr. O. U. A. M. will go to Newark on the 7:10 train Thursday night to attend an anniversary of General Sedgewick council, of that place. All members and their wives are invited to accompany the delegation.

Lottie in the Toils.

Accused of stealing a skirt from Mrs. Richard Ferris, of Plainfield avenue, Lottie Copeland, 32, colored, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning and remanded for a hearing tomorrow. The police are to make an investigation.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF WILLIAM L. SMALLEY

The funeral of William L. Smalley, who passed away Friday night in his ninety-third year, was held yesterday afternoon, at the residence of his son, David C. Smalley, of East Front street. It was largely attended by relatives and friends from surrounding places as well as the city and borough. Mrs. Smalley, who is at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dunbar, was unable to be present, owing to he severe illness.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. Smalley was a member for fifty-one years, was in charge of the service in the course of which he spoke of the broad-minded, liberal life of the departed and the union of sixty-five years that had been broken by his death. Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was also present, and offered prayer. During the service, a quartet composed of Miss Etta Raybert, Miss Grace Carroll, William Tallamy and William Holmes rendered several hymns. The floral tributes were numerous and included may handsome set pieces from the family and friends.

Burial was made temporarily in a vault in the Plainfield Avenue Cemetery but the body will later be transferred to Hillside. The pall bearers were six grandsons: Frank, Harry, Ralph, Edwin and Clarence Smalley, of this city and borough, and William F. Cadmus, of Newark.

EXERCISES TODAY IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, addressed the students in the High School this afternoon, taking for his topic, "Washington." The address was preceded by the singing of several patriotic songs by the assembled classes and a three part song entitled "Washington" was sung by these students: Misses Helen Pearce, Helen Crane, Laura Bristol Margaret Hutchinson, Eunice Eckert, Viola Garda and Messrs Roy Titsworth, Sidney Karr and Felix Janke.

The feature of the exercises at the Stillman school this morning was an address on the life of Washington by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Holy Cross church. The children sang a number of patriotic songs. The exercises at the Jefferson school, held on Friday, combined an observance of the birthdays of Lincoln and Washington, and consisted of songs, recitations and essays on the lives of both Lincoln and Washington.

Appropriate exercises were held in each class room at the Lincoln school, this afternoon, owing to the fact that there is no assembly room there. They consisted of the singing of patriotic songs and recitations. The program at the Franklin school this morning consisted of the singing of patriotic songs, together with a sketch of the life of Washington by Miss Noel J. Bullock, principal. Informal exercises will be held this afternoon at the Irving school in charge of Miss Genevieve Petrie, principal. There were patriotic songs and recitations and sketch of the life of Washington. No exercises were held at the Bryant school.

EAST END CHURCH MEN'S CLUB ELECTS.

Officers were elected for the coming year and plans were discussed for the future at the annual meeting of the Men's Club of the Netherwood Reformed church, held at the home of Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor, last night. There was a good attendance of the men of the church. The election resulted as follows:

President, C. H. Hanson; first vice-president, W. T. Banks; second vice-president, Amos Andrews; secretary, Claude Gonod; treasurer, William Carson. The list of committees will be announced later.

The club decided to hold a supper in the church on April 20, at which time a quartet will furnish music and there will be several good after-dinner speakers. The members are very enthusiastic over the future success of the club.

WATER PROBLEMS

Former President of Common Council Dumont Raises Some Questions.

FAVORS NEW CONTRACT.

The Dangers of Municipal Ownership Pointed Out by Property-Owner Who Has Studied the Subject.

Questions not only germane to the issue but having a highly important bearing on its proper solution were propounded last night by John B. Dumont when discussing the relative merits of municipal ownership and a new contract for a water supply. Mr. Dumont's views were sought because he has devoted much time and attention to the perplexing problems and because of the weight that will be attached to his opinion by the public who recall his valuable work as a member of the governing body of the municipality some few years ago.

"The report of the committee of the Common Council," said Mr. Dumont, "states that there is a strong sentiment against a contract with the water company. The public hearing, however, demonstrated a strong sentiment in favor of a contract. A contract can be made, rather could have been before the committee's report was published, whereby Plainfield can have a preferred claim on the present underground supply of the water company, if approved by a board of arbitration. I firmly believe that a contract such as indicated by the committee whereby Plainfield is given the absolute right to compel the water company to cease supply to North Plainfield, Westfield, Cranford and other localities would undoubtedly be declared illegal when submitted to the courts.

"The water company has now the right and is under contract to supply North Plainfield and other localities," said Mr. Dumont, "and the courts would compel it to continue doing so for a time at least. The committee urges its plan to condemn the water company's plant in order that Plainfield may control the underground water supply. How is this possible?

"The underground water'," declared Mr. Dumont, "does not originate under Plainfield, but comes to it from the north and east. Wells can be sunk in Fanwood township within a short distance of the Netherwood plant which would intecept this supply and Plainfield could not prevent it so that condemning the water company would not accomplish this object as to comdemning the water company plant.

"Can the city of Plainfield condemn the water pipes now laid in North Plainfield and other localities?" asked Mr. Dumont. "Can the city of Plainfield issue bonds to pay for pipes that supply these localities? Did the vote (of less than one-third of the legal voters) give the Common Council authority to go into the water business to extent of furnishing water to other localities? No seems the only answer to all the above questions.

Continuing Mr. Dumont said: "The condemnation of the water company plant would necessarily include the entire outfit for the water company could not then supply other localities and the commissioners would be compelled to include the whole outfit so far as Plainfield water supply is concerned, including their contract to supply other localities.

"Supposing Plainfield can purchase the entire plant," said Mr. Dumont, "could they make a contract with North Plainfield or other localities on the same terms they now ask from the water company? No!

"A condemnation of the water pipes in Plainfield to be connected with a pumping station erected by Plainfield is the only safe thing that can be done other than a contract with the water company.

"The demand for water" concluded Mr. Dumont, "must increase in all the territory between the Watchung mountains or Raritan river and the State will not permit Plainfield to control all the underground supply. The water company is in business to supply water and it must and will find it surface or underground or both and it seems safer to continue with the water company and so prevent it from putting down wells in Fanwood township and increasing the danger of exhaustion of the underground supply."

MR. BRIGGS WANTS MORE U. S. CADETS

Senator Briggs submitted an amendment to the Military Academy appropriation bill Friday afternoon, in the United States Senate, which, if adopted, will remedy a condition at West Point that the authorities there have vainly endeavored to correct for several years. The corps of cadets has never, in recent years, been filled to its quota, and as a result the classes graduated from that famous military school have not been of sufficient numerical strength to fill the vacancies existing yearly in the grade of second lieutenant in the regular army. This is due, to a great extent, to the failure of Senators and Representatives to avail themselves of the privilege of nominating cadets to West Point.

The present law provides that the corps of cadets shall consist of one from each Congressional district, one from each teritory, one from the District of Columbia and thirty from the United States at large. Senators and members of the House of Representatives only nominate and the President appoints. The amendment of Senator Briggs provides that hereafter whenever any cadetship at the United States Military Academy is available for the appointment of a cadet from any State at large, or from any Congressional district or territory, the President shall appoint a cadet from the United States at large to fill such cadetship, unless the proper Senator, Representative or delegate in Congress shall nominate an eligible candidate for appointment to such cadetship within six months after having been requested by the War Department to nominate such a candidate.

Under the laws governing the appointment of midshipmen to the Naval Academy, the Secretary of the Navy fills all vacancies where candidates have not been nominated by June 1 of each year.

DEPUTY POSTMASTERS TO MEET AT TRENTON

Assistant postmasters from all parts of New Jersey and men active in the postal service of this country, will attend the annual convention of the New Jersey State Association of Assistant Postmasters in Trenton tomorrow. The convention will be held in the District Court Chamber in the City Hall.

Charles P. Sayers, of Camden, president of the organization, will preside. Addresses will be delivered by First Vice President Kendrick C. Hill, of Trenton; J. K. Baccarach, of Atlantic City; Edward Wooley, of Jersey City, president of the National Association of Postmasters; Frank Beasley, of Rutherford, secretary of the National Association; John L. Stewart, of Philadelphia, superintendent of mails of that city, and Chief Postal Inspector Cortelyou, of the Philadelphia postoffice.

A number of resolutions will be offered, the most important one from a public standpoint being that to close the carriers' window on Sundays. The members will banquet in the Hotel Sterling in the evening, the affair being scheduled to start at 6 o'clock. Postmaster Morgan, of New York city, is slated to deliver an address. Assistant Postmaster Kendrick C. Hill will act as toastmaster. The association was organized in 1908, and every assistant postmaster in the State is a member.

STREITWOLF BILL IS WITHDRAWN.

Trenton, Feb. 21.—Assemblyman Streitwolf, of Middlesex, withdrew last night the rate-making public utilities measure which he introduced early in the session at the instance of the New Jersey Commuters' Association, the commuters having decided to throw their influence to the Egan public utility measure, which is identical with the Osborne bill in the Senate.

The railroads and canals committee had given a hearing in the afternoon on the Streitwolf bill. Among those who appeared to argue in favor of it in preference to the Egan measure were Howard Marshall, of East Orange, president of the New Jersey commuters' Association; Roy M. Robinson, of Englewood, secretary of the same body, and William B. Grinnel, of Newark.

Myron C. Ernest, of Jersey City, argued for the Egan bill. It was after the subject had been thoroughly thrashed out before the committee that the commuters acceded to the withdrawal of the Streitwolf measure. The Egan bill provides for only three members, while the Streitwolf bill made provision for five and a paid counsel to the commission. Both were rate-making measures. The Egan bill is known as the administration measure.

The commuters say that the thirty-eight votes which were pledged to the support of the Streitwolf measure will now be thrown to the Egan bill.

M'GRAW SURPRISES HIS BALLPLAYERS

Marlin, Tex., Feb. 21.—Manager McGraw stole a march on his young Giants when he dropped in on them at the Arlington Hotel yesterday noon, two hours before the arrival of the train on which he was expected. McGraw was anxious to get here in time to start an early afternoon practice, and made the last stage of his journey from San Antonio by auto. He hired a machine at Waco and, although the weather was very cold and he had to face a Texas "norther" and travel over muddy roads, he made the trip in two hours. Immediately after lunch he put on a uniform and was one of the first to run out to Emerson Park and get busy with the bat and ball.

The youngsters were ready to start work yesterday morning, but Wilbert Robinson thought it was too chilly and advised them to wait for the sun. Robbie then grabbed a shotgun and went snipe hunting. The sun came out before noon and the icy wind did its share toward drying off the diamond. The infield was firm enough to work on, and the first batting practice of the year was preceded by brief infield calisthenics.

When McGraw suggested that some infield tossing would be a good way to begin Cy Forsythe went to first base, Jack Johnston to second, Ernest Lush to short and Clyde Fullerton to third. Later Harry Gowdy relieved Forsythe at first base. The manager sent slow rollers to the fielders, as it is always difficult to get the eye accustomed to fast bounders on the first day of practise.

Several of the pitchers circulated in the outfield to keep warm and Bugs Raymond batted out flies to them. Then McGraw called Southpaw Ed. Hendricks to the box and he tossed up easy ones for about fifteen minutes. There were about six batters taking their regular turn, McGraw among them. The first time the manager stepped to the plate he smote a hot one past third.

Forsythe had the distinction of making the longest hit of the day when he cracked the ball over the right-field fence only a few feet foul. The boundaries of the new park are so far away from the plate that even Chief Meyer will not be able to hit the left-field fence on the fly, and it is doubtful whether more than a dozen balls are lost over the right-field wall.

In Jack Johnston, the Waco outfielder, McGraw believes that he has a lad who will develop into as valuable a man as Devore. Johnston is very fast and appears to be a good bunter. He is a kid and probably needs further seasoning, however. Grover Hartley, the only new catcher this year, it a splendidly built fellow and a smart looking athlete. He and Gowdy did not haye their eye on the ball yesterday and made no long hits. However, that is the usual thing in the spring, when batters swing too quickly. Forsythe has been down here for several weeks and is in good shape, as the weather has been warm and he has had considerable practise.

McGraw lobbed up his slow ball a few times and once Bugs Raymond lunged at it so hard that he spun around like a top and fell down. The pitchers were rather shy about taking a turn in the box, fearing that the piercing wind might tie kinks in their arms. Rudolph Nagle and Shontz were contented to hang around the infield, but Tesreau and Hendricks, the two Goliaths of the twirling corps, volunteered to chuck them up to the batters and each labored about a quarter of an hour. Then they trotted around the park and beat it to the bathhouse. Hendricks tips the scales at 215 pounds and intends to reduce to about 195. Tesreau is another 200-pounder.

There will be no hard practise until the temperature undergoes an upward revision. This is the coldest spell of the winter and cannot last long. The sun was out yesterday but the wind carried a sting. McGraw is following out his custom of working hard as any of the youngsters and Robinson is another industrious trainer. The training squad was augmented late yesterday afternoon by the arrival of Jenkins. Bustenhaven and McKnight, who missed the train in St. Louis on Saturday.

BASEBALL.

Jack Ryan, the Jersey City manager, is more than 40 year old but he is still able to play a lively game, either behind the bat or in the infield. Ryan has been playing ball for more than twenty years. In 1895 handling Nichols, Stivetts and other pitchers with ease and grace that classed him with the best backstops. Later he caught for the St. Louis Nationals when managed by Pat Donovan, and also drew salary from the Brooklyn club. Ryan then drifted into the Eastern League, but in spite of advancing years he has kept on playing, to the surprise of old companions who have been compelled to retire. Ryan is a hustler, and with the Jersey City club in new hands he may soon build up a winning team.

Christy Mathewson says that Louis Drucke will be the best pitcher in the National League within two years. Matty has instructed the tall Texan as to the mystery of the fadeaway and has shown much pride in the young man's development. Drucke fairly worships Matty and says he intends to copy every method employed by the latter in fooling batsmen. As a matter of fact, Drucke and Matty to a man with poor eyesight look so much alike, when hurling the sphere to the plate that it's hard to distinguish between them. It is a case of mutual admiration, too.

Said Captain Chance, of the Cubs, when he arrived in Chicago: "Murphy never meddles with the team, and allows me to run things with unhampered authority. He doosn't blame this or that man for losing a game and never hoses around looking for trouble. He doesn't care whether the players like him or not. He pays salaries for ball playing and and allows me to decide whether the money is earned or not. Sentiment cuts no figure with him, and whatever I may suggest to benefit the team you can rest assured that Murphy will O. K. it.

RELIGIOUS TYPES

"The Peril of Unreality" is Discussed by Rev. Charles Fiske.

THE UNPROFESSING MAN.

In the series of Religious Conferences which the Rev. Charles Fiske, of Baltimore, is conducting at Grace church this morning there was a celebration of the holy communion at 7 o'clock, besides services at 10 o'clock. A service will be held tonight and tomorrow morning there will also be a 7 o'clock celebration. Tomorrow, in addition to the 10 o'clock service and the night service there will be talk to children a 3:30 in the afternoon. Three services are held daily.

Mr. Fiske is dealing in the evening with "The Soul's Perils." Tonight he speaks on "The Perils of Respectability." Last evening he talked of "The Peril of Unreality."

"One thing, at least," the clergyman said, "Christ always demanded of those who came to Him. He asked for absolute reality. Of one thing He is always critical; a mere sentimental emotion. True emotion that ends in action always receives from Him its meed of praise; but He is impatient—divinely impatient—of anything that savors in the least of purely conventional sentiment, of mere emotional enthusiasm.

"Christ and His religion are charged with reality. He tests those who come to Him—whether it be the rich young man, the emotional woman in the crowd, or the men who would follow Him whithersoever He went, by sharply reminding them that He wants those who come to Him to be perfectly honest with themselves, and perfectly sincere and unaffected and natural in their language."

The preacher dealt, first, with the temptation to unreality among ministers. "I confess to an impatience," he said, "with the professional cleric. I find sometimes a smugness that irritates me, a ready moralizing that seems perfunctory, and I sympathize with the man in the street who steers clear of ministers because they do not always seem to be men first and ministers afterward."

Then the clergyman touched on the canting unreality of the people. He found it among men who "can worship God under the blue sky just as well as in church," but were annoyed when they were asked: "Yes—but do you?" There was another type of cant in religion that was "so broad minded that it found good in all churches, but didn't love any one."

"Or," Rev. Mr. Fiske said, "there is the woman who reads a lovely little book about a godly fisherman or a pious shoemaker, and says contentedly, 'that is my idea of religion,' as if making a great discovery—and yet has not the faintest idea of putting the ideal into practical every day life.

"There is, again, what I call the Phariseeism of the Publican. I don't go to church,' somebody says; 'I don't receive the Sacrament. A man who has to knock about in the world and make his way must do things that any who comes to holy communion should stop doing. I do not profess to be so strict, but at any rate, thank God, I am not a hypocrite. I make no religious pretensions.' Phariseeism is contentment with self, a critical attitude towards others, and the man who talks that way is a pharisaic publican."

Mr. Fiske warned his hearers, in closing, of the type of religion that uses itself up in feeling instead of passing on to action. "Sentiment is soothing," he said, "duty is severe. Choose the harder. Count that emotion dangerous which does not pass into action."

This morning Mr. Fiske gave the second of a course of lectures on "Our Lord's Excepts; or Conditions of Salvation." His text was St. John 12:24, "Except a corn of wheat fall to the ground and die, it abideth alone," and he said that life in Christ must be grounded in sacrifice. Sacrifice is the genius of Christianity. This is to be followed tomorrow morning by a sermon-lecture on "Conversion."

THE FORUM.

The Water Problem.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

Figure out the various plans with reference to the water business. I. New Contract with cancellation clause, one years' notice, Plainfield to receive ample supply—first call. II. See what charter amounts to. III. Condemnation. IV. New plant. Public meetings are all right but public apathy is appalling and where there is no direct pecuniary interest, there is usually very little direct active interest.

A man may not own property, but he does use water and pay for it. A wife may hold title to real estate, but the man should not be disfranchised. It is bad enough for the wife to have no voice, but when the old man's wind is choked off, it is too much! too much! Labor representatives should be specifically invited to attend the meetings. Labor is quite a factor in the production of wealth, no mistake about that. Labor is quite a factor in the consumption of water and labor pays for the same.

Labor composes the tenantry and the tenantry outnumber the owners of property "steen to one," and nobody but a remnant that came out of Noah's Ark would ever suggest the impropriety of labor not having a voice in the municipal ownership and operation of a water plant.

I don't see any good friend of the working men arguing labor's side of the case. It is amusing to witness the constant activity of certain gentlemen in this water question. Willing to save the dear people from investing in a water plant because they know that there is no money in it.

A school boy once playing truant got as far away from home that he lost his way and reaching the cross roads he saw several boards up on posts with a hand directing the traveller which way to go, but he flopped around and of course took the wrong road. Just as he was looking at the signs, a little girl came along. She looked at the signs and took the right road. I suppose the difference was that one could read and the other couldn't and the boy didn't like to ask. These gentlemen who are always on hand at the water investigating meetings are like the signs, maybe I can read them and maybe I can't.

Those who did not vote at the water election acquiesced unquestionably. The old motto reads, "Silence gives consent" and in my humble opinion, the supporters of the new contract could not get out a much larger vote than was obtained at the Special Water Election.

The public are waiting to be advised, rather than to advise. The Common Council represents the people and it is up to the Council to suggest to the people the way, and the people if they must be further consulted in the matter in order to safeguard the destiny of those in charge of the work, will undoubtedly provide the means.

Trot out the facts, gentlemen, and let the people state at another election, if necessary, what they want you to do.

The people can read and are nearing the cross roads. Get up your signs. Give it a whiz, gentlemen, and let the wheel go 'round.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Novita, a dainty little dancer, direct from the Crystal Palace, London, is the premiere danseuse with "The Soul Kiss," which is the underlined attraction at the Plainfield theatre for Thursday night this week. During the action of this big brilliant musical sensation, Novita, assisted by a special dancing chorus of pretty girls, will introduce some novel combinations of toe-dancers, a series never before seen on the stage, and which shows the extraordinary skill of the performer.

To be transported from the strife of town to the atmosphere of the hill country, with its simple honest people pursuing their lives of affection and trust, is in itself a refreshment. To hear the singing of the birds and those other sounds with the farm, to hear and see all things that flood the memory with pleasant experience and excite the imagination to a realizing sense of the poetry of common things, is not only a relief from the cares of the day, but a renewal of the better side of nature. To detail the plot would rob the reader of the pleasure of its surprises, for like "Shore Acres," and the "Old Homestead," "Human Hearts," while on a different theme, throbs with interest true to nature and is an ever welcome visitor to the discriminating and thoughtful spectator. That its production will be welcomed by an overwhelming house is almost a foregone conculsion. At the Plainfield theatre, matinee and night, Saturday, February 25, at popular prices. Matinee, 25, 35, 50 cents; night 25, 35, 50, 75 cents.

Among prominent women who took part in the Tableaux Vivant given for charity at Asheville, N. C., Saturday night, was Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., of New York, daughter-in-law of A. D. Shepard, of "The Gables," Fanwood. She posed in Joshua Reynold's celebrated painting "Lady Smith and Children."

Number 2
WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Isaac Kuppenberg, proprietor of the North avenue bakery, was arranged before Recorder Campbell, Sunday morning, on a charge of assault preferred by Charles Jefferson, colored. The trouble took place near the borough hall and was the result of a dispute the men had at the bakery. Kuppenberg, it was alleged, struck Jefferson several vicious blows and them knocked him down. He denied the complaint, but Recorded Campbell told Kuppenberg in plain terms he had no regard for the truth as he saw part of the occurance himself. He gave Kuppenberg a severe scoring and imposed a fine of $5 and costs, $6 in all with an alternative of $20 in all. The fine was paid.

THE KNITTED TOQUE.

Simplicity Is Its Keynote, and It Combines Chic and Usefulness.

Have you seen them? They are of wool—red or white usually—and they are knitted or crocheted loosely in the shape of tight fitting skating caps and in the weave once familiar in baby afghans.

Sometimes they are perfectly plain; sometimes they are bordered with dark fur; sometimes at the left side they have a long quill—feather or kid or velvet—caught by a little half moon ornament, never anything more than that. Simplicity is their raison d'etre.

Probably they won't live very long beyond this winter, but Paris has decreed them, and so this season they are quite the thing. In Paris they wore them first to the races—a little girl selling doll caps at the gates thought of them first, they say—and now they are seen everywhere that a tailored suit is in evidence. For country tramps or for any open air exercises they are ideal, since they fit closely over the hair, do not need hatpins and yet do not disarrange the coiffure.

Moreover, no snow or rain can hurt them, and they are easily washable in cool water and ammonia, with a little suds of castile soap. Do not iron them, but wring them tight, roll them in a towel and let them dry. In other words, act just as in laundering sweaters.

In fact, where they look best is with the long knitted coats that Paris sent over to us still earlier in the season.

With a knitted skirt, coat, gloves, leggings and cap the winter girl is togged out completely, ready for any weather.

FOR THE SMALL BOY.

A Little Dress That Can Be Made Either Plain or Elaborate, According to Cloth Used.

The boys of America are better dressed than those of any other country, for in Paris their clothes are overtrimmed and give them a decidedly girlish appearance, while in London the opposite extreme prevails and the average boy's suit is not even youthful in appearance. Profiting by these peculiarities, American mothers insist upon dressing their boys in garments that are both young and boyish, and so these neat, short slips are made in a style that is different from girls'.

Following these lines, the little dress shown here will appeal to mothers because it is practical.

If developed in tub goods, such as blue or brown linen, striped or figured percale, plain gingham or chambray, it will be satisfactory for morning wear.

A more dressy garment could be made from white pique or heavy cotton poplin.

The finish at the side front could be effectively accentuated by applying a stitched band of the goods and the use of large flat pearl buttons.

If this model is copied in woolen materials, French serge, cashmere or mohair in either delft or navy blue it will be pretty.

A band of the same goods in white should be arranged at the side. The advantage this design has over the others is that it is so plain it may be successfully cleaned or laundered when soiled.

To copy it for a boy two years old one and one-half yards of goods thirty-six inches in width will be needed.

Crocheted Purse.

Here are simple directions for crocheting a purse with wool or silk. Commence with thirty-seven chain, always taking three chain to turn. Turn and work one treble in each chain, turn and continue the same till you have the required length. Remember that the work has to be doubled from beginning to end to form two sides.

When you have the length desired, start decreasing one stitch at each end until all the stitches are done. This point forms the turnover flap.

Double the work and sew neatly on the wrong side, turn back and sew a patent fastener to the under side of the flap, which fastens to the purse itself.

If you wish to fasten the purse around your neck, fasten your thread at one end of the purse and work eighty chain and attach the opposite side. Buy a brass ring and double crochet around it, catching it into the eighty chain in the center. Pass the cord to go around the neck through this ring and the purse is completed.

BURDENS LIFTED.

From Plainfield Backs—Relief Proved by Lapse of Time.

Backache is a heavy burden;
Nervousness wears one out;
Rheumatic pain; urinary ills;
All are kidney burdens—
Daily effects of kidney weakness.
No use to cure the symptoms.
Relief is but temporary if the cause remains.
Cure the kidneys and you cure the cause.
Relief comes quickly—comes to stay.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for kidney ills.
Prove their merit by your neighbor's case.
Here's Plainfield testimony.
The story of a permanent cure.

A. K. Mattis, 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I gave Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement five years ago, after receiving a cure through their use and today I confirm all I then said in their favor. My cure has been permanent." (Statement given Jan. 20, 1911.)

On August 28, 1905, Mr. Mattis said: "I was troubled for years by a dull backache and pains in my head. I believe that my trouble was due in a great measure to a bad fall I had. Nothing seemed to help me and when I read of the good work Doan's Kidney Pills were doing in similar cases, I got a suply at Randolph's Drug Store. Their use drove away my aches and pains and my experience gave proof of their merits."

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks were dull and strong yesterday

Several persons were killed by an earthquake in the city and province of Monastir, Macedonia.

It was learned at Albany that the direct nominations bill was being drafted and might be presented soon.

Senator Aldrich has informed President Taft that he favors approval of the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

James Clendenin Eckert told of the business methods which caused his father practically to cut him out in his will.

Premier Asquith, in the House of Commons, defended the attitude of Ambassador Bryce in the reciprocity negotiations.

Staniforth Smith, the British administrator of Papua, and all except two of his party, were murdered by natives in the interior.

Resolutions were introduced in the Assembly at Albany for an investigation of the charges made by Assemblyman Friedman.

Boilermakers and their helpers struck at various points on the New York Central lines in response to a call for a general strike.

China's reply to Russia's ultimatum is apparently satisfactory to the Russian Minister, and the dispute is expected to be speedily ended.

A man shot his wife to death in New York because she refused to return to him and then killed himself by swallowing carbolic acid.

China is beginning to enforce sanitary measures to check the spread of the plague; bodies are being burned in all the infected regions.

Lawrence Ginnell, an Irish Nationalist member, was suspended from the House of Commons for one week for his attack on Speaker Lowther.

New York city defied the Stock Exchange and awarded the printing of the new bonds to the engraving company that is under the ban of that institution.

Mrs. Helena Soloff, deported from New York and refused permission to land at Barbados, was expected to present her case to the Russian Embassy on her return here.

Advices from Cape Haytien describe the ruthless campaign of President Simon in the north; Ouananiminth was pillaged and burned, and many suspected persons were shot.

The Senate at Albany unanimously confirmed the nomination of State Chairman Huppuch as Public Service Commissioner and E. J. Ludvigh as Civil Service Commissioner.

General Navarro captured Gaudalupe without fighting, according to a dispatch from El Paso, and Madero, the insurgent leader, retreated, another dispatch said that ninety rebels were killed.

The United States Supreme Court announced several important interstate commerce decisions, the principal one being that a railroad cannot accept anything but money in exchange for transportation.

Counsel for F. J. Gardner, on trial for bribery, said he would call Charles H. Hyde today, and hoped to get his testimony on Robert H. Elder's story on the record, despite an adverse ruling against such evidence by Justice Seabury.

Congress.—Senate: Mr. Nelson and Mr. Heyburn spoke on direct election of Senators. House: The long filibuster was ended by the adoption of a rule limiting debate, and the omnibus claims bill was passed; the naval appropriation bill was taken up.

STEEL OFFICIAL AIDS UNION MEN.

Trenton, Feb. 21.—The labor and industries committee gave another hearing at 6 o'clock last night on the Ford liability bill, providing for compensation to workingmen injured in the line of duty and to their families in case of death, and also on the Ford bill which provides that in suits for damages the contributory negligence defense shall be partially abolished and fellow-servant and assumption of risk totally abolished.

John Y. Foster, of Trenton, representing the State Manufacturers Association, was the only one who appeared in opposition to the bills. He argued that the provision covering wilful negligence was too broad.

Henry F. Hilfer and William J. Brennan, of Newark; John Lanigan, a Newark builder; Joseph P. O'Lone, of Hoboken; Frank Fettridge and John McLean, of Newark; Luke McKenna and other labor men, and William B. Dixon, of Montclair, who is a vice-president of the Steel Corporation, and one of the members of the investigating commission, appeared for the bill.

It was admitted by some of the speakers for the bill that small manufacturers would be at the risk of assuming heavy burdens if the bills passed, but it was pointed out that their protection lay in taking out insurance in liability companies.

Statistics were presented to show that liability insurance was not likely if employers took care to adopt safety appliances and take other precautions to lessen the number of accidents. The hearing was a continuation of the one held last week.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

I don't mean anything of that kind. I mean narrow means—living in a small suburban villa and never seeing any smart friends, having a pinch perhaps to make both ends meet, and having shabby clothes and poor fare"—

"Oh, that would be heaven in comparison!"

"Then, Eva, will you take the readiest way out of the difficulty? Will you marry me?"

The red blood rushed to her cheeks and she covered her face with her hands. Guy remained silent, his heart beating furiously. Then she looked up and met his gaze bravely.

"No, Guy; I cannot."

"And why not, if you really prefer poverty to—to the life your mother proposes to you?"

"Because I will not have you marry me out of pity."—

"Pity!" He laughed aloud. "Eva, is it possible that you do not know that I have been madly in love with you for weeks and weeks, ever since the night I first saw you indeed?"

He took her hand, her tiny little hand, in one of his and stroked it with the other.

"I am quite certain that Terence never did anything he need be ashamed of!" cried Eva, her cheeks flushing.

"Then what is there to be afraid of? My darling, only trust to me! Only give me the right to protect you, and all those terrors will flee away like the mists at sunrise. If your brother should need a friend I will be his friend. I will do for him all that a man can do. Only give me yourself!"

Who can wonder that she yielded? She felt her lover's arms fold round her waist. She allowed herself to be drawn closer to him. When she raised her troubled eyes they met his and their lips met in the kiss of betrothal.

That afternoon, as Nora was sewing in the housekeeper's room, Mrs. O'Rourke came in, her cap strings flying, her good humored face scarlet with indignation.

"What is the matter?" asked Nora, letting her work fall into her lap.

"Matter enough! Why, I go into Master Terence's room and I find it thick with dust. Over and over again I've told that girl Gladys that it was to be kept as neat as if he was expected here every day."

"Don't let it worry you, Mrs. O'Rourke. I'll make the room tidy," said the girl.

"Will ye now? The saints bless ye, my dear, then, for a good girl, that's not above lending a hand when it's wanted."

It was with a certain secret pleasure that Nora opened the door of Captain Fitzgerald's private sitting room. She had been grateful to him for his kindness to her at her first coming to the house.

Her task was almost ended, and she was putting away in a closet a number of old papers and magazines when she came upon a Russia leather box about a foot long by three or four inches deep. There was scarcely room for it on the shelf, and in moving it she let it fall to the floor. The lid opened as it fell and showed the interior to be of red velvet, shaped in a very peculiar way.

Suddenly she gave a scream and dropped the box to the ground.

She had seen, running round the inside of the box, in faded gilt, the very same peculiar pattern that she had noticed in the ornamentation of the revolver that had taken her father's life. She remembered it well, and she recollected that Guy Lorimer also had noticed it when he showed her the weapon. At the inquest no one had doubted that the man who had dropped the revolver was the murderer. Then, if it belonged to Captain Fitzgerald—

But was not this a matter the police ought to know of? Her reason said "Yes," but her whole nature rose in rebellion against the idea. She loved this man, and what had he done? She loved him—she would have shielded him at the cost of her own life.

In the meantime it was not safe, she told herself, to leave the box lying there. It was a strong piece of evidence against the man in whose room it was found. She would fill it with stones and sink it in the Thames. She took the box, cartridges and all, went upstairs and locked them away in her trunk.

CHAPTER XI.

"THERE IS BLOOD ON YOUR HANDS!"

One morning shortly after this Lady Roscommon came to breakfast with an absent, thoughtful expression on her still handsome face. Her husband, glancing up from his newspaper, noticed it, but made no remark.

"Algernon," she said suddenly, "I think it would be best to go back to Castle Dare."

His lordship was genuinely surprised. "Why?" he asked.

"Because I don't see the use of staying here any longer."

"But," he ventured to remonstrate, "you have gone to great expense in taking this house in order that Eva might have a season in town, and the season is scarcely begun. Not that it matters to me," he added hurriedly, seeing a frown gather on the lady's face. "I shall be delighted to get back to the country. The fishing is at its best, and the beetle season"—

"We can't give Eva the advantages of a London season living in this house," Lady Roscommon interrupted, "for we are in the suburbs, too far out for people to call, too far even to go to a theater comfortably. It is duller here than at Castle Dare. Terence will soon be having his furlough, and he will enjoy being with us at home."

"Well, dear, as I said, I have no objection. When did you think of going?"

"As soon as things can be got ready for us—in a week, I should think."

All this time Eva had sat by without saying a word. Her mother had purposely refrained from looking at her and so had not observed that the girl had turned pale. She had no wish to leave Hampton Place now that Guy had declared his love for her. She had pictured to herself many meetings, but she knew her mother too well to raise any objections. They would have carried no weight, and if she had expressed a wish to remain at Hampton Place her sharp eyed mother might have asked questions as to her reasons which she would have found it difficult to answer.

Her first care was to write and tell Guy the unwelcome news and arrange for a farewell meeting. This was not a very easy matter, as Lady Roscommon, disapproving of the friendliness that she saw was springing up between Eva and her own maid, Nora, had engaged a French maid to accompany her daughter whenever she had occasion to go out, and as Virginie was always at hand, ready to carry out her mistress' wishes, it was not easy to get rid of her. Happily an opportunity offered itself. Virginie begged for an afternoon to go and bid adieu to her friends in London, and Eva managed to send a telegram to her lover begging him to meet her at the old trysting place in Hampton Court grounds.

The member of Lord Roscommon's family who was most disturbed by her ladyship's sudden resolve to go back to Ireland was the heir, Captain Fitzgerald.

He had fallen in love madly in love—with his mother's beautiful maid, Nora Kildare. Many a man before now has had the misfortune—it is generally a rather heavy misfortune to fall in love with his mother's maid, but few have had so good an excuse as young Fitzgerald. Not only was the girl extremely beautiful, but she had a mind above her position. There was something in the nature of the girl which made it impossible for her to be vulgar whatever her surroundings might be.

Captain Fitzgerald was not blind to this. If she were his wife he would never have to blush for her.

But his father and mother would offer the bitterest opposition to the match, and to marry in spite of them was an impossibility. He had nothing but his pay, which did not suffice even for his own needs. What he depended on was the allowance from his mother.

If he allowed Nora to go to Ireland without telling her what he felt for her she would be very likely to meet some one in her own rank of life who would fall in love with her and ask her to marry him, so he resolved to speak out. After all, he said to himself, there was no need for them to marry just yet, and something might turn up that would allow them to marry before long.

He seized an opportunity one afternoon when the house was unusually empty. His mother was out paying calls. Eva, too, was not to be seen. As a matter of fact, she was just then sitting very close to Guy Lorimer on a bench in the gardens of Hampton Court.

It was with a heart beating high with anticipated triumph that Terence Fitzgerald made his way to the retired little room where he knew he would find Nora.

He knocked lightly and opened the door without waiting for an invitation.

"Don't run away, Nora," he said as the girl rose, gathering up her sewing. "I shan't stop a minute. But the fact is the house seems quite empty today. Everybody has gone out, and there isn't a soul to speak to a fellow."

Nora kept her eyes fixed on her work and said nothing.

"I suppose you know we are—that is, you are all going back to Ireland next week?"

"Yes, sir. My lady told me so."

"I wish you wouldn't be so precious formal with me, Nora," said the young man, half offended. "You weren't nearly so stand-off when you first came. Have I done anything to offend you?"

"No, sir. How could you offend me? On the contrary, you have always been very good to me."

His quick ear caught the tremble in her voice.

"Nora," he said and stopped, for his own voice was shaking strangely—"Nora, I have come to say something to you. Won't you listen to me?"

The girl let her hands fall into her lap, but did not raise her eyes.

"It is only what I have been feeling this long time, Nora. It is just this—that I love you, and I want you to—to be my wife by and by."

The girl pushed back her chair, so as to place herself at a greater distance from him, and, raising her head, looked straight into his smiling eyes.

"You—you say this to me?" she panted out.

"Yes. Why not, since I love you, my darling? There will be difficulties"—

"Difficulties!"

"Yes, but we will overcome them together, won't we? There is my hand. Will you take it for your own?"

"Your hand? No, no! I can't! There is blood on it!" Her eyes were fixed on the outstretched hand as if she almost expected to see the dark red

UNION CO. TAXES

Board Tells of its Work and its Benefits in Exhaustive Report.

PUBLIC MORE INTERESTED.

The Conferences with the Local Assessors Helpful as Latter Carry Out Suggestions Made to Them.

The Union County Board of Taxation has considered and disposed of appeals from assessments upon real and personal property, situated in the various municipalities below set forth, for the year 1910, in the manner following:

	Withdrawn.	Dismissed.	Granted.
Cranford Township	0	0	10
Elizabeth	11	40	149
Fanwood Township	0	0	8
Kenilworth	0	0	3
Linden Township	0	1	2
Linden	0	0	2
Mountainside	0	1	6
New Providence Twp.	1	10	2
Plainfield	0	13	75
Rahway	0	3	21
Roselle	2	3	17
Roselle Park	2	11	16
Springfield Township	1	1	2
Summit	1	3	19
Union Township	0	1	8
Westfield	3	19	31
Total	21	108	370

The total number of appeals considered were four hundred and ninety-nine, many of which included several pieces of real estate and frequently included land, buildings and personal property, and, always, where the appeal was from valuation placed upon improved real estate, it compelled the determination by the board of the value of both land and buildings.

The total reductions granted by the board, on appeal, for the year 1910, amount to $458,091.00.

It will be noted from an examination of the following statistics that the assessed valuations in Union county have rapidly risen since the creation of county tax boards.

In the year 1905 the total taxable valuation of Union county, including real and personal property, was $55,260,709.00, and in the year 1910 the total valuation was $135,383,489.85.

The following is a statement of the total ratables of Union county during the years this board has been in existence, and including, as well, the year 1905:

1905	$ 55,260,709.00
1906	106,259,437.00
1907	114,454,000.00
1908	118,971,114.00
1909	127,013,402.00
1910	135,383,489.85

Showing an increase, since 1905, of $80,122,780.85.

The following is a statement of assessed valuations, for each municipality in Union county, for the years 1905 and 1910, showing the increases in property since the creation of this board, 1905 and 1910, respectively:

Clark township, $324,400, $768,177; Cranford township, $2,049,000, $5,383,306; Elizabeth, $24,116,699, $57,408,430.90; Fanwood township, $863,200, $1,325,233; Fanwood, $256,419, $509,879; Garwood, $460,275, $1,192,391; Linden township, $1,666,700, $7,827,625; Linden, $246,200, $1,003,462; *Kenilworth $762,160.18; Mountainside, $141,650, $479,500; New Providence township, $152,000; $370,147.50; New Providence, $220,000, $517,986; Plainfield, $10,251,064, $24,411,589; Rahway, $3,441,820, $6,612,996.42; Roselle, $1,270,000, $3,036,450; Roselle Park, $931,000, $2,782,957; Springfield township, $402,200, $1,032,570; Summit, $3,608,000, $9,950,277; Union township, $1,927,782, $2,956,010.85; Westfield, $2,932,300, $7,052,342.

For many years the various municipalities were compelled to pay State school and county tax upon valuations fixed by the local assessors and were made no remittance on account thereof for reductions in valuations made by the county boards. To remedy this injustice an act was passed by the Legislature of 1910 providing that the county boards, in fixing the State school and county taxes for each municipality, should deduct the total reductions made by the board since its creation, after appeal made to it, from the total ratables as returned by the various assessors. This course was followed by the board this year and the total reductions made amounted to $3,433,200.23.

The result of this procedure was that in some municipalities the amount of money to be raised for State school and county purposes was materially less than in previous years. This difference was especially noticeable in the moneys to be raised by the smaller boroughs and townships for the above purposes.

The duplicate assessment books are by law required to be filed by each assessor with this board on or before the first Tuesday in August, of each year, and, thereafter, and until the third Tuesday in September, of each year, are subject to revision by this board without appeal or notice. While the board has received some complaints during the period, and has given them attention, it finds that perhaps the public at large is not aware that by complaining to the board at this season owners can avoid the necessity of making a written appeal to the board. When the books of the assessors are filed they are examined and all totals verified before the rates are fixed.

The board has maintained an office in the court house at Elizabeth, where the duplicate assessment books, returned by the various assesors, are kept. It is found that these records are being constantly refered to by taxpayers and they afford information which could not otherwise be obtained except by interviewing the various assessors and collectors of taxes. A clerk has constantly been in charge of the office for the purpose of exhibiting these records, answering the many questions relating to taxation and to carry on the business of the board.

The statute of 1909, requiring county clerks and registers to file a statement of each recorded conveyance of real estate to the various municipalities has given much assistance to the assessor in his effort to fix a true valuation on real estate. The return of the register in this county includes not only a description of the property transferred but where set forth in the transfer, a statement of the consideration for the transfer.

The board finds that it is often handicapped in determining the exact area of land as it has no maps filed in its office that can be used for reference, except the Union county atlas, and that does not furnish the details which should be before the board, and it is hoped that maps of each municipality in the county, properly authenticated, will be filed with the Board so that this difficulty may be overcome.

A great advantage has been found in conferring with the various assessors before their duplicates are filed in the office of this board and suggesting to them certain localities where increase in valuations should be made. With but few exceptions the assessors have carried out the ideas of this board and acted upon its suggestions.

When possible properties subject to taxation have been visited and examined by the board and this practise has given great aid in fixing proper valuations.

There is no question but that the creation of county tax boards has aroused much interest in the subject of taxation. In every taxing district in Union county the officials show great interest in the work, and they, as well as the assessors, have worked in harmony with this board.

The year 1910 has been very satisfactory in all respects so far as the work of this board is concerned. The ratables of the county have vastly increased over those of 1909, and, except in seven instances, the tax rates in the various municipalities in this county have been materially decreased, the decrease varying from one to forty-two points, and in the exceptions last mentioned, the rates were increased, in some instances, because of large public improvements.

ALUMNI RECEPTION

Charles Burdette Morse Elected President of P. H. S. Grads' Assn.

PRIZE SPEAKING CONTEST.

Oratorial Honors Won by Miss Alice Eleanor Mehl and J. Sewell Ulrich—Dance a Feature of the Affair.

The sixth annual meeting and reception of the Plainfield High School Alumni Association was held at the High School, last night, and was attended by more than 300 members of the alumni and guests. The features were a prize-speaking contest, the annual business meeting, followed by dancing.

During the speaking contest, William C. Hubbard, president of the association was in charge, and introduced those who were to take part in the contest. The young speakers made an excellent impression as was shown by the hearty applause accorded each one.

The speakers and subjects follow: "Renzi's Address," Mulford, Frank P. Cullen; "The Unknown Speaker," Anon, Miss Pauline Mary Gates; "Spartacus to the Gladiators," Kellogg, Edward J. Hanrahan; "The Perfect Tribute," Andrews, Miss Alice Eleanor Mehl; "Cassius to Brutus," Shakespeare, J. Wilbur Trovell; "Toussaint L' Ouverture," Phillips, Miss Margaret Russell; "The National Flag," J. Sewall Ulrich; "The Chariot Race," from "Ben Hur," Wallace, Miss Dorothy Smith.

Each of the speakers was accorded close attention and there was much speculation as to who would win the prize. The judges were Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, former Judge William N. Runyon and Mrs. Robert Lowry. While the judges were debating over the awards, Roy Titsworth sang two solos very acceptably.

The judges presently returned and announced their decision, awarding Miss Alice Eleanor Mehl first prize for the young women and J. Sewall Ulrich first prize for the young men. Each prize was $10 in gold. The announcement provoked hearty applause and seemed to meet with general approval. The successful contestants were afterward congratulated by their friends.

During the business session, Franklin S. Smith, secretary-treasurer, presented a report showing that the association has $819.72 cash balance on hand with some loans outstanding. He briefly reviewed the history of the association, which brought out the fact that the association membership has decreased from 232 in 1907 to 132 at present. He deplored this condition and urged the members to do their utmost to increase the membership and interest the graduates of the school in the association.

The nominating committee comprising William D. Murray, chairman; Miss Helen Moody and Henry W. Brower, presented its report through Mr. Murray and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Charles B. Morse; vice-president, Theodore O. Gavett; executive committee, R. Henry Depew, William D. Murray, Miss S. Lena Bass, Joseph O. Osgood, Jr. Miss Margaret V. Leggett was elected as the alumni editor. The executive committee was empowered to chose a secretary-treasurer, to succeed Franklin S. Smith, who declined to serve any longer. He was given a vote of thanks for his long and faithful service.

When Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire announced the winners of the prizes, speaking on behalf of the judges, he paid a fine tribute to the yuong men and women who engaged in the contest; also to the excellent teaching to be found in the school, not forgetting the faculty.

Dancing followed the speaking contest and business session. There were twelve numbers on the excellent program and four extra dances were given. Music for dancing was furnished by Charles Suhr's Imperial Orchestra, which was a feature of the affair. Among some of the prominent members of the alumni association present were the following:

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, William D. Murray, Andrew McClean Parker, former Judge William N. Runyon, and among the faculty were Lindsley Best, principal; Miss S. Lena Bass, Samuel B. Howe, Jr., and J. D. Macnab. A collation was served during an intermission in the dancing. The committee of arrangement in charge of the affair comprised Charles B. Morse, chairman; Theo. O. Gavett and J. O. Osgood, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh, of East Second street, entertained Mrs. VanEmburgh's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kline, also her sisters, of Elizabeth, yesterday.

COMEDY SKETCH WELL PRODUCED

Under the auspices of Mrs. Loui Matlack's Sunday-school class of young women, an entertainment consisting of "Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works," was given at the First Baptist church, Tuesday evening. All the members of the class took part, giving a faithful portrayal of the subject. Mrs. Matlack took the part of "Mrs. Jarley" in an excellent manner. During the presentation of the wax works and several tableaux, young women of the class rendered piano and vocal solos.

Miss Dorothy Hall rendered piano solos and she also accompanied Herbert Smith in 'cello solos. Mrs. R. M. Bird sang the "Song of the South" while Miss Lillian Tetter played "Il Trovatore." After the entertainment refreshments were served by the members of the class. A silver offering was received for charitable work of the class.

PATHETIC APPEAL FOR TURKISH WOMEN

The missionary meeting, "Daybreak in Turkey," held under the auspices of the Women's Association of the Congregational church on Tuesday afternoon, was well attended and several interesting and instructive papers were read and a strangely pathetic appeal for Mohammedan women directed to the Christian women of the congregation was given by Miss Elsie Suffern attired in the Mohammedan costume. It was a most impressive appeal.

Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich presided and the other readers were Mrs. Sidney W. Dunning, who read a comprehensive paper on "Home Missions;" Miss Searles another on the "Growth of Mohammedanism" among the Armenians, Syrians and Turks, and Miss Lulu Fuller on "What a Mohammedan Must Believe."

During the reading of these papers dainty refreshments were served and afterwards Mrs. Shotwell sang two solos, accompanied on the piano by Miss Korff. The Foreign Missionary work was under the leadership of Miss Alice Barlow.

WASHINGTON SUPPER OF HOPE MEN'S CLUB

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of Hope chapel, a Washington's Birthday supper was given at the chapel last night. Supper was served from 6:30 to 8:30 and over one hundred diners enjoyed the repast. After the supper an informal program of entertainment was given by the Misses Edna and Eunice Eckert, rendering several pleasing solos. G. Herbert Condict gave several humorous selections. George H. Beiser was called upon for a song, and it pleased the audience to such an extent that he gave an encore.

James H. MacIntosh, the bag piper of Kearney, was introduced by Robert Murray, and the former gave some fine Scotch music, which included a Highland march led by Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInnes, in which fifty people joined.

The young women from the Christian Society who assisted the men, acting as waitresses were the Misses Lona and Elizabeth Becker, Edna and Eunice Eckert, Mary Mortimer, Elsie Rimmer, Jessie Duncan and Elizabeth Slorah. These women from the Ladies' Aid Society assisted: Mrs. Thomas Heron, Mrs. W. S. Terry, Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. Donald McInnes, Mrs. Thomas Hendry, Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. O. S. Eckert, Mrs. C. C. Graves, Mrs. Charles Hughes, Mrs. F. J. Wharton, Mrs. Samuel Cratsley. The supper committee from the Men's Club comprised Frank Rimmer, John B. Slorah and Walter I. Firstbrook. The chapel was decorated with American flags and bunting.

Surprised Henry Heideloff.

Mr. Henry Heideloff, of West Front street, was surprised last night on the fifty-second anniversary of his birthday, when a company of twenty friends walked into his home. Cards were played and a pleasant evening passed. Mrs. Heideloff arranged the party. Supper was served during the evening.

ROSTAND'S WORK

"Chantecler" Superbly Interpretated by Prof. Courtney Langdon.

BEFORE THE COLLEGE CLUB.

Maude Adams Unsuited to the Part She Portrays, Says a Brown University Professor.

The subtle charm of Rostand's Chantecler was beautifully demonstrated yesterday afternoon in the Hartridge auditorium by Courtney Langdon, professor of Literature at Brown University, who spoke under the auspices of the Women's College club. A large audience composed mainly of the club members with here and there a male auditor all of whom listened and applauded and seemed to appreciate the splendid interpretation of the wonderful French masterpiece.

Professor Langdon declared that as a play he had no special use for Chantecler, but as an allegorical poem of wonderful grace and charm he proposed to give his impressions in blank verse, partly, and in plain English for the balance. He said that Maude Adams is, as she ought to be, a failure in the part she assumes in the play as it is unsuited to a woman of her temperament and ability. "One may see the play," said the speaker, "but will have to lose the very beautiful irony and satire contained in the lines of the poem, missing the actual thoughts contained in the author's mind."

It was evident that a thorough perusal and study of the original text is a necessary adjunct to the perfect understanding of the author's brilliant satire and wit. He seems to have drawn on Moliere, Rousseau, Corot and Hugo, prominent in French history, literature and art, for the wonderful descriptive art and the mirrors of human nature pictured so plainly and so subtlely that even the savants of the literary world are astounded at the temerity of the man.

In Professor Langdon's opinion the play should be presented in verse if the audience or reader is to be given an adequate idea of the piquancy of the original French. The role of Chantecler is of great ethical and religious import and several quotations from the Scriptures helped considerably in conveying the carefully made point of the story. In the satirization of the various barnyard fowls—the peacock, with his pride; the blackbird's sarcasm and wit; the curiosity of the hen; the gobbler's pompous self-satisfaction, all served as a foil for the real, astounding philosophy of the cock, he who worshipped the sun and says of it "Thee, Sun I do adore, Thou Sun, without whom, life would be no more."

Rostand's cynicism is best displayed in his characterization of society—it is playing luxuriously with knowledge, love and culture. The 5 o'clock tea, which with the fowls commences in the early morning, serves, he says, to launch young cocks on the social sea and introduce young chicks. The pheasant-hen in the allegory is the last word in the "new woman."

The thought left with some at the conclusion of the lecture was "If a woman cannot be an inspiration to a man she is nothing, but she ought to be more."

Professor Langdon was introduced by Mrs. Richard Boardman, vice-president of the club.

A Smashup.

A horse attached to a cutter, driven by Miss Irene Voehl, a daughter of George Voehl, took fright at a passing automobile on West Front street on Tuesday afternoon at 5:45 and ran away. The rig collided with a wagon driven by Peter Seader on East Front street near the Woodhull and Martin building and both vehicles were damaged. No one was hurt.

Mrs. Maguire Will Speak.

Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire will address the Christian Endeavor Society of the Temple Baptist church, Sunday evening at 7 o'clock on the subject of "Missions in Africa." The meeting will be in charge of the missionary committee of the society.

Wire Wizard's Meeting.

There will be a special meeting of the Wireless Association in Y. M. C. A. hall this evening at which the president, James A. Wotton will appoint the various committees to serve for the year. Dues will also be collected.

Enjoyed Smoker.

A large number of members enjoyed the smoker of the Independent Progressive club last night, cards, checkers and dominoes being the order of the evening.

MARTINE TAKES OATH TOMORROW

United States Senator-elect James Edgar Martine left this afternoon for Washington, D. C., where he will take the oath of office as junior senator from New Jersey tomorrow. He succeeds United States Senator John Kean, whose term expires March 4. Mr. Martine was accompanied by his secretary, W. W. St. John, whose certificate will be filed.

Letters of congratulation have been received by Mr. Martine from both Senators Kean and Briggs. The latter has volunteered to introduce the Plainfielder to his colleagues in the Senate chamber. Mr. Martine will select his committee rooms before returning from Washington next Monday.

Y.M.C.A. CONVENTION IS HELD AT TRENTON

At the thirty-sixth annual convention of the Y. M. C. A. held yesterday in Trenton President J. E. Kimball, Vice-President H. W. Herrman, William D. Murray, F. H. Andrews and Secretary Herbert E. Parker, of the local association, were present. Mr. Kimball filled the chair, of second vice-president of the convention and Mr. Herrman was the chairman of the committee on resolutions.

The convention listened to two addresses by Rev. J. Douglas Adam, of East Orange, who took for his morning topic "The Character of Jesus," and in the afternoon session, "Faith, Prayer, Obedience and Difficulty."

A convention dinner was held in the evening at which addresses were made by several of the delegates of whom 125 were present. F. Wayland Ayer, president of the Camden association, presided at the convention.

SWACKHAMER SAYS QUITE OPTIMISTIC

The Baraca and Philathea Classes of the Temple Baptist church held a social at the church, Tuesday evening, when S. S. Swackhamer made an address on the subject: "1911." The Baraca orchestra played patriotic selections and the committee on refreshments under the direction of Mrs. Charles Gullberg, amply provided for the large number of people present.

Mr. Swackhamer in his speech declared that this year is better than last and next year will be better than this, believing that the world is constantly growing better. His reasons for believing that this year is better than last, were because of the great victory won for democratic government, when the people's will ruled in the election of a United States Senator in New Jersey. He also spoke of the direct primary bill and the corrupt practices act now pending in the Legislature, explaining them in detail. He deplored the great expenditures of money for battleships and instruments of war and spoke hopefully for the cause of international arbitration. Mr. Swackhamer also spoke in favor of women's suffrage his remarks receiving great applause.

FINED THREE DOLLARS FOR STEALING COAL.

Detected in the act of stealing coal from the cars of the Central Railroad yesterday morning, Charles Miller, of the East End, was arrested by Detective Charles Zandt and William Lawrence, of the railroad police department and arraigned this morning before City Judge William G. DeMeza.

Miller declared that he was innocent of the charge, but Judge DeMeza did not believe him after the two detectives testified. He was fined $3.

STUDENT INJURED

VICTIM OF COLLEGE PRANKS.

Grabbed a Live Wire and Fell Twenty Feet, Receiving Internal Hurts—Accident at Wesleyan University.

Raymond V. Brokaw, son of Alonzo G. Brokaw, of this city, a sophomore at Wesleyan University, is reported to be in a critical condition in the Middlesex Hospital, Middletown, Conn., the result of injuries received Tuesday night while engaged in the annual class cannon rush between the sophomores and freshmen. According to the report Brokaw climbed a telegraph pole at the edge of the campus, intending, it is said, to cut some wires. In his haste he seized a live power wire and a heavy current passed through his body.

Brokaw's hands and hair were burned severely and he was hurled to the frozen ground, twenty feet below, where he lay unconscious until three of his class men ran over and picked him up. At the hospital it was found he was suffering from internal injuries.

The accident did not delay the fight which went on more fiercely than ever, many students being injured. During the rush a portion of the football bleachers was set on fire and the structure was destroyed. The freshmen won the fight.

A classmate of Brokaw called the latter's brother, Clarence B. Brokaw, on the telephone, last night, and told him of the accident, explaining that the reports sent out were exaggerated. He did not think it was necessary for him to go to Middletown as it was not believed that the student's injuries were of such a serious nature. No further word was received up to noon and the relatives here feel that the young man's condition must be more favorable.

Mr. Brokaw has been preparing for the ministry. He spent three years at Hackettstown Institute and two years ago entered Wesleyan University. When he left here for Hackettstown Institute the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church, of which he was a member, presented him with a gold watch. He has five brothers, Alonzo, Clifford, Clarence B., Lloyd and Bertram. All but Clifford, who is principal of an automobile school in New York, reside here. Alonzo and Clarence B. Brokaw are engaged in the automobile business in this city.

PASTOR'S SALARY IS INCREASED $600

The congregation of the Park Avenue Baptist church held the regular monthly business meeting, last night, during which four persons were voted to membership. The reports of the treasurers of the various departments showed balances in every respect.

At the conclusion of the routine business, the pastor, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, was asked to vacate his seat and retire to a rear room. On returning he was informed that his salary had been increased $600 per year. The vote for the additional sum was unanimous, he was told, with one exception, that of his young daughter, Miss Ruth Maguire. The pastor was given the call to the church just a year ago last night and the increase in salary is made in appreciation of his earnest and energetic services.

CORONER'S JURY EXPLOSION VERDICT

Much surprise was expressed yesterday throughout Jersey City and in lower Manhattan at the verdict of the coroner's jury before which the inquest on the body of Michael Maffei, killed by the big explosion at Communipaw in February, was held. Prosecutor Pierre Garven was perhaps the most surprised of all as he had tried to place the responsibility on the DuPont-Nemours Powder Company.

It was reported in yesterday's papers that the prosecutor and George C. Tennant, counsel for the powder company, almost came to blows during the giving of testimony both casting doubt upon the veracity of each other. Prosecutor Garven was unwilling to be quoted upon the result of the investigation, but declared that he would put the case before the Hudson county grand jury at the earliest possible moment.

Coroner Houghton's jury said that the explosion was caused by the ignition of powder from a lighted cigar or cigarette stump thrown aboard a lighter lying alongside the wharf at Communipaw on February 1.

MASONIC AUXILIARY, PROVIDED A SUPPER

The Ladies Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., gave a "Martha Washington" supper in the banquet room of the Masonic Hall, last night. More than sixty suppers being served during the evening. A fine menu was prepared by the women and was thorough enjoyed. The hall and tables were attractively decorated in buff and blue colors, while American flags were used with good effect.

Last year the auxiliary raised $240 which was given to Muhlenberg Hospital. This year the money to be raised will be used for charity to be distributed under the direction of the women. The amount received last night will be placed in the general fund of the auxiliary.

Mrs. Arthur McVoy was chairman of the general committee, and she was assisted by Mrs. Herman Weber, Mrs. H. W. Woodward, Mrs. James F. Buckle, Mrs. Edward A. Laing, Mrs. Isaac Weaver and Mrs. J. K. Roundey.

Juniors Enjoy a Party

The junior members of the Y. W. C. A. to the number of about seventy-five, enjoyed a Washington's Birthday party at the association rooms yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, during which there was a fine program, including two readings by Miss Eva Stewart and Miss Eleanor Stewart, a violin solo by Miss Helen Lounsbury and an interesting talk by Miss Gaskin, of Poughkeepsie, in which she told of the great advantages of the association. Mrs. Percy H. Stewart also gave a delightful talk on loyalty and friendship. Refreshments were served.

Another Vested Choir.

On May 1 the choir of the Congregational church will undergo a change. As a matter of fact there has been no regular choir, Charles L. Lewis acting as prescentor for a long time. It is proposed now to have a vested choir of twenty-five voices made up largely of members of the Sunday school and church. The choir will be under the direction of Mrs. B. T. Barnes, the organist.

KILLED BY A FALL

NECK WAS BROKEN BY FALL.

The Victim Unmarried and Thirty-four Years of Age, Leaves a Widowed Mother—Relatives Notified.

John Venetti, aged about thirty-four years, employed here as a lineman by the Public Service Corporation, slipped and fell from an electric light pole at West Sixth street and Lee place yesterday morning, receiving injuries which caused almost instant death. He fell head foremost, his head striking on the curbing, fracturing the skull and breaking his neck. Fellow-workmen picked Venetti up and took him to the home of Frank Lock nearby and summoned Dr. A. K. Brennan and Dr. P. B. Cregar. He was dead when the physicians arrived. The body was then removed to the undertaking parlors of George Cole. In the meantime the man's relatives were notified in Newark.

The gang of which Venetti was a member, had been placing a transformer on a pole at West Sixth street and Lee place. The work had been completed and Venetti was just finishing up the work of tightening the joints, when the accident occurred. The other workmen did not see Venetti fall and did not know of the accident until they saw him lying on the ground helpless. An examination by the physicians showed that the skull was fractured and the neck broken.

Venetti's home was in Newark, where his widowed mother lives at No. 6 Quitman street. He had been employed here about a year and had been boarding at 321 Park avenue. He was unmarried. Soon after the accident officials of the company here notified the relatives in Newark and arrangements were made to have the funeral Saturday morning at 9:45 at Cole's undertaking parlors. The burial will be at Asbury Park.

In his fall from the top of the thirty-foot pole, Venetti struck a fire-alarm wire, causing one blow of the fire-alarm to sound. Venetti was initiated in Plainfield Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, Tuesday night. Nels Anderson and Joseph Marvin were Venetti's co-laborers on the job.

MILK AND ROLLS STOLEN; CULPRITS ARE CAUGHT.

Several boys who have been raising distrubances at the New Madison apartment house during the past few weeks will have to appear before Judge DeMeza in the City Court on Saturday morning. It is alleged that these youngsters have stolen milk and rolls from the hallways and when nothing else presented itself for their mischievous hands to do they passed the heavy time by ringing the various electric bells until the tenants have become annoyed beyond the limit.

Gave a Dinner Party.

A. D. Edgar, of East Front street, celebrated the anniversary of his birthday yesterday and in honor of the event he and Mrs. Edgar entertained a company of friends and relatives at dinner. Those present were Judge and Mrs. Burdett Herr, Miss Marion Herr and Ryman Herr, of Flemington; Lieut. John Herr, instructor in law and history of West Point; Mr. and Mrs. Myers, Miss Lillian Fisher, Mrs. Sandford Ramsy, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Niper, of Lebanon and Miss Ila Ramsey, of this city.

Guests of Steamship Company.

Will F. Williams, of Mulford Estile's steamship agency, was a guest of the North-German-Lloyd Steamship company, on the Steamer George Washington, at Hoboken, last night, when the company entertained its four hundred American agents at an elaborte dinner. After the dinner there were several speeches by men prominnt in the steamship service.

Alleged Burglar.

James Harvey, the colored youth, charged with having burglarized the barber shop of James Bowling, 132 Central avenue, of wearing apparel and a suit case the total vaule of which is $60, was arraigned this morning for a hearing. Several witnesses for both prosecution and defense are to be subpoened.

Columbus Knights at Mass.

Watchung council, Knights of Columbus, proceeded in a body to St. Mary's church yesterday morning, where a solemn requiem mass was said for the repose of the son of John C. Lynch, a departed member. Rev. Father Bogan was the celebrant and at its conclusion gave a memorial address.

SIR KNIGHTS MEET

Delegations From Twelve Castles Guests of Freedom, No. 42, K. S. E.

THE THIRD DEGREE WORKED.

Speeches by State Officers of the Order Precede Collation Enjoyed by 100 or More Members.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, initiated a class of five with the third degree on Tuesday night and, incidentally enjoyed one of the finest times in the history of the local organization. Members of visiting lodges from various parts of the State and Brooklyn helped to make the occasion a memorable one. Speeches were made by all the visiting past chiefs and at the collation which followed grand chief, Martin L. Ferris, of Asbury Park, made an address setting forth the splendid condition of the order and its value to members and the communities in which it is established.

The inspiring work of the third degree was performed by the team of Freedom Castle in full robes and was a most imposing feature. The staff of grand officers present included Grand Chief Martin L. Ferris, of Asbury Park; Grand Chief Priest Horatio Clayton, of Spring Lake; G. M. R., A. L. Clark, of Trenton, and Past Grand Chiefs Thomas Farrell, of Trenton; L. Lenfesty, of Brooklyn; Horace Martin, R. V. Kinney and Dr. J. Harvey Buchanan, of this city.

Representatives were present from ToKalon Castle, Long Branch; Burbage Castle and Corinthian, of Asbury Park; Wall, of Spring Lake; Herald, Beverly; Ocean, Atlantic City; Mercer, Trenton; Philadelphia No. 9; Bushwick, Brooklyn; Elizabethport Castle; Blue Ridge, of Orange, and New Brunswick Castle. A large delegation of past chiefs from all the castles in the State were also present. More than 100 members sat down at the collation and listened with pleasure to the speeches. Especially interesting was that of Grand Chief Martin L. Ferris, who is a minister at Asbury Park. It is believed that his address will be remembered for many days by those who were privileged to hear him.

The affair was held in the rooms of Freedom Castle in the Babcock building.

The men of the Crescent Avenue church will meet tomorrow evening at the parsonage to discuss the matter of putting the benevolent and missionary offerings of the congregation on a more dependable basis. The Coming of the Postman is always an occasion of interest. You like to receive letters. Everybody does. And doesn't a letter written on fine, high-grade stationery give you more pleasure than one written on "just paper?"
The best paper that we know of is that manufactured by
EATON, CRANE & PIKE
For years this has been the universal favorite among discriminating people. There is as much difference between it and the "no-name" kind as there is between linen and cambric cloth. Prove it for yourself by comparison.

VIOLATE ORDINANCE ON SNOW REMOVAL

A mild sensation was created yesterday morning when Frank H. Smith, Cadmus Brothers, Charles H. Hand, Dr. Albert Pittis, Harry W. Marshall, Peter Zimmerman, Nathan Levy and William R. Townsend were cited to appear before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court to answer to a charge of neglecting to cleaning snow and ice from their sidewalks. The complainant against these citizens were made by Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett and only included a certain portion of the city. Others will be looked after later. All the men were allowed to go with a warning.

These citizens, it was alleged, had refused or neglected to clean from in front of premises owned by them in and about the center of the city, snow and ice and thus they had violated two sections of the street cleaning ordinance. When arraigned the question arose as to whether the owner of a tenement was responsible or the several tenants. Or, again when the building is occupied by a store on the ground floor and tenants on the upper floors who was responsible for the cleaning of the walks?

Charles H. Hand, who acted as spokesman for the several in court, declared that in nearly all of the leases of property owned by him it was specifically stated that the tenant became responsible for this work, a clause in the written lease providing for this condition. He asked the judge for an interpretation of the ordinance. Mayor Moy, who was in court, read the ordinance and showed Mr. Hand that the first lien must be on the owner of the property, who could then hold his tenant responsible for any cost of the removal of ice or snow.

None of those cited to appear found any fault with the street commissioner for his action, but they wanted the matter cleared up as to whom should be held for the condition of the sidewalk where tenanted by others. Individuals owning or renting property will be notified of the finding of the court and in future held strictly accountable for the condition of their sidewalks.

Mayor Moy intends to have all the city ordinances observed and as this one is of vital importance to pedestrians he hopes the citizens will do their share toward helping him.

MANY DANCERS AT TURN VEREIN BALL

Saengerbund Hall held a capacity crowd Tuesday night, on the occasion of the twenty-second annual masquerade ball of the Gesang and Turn Verein. The large portion of the dancers wore fancy or ludicrous costumes, adding a general spirit of gayety to the scene. Vari-colored electric lights cast a soft glow over all and with flags, bunting and potted plants, the last named on the stage, formed the decorations. Suhr's Imperial orchestra furnished the music.

One of the features of the Turn Verein ball each year is the grand march, and Tuesday night was no exception to the rule. It was led by Floor Manager Charles F. Meyer, Jr., and his sister, Miss Edith Meyer. The long line of grotesquely-garbed dancers followed them through numerous difficult formations, one of which was new figure, the Maltese cross, devised by Mr. Meyer and his father, Charles F. Meyer, Sr., the veteran of over a score of Saengebund masquerades. It met with hearty approval from the spectators. At the conclusion of the march, dancing was resumed and continued until 4 o'clock yesterday morning.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of the following: Herman Klinsman, chairman; Charles F. Meyer, Jr., floor manager, Herman Klinsman, Jr., George Schlick and Adam Jordan, assistants; Jacob Schlick, John Wigger, Charles Giebeler, Lawrence Scheelein and Charles Felber, reception committee.

Funeral of Mrs. Eliza Bogart.
The funeral services of Mrs. Eliza Bogart was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Burroughs, on East Fifth street, at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. He spoke of her life of devotion to her church and her home, and of her many Christian qualities. The remains were taken yesterday to Woodlawn cemetery, New York, for burial.

—Edward Britton, who pleaded not guilty in the borough court, Saturday morning, to a charge of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest, was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver Tuesday night. From the evidence submitted the court found him technically guilty and imposed a fine of $3. The trouble which led to Britton's arrest grew out of an argument he had with a special marshal during a dance at Saengerbund Hall.

WHAT ABOUT HER?

Clergyman Asks How Sinful Woman Would be Received at Church.

REV. MR. FISKE'S DISCOURSE.

Baltimore Rector's Talk on "Perils of Respectability" at a Religious Conference.

"The Perils of Respectability" was the subject of an address by the Rev. Charles Fiske, of Baltimore, in the course of religious conferences at Grace church. He explained that he meant by this the tendency of merely respectable people to be neither hot nor cold. "Respectability often means just conventionality. The respectable man is apt to be contented with himself as he is. He treats his life in an easy going way. He never sounds the depth of religious experience. He drifts into his religious convictions, if they may be called convictions. He doesn't get down into the heart of things. He hasn't much sympathy with people whose lives are not cast in just the same mould as his own. He has no warm hearted sense of brotherhood. And so his religion lacks deep penitence, eager personal devotion, adoring self surrender. He knows about Christ, but doesn't know Christ.

"Simon the Pharisee was a respectable man, but he was shocked when the woman who was a sinner came in and bathed Christ's feet with her tears and wiped them with the hairs of her head. But how about ourselves? How would we have acted had the scene occurred at our table? How would we act, if very many people of that sort came to church Do we expect sinners to come? Would we know how to treat them if they did come? What a shrugging of the shoulders and lifting of the eyebrows and drawing back of skirts would occur today, if Christ received publicans as He did when He was on earth!"

The sermon pleaded for a people not contented with respectable mediocrity in religion, but anxious to give themselves in warm hearted service for others.

The services of this "week of conference" are meeting with great success. Large congregations have attended, and much interest has been manifested. Yesterday morning Mr. Fiske spoke on "Conversion" and this morning on "Regeneration." Tonight he will preach on "The Peril of Success."

Tomorrow morning there will be a celebration of the holy communion at ten, with an address on "The Food of the New Life."

Recommendations to P. M.

The annual convention of the New Jersey State Assistant Postmasters' Association was held yesterday in Trenton in the District Court room. Besides the election of officers for the year resolutions were introduced and passed asking the postmaster general to order the discontinuance of date stamping ordinary mail on the back; changing the color scheme on stamps as well as the denomination figures; put themselves on record as favoring mail boxes at residences; and finally urged the closing of all post offices all day on Sunday.

Funeral of George Stillger.

The funeral of George Stillger, whose death occurred at his home in Scotch Plains, Monday night, was held in St. Joseph's church, the borough, this morning. Rev. Father Schwartze, pastor of St. Mary's church, at Stony Hill, of which the departed was a member for many years, conducted the mass in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the pallbearers being William Lee, Louis Morell, Joseph Eller, George Wall, Andrew Schaffer and E. Debby.

Fatal Sleighride Accident.

Miss Jennie Neighbour, aged thirty-seven years, of Califon, was thrown out of a sleigh at her home, yesterday, receiving injuries which caused her death shortly afterward. Miss Neighbour was alone in the sleigh and the horse got the best of her, running away for the second time during the day. Miss Neighbour was thrown against a tie-post, the force of the blow injuring her lungs. She was the daughter of Leonard G. Neighbour and is distantly related to several Plainfielders.

DRY CLEANING TALK
Number 2
WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The first musical of the Young People's Choral Union, was held Tuesday night in the church. The program was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience and Prof. M. A. Korff, who has had charge of the Union and arranged the program heard many words of commendation for the excellent results that had been obtained. Silver offering was taken.

The town in general observed the Birthday of the Father of his Country. A number of flags were seen floating from the homes of the residents, but for some reason the town flag was not flying. The school closed for the full day and the stores observed the half holiday, closing at noon.

The local bowling team roll a return match tonight with the Saengerbunds on the latter's alleys. The locals won the first match game rolled two weeks ago and it is said that the Saengerbunds are in fine fettle and intend to wipe out the defeat and even the series up.

A number of trap shooters in town held a clay bird shoot yesterday afternoon, on the Greenbrook Club grounds near the mountains. No matches were shot off, only sweepstake shooting being indulged in.

Mrs. W. S. Cory, of Park avenue, is convalescent from a severe attack of the grip, which has detained her at home for a week.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews led the weekly prayer and praise meeting last night at the Baptist church.

Supervising Principal S. Dana Townsend has returned from a visit at his home at Orange.

Held an All-Day Shoot.

The Log Cabin Gun Club held an all-day shoot at clay pigeons at the Watchung Hunt Club grounds yesterday, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning. At 1 o'clock lunch was served. The shooting was then continued until 5:30 o'clock last night. F. R. Jenkins, of Fanwood, won the first prize for making the best score of the day.

Cops Get No Raise.

The bill introduced in the Senate at Trenton authorizing cities of the second class to increase the salaries of patrolmen, was defeated yesterday by a vote of 11 to 6. This evidently puts and end to the hopes of the local men who had expected success in the move to obtain better pay for their services.

HOUSE-WARMING OF SUFFRAGE LEAGUE

A house warming and reception of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield will be held next Monday afternoon from 3 to 7 o'clock in their new rooms on the top floor in the Frost building. Mrs. F. W. Wallace, chairman of the entertainment committee and Miss Clark, chairman of the house furnishing committee will have charge.

The rooms have been leased and are on the top floor of the building where it is intended in the future to hold the business and social meetings of the organization.

Mrs. Francis Rogers, of New York city, a member of one of the Metropolitan suffrage organizations has asked permission to address the local society looking toward having the members of this city join in the monster parade and demonstration to be held in New York on April 29 next. As the fight for franchise in New Jersey is a matter for Jersey women it is not believed that the local organization will take part in the parade.

SPEAK-EASY MAN GETS HIS DESERTS

Through the arrest of Lottie Copeland, a colored woman, on Monday the police unearthed another "speak easy," alleged to be run by Charles Clifford, at 211 Plainfield avenue. Clifford was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court yesterday morning and notwithstanding a vigorous protest of innocence was convicted of the charge of selling whiskey without a license. He was fined $20. Exhibit A consisted of a partly filled bottle of "Mountain Dew," pronounced by those who smelled of it to be a vile decoction.

The case against the Copeland woman, who was accused of stealing a skirt from Mrs. Laura Ferris, of Liberty street, was disposed of by holding the women for the action of the grand jury without bonds. She said that she was so drunk with whiskey and beer obtained from Clifford that she had no recollection of taking the skirt and, as a matter of fact the article of dress was found in a coal bin in the cellar of the house where she was staying temporarily.

CAUGHT?

Have you been caught in the web of prejudice and habit like the fly in the spider's web? There are some people who are so foolish that they actually turn away from a store where they can get articles at a reasonable price, and hunt up places where they know they are paying, not for the goods, but for the sake of being seen in those places, and to have certain high-toned delivery wagons stand at their door. If you have been so foolish as to get into that habit, try to get out of it. Hunt up the place where you can get the best goods at the lowest prices. THE BIG GREENE STORE is the place to buy the finest Furniture and Housefurnishings in town, and just now your savings will average from 30 to 40 per cent.

Plenty of the Right Kind of Credit Extended to Honest People

Don't let the lack of ready money keep you from starting a home. You will never be a success until you own a home, so why not turn over a new leaf to-morrow? There are no ifs nor ands about it. If you wait till you have the ready cash, old age will find you still waiting. Our faith in your ability and willingness to pay is all there is to it. Give your wife a home and don't pay high rent for the use of other people's furniture. Don't let those old thieves—Procrastination and Indifference—blind you to the wonderful opportunities we are offering during the MID-WINTER SALE.

"Beaver" ranges are fine bakers because the right amount of heat reaches every part of the oven at the right time. A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"I don't understand you. Whose blood?"

"Whose blood? My father's! And you come to me and talk of love!"

"Nora, you must be mad!" said the young man slowly. "I never saw your father in my life."

"I mean my stepfather, Dennis Molloy. I used to call him father, for I never knew any other. It is his blood that is on your hands. But you may trust me! I once thought, I once longed above everything, to avenge my father's death. But that has gone. You are safe from me."

"Nora, you must be raving. Do you imagine that I—I was your father's murderer?"

"I don't imagine it. I know it! Stop; I will show you."

She hurried out of the room and in a minute or two returned, carrying something under her apron. She closed the door behind her and laid the Russian leather box on the table.

"That is the case that held the revolver that killed my father," she said with a calmness that was in strange contrast to her former excitement. "I found it some days ago in the closet in your sitting room. The revolver itself is in the hands of the police. I have seen it, and it has that marking on the stock."

Captain Fitzgerald gave an involuntary start.

"I see you know it. I know it, for I examined it carefully before the police ever saw it. If I were to put the two together—the revolver that was picked up on the spot where my poor father was shot down and this case—don't you think they would fit one another like hand and glove? I know they would, and you know it too! There are some of the cartridges. The bullet that was taken out of my father's body—the police have that too. If you put that bullet and one of these in scales and weighed them one against the other which scale would drop? Neither. They are of the same weight exactly, for it was one of these cartridges you used. Oh, my God, that I should have to say such things!"

All this time the captain stood gazing at the case like a man struck speechless with horror.

"It was not very wise to keep the case, was it?" said the girl after a pause. "It was a lucky thing it fell into my hands and not into the hands of the police, wasn't it?"

"Yes, I suppose so." He did not seem to know what he was saying. His manner was strange. Nora did not understand him.

"Oh, if you are innocent, if this is all some dreadful mistake, tell me, and I will believe you," she cried, but the young soldier only shook his head.

"Is that yours?" she asked, pointing to the case.

He nodded without speaking.

"Where is the revolver that used to lie there?"

"I suppose, as you say, the police have it."

"Can you say that you were at home that night my father was shot? Can you?"

He hesitated, then shook his head.

"I am glad you did not deny it, for Gladys, the housemaid, told me she had seen you come in about half past 10 that night, looking and breathing hard, as if you had been running."

The captain said nothing. He sank into a chair, put his elbows on the table and covered his face in his hands.

"I suppose you and my father quarreled about something, and that was the reason you shot him?"

No answer.

"Perhaps you did not really mean to kill him?"

No answer.

There was a long silence, and then Nora spoke once more.

"Captain Fitzgerald," she said in a softer tone than she had yet used, "I am not your judge, but I am anxious that there should be no mistake. Can you deny that you shot my father, whether you meant to kill him or not? Can you deny it?"

The answer was long in coming. At last Fitzgerald lifted his head from between his hands, and Nora saw that his face was nearly as white as his linen and that he was actually trembling.

"No," he said hoarsely; "I can't deny it. I suppose you will give that thing to the police?" he added, pointing to the case.

"How can you think that of me? Didn't you hear me say that I would not say a word to bring you into trouble? I took the box, but I meant to throw it into the Thames. You had better do it yourself. Take it." She pushed it toward him, but he shrank back from it.

"Well, I shall do it myself, or I will take it with me to Ireland and destroy it there. You have nothing to fear from me, Captain Fitzgerald, and God forgive me if my father's blood cries from the ground in vain. I can't do it. I will never say a syllable"—

Suddenly her self control broke down. She threw herself down on her knees by the table, and her body shook with sobs.

Fitzgerald bent over toward her and even put out his hand as though to touch her, but she shrank back with a gesture that could not be mistaken. He rose, and the sound of the door as it closed told her that she was alone.

CHAPTER XII.

MISSING!

Three months went by. Sir Rufus' name was never mentioned between Eva and her mother. The armistice that had been agreed upon was honorably kept.

For every one except Lord Roscommon, whose rods and lines and flies, natural and artificial, gave him abundant food for thought, life at Castle Dare was rather dreary. Captain Fitzgerald, to his mother's bitter disappointment, did not go near the castle. He wrote saying in a half jesting, half serious way that the family must have had quite enough of him during their stay at Hampton Place, and he would spare them further infliction. The next they heard was that he had accepted an invitation to join a salmon fishing expedition to Norway.

To Nora Kildare this was a great relief. She had made up her mind that if Captain Fitzgerald was to be a regular visitor at the castle it would be necessary for her to seek another situation. She was unequal to the strain of meeting him or of running the risk of meeting him every day. In spite of Lady Roscommon's opposition she was a good deal with Eva, who had no one else to turn to. Virginie was a useful person, but as a companion she was impossible, and Nora as a companion was delightful.

For Guy, in spite of the separation from Eva, the time passed rapidly. Every week he had a letter from his betrothed, and as a weekly letter openly addressed by him to Eva would certainly have given rise to inquiries it was arranged that the correspondence should be carried on under cover to Virginie.

BAMBERGER'S

"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE"

MARKET & HALSEY STS.

This Woman Put Us To the Test

"I have been reading your cards in the tunnel cars for the past six months," declared an Upper Montclair woman yesterday, "and I often wondered whether all this 'shop in Newark' talk really concerned me. I never traded in Newark before, but last week I made up my mind to try it. I came straight to this store and spent pretty nearly the entire day here. I found I could do a great deal better than I have been used to doing over at ———'s in New York. Here I am again today. I'm going to make this my regular shopping place hereafter."

This customer was a total stranger both to Newark and to Bamberger's store and therefore unbiased in her views. She came here because we told her the truth about Newark shopping in the McAdoo Tunnel cars, and she now trades at this store because we tell her the truth about our merchandise and because we SAVE HER MONEY ON PRACTICALLY EVERYTHING SHE BUYS.

There are hundreds and thousands of OTHER out-of-town people who will sooner or later take the right view of the Newark shopping subject.

It's bound to come—the Newark stores are becoming stronger all the while. New York shopping is not only an EXTRAVAGANCE, but a waste of time as well.

The Most Industrious Store in Newark---The City of Industry

Greatest Battle Painting of All Times—

Philippoteaux Masterpiece

"Battle of Gettysburg"

On Permanent Exhibition at Hahne & Co.'s

The People of Newark are only awakening to a realization of the fact that they have in this city one of the world's greatest treasures of art—one of the most stupendous and magnificent and thrilling paintings ever put on canvas, depicting with wonderful fidelity to fact the memorable scenes of the Battlefield of Gettysburg in the great three-days' battle, the like of which the world has never known.

This enormous canvas was originally made by the famous French artist, Paul Philippoteaux, for the Boston Cyclorama, where it was shown for a number of years and afterwards packed away. This painting has never been exhibited in any other city than Boston. True, imitations of it by artists of lesser note, their ideas largely copies from Philippoteaux, were exhibited in other cities; but this is the original Gettysburg by the most famous painter of battle pictures who ever lived.

The picture was unearthed a couple of years ago and negotiations have been going on for many months between the owners of the picture and our representative, culminating in the bringing of the picture to Newark, where it may now be seen, free of cost, by everyone.

It is a noteworthy fact that the Hahne & Co. Store, where the picture is exhibited, is one of the few in America adapted to such exhibitions; in fact, there is hardly any art gallery or museum anywhere that could accommodate such an enormous painting. Thus Newark may count itself immensely fortunate in having such an exhibition placed, in having a business concern with the courage and enterprise essential to the purchasing outright of so great a picture and placing it on exhibition without cost to the people. The painting is practically priceless. The canvass alone cost $2,500 originally. The contract price for the painting was $50,000. And now that the artists who went over the ground, who had all the assistance of the United States Government officials, and of the officers engaged in the conflict, and who has painted a geographically perfect representation of the action of the battle of Gettysburg, has passed away, no such picture could ever likely be made again.

Thousands of people have already seen this painting here and many come again and again, especially the veterans of the Civil War who fought at Gettysburg, and who immediately recognize on the picture points and places that were familiar to them in the days of the terrible conflict between the North and the South.

Those having opera or field glasses are advised to bring them when they come to see the painting, as its beauty and realism are enhanced a hundred-fold when seen through the glasses. Glasses will be loaned those desiring them upon application to the Upholstery Office on the Third Floor.

12th Annual Picture Sale

Continues Tomorrow With Unusual Attractions

Not all the blizzards that Boreas could send out, not all the amusing little picture sales of other stores, could stay the interest and patronage in such a picture sale as we conduct.

It is well known that this is the greatest picture store in New Jersey, that we have, day in and day out, the largest collection of pictures from the finest sorts to the very cheapest to be found either here or in New York.

It is equally well known that we hold a picture sale only once a year and that it is a real sale with tremendous quantities of pictures of the better sort as a basis.

This year the pictures are finer than ever, due to the fact that the most prominent picture importers in the country met with failure. We bought very largely and with considerable care, their finished art works—bought them in the sheet and framed them in our own artistic way, bringing them to you, thus framed, at prices less than half the cost of the pictures in the sheet.

Many who know real art appreciate these splendid etchings, steel engravings, and colored facsimiles, and the early buyers made speed in picking out many of the rarest things. Yet the quantities were large in every instance, so that there is a wide variety to choose from and will be to the end of the week.

All who come for pictures, whether they want the very finest ones or the cheapest, whether they want big or little ones, will find them here this week at prices that are truly astonishing to those who know values.

During this sale we will accept orders for picture framing at a reduction of 25c per cent.

A USEFUL EDIFICE

Rev. John Steen's Talk on the Church of the Land and Sea.

ITS OPPORTUNITIES LARGE.

Crescent Ave. Presbyterian Church Men's Club Hears an Interesting Address.

Rev. John Steen, a minister of the Church of the Sea and Land, otherwise know as "The Old Market Street Church," in New York city, spoke to the members of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening giving his reasons why this old edifice was worth while as a church and why it had not followed the trend of things uptown. The church was erected in 1819 and has had a history of successful Christian work for nearly 100 years and today is accountable for a great deal of work of a helpful nature among the polygot population in its immediate vicinity.

In beginning his speech Mr. Steen said it was to be a heart to heart talk on the vital things connected with community work. It is not essentially church work nor yet missionary work, but rather a combination of the two, which reaches a class of people not otherwise brought into and under Christian influences which has for its object the formation of character in the young.

Italians form the major portion of those who are helped by the leaders in the movement and they are proving profitable investments for the neighborhood. At times harsh measures have to be adopted toward a certain element, but they always result in final good for those thus treated.

The usefulness of the church is not impaired because of its environment, but rather is it increased because the opportunities are larger in that neighborhood. Many go out from its walls whose influence is great for the Christian life among those with whom they come in contact in later life. Greatest results are obtained through clubs and classes. Through this, lower strata of society the upper classes are leavened. Through the philosophy of life as it is the work of uplifting these classes is being carried on to success.

"Some day," the speaker said, "civilization will wake up to the fact that liquor in this part of the world is on a plane with the opium of the Far East and when that time comes the same drastic measures for its control will be taken as have been taken in China."

Rev. Mr. Steen answered many questions relating to the work and afterwards coffee and sandwiches were served. On March 14, F. W. Skinner, of New York, will address the members and a date will be set for the annual banquet.

'SOUL KISS' TONIGHT AT LOCAL THEATRE

The famous musical play, "The Soul Kiss" will be offered at the Plainfield theatre tonight. The company, the original one, comprises sixty people, including a glittering array of georgeously gowned girlies. The attraction at the theatre on Saturday, matinee and night, will be that ever-popular play, "Human Hearts." Like "Shore Acres" and "The Old Homestead" time only increases the hold of this play on the hearts of the people.

Another strong attraction will be "The Girl in the Taxi," which comes to the theatre next Monday night. This will be the first appearance of this well known play in this city. It is adapted from the French, and is said to be one big scream from curtain to curtain.

PROTESTANT WORK IN DIAZ'S COUNTRY

An excellent paper on "Mission Work in Mexico" was presented by Mrs. Morris A. Zook at the meeting of the Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held Tuesday afternoon in the lecture room. Mrs. Zook described the Mexican people in general as poor and ignorant, but possessing some fine traits of character, among them a love of liberty. Pagan idolatry, she said, was superseded by the Roman Catholic religion, retaining, she alleged, many idolatrous features. Protestanism, she said, was introduced in 1826 and the Baptist work was begun in 1861.

To the Methodist Episcopal church she gave the credit of accomplishing the greatest result in Mexico. Besides colleges, churches, Sunday schools and day schools they publish a weekly paper and much Sunday school literature. Mrs. Zook referred to the recent celebration of the centenary of Mexical life as a Republic and told of the dedication by President Dias of the Y. M. C. A. building in Mecivo City. In conclusion Mrs. Zook said that all Christendom had laid siege to the strongholds of paganism in the Far East, but the evangelization of Mexico, the neighbor of the United States, was left to this country alone. Having a type of government like our own she asked if they should not have a type of Christianity like our own, founded on Jesus Christ.

Mrs. Reuben Knox, the president of the society, added a few words relating to the work in Mixicoac, where will be built the new chapel in which Miss Linda Butler, formerly of this city, is interested and for which help is solicited. Preceeding Mrs. Zook's paper, the devotional services were led by Mrs. J. A. Powlison.

WIRELESS CORP'N

Amateurs' Association to be Stringently Regulated in Union County.

ROBERT A. LEE, CHAIRMAN

Banquet Probable Within Two Weeks —Expert Electricians to Speak to Members.

The second annual meeting of the Union County Wireless Association was held last night in Y. M. C. A. Hall with an attendance largely in excess of that of the first meeting a week ago. Enthusiasm marked the meeting and it is believed that within a very short time every boy who at present is interested in the subject even remotely will become a member of the new organization. Papers of incorporation have been drawn up by George W. V. Moy, counsel for the association, which will be filed on Monday next with the Secretary of State at Trenton and with the County Clerk at Elizabeth. The association now numbers 98 members.

The object of the meeting last night was for more perfect organization and the appointment of committees togethed with the selection of trustees and an executive committee. An assistant secretary was deemed necessary owing to the increasing work of the secretary and Fred Clarke was elected to the position. Owing to the resignation of John Maier, Jr., of Bound Brook from the vice-presidency, Lieut. L. M. Wilson, of the Finderne Military Acadewy, was elected in his place. Mr. Maier resigned because he was a minor and the requirements of the legal representatives of the organization demand that officers be of age.

The committees appointed by President James J. Wooton, last evening are: Executive committee, the officers with Robert A. Lee, chairman; trustees, the officers; by-laws, the officers with Charles G. August, as chairman; call list and code committee, Robert Butler, chairman; Egbert Fountain and Bradford Willard; entertainment and refreshment committee, Earl W. August, chairman; Benjamin Harris and Fred Clarke. Charles G. August was named as general agent for the association.

During the evening, Mr. August and Mr. Wooton gave some interesting information regarding the operation of their stations and the eyes of some of the youngest of the members almost jumped from their sockets at the revelations made before the evening was half over. There is no doubt that the scheme of the new organization has opened a door of experimentation which will keep many boys out of mischief as well as prove a never ending source of pleasure. It is hoped to develop among the young fellows some geniuses along the line of inventions.

It is proposed now to interest all the newspapers in the State in the project and appointments of local agents, one in each county, will shortly be made. Plainfield will be the headquarters of the association and the officers in this city will be at the head of the greater organization. It is hoped to hold a banquet within the next two weeks at which time eminent electricians, especially those acquainted with wireless, are expected to speak to the boys on the new science.

Whatever trouble there evisted between the owners of wireless apparatus and the Public Service Corporation have been obviated by the installation of two transformers at Lee place. In future the wireless enthusiasts will be governed by stringent by-laws which will prevent inductions or any othe kind of interference between them and the P. S. C. as well as users of the telephone and electric light.

COMMISSIONERS MAKE COMPLIMENTARY REPORT.

William A. Woodruff, J. Fred MacDonald and Frank H. Smith, commissioners in the matter of the petition of the Government to fix the compensation to be paid Albert L. Force for his lands at Watchung avenue and East Second street, to be used for a Federal building, met United States District Attorney John B. Vreeland, of Morristown, at the office of John H. VanWinkle & Son, in the Babcock building, this morning and filed their report with him.

The report will be received by Judge John Rellstab of the United States District court, at Trenton, next Monday.

Trolleymen's Tourney.

Teams of five men from the Elizabeth and Dunellen, employes of the Public Service Corporation, railway department played a pool match at the Dunellen car barns, last night. The Elizabeth team won out by a total score of 135 to 160. Daniel Carroll was the referee, and Inspector Hugh Higgins and A. B. Preston, station master, were the scorers.

WILLIAM M. RUNYON WEDDED MRS. LEWIS

William M. Runyon, a former resident of this city, residing at 316 East Front street, who is connected with the United States Leather company, Manhattan, was married Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock February 8 last, at the Tabernacle Presbyterian church, 37th and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, to Mrs. Anna D. Lewis, of President street, Brooklyn, N. Y., Rev. Dr. Oxtoby, pastor of the Tabernacle church, officiated. Thos. A. Runyon, of Manhattan, son of the groom and Miss Dorothy Lewis, daughter of the bride, were the attendants.

The wedding was a quiet one, only a few relatives of both parties being present. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Runyon gave a dinner to their guests in their private suite at the Bellevue-Stratford.

The bride was gowned in lilac satin with marquisette and old lace trimmings. Miss Lewis was in white net and satin. Mrs. A. A. Gulick, cousin of the bride, wore black satin trimmed with jet and Mrs. Thomas A. Runyon's costume was of pale blue messaline. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond and pearl pendant. Mr. and Mrs. Runyon after a southern trip, will be at home after March 1 to their friends at the Edgemere, East Orange.

DUNELLEN MAYOR HAS HIS OWN WAY

It is believed that Mayor Sanford of Dunellen, has at last found the way to a cleanup of the condition that it is alleged has been going on in Dunellen for several years in the operation of public works. It is said that ever since the change in the political color of the Common Council there has been a contest for the apportionment of all work of a public nature in which horses are the motive power.

Mayor Sanford has taken the bull by the horns and has obtained the necessary funds—to be exact $500—for the purchase of a suitable team of horses which he would like to see used in the work of the borough. In order to procure this money he signed a personal note for the amount and it is secured by the signatures of at least twenty of the best citizens of the borough. He has offered the use of the team to the fire company and at a meeting of the smoke eaters next Thursday evening the matter will be put squarely before them.

When the political changes of the borough eliminated Mike Gallagher from the turmoil of public duty the work fell to Cornelius Huff, whose father was a member of the Common Council. When Goldson Smalley became street commissioner, Isaac Smalley got the job.

It is the mayor's idea that the team could be stabled in the borough hall, where the fire laddies have their apparatus. Then the Council chamber may be turned over to the fire fighters and the borough hall be refurnished so that it will accommodate the public and other meetings which may be thought desirable to hold there.

HEBREWS ARE PLANNING FOR STUDY OF CIVICS.

There will be an open meeting of the Young Men's Hebrew Association at Association Hall on Grove street Monday evening, February 27, at which representative Hebrews will take up the subject of ways and means for forming an organization for civic study and increasing the interest in the work among the young people of the race. Judge William Newcorn will preside.

The proceeds of the whist party held on March 15 at the home of Mrs. Newcorn will be devoted to increasing the library of the association.

Guests at Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Royle Phillips, of West Front street, were among the guests at the wedding of Miss Frances Gore Redfern Margerum, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Mahlon R. Margerum, and Charles Breed Riley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace S. Riley, of Trenton, which took place, Wednesday night in the reception room of the Hotel Windsor, Trenton. There were more than one hundred relatives and friends present and the affair was the most brilliant of the winter in the Capitol City. The couple have gone to Bermuda on a wedding trip.

HARVEY DISCHARGED EVIDENCE IS LACKING

For lack of evidence of an incriminating nature James Harvey, the twenty-year-old colored youth, who was suspected of having stolen some wearing appearel from the barber-shop of James Bowling on Central avenue, was discharged this morning by Judge William G. DeMeza. There was nothing to show that Harvey had been near the barber shop on last Monday night when it is alleged the robbery took place.

Harvey, his cousin, Clarence Harvey, and Edward Jones all told straightforward stories as to their whereabouts on the night in question. They had all been together in a poolroom on Madison avenue and later had gone to Proctor's, where they remained until long after the alleged burglary was committed.

There was nothing left for the judge to do but discharge the accused man.

MAYOR TO CONFER WITH CITY FATHERS

Requested by the Common Council, Mayor Moy will hold a conference tonight with that body at the Mayor's office. The purpose is to discuss the matter of the board of assessors. As already told in this paper, the city fathers asked the Mayor to select four citizens to compose such a board(waiving its own right to name a board of three members as empowered by law.

It is reported that Mayor Moy may inform the Common Council at this meeting as to his probable appointees. As the Common Council holds an adjourned session on Monday night, it is said to be more than probable that the appointments will be submitted formally at that time.

There are other appointments yet to be made. One of these is for a member of the Board of Health, the city fathers having declined to confirm the appointment of LeRoy J. Ellis. Another is for overseer-of-the-poor, the appointment of Rev. St. John Fitch to succeed Alexander Ayers having been "turned down." No action has as yet been taken by the Mayor regarding a corporation counsel.

MRS. HOPCRAFT GIVES DELIGHTFUL MUSICALE.

A delightful musicale was given by Mrs. McNeil Hopcraft and several of her vocal students at the studio in the Babcock building last evening at which a goodly company of friends of both teacher and taught gathered.

The recital was opened with a piano duet splendidly played by Misses May Vincent Whitney and Marguerite VanZandt. Mrs. Clare Auerbach followed in two German songs and Miss Ruth Sadler in two more of Rubinstein's Lieder. Persian songs, Mrs. Hopcraft, with banjo accompaniment by Alfred A. Farland and Lieder by Miss Bertha Van Nuis Willis completed part one. Miss Muriel Collins, Miss Bechtel, Miss Willis, Mr. Farland, Mrs. B. E. Tugwell and Miss Sadler completed the second half of the program amid applause. Ida Randolph Smalley was an able accompanist.

Date of Organ Dedication.

Announcement is made that the new memorial organ now being installed in Trinity Reformed church by the Tallman Organ Co., of Brooklyn, will be dedicated Sunday morning, March 12. The work of installing the new organ is about completed and it will soon be turned over to the church for acceptance. Between the present time and March 12 the organ will be thoroughly tested so that everything will be in first class shape on the latter date.

Turkey Supper a Success.

The turkey supper given at the home of Mrs. Eugene VanCourt, Oak Tree, last night, for the benefit of Marconnier chapel, was a great success. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. Lenora Randolph, Mrs. William Randolph, Mrs. Eugene Van Court and Mrs. William Van Court. They served 125 dinners and all enjoyed the fine menu. W. H. Randolph was a valuable assistant in carving the turkeys. The affair netted between $40 and $50.

Elks Will Remove.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 775, B. P. O. E., will remove from its present quarters on West Second street, to its new property on Watchung avenue between Second and Front streets, next week. The building is being wired for electric lights and partitions will be changed to meet the present needs of the members.

—Neuman Bros. will offer for tomorrow's trade an exceptionally fine line of fresh fruits and vegetables. The prices will be reasonable.

IN BOYS' BEHALF

Coming Lectures by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews at Y. M. C. A.

ESPECIALLY FOR THE MOTHERS

Series Started Last Fall to Be Continued by Popular Preacher —All Meetings Are Free to Public.

Announcement has been made of the continuance of the movement for the effective moral and religious training of boys in the home recently promoted by the directors of the Young Men's Christian Association under the guidance of Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. The series of lectures given by Mr. Mathiews last fall called wide spread attention of the mothers of this and other towns to the vital necessity of this training and so greatly was the feeling aroused that it has been thought highly desirable to continue the course.

Mr. Mathiews has devoted much time and study to the question of proper methods in this work and has evolved what is believed the best system yet found to cover the needs of the day. All the conferences of the mothers will be open to the public and they will be maintained by the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. The expenses of the work will be defrayed through voluntary contributions of $1 each and the committee is as follows: Chairman, Mrs. F. W. Wallace; secretary, Mrs. O. G. Dale; treasurer, Mrs. H. C. Krebs. The other members of the committee are Mrs. W. C. Kinney, Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, Mrs. M. B. Mellor and Mrs. J. D. Miller.

Obedience will form the topic of the lectures which will begin next month and will occupy the lecturer's attention as follows: March 3, "Jimmie," "James" and "Jim," or the problem stated from the viewpoint of the boy;" March 10, "The Mania to be a Man," or "Building upon the Basis for Obedience;" March 17, "Tempting the Boy to Obey," or "The Art of Making Commands Attractive;" March 25, "The Right Kind of a Boy," or "Teaching Obedience by Means of the Things the Boy Enjoys;" March 31, "Money and Morals," or "The Place of Prizes and Rewards in Securing Obedience." All these lectures begin at 3:30 in the afternoon on the dates specified.

A considerable amount of the material presented will deal with the child, which includes girls and boys up to twelve years old. The lectures will be of forty minutes duration and will be followed by an open conference.

COLORED TRUANT'S FATHER IN COURT.

James Babbitt, colored, of East Front street, whose daughter, Edith, thirteen years old, has evidently been playing truant from school, was warned this morning that unless the child attended regularly he would meet with the same punishment as have others who fail to see to it that their children attend school.

Edith has been absent forty days since last September part of the time waiting upon her mother who it is said is ill of an incurable disease. Babbitt promised to engage a nurse and send the girl to school.

MATTERS DISCUSSED BY FIRE COMMITTEE

The Councilmanic fire and buildings committee of which Duncan W. Taylor is chairman, last night discussed the proposition to place all wires in the business section underground. A year or two ago the telephone company offered to place the fire department wires in the centre of the city in its conduits for $2,000. The concern, however, has no conduit on East Front street.

Representing the P. S. C., Col. Hine and L. H. D. Gilmour talked with the committee concerning the plan to have the high tension wire running through Madison avenue and Second street to Watchung avenue placed underground. There was also some talk last night as to the purchase of a pair of horses for the fire department.

There was also some discussion of an automobile engine.

TWO VETOES FILED BY CITY'S MAYOR

Two more vetoes have been filed with the City Clerk, Mayor Moy having expressed his disapproval of the Councilmanic resolution permitting the finance committee to employ counsel and its resolution to extend Kensington avenue to Randolph road.

The grounds upon which the Mayor looks with disfavor on the special counsel resolution are two fold. First, he holds that if such permission would be granted, other committees would have an equal right to be allowed special counsel. His second contention is that the phraseology of the resolution is bad for it is not framed in accordance with the ordinances which vest the Mayor with the power to appoint a corporation counsel.

As to the Kensington avenue extension scheme, the Mayor says that he has received a large number of protests from residents in that vicinity and that one property-owner affected threatens to sue the city if such an undertaking is carried out.

GEO. D. SCHOMP'S FUNERAL SUNDAY

The funeral service of George D. Schomp, aged seventy-five years, who died early Wednesday morning at the home of his son, Victor D. Schomp, in New Market, will be held at the Reformed church, Three Bridges, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and the remains will be taken to his former home in Childs, Kansas, where another service will be held and the burial will take place in the Wagstaff cemetery in that place.

Mr. Schomp was a native of Hunterdon county. Thirty years ago with his family he removed to Childs, Kansas, where he engaged in farming on a large scale. Last fall he came east to visit relatives, and while in Jersey City was taken ill. He was then removed to the home of his son at New Market, where he died. He realized his condition and was fully prepared for the end.

Mr. Schomp was a devoted Christian man, greatly interested in church and mission work. During the past few years he traveled a great deal in Porto Rico, Texas, California and other places, which afforded him an excellent opportunity to engage in mission work. He leaves a wife and several children, including Victor D. Schomp, of New Market and Abraham Schomp, of Three Bridges. The others live in the west.

Rev. and Mrs. H. Eugene Davis, returning missionaries from Lien-oo, China, have arrived safely in San Francisco and will soon go to Riverside, Cal., where they will remain for the present. ANSWER TO MAYOR SMALLEY.

Stating its case, and incidentally replying to the public letter of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, concerning the effort of North Plainfield to locate a sewage disposal plant near its border, Bound Brook today takes advantage of an offer made by this paper to give it a hearing before North Plainfield's citizens. That a grave injustice would be done to Bound Brook should the plant be installed at Greenbrook is the contention made by that borough. The reasons are set forth in the course of the following statement, favorable to the passage of Senate bill, No. 41, signed by the citizen's committee of Bound Brook and vicinity, including Bridgewater, Warren and Piscataway townships; Bound Brook Board of Trade; Bound Brook Councilmanic committee, East Bound Brook committee and the West Piscataway Township Improvement Association:

"By reason of the highly improper, personal and erroneous statements accredited to the Mayor of North Plainfield in your issue of February 20, and believing that the better class of citizens in Plainfield and North Plainfield are fair and manly enough not to allow even a community with which they may sympathize to perpetrate a grievous wrong under advice of cunning counsel, upon four distant and distinct communities, we beg to ask you in the name of justice and fair play to give this statement an early and equally conspicuous place in your publication.

"You have published a statement purporting to be facts, and we sincerely believe that the action of the few persons who are attempting to rush North Plainfield into a bad hole is only tolerated by reason of the distorted presentation of the facts by those two or three persons, who, if the general understanding here is correct, are attempting to bring about a very profitable real estate operation by placing the sewer beds of North Plainfield—five miles away from their borough—at an additional expense to the taxpayers of nearly forty thousand dollars, and eventually reclaiming the damaged area surrounding Plainfield's present plant, beautifying it with a park and selling it off in building lots at a handsome profit to that selected few.

"The Mayor intimates that he is anxious to do his duty. If so, why does he try to force his taxpayers to uselessly spend thousands of dollars and pass by several sites chosen by their own engineers as ideal sites?

"Contrary to the Mayor's statement, the records at Trenton show that the residents in this vicinity were to be notified before any plans were adopted, and North Plainfield never notified us of its proposed action, and until December 1, when the Board of Health, as they had agreed, sent us word, we knew nothing of its acts. We immediately asked, as its records show, time to examine their plans and the laws

CONVENTION PASSED NEW RESOLUTION

At the annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association held in Trenton on Wednesday these resolutions were introduced and passed:

The Young Men's Christian Association State Convention of New Jersey hereby desires to express its sincere appreciation of the courtesies extended by the local association of Trenton, and of the hearty co-operation of all the churches and pastors, and the generosity of the press in giving publicity to its proceedings and to the city for its generous welcome.

This convention desires to thank with more than usual heartiness, the speakers of the day for the splendid addresses given, for the gripping quality of the thoughts presented, stirring us to think with freshness on the fundamentals of faith and duty; for the new problems indicated both for self culture, and for the new adaptation of our association to community-wide needs.

We think the convention should thank those members of the association who assisted the State executive committee in preparing this progress, in planning a one day session of inspiration rather than the usual longer session of instruction and study of methods.

Your committee offers the following resolutions:

First. Resolved, That the convention approves most heartily the principles and methods advocated by Dr. Fisher looking to the extension of the work of the association in every way possible to assist the school boards, the municipal authorities and other public spirited bodies in emphasazing the place and value of play in making normal, healthful and cheerful the life of children in our cities and in extending the influences of a physiological gospel.

Second. Resolved, That the effect of this convention should be to send every member back to his work and to his association determined to seek and not shun the difficult tasks, to strive to deepen the spiritual life of the members, to increase the amount of systematic Bible study and to hold the associations (in spite of ever increasing social service) to its original task of saving boys, men, body, mind and spirit, and of serving the churches loyally in bringing men and boys to Christ and His church.

Third. Resolved, That we bespeak for our new State Secretary, Mr. C. A. Coburn, the loyal support of our members, directors and the employed force of the associations of the entire State, and that we take this opportunity to extend to him a cordial welcome to our State Association.

H. W. HERRMAN,
HENRY A. COZZENS,
E. D. CONKLIN,
Committee.

The final game between the North Plainfield High five and the P. H. S. team will be played this afternoon on the Y. M. C. A. court, beginning promptly at 3:30 o'clock. This is the last game in the interscholastic league.

Fred Krom has been elected captain of the boys' basketball team vice Edson Woodhull resigned.

There will be a special inducement for good work on the baseball field this year. A silver cup will be awarded at the end of the season to the best all-round player on the team representing the school in the baseball series. Batting will be the greatest test of the winner of the cup. Under the coaching of Jack Martin the candidates are fast rounding into form and there are candidates for all the positions. It promises to be the fastest team yet gotten together in the local school.

The Athletic Association of the P. H. S. has decided to decline the invitation of the Union County Athletic League to join that organization until certain provisions in the by-laws are amended.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Miss Elsie Goddard will assist the quartet of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Sunday evening when parts of the oratoria "Elijah" is to be sung at the special musical service. Miss Goddard will sing the mezzo soprano parts. All seats will be free.

Owing to the fact that the seating capacity of the parish house of St. Stephen's church will not accommodate all those who wish to attend the Cafe Chantant, which is to be given on the evening of February 28, the place of entertainment has been changed to Truell Hall. The date remains the same.

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

According to a dispatch from Chicago Joe Tinker, the clever shortstop, and Johnny Evers, the heady second baseman, have signed with the Cubs, the former for three years and the latter for two. Frank Chance and Charles Murphy are now breathing easier, more particularly as a rumor was current that Artie Hofman, the hard-hitting outfielder, had reconsidered his determination to give up baseball. It appears that a question of salary was the bone of contention, as is usually the case. Evers was a free agent under the terms of a contract which expired last year, but decided to stick to the Cubs for two more years at least, rather than sign as manager with some minor league team.

President Charles Ebberts, of the Brooklyns, yesterday gave out an official list of players who will go into training in Hot Springs. The men are Dahlen, manager; Aitchison, Barger, Bell, Bergen, Burch, Burk, Coulson, Daubert, Davidson, Erwin, Hummel, Knetzer, Lejeune, McElveen, Miller, Myers, Quillan, Ragon, Rucker, Ryan, Schardt, Harry Smith, Stark, Tooley, Wheat and Zimmerman. "Scanlon, if he signs," said President Ebbets, "can train with the Superbas in the health resort in the Ozarks, but if he doesn't come to terms he can get into condition there or anywhere else at his own expense."

Second Baseman John Hummell, of the Superbas, dropped into the headquarters of the club at Washington Park yesterday and signed his contract for another season. "Doc" Scanlon is now the only player who has not signed. Hummell left here yesterday for his home in Bloomsburg, Pa., and will start for Hot Springs, Ark., next Sunday, with the squad which will go to the Southern training camp by rail. He decided at the last minute that the ocean had no charms for him.

Ben Houser, associate first baseman of the Athletics, completed his yearly literary task yesterday. He signed a piece of parchment to assist Harry Davis in maintaining the high standard of first basemanship at Shibe Park for the fiscal year beginning April 12. According to the terms of the instrument, Houser must needs be found at all times scoring for the word; ready at a moment's notice to pace to first in case that Davis is wounded in combat.

Officials of the York Athletic Association held a conference with Manager Curt Wiegand last night and decided to dispose of some of the players under contract. It is the purpose of the leader of the York Tri-State team to have no more than twenty ment report for spring training April 9 or 10. The pitching staff will consist of Smith, Bentley, Morris and Patterson. Rogers and Skillman will be placed on the market, leaving only Smith, of 1910 team, as a member of the staff.

Clarence Dickinson Russell, who cost Connie Mack more than Richard Warrington Marquard cost John T. Brush, spurns the Tall Tactician's offer of $2,200 for the season. "Lefty" considers himself worth much more than this sum, and points with pride to the one game he pitched in the American League last year, when he blanked the Red Sox and allowed them only three hits. Russell says he can make good in fast company.

GOLF.

Within a short time a call will be sent out by the Plainfield Country Club for a special meeting of members to vote upon an appropriation for extending the golf links. About 500 yards will probably be added, bringing the course well up to that of the other clubs in the State. A large amount will not be needed, as the organization already owns sufficient land and has done much of the preliminary work the last two or three years. Unless an early date should be decided upon for the metropolitan junior championship, the extension will be ready in time for that event.

The details of the junior championship were in nebulous condition until last week when the executive committee of the Metropolitan Association discussed the affair, and following out the notions of Leighton Calkins, the originator, determined to make it very much of a "kid" contest. Accordingly, no age limit on the downward side was imposed, in the hope that many candidates under 10 years of age will enter. No one big enough to swing a club will be barred, except on territorial ground, so a novel field is assured. By making the age limit 18 years a few interscholastic players may be shut out, but it was the desire of the promoters to encourage tender shoots, even at the expense of the older brothers.

There was some sentiment against restricting the competition sharply to New Yorkers, but it was argued all the other big city districts had gained several years on New York by maintaining similar contests yearly, so that Gotham must make up for lost time.

Request will be made this week of all the secretaries of metropolitan clubs for new data on which to base handicaps for all women golfers in the New York district. The list includes about 125 players. Last year the handicap list was made up indirectly. While it served its purpose, there was a general desire this season for an exact rating, which could be corrected, if necessary, in the fall according to the individual showings made the coming spring and summer.

MASS MEETING OF LOCAL C.E. UNION

Three features marked the mass meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union, held last evening, in the First Presbyterian church: Resolutions petitioning the Common Council to issue no liquor licenses in the city; the winning of the attendance banner for the second consecutive time by the society from the West End Tabernacle and the eloquent appeal of Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Parmley Memorial Baptist church, of Jersey City, for a greater consecration of the members.

It was the regular winter mass meeting of the local societies and was well attended. Rev. N. H. Jordan, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of New Market, led in the vigorous singing of gospel hymns. The principal address of the evening was by Rev. Mr. Hare on the topic, "The Larger Loyalty." His central theme was loyalty to the person of Jesus Christ. "There are many," he said, "who revere and almost worship the American flag and yet they are not loyal to the principles for which the flag stands. There are church members who strictly observe the forms of religion and centre their thoughts upon the church as an organization while they fail to catch the spirit of the Founder and Head of the Church.

"Sometimes those who are not church members perform greater service for humanity than many whose names are on the church rolls. Abraham Lincoln's greatness was in his broad sympathy and love for his fellow men."

The speaker's appeal for a deeper consecration and greater loyalty to Christ and the church made a profound impression upon the Endeavorers.

The resolution asking the Common Council to refrain from issuing liquor licenses in the city was carried unanimously. The contest for the attendance banner showed the West End Tabernacle first with 95 per cent., Temple Baptist church second and the First Presbyterian society third. Frank Stewart, president of the local union, presented the banner. Rev. J. W. Musson conducted the devotional exercises and Nelson Van Winkle had charge of the meeting.

CHILDREN PRESENT "MAMMY'S S'PRISE"

The Junior Auxiliary of the Church of the Holy Cross gave a delightful playlet in the parish house last night, before an audience of fully 200 parents and friends. The young folks acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner and secured a neat sum to carry on their work.

The playlet was entitled "Mammy's S'prise" and was written by Miss Miriam Carman, who also drilled the participants. The story involved many of the familiar rhyme characters, the young folks being costumed accordingly. Some of them were very amusing. At frequent intervals the situations produced generous applause.

The cast of characters in full was as follows:

Mammy, Catherine Smick; Penelops, Grace Cornwall; Old Woman who Lived in the Shoe, Dolly Rilling; Little Red Riding Hood, Blanche Stout; Old Kink Cole, Marjorie Chandler; Pipe Bearer, Dorothy Killer; Bowl Bearer, Ethel Verschuur; Fiddlers Three, Annabel Schneegas, Gertrude Rittenhouse, Augusta Bremmer; Simple Simon, Florecne Terry; Simple Simon's Little Friend, Morjorie Lindzey; The Little Nut Tree—Boy, Nettie Rilling; Queen of Spain's Daughter, Elizabeth Voorhees, Page, Marion Riley; Little Miss Moffet, Florence Cornwall; Little Jack Horner, Charlotte Verschuur; Jack and Jill, Alida Townley, Lucille Riley; Curley Locks, Edna Mantz; The Beggars are Coming to Town—Hannah Stiglitz, Lillian MacDonald, Daisy Terry, Frederick Cornwall; Little Bo-Peep, Adelaide Hull.

James Lindzey acted as stage manager and William Little electrician. Miss Gertrude Lohrke was on the program for several solos, but was unable to appear because of a cold and her place was taken by Chester Chamberlain, soloist at the Church of the Holy Cross. The directors of the auxiliary were in charge of the affair.

Miss Carman worked hard to make the entertainment a success and was warmly congratulated on the result.

WOMEN DISCUSSED MISSIONARY THEMES

An interdenominational afternoon of prayer held at Trinity Reformed church, yesterday, attracted a very large number of women from the churches of the city and borough, and the service was productive of good results. The lecture room of the church was filled with women. There was a marked devotional spirit and many earnest fervent prayers were offered that the home mission work would continue to spread and lead to the conversion of many souls.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse presided and she read appropriate Scripture lessons and made a few earnest remarks in introducing the several speakers of the afternoon. A feature was a soprano solo, "The Homeland," by Mrs. Robert Giddis, who was accompanied on the piano by Miss Lillian A. Force. During the service a number of appropriate hymns were sung by the congregation of women, all bearing on the subject of missions.

The women who were assigned to speak on various topics, presenting the different phases of home missions and their subjects were as follows:

Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, First Baptist church, "Our Missionary and Our Home Mission Achievements;" Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire, Park Avenue Baptist church, "How to Enlist More Women in Missions;" Mrs. John M. Whiton, Congregational church, "Our Growth and Prosperity;" Mrs. I. C. Pierson, Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, "The Women's Home Mission Work;" Miss Addie Dietrich, First Presbyterian church, "How to Get More Money for Mission Work;" Mrs. Daniel Rapalje, Trinity Reformed church, "How to Deepen the Spiritual Interest in Missions;" Mrs. Sarah Wardner, Seventh-Day Baptist church, "The Coming of the Nations to Us;" Mrs. B. J. Shreve, First Baptist church, "Our Early Settlers."

All of these women are leaders in their own missionary societies and have made a deep study of the subject of home missions. Consequently they were especially fitted to present the subject in its different phases at yesterday's meeting. The service was such a success that no doubt others of a similar character will be arranged.

BENEVOLENT FUND OF MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

The Men's Bible Conference class, of the First Baptist church, of which Henry W. Herrman and B. J. Phelps are the teachers, held its mid-winter business, social and entertainment at the church, last night. There were about fifty of the one hundred members of the class present. A business meeting was held first at which Mr. Herrman presided. Heretofore, the class has given half of its annual collections to the Sunday school and use the other half for various objects, and it was decided last night to establish a benevolent fund with the portion kept by the class.

It was also decided to postpone the annual election of omcers until May. There was an informal discussion of adopting a class motto and selecting a class pin, but the matter was laid over to a future meeting. The class was reported to be in good condition, financially and otherwise, with a total membership of one hundred. The average attendance each Sunday is about fifty-four.

Following the business meeting there was a social session, when Henry Shackelford, of New York, entertained the men with a fine program of humerous selections, impersonations, banjo numbers and songs. A social time followed, during which ice cream, cake and coffee were served by a committee from the class.

Health Board Officers.

The Plainfield Board of Health met last night for re-organization for the coming year. In re-organizing the board, Dr. W. H. Murray was elected president; Dr. T. S. Davis secretary and F. W. Dunn was re-elected treasurer. Only matters of routine were discussed, other things being laid over until the regular meeting on Thursday, March 2.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

High-Class Wines and Liquors.

The subject of medicine must be of absorbing interest to the people. They should exercise the greatest care in the selection thereof. Liquors, Wines and Beers are a great medicine when pure. I carry a large stock of well-made old liquors. Old liquors do not make the stomach sick but serve as a good tonic for invalids. They stimulate and feed the system. To persons wanting pure Liquors, Wines and Beers, I will say that I have the goods. Frank Linke, Plainfield, N. J. 'Phone 157. **

B.B. STATES ITS CAUSE

governing their action.

"Mr. Buttfield's statement before the State Board that North Plainfield was so saturated with sewage that there was not room for another cesspool, their lawyer, Mr. Depue's, statement that an epidemic was liable to break out at any time, and his charge that the Board of Health had no power to stop or hold up their plans failed to cause them to overlook our just right to be heard at length.

"These virtuous gentlemen do not seem to take into consideration the fact that they are proceeding illegally because of the fact that there is now on file before the State Board three objections to their acts by residents of North Plainfield Township filed within the thirty day limit of the 1907 law, which in itself abrogates their rights to proceed without the consent of the State Board, notwithstanding the fact that under this law, we have no right to be heard, and they fail to remember that the principle of "taxation without representation" backed by really the rulers of the world was defeated by the Continental army of America many years ago.

"The action of the Legislature was sought only after ex-Governor Griggs, who drew the 1907 law, pointed out to us the perfectly plain deficiency and probable unconstitutionality of a law which prohibits over seventy-five per cent. of an affected community being heard by a proper tribunal in objection to what is considered throughout the country a nuisance per se.

"The Mayor has mangled the facts. The beds are staked out about three hundred feet from Bridgewater line instead of 1,300. They are within about the same distance of Warren township line, and are about one hundred and fifty feet from the Piscataway township line.

North Plainfield's engineer who first stated before the Board of Health that the odors would not reach beyond the beds themselves, now admits a range of three hundred feet, while unbiased reports of eminent engineers, whose statements are on file with the Board, have given ranges up to a mile and a half as the nuisance radius for plants of this type.

"It does not take an engineer to realize that sewerage carried in pipes for the great distance of six miles, as is done in this case, then shot up into the air through a sprinkler (which is a gigantic atomizer), certainly is a danger to the health and comfort of the people down here.

"The affidavit of an unbiased appraiser on file with the State Board shows the value of buildings along within a radius of one-half mile of this plant, outside of North Plainfield township, is about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

"The statement regarding Bound Brook's disposal plant, and other like statements are erroneous, and are not founded on fact, and we can see no other meaning to the foolish invitation to use the Zvolanek site unless they would also ask us to pay the cost of building their plant, which would certainly not be more improper than their present proposition.

"These same gentlemen very strongly urged our representatives in the Senate and in the Assembly to pass the 1910 law so that they could act under it, but when their counsel discovered the insufficiency of the 1907 law, they immediately abandoned the 1910 law and took advantage of the loop-hole through which they might crawl and decided that they would be successful by reason of that very deficiency.

"The absolute unfamiliarty with the facts by the Mayor and some of North Plainfield's people may be due to the fact that they have attended none of the hearings before the State Board of Health, and until the late hearing before the Senate committee, that "unanimously anxious and impatient community" has been solely represented by its two interested agitators and a lawyer.

"A reference to the map will show the situation, and if your communities will allow themselves to have a job like this tacked on to them at their expense and for the benefit of a selected few, they must not grumble at the certain and continued litigation which is sure to follow, as the people who object and are affected and represented by us; namely, of Bridgewater, Warren and Piscataway townships, Bound Brook, the Board of Trade, West Piscataway Improvement Association, East Bound Brook, etc., propose to fight this cunningly conceived injustice to the last ditch, as they fought and after spending over thirty thousand dollars compelled the abatement of a nuisance of not greater importance by the Lehigh Valley railroad some years ago.

"To one sufficiently interested, we would simply ask them to read this Senate Bill No. 41, which simply makes the State Board of Health, which is a non-partisan body and are experts in sewage and health matters, the arbitrators in cases like the one confronting us, and in addition compels notice of hearing in which any affected citizen may be heard. Surely there is no injustice in that."

BAPTISMAL SERVICE AT 7TH BAPTIST.

The Seventh-Day Baptist church of New Market will use the baptistry of the local Seventh-Day Baptist church, this evening for a baptismal service, following a sermon and testimony meeting conducted by Rev. Edgar D. VanHorn, of New York city. Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor, will occupy the pulpit tomorrow morning and preach on the theme: "Jesus, the Revealer." The Sabbath-school will meet at the close of the service.

Henry C. Krebs, supervising principal of the North Plainfield schools, will address the Men's Club of the church Sunday evening at 8 o'clock on the subject of "Abraham Lincoln." Miss Nellie Williams will lead the Christian Endeavor society meeting and John B. Cottrell, Jr., the Junior Endeavor society meeting at the usual hours.

Pangborn Goes to Reformatory.

Ira Pangborn, of Westfield, and formerly of North Plainfield, who was indicted by the January Grand Jury for forgery and uttering and who later changed his plea of not guilty to non vult, was sentenced to the Reformatory at Rahway by Judge Atwater in the Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth, yesterday. He confessed to three previous forgeries, two in Newark and one in Montclair.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks were dull and strong yesterday.

The French Minister of War, General Brun, fell dead in his office.

Laurence Irving presented "The Lily" at the Kingsway Theatre, London.

The entire population of a village near Harbin was discovered dead from the plague.

Quanah Parker, the noted Comanche Indian chief, died at his home, in Lawton, Okla.

The old French warship, the Richelieu, a derelict, drifted ashore on the rocks off the Scily Islands.

The government of Hayti has advised the State Department in Washington that the revolution is practically at an end.

The trial of a $10,000 alienation suit brought against W. S. Sims, the torpedo inventor, by his daughter-in-law, was begun in Newark.

The Russian Governor of Tchernigov, a province in Little Russia, expelled 219 Jewish families, marching them through heavy snowdrifts.

Former State Senator Frank J. Gardner was acquitted of the charge of attempting to bribe Otto G. Foelker to vote against the anti-race-track gambling bills.

The court and opposing counsel agreed to another examination of J. G. Robin by an alienist, looking to a possible reopening of proceedings to test the indicted banker's sanity.

Letters from Russia expressing the socialists' desire to shed blood were read on the stand by a woman who is suing William E. Walling, a wealthy socialist, for alleged breach of promise to marry.

The Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Germany will visit Rome in April to present their felicitations to the King and Queen of Italy upon the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of Rome as capital of United Italy.

John G. Milburn represented the New York Stock Exchange at a hearing at Albany on the Stillwell bill to prevent stock speculation; Martin W. Littleton favored the measure to extend the length of duck shooting season on Long Island.

Both in the Eastern and Western rate cases the Interstate Commerce Commission announced at Washington that the railroads were not entitled to any increase in rates; the carriers were ordered to withdraw the proposed advances by March 10, leaving the old rates in effect.

Congress—Senate: A resolution by Senator Cummins calling on the President for information bearing on the Canadian reciprocity agreement was adopted. Senator Beveridge spoke on the Lorimer case; an effort to obtain ratification of the Japanese treaty failed. House: Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, and Delegate Wickersham, of Alaska, met in a personal clash; the Mondell bill providing for the leasing of government coal lands in Alaska was debated; the Military Academy appropriation bill and the Moon bill for the codification of the judiciary laws were passed.

TELEPHONE SPOILED ELOPEMENT PLANS.

The telephone Wednesday interfered with the plans, romantic or otherwise, of Emil C. Hottinger, of Manhattan, who persuaded Eva Dennison, a nineteen-year-old country girl to elope with him. The girl is attractive. She is the daughter of George Dennison, postmaster at Rexville, a village in Steuben county, N. Y. The pair were arrested in Jersey City on their arrival. The police had no trouble in picking them out at the Erie station from the description furnished over the telephone. Hottinger described himself as twenty-eight years old, a hotel cashier, living at 46 West Sixty-fifth street, New York city. He had $12 in money and baggage check No 131310. He was held as a disorderly person, and he kissed Miss Dennison before he was led to a cell for the night.

Miss Dennison was sent to the headquarters of the Young Women's Christian Association. She impressed Acting Captain Richards as an unsophisticated country girl, who knows absolutely nothing about the ways of the world.

"I guess I'm glad now that you brought me here," she said in Mr Richards' office after the acting captain had talked to her in a fatherly fashion.

Hottinger was arraigned in court yesterday morning and held in $500 bail for extradition on the charge of abduction. Calvin Dennison, an uncle of the girl, came to Jersey City on an early morning train and took Miss Dennison home. She said she was glad to go.

Hottinger advertised in a matrimonial newspaper. His advertisement was answered by Miss Dennison's maiden aunt. She turned the letters he wrote over to Eva and the young girl sent her picture to Hottinger. Hottinger went to Rexville, but was dismissed by the girl's father. Then the elopement was planned.

He Had Nothing Cheap.

An Easterner returning from the West tells of a horse dealer out there by the name of Jenkins. He was sitting behind the air-tight stove in the kitchen when his wife hurried in to tell him that Hank Franton was in the front room and wanted to see him.

"What'n thunder'd ye let him in for?" he snapped, not rising from his chair.

"Well, he wants to buy a hawss, that's why," was the reply of the wife. "You'd 'a' mad a great how-de-do if I hadn't."

"No, I wouldn't," said the grouchy Jenkins, as he reluctantly left his chair. "I know Franton's size. I can't do business with his class. He wants a cheap hawss; that's what he wants. And I ain't got anything I can sell for less than 'leven dollars in cash money."—Brooklyn Life.

A USEFUL VALENTINE

By BERTHA D. ALSOP

Delia Thorpe was passing out of the age when girls send or expect valentines. At least she personally considered them as more fitted for children than for grownup young ladies of seventeen like herself. But Delia was rather a dignified young person with old ways.

There is a place in all girls' hearts vacant until it is filled by some young fellow. This place had been filled for Delia, but neither he who filled it nor any one else knew of the fact. Delia herself was afraid even to breathe his name in her prayers, fearing some ordinary mortal without sentiment or sympathy would hear.

Henry Robbins, a bank clerk, was the youth whose image had found a pre-eminent place in her vision. After all, in youth is it not the image that makes the impression? Marriage among very young people is certainly a lottery.

When Delia on the morning of the 14th of February received a valentine addressed in Henry's handwriting—she had received one note from him and treasured it, locked in her jewel box—she was surprised. She tried at first to make herself think that she was displeased. Henry was five years her senior, and it occurred to her that his sending her a valentine indicated that he considered her a chit. There was one redeeming feature—it had been mailed in a plain envelope. But presently this feeling wore off and there was something very delightful about the little stamped thing bedaubed with cupids, notwithstanding that she deprecated Henry's having sent it to a person of such advanced age as herself. Pasted to its center was a little silver gewgaw star, underneath which was written "Star of Hope." While the address on the envelope was unmistakably Henry's, Delia was not quite certain that the writing under the star was his. It looked more like the hand of a much younger person. But she preferred to think that it was Henry's work, and why shouldn't it be since he had addressed the envelope? Why had he called it the star of hope? Because it expressed a hope that she would be his valentine, of course. Well, what next? Why, he expected that if there was hope for him she would let him know. And how would she do this? By sending him the star. It was all plain as the sun in heaven after she had thought it out.

Some crusty bachelors, most of them woman haters, assert that women have not logical brains. This process of reasoning on the part of one of the sex no older than her eighteenth year is an excellent refutation of these men's assertion. Ten to one if a man had received such a missive he would never have suspected that the star had any meaning whatever; would have thrown "the thing" into the wastebasket and left the sender to find out whether or no there was hope for her by asking him point blank.

Pardon this digression. Delia Thorpe knew in her heart that there was a great deal of hope for Henry Robbins, and she deemed it her duty—it was certainly her pleasure—to inform him of the fact. So she detached the star, put it in a little envelope, such as is used for sending cards, and slipped it in a letter box.

"Tim," said Henry Thorpe on the morning of the 15th of February to an office boy. "There is some mistake here. You were sending valentines the other day. Do you know anything about this?"

"It's a star that was on one of the valentines I sent."

Henry had been very busy with the mail on the 13th. Tim Butler had that day been addressing valentines on Henry's desk. Henry had written Delia Thorp an invitation to go to the skating rink with him on the evening of the 15th, and it was evident that Tim's girl had been invited to the rink while Henry's girl had been sent the star of hope valentine.

The practical part of all this Henry reasoned out very readily. But as to deducing what the star meant he was as stupid as an owl. There was nothing for him to do but explain the matter to Delia. He did so in a note stating that a valentine belonging to an office boy had got into an envelope intended to contain an invitation to go with him to the skating rink, adding an apology for having sent the valentine. He would call at 8 o'clock to take her to the rink.

Such brutal treatment, though unintentional, naturally had its effect upon Delia. She received him very coolly when he called and declined to go out. He sat down with her and tried to find out what was the matter, but he was not up to the work. To reason out the problem as Delia had reasoned out the star of hope matter was an impossibility with him. Supposing that Delia was miffed at his sending her a valentine, he apologized for doing so, declaring that a man of his age who would send a girl a paper made star should be relegated to the nursery. This didn't improve matters. Delia's eyes flashed; then tears stood in them. And yet Henry was not aware that every moment he was stabbing her right in the heart.

"Do little girl," he exclaimed, "do tell me what it is!"

"I can't," she moaned.

"Do, please!"

"I thought you sent the star of hope to learn something from me. I've returned it to you."

A glimmer struggled inside Henry's thick skull. He took her in his arms, and it was all over.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"Over Night," which Philip Bartholomae successfully wrote for "laughing purposes only," keeps crowding the Hackett with merry throngs of fun-lovers. "Over Night" is a farcical comedy, that can be seen many times without tiring the playgoer. Its fun is natural and unforced, and the cast is made up of a company of young, clever actors, who are unspoiled by the success they have achieved. The scenes on the Hudson River steamboat and in the Catskill mountain hotel are delightfully amusing. Margaret Lawrence, Jean Newcombe, Herbert A. Yost, A. P. Aylsworth and the other clever players continue in the cast. cast.

At the Majestic, Brooklyn, "Mother" will be presented all next week with the New York cast, including Mary Shaw in the title role.

William Faversham, who is presenting Edward Knoblauch's comedy, "The Faun," at Daly's theatre, has proved since becoming his own manager that he is not afraid of a dramatic novelty. Mr. Faversham's impersonation of the faun is a wide departure from anything that the actor has attempted in recent time. "The Faun" is the one comedy of the decade that, while the auditor is kept in roars of laughter during the progress of the play, causes him to think after he has left the theatre.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"The Man of the Hour," George Broadhurst's great American play, will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre Wednesday, March 1. The engagement is one of the most important of the season. The play concerns modern city life with flesh and blood characters of types familiar in every day life. A large company is employed in the presentation the more prominent characters being in the hands of Joseph Harris, Chas. H. Ellwood, Harry J. Oehler, L. C. Phillips, Charles Drake, Edward Riley, Fred Renolds, Walter Carter, Richard Hogan, John P. Daly, M. J. Underwood, Frank Weston, Peter Digman, Georgie Brantley, Edna Lyman and Marie Casmere.

"The Girl in The Taxi," which comes to the Plainfield theatre for Monday night next week, was first produced in Paris under the title "Le Fils a Papa," which might be rendered "Like Father Like Son." The piece created one of the greatest sensations th French metropolis has ever known and ran for more than 1,000 nights. It was originally written by Anthony Mars, that past master in the art of intrigue. The American adaptation was made by Stanislaus Stange, and holds the record for the long runs of any similar play in New York, Chicago and Boston. The locale has been changed from Paris to New York, but the play retains all the humor and atmosphere of midnight life which made it so popular abroad.

PARVIN LECTURES ON OCEAN LINERS

Before an audience of over 250 people, Emerson E. Parvin, of this city, gave his illustrated lecture entitled, "Over the Seas and the Lure of Foreign Lands," at the Plainfield Business College, last night. More than one hundred fine lantern slides were shown, many of them being colored. The progress in the development of the ocean liner from 1840 to date was shown; also views of a steamer in course of construction. The audience was then taken on a cruise starting from New York and proceeding by the way of Madeira to Spain, Northern Africa, Egypt, the Holy Land and home by the way of Europe.

An interesting feature of the lecture was the description of the Steamship Olympic, of the White Star Line, which is about 900 feet long and 92 feet abeam, having a displacement of 66,000 tons. During the evening E. F. Glover contributed to the entertainment of those present by giving a number of phonographic selections and Wendell C. Glover rendered piano selections. On Thursday evening, March 9, the members of the classes of '08-'10 will meet to form an alumni association.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"My own dear love," Eva wrote one day, "I am in a state of awful trouble. I don't know what to think or what to do. Sir Rufus came to the castle two days ago quite unexpectedly. It seems he has discovered that it is quite impossible for him to wait the four months out for my answer. The catastrophe he is trying to avert—that is how he puts it to mamma—must happen before that time if he does not exert himself to turn it aside.

"One thing I am sure of, mamma is afraid of Sir Rufus. He makes her do and say exactly what he chooses.

"One thing, dearest, distresses me more than anything—the idea of breaking faith with you, for I fear it will come to that. I am convinced that some dreadful danger hangs over Terence. He has not been here since we came back from London, and I cannot stand still and let it fall on him. If I were to wish to do so, the voice and the sight of my mother would force me to make the sacrifice. I have gained a little time, however. Mamma and I are going to Dublin tomorrow. We shall be staying at the Queen's hotel. Perhaps I may see you there, as I fear we shall not have many more chances of seeing each other. You had better write or telegraph to me to the care of Virginie, as usual, as she is going with us. It seems a shame to bring you so far only to say goodby, and perhaps it would be wiser for us not to meet again, dear Guy, if we are to be parted, as I fear we must be. So I shall hope to hear from you soon after we arrive in Dublin."

Before he had finished reading the letter Guy had made up his mind. He must persuade Eva to run away with him. Having jotted down on his blotter the hours of the departure and arrival of the trains, he began his letter to Eva. He implored her not to forego this solitary chance of securing her freedom from a bondage that would be to her nothing less than a lifelong slavery.

Having posted his letter, he went to look up his friend Ashton Brooke, intending to ask him to attend the wedding either as best man or simply as a witness. But Brooke's clerk assured him that his master was out of town and would not be back before the end of the week.

"Too late!" muttered Guy, staring absently at the clerk. When he came to himself he found that the poor old man was blinking and shrinking under his unconscious gaze, and, offering a hasty apology, he turned and ran down the echoing staircase. "Curious old chap that," he said to himself. "Looks as if he had walked bodily out of one of Dickens' novels."

When he got back to his own chambers he found Foscombe engaged in writing a note at his writing pad.

"Ah," he said, with outstretched hand, "I was just writing a note to you, but it is better to see you personally. I called to thank you very warmly on behalf of myself and my partner and our client for your services in Smedhurst's case and to hand you this."

"This" was a check for a substantial sum, and Guy blushed a little with pleasure as he took it. The money was doubly welcome just then, and it was pleasant to know that his work was so well appreciated.

"I should also like to know if you can accept a brief for next Friday."

Guy shook his head. "Sorry I can't," he said, and then, feeling that a good client like Mr. Foscombe deserved some better explanation, he added: "The fact is, it is possible that I may have to go to Dublin that day. It is not absolutely certain whether I go or not, but I hope I shall."

Then it occurred to him that it would be well if he had at least one witness of his own rank in life present at the wedding, and he went on: "The fact is, I hope to be married next Saturday. You look surprised. Do you remember a conversation we had in the spring in my rooms in Teddington?"

"I remember it very well," said Foscombe quickly, "but I never recurred to the subject because I couldn't help a kind of feeling or conviction that you were speaking that night from your own experience."

"I was, Foscombe. And I think I should be a cur if I were to stand by and see the girl I love sacrifice herself for nothing. So I have asked her to marry me at once."

"I think you have done perfectly right, and I congratulate you with all my heart," said Foscombe, holding out his hand.

Guy grasped it warmly. That sign of sympathy was very pleasant to him.

"I was thinking of asking you to witness the ceremony," he said, with some little satisfaction.

"I shall be most happy."

"Thank you. I can't tell you the church, or the hour till I hear from Dublin, but it will be on Saturday."

"All right. I shall look you up tomorrow, and I hope to hear good news. Then you can give me full particulars."

On the following afternoon Foscombe called at Guy's chambers. Guy was expecting him and opened the door himself.

"It's all right!" [illegible] joyfully. "I had a wire this morning: 'Agree to all your proposals. Will follow your instructions implicitly.' I can scarcely believe it. The news seems too good to be true."

"You have telegraphed instructions, I suppose."

"Only to repeat what I said in my letter yesterday. I leave town on Friday—that is, tomorrow morning—and meet Miss Fitzgerald at the boat which leaves the same evening for Holyhead. We travel all night and arrive in London on Saturday morning and drive straight to the church from the station."

Guy then gave his friend the name of the church and some other details and left early, as he had to catch an early train at Euston next morning.

His hopes were high and his face was bright when he took his seat in the railway carriage next day. The brightness of the summer morning was in tune with the brightness of his future.

The train was behind time, and he became anxious lest he should not catch the steamer by which Eva and he were to make the return journey. But his fears were unfounded. When the steamer was made fast to the wharf at Kingstown her sister boat was still lying at her berth.

Guy was the first to leap ashore. He hurried to the boat, pushed his way along the crowded gangway and searched the saloons and passages. Eva was not there; neither was she on deck. He found the stewardess and made as close inquiries as he could without mentioning Eva's name. She could tell him nothing.

He delayed so long searching that the steamer had actually cast off her moorings before he got on deck, and he had to make a leap for the quay to avoid being carried back to Holyhead. He did not want that, for he could not go back to London without knowing why Eva had not met him.

Half an hour's drive took him to the hotel, and he asked for Nora. Eva had said that her mother had taken her maid with her, and he did not wish to compromise Eva by inquiring for her.

When she came into the waiting room Nora looked round with a quick glance of expectancy that changed at once to disappointment. A swift movement brought her to Guy's side, and she clutched him by the arm.

"You have brought her back—you will bring her back, I mean. Oh, why did you persuade her to go away with you? But no harm will be done if she comes back at once. Where is she? Where is she?"

"That is what I want to know," said Guy, bewildered and vaguely alarmed. "Is she not here? Is she not at the hotel?"

"How can you ask me that, Mr. Lorimer? You know very well that you and she made up a plan to elope together. She has said so herself in a letter she left behind. She and her maid left the hotel this morning and have not been seen since. I thought you had thought better of it and brought her back."

"Nora, I have not seen Miss Fitzgerald for the last three months."

He fell into a seat, his face white and drawn as if he had suddenly found himself face to face with death.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic.—A missionary journey around the world.—II. Missions in the United States (south).—Isa. lv, 12. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The southern part of the United States is a great missionary field. The southern people themselves have no need of the missionary. They are, perhaps, the most devout and conservative Christian people in our land. The need of the missions is not, therefore, a need of southerners, but in the south there are several classes of what we call in the mission work the exceptional populations of the United States. Of such classes three of the largest and most needy, so far as the gospel is concerned, are to be found in the southland—the negroes, the mountain whites and the Mexicans in the United States. Each one of these classes is very large in numbers and is most morally and spiritually degraded.

1. The southern negroes of this race of people, then, is a population of 9,000,000 as against 1,000,000 in the north and these latter more widely distributed than are the multitudes of the south. Some states and especially some cities have a larger black population than white, and these were a standing menace to this great section of our country, once so great and powerful in all things, before the war plunged them into almost dire poverty. But nobly they went to work after the "carpetbaggers" had been forced out, and the south in a different way is again becoming richer and more prosperous. Sons and even daughters of southern parentage, who in the days before the war would have considered it a great indignity to have engaged in industrial business or in labor of any kind, with their sons and daughters, the present generation, have dropped the past and gone to work, and some of it hard work, to redeem the south and to build up a new south, and, moreover, they are meeting with wonderful success. Nor do they fear the darky, and perhaps if the north, even as missionaries, had remained out of the south and the negro had not been given a vote they themselves might have handled the vexed questions before them with far greater success than has so far been accomplished. They know the negro, how to keep him in his place, where he must be kept, when he outnumbers the white population, for a superior race, no matter how great the difference in population, will never be ruled by an inferior race. Brains always win in such a conflict. But being freed and given the right of franchise immediately changed his position, and in many thousands of occasions darky docility turned back almost to African savagery, with disastrous results both to white and black. But these millions have souls which need to be saved, and our greatest denomination began missionary work among them, consisting of elementary education, teaching various kinds of industries, and especially the gospel, which is still greatly needed regardless of our schools and churches.

2. The mountain whites. In the southern mountains in Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee another peculiar population exists numbering 2,000,000 souls. These are the people who were descendants of the Scotch and Scotch Irish, who opposed slavery and lost their all in the Revolutionary war, were driven farther and farther back into the mountains until they were cut off from civilization and were like a lost race until a recent date. No people have needed the gospel more than they. Their moral degradation was almost complete, but the mountains were opened up, and these descendants of the sturdiest of a religious ancestry were found and their awful manner of life disclosed. Missionaries, day and Sabbath school teachers have poured in, and the miracle in American missions today is the improvement of this "lost race."

2. The Mexicans in the western part of the southern states. Here there live together Mexicans of the lowest caste, Indians and half breeds by the thousands. They are among the most reckless and toughest of any people in the United States. Yet they need the gospel and are getting it, but with no great effects except it be the children in the schools, the method most often used.

AN ODD WEDDING

By ROCKFORD KING

One day as I was about to leave my study a young couple came hurrying in and asked me to marry them. I dislike very much to marry persons thus hurriedly about whom I know nothing, and in this case I especially hesitated. The man, though refined looking, was dressed in clothes more befitting a workingman than a gentleman. He was pale faced either from ill health or because he had not been accustomed to the sunlight; otherwise he seemed to be in good health.

However, since there seemed to be no objection to my uniting them, both being of age, I told them to come into my study and I would accommodate them. We had barely got inside and the couple taken position before me when quick footsteps were heard without.

The man lost what color he had before.

"Go on," said the lady to me impatiently.

But before I could do so two men rushed in. One of them, glancing at the groom expectant, said, "All right; we've got him." Then to the man to whom he referred he said, "You come along with me."

"What's all this about?" I asked.

"He's an escaped convict," said the man who had been speaking.

"Is that a fact?" I asked of the man I had expected to marry.

"Yes," he said; "I am."

He spoke without the slightest appearance of shame or regret. The lady went up to the men, who were prison officials, and begged them to permit the ceremony to proceed before taking her lover back to prison.

"But you don't wish to marry a jail bird, do you?" he replied.

"I wish to marry this man. It will delay you only a few moments. Come; let the clergyman proceed."

"What do you say, Tom?" he asked of his companion.

"It's a rum go," said the other, "but if the young lady insists on throwing herself away on a convict I don't see as its any business of our'n. We've got him safe enough, and two or three minutes won't make any difference.

"All right," said the other. "Go ahead, parson."

It was my turn to demur, not liking the business of uniting a lady to any man under such circumstances.

"I reckon she's with him," said the official called Tom. "Some one sent him a saw in a cake, and I expect she's the one that did it."

"Do go on," said the girl pleadingly.

I felt constrained to take the same view about the matter the men did—that it was none of my business, so I yielded and married them. The girl took out a portemonnaie and gave me a twenty dollar bill. Then she threw her arms about her felon husband's neck and said cheerily: "It'll be all right now, dearie, we're married. I can now tell the whole story. I would have done it before only you wouldn't let me. It won't be long now, I assure you. I won't say goodby, but only adieu." And with several more kisses she released him, and he went away between his captors, each holding on to a handcuff the prisoner wore about his wrists. After they had gone I gave the lady a certificate of marriage. She was going away without it, but I detained her.

"Would you mind explaining this to me?" I asked as she was about to leave me.

"Not yet," she replied. "Thank you ever so much. You don't know how far you have been instrumental in untying a knot by tying one. Couldn't you date the certificate back a year?"

"I couldn't do that," I said.

"Well, I don't know that it is necessary, though it might make the rest of it easier. Goodby. Some day you'll hear from us."

With that she went away, looking far happier than when she had entered.

Six months passed, during which I heard nothing from either of the couple I had married. Then one day a gentleman called on me whom I failed to recognize.

"You don't remember me," he said.

"I confess I do not," I replied.

"That's not remarkable. The last and only time I saw you I was an escaped convict in borrowed, or, rather, stolen, clothes. You married me before I was returned to the penitentiary."

"And may I ask how you have secured your freedom?"

"By a pardon from the governor. You see, it was a case of conviction under a misunderstanding."

"Please be seated," I said to him, "and make your explanation."

"The matter which has puzzled you is very simple when you get the facts. I courted my wife clandestinely, she being engaged at the time to her father's partner in business. I persuaded her to elope with me. The night we were to make the elopement I went to her house and met her at a rear door. At the moment our egress was cut off she admitted me to the house and closed the door. To escape detection we went upstairs and into a bedroom. We heard some one coming, and the girl told me to go into an adjoining room. Her father came into the room I had entered and, supposing me to be a burglar, called the police.

"I must either be content to confess myself a thief or the girl's reputation would be ruined. I chose the former course. Since my marriage my wife has confessed the whole story to her father, and I have been pardoned both by him and the governor."

Before leaving me he presented me with a check for $3,000 for a European trip from himself and wife.

SENATOR TO HELP

Frelinghuysen Counted on to Aid in Defeat of Senate Bill, No. 41.

W. J. BUTTFIELD'S STATEMENT.

"I Realize Thoroughly the Needs and Rights of North Plainfield in This Sewerage Problem."

Fearing that a wrong interpretation may be placed on Mayor Newton B. Smalley's public letter urging North Plainfield's taxpayers to write Senator Frelinghuysen to urge his efforts to defeat Senate bill No. 41, William J. Buttfield makes an explanation today. Mr. Buttfield is chairman of the borough's sewerage commission and is greatly interested in the campaign to defeat the Senate bill introduced by Senator Frelinghuysen at the request of Bound Brook's committee. The bill in question provides that before a municipality can establish a sewage disposal plant, it must obtain the concent of the State Board of Health, which in North Plaingfield's case might prevent the installation of a plant at the proposed site in the Greenbrook section of North Plainfield township. Mr. Buttfield's statement follows:

"Referring to the Hon. Mayor Smalley's letter, appearing in your paper last Monday, relative to the above bill introduced in the Senate, it seems to me that possibly Senator Frelinghuysen's position in this matter might be misunderstood. Knowing, as I do, the assistance which North Plainfield has received from him in the past, I do not think we should fear any different treatment in this instance.

"Senator Frelinghuysen has always recognized North Plainfield's urgent needs in respect of a sewerage system. In 1907 he was instrumental in passing three bills through the Legislature to permit the Borough making a contract with the City for sewerage disposal works. Last year with the Honorable W. W. Smalley's co-operation, our Senator secured for us the enactment of the so-called Plainfield-North Plainfield Sewerage bill, and also a bill relative to the issuance of serial bonds.

"Senate Bill, No. 41, drawn up by Bound Brook, in opposition to North Plainfield's plans, was introduced by Senator Frelinghuysen with the borough's consent, but with the understanding that he reserved the right to use his influence for or against the bill after both sides of the dispute had been fully heard.

"I have every confidence that Senator Frelinghuysen will not hesitate to cast his vote as equity dictates, and as North Plainfield is unquestionably in the right, I believe we can rest assured that the borough will receive full justice as far as Senator Frelinghuysen'e efforts can secure it."

Senator Frelinghuysen's attitude towards the borough may be judged from the tenor of the following stereotyped reply he is sending to those petitioning him to help kill the bill:

"I acknowledge receipt of your letter relating to Senate Bill No. 41, the intent of which is to give the State Board of Health jurisdiction over location of Sewerage Disposal Plants. This bill was introduced by request, and with the full knowledge and consent of the promoters of the North Plainfield Sewerage system. Therefore, this situation has not been created by me. I realize throughly the needs and rights of North Plainfield in this Sewerage problem, and will duly present them to the legislature when occasion offers."

SENATOR J. E. MARTINE TO ADDRESS GRADUATES.

Plans are already being made for the annual commencement exercises of the Plainfield Business College. The date for this event has not yet been set, but will probably be sometime early in June. United States Senator James E. Martine has reserved a date, and will be one of the speakers, and other men of National reputation will be secured.

There will be a large class graduated, and those who were present at the 1910 exercises, which were held in the theatre, may look for something even better this year.

The Public Has Been Waiting for This Announcement.

Excelsior Chorus Concert.

REALTY CONCERN IN RECEIVER'S HANDS

Local stockholders of the Metropolitan Merchantile & Realty Company, met at the Calvary Baptist church, last night, when Rev. J. C. Love, of Montclair, informed them that the concern's charter has been revoked and its affairs placed in the hands of a receiver. Upon his advice a committee comprising Messrs. Moore, Carey and Dyett was appointed to co-operate with the other committees in various parts of the State to bring the officers of the company to justice. It is the intention of the committees to bring the matter to the attention of District Attorney Whitman, of New York city, as the company has also been operating in that State.

The company had about one hundred members in the local branch, a majority being colored people. It has been learned that the company's assets amount to practically nothing, while the liabilities aggregate about $50,000. The local branch engeged in real estate business on a limited scale, erecting several houses on West Fourth street.

SOLD CIGARETTES TO BOYS ALLEGED

Eight alleged "bad" boys were arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning on charges of stealing milk, newspapers and bread from the hallways of different buildings on West Front street and on West Second street. Besides these crimes that of ringing doorbells in that neighborhood and otherwise conducting themselves in a disorderly manner were made against them.

William Goff, Thomas Gleason, John Kennedy, Patrick Finnerty, Edward Smith, Henry Foss and Albert and Arthur Brown, all ranging in age from 10 to 14 years were the culprits and after listening to a heart to heart talk from Judge DeMeza solemnly promised that in the future their behavior would be beyond reproach. Threats of the probation officer sobered one or two of the boys who were inclined to look upon their arrest as a joke.

After Judge DeMeza had finished his little talk to the boys Mayor George W. V. Moy, who happened to be present interrogated the eight as to where they procured the cigarettes they are in the habit of smoking. He obtained the address of one Italian on West Front street and that of a groceryman on West Third, both of whom will undobtedly hear from his honor.

CAFE CHANTANT FOR ST. STEPHEN'S

Elaborate arrangements have been made for the "Cafe Chantant" to be held at Truell Hall, next Tuesday evening for the benefit of St. Stephen's church, and already a large number of tickets have been sold for the affair. The committee in charge has been successful in securing several prominent artists from New York and excellent local talent.

The program will comprise monologues by Mrs. E. E. Iremonger, songs by Mrs. R. L. Hecht, violin solos by Mrs. Violet Truell Johnson and Mr. Schultz; sketch, "Looking Backward," by the Misses Helen Woolley, Jessie Stewart, Millwood Lutz, Helen Platt; Japanese dance by Miss Frances VanDeventer; banjo and banjourine solos and duets by Fred and William VanEpps. The following New York artists will appear:

Loraine Armour and Charles Bagnley in operatic sketch; Miss Winifred Marshall and Rev. Morgan Ashley, vocal selections; Miss Lillian Roberts, Spanish dancer; Andrew Smith, humorist; Miss Gertrude Grout, piano solos; William Bridges, in "Swindles."

Refreshments will be served. Special tables seating four persons may be reserved until 8:30 o'clock at a nominal price. The committee in charges comprises Lewis J. Geary, F. W. Carlisle and Robert H. McCready.

Eastern Star Social.

Lydia Chapter, No. 41, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold a dime social at the home of Mrs. Calvin H. Rugg, 75 Mercer avenue, Monday night, February 27. There will be home-made cake and candy for sale and a good program will be provided for Eastern Star members and their friends.

Oratorio of "Elijah."

The quartet of the Crescent Avenue church will render the oratorio of "Elijah" at the evening service tomorrow, it being the monthly musical service.

STIRRING SERMON

Baptist Pastor Moved by Rev. Mr. Fiske's Discourse at Grace Church.

CONFERENCE ON RELIGION.

"Most Impresive, Powerful and Interesting That I Have Ever Listened to," Says Rev. Mr. Maguire.

Among the congregation at the service in the series of Religious Conferences at Grace Episcopal church this morning was Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and a lecturer of note. When asked later in the day what he thought of the interpretations of the text given by Rev. Charles Fiske, of Baltimore, Mr. Maguire said: "Without exception Mr. Fiske's application of the words of the Master seems to me to surpass anything I have ever heard. The speaker's intense earnestness seemed to burn its way into the very soul of man. Of course, there is nothing more sincere than pure sincerity, that feeling of absolute belief in the Christ and His sublime individuality with which the world today is impressed as never before, but there was something so imperative in the demands upon belief in Mr. Fiske's powerful discourse, that I could not fail to be impressed.

"I feel constrained to say that Mr. Fiske's sermon this morning was the most impressive, profitable and interesting that I have ever listened to. It had that power which fastens itself upon the hearer with such positive assurance. It was something that the thinking man can never forget nor the superficial man deny. I was glad of the opportunity of hearing this discourse because its application to the observances of the formalities, which today have such a hold on the external man and so little on his real soul, that it seemed to me that not a hearer could fail to find the true secret of the inner Christ—the sanctuary of God, in the rector's remarks.

"The Pharisee," Mr. Fiske said, "is but the external revelation of what the true Christian spirit should be. He represents," he pointed out, "merely the duty and not the willingness of the charitable feeling of the one who seeks to do the Master's will. Such sermons stay with me as they must with all who were privileged to hear Mr. Fiske this morning and I would that others whose influence could be used for good had heard the wonderfully simple yet powerful sermon I listened to with profit."

Rev. Mr. Fiske took for his text "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." It was the last in the series on "The Conditions of Salvation."

The week of Conference closes tomorrow with four services. At 7:30 in the morning, there will be a corporate communion of thanksgiving, at which many are expected to receive Holy Communion in acknowledgement of the blessings of the week of devotion. In preparation for this service, there will be a special address, with self-examination, tonight at 8 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, Rev. Mr. Fiske will preach on "Jesus of Nazareth Passeth By." He will also speak to children and young peole at 3:30 in the afternoon, and at 4:30 the concluding service of the Mission will be held, when Mr. Fiske will speak on "The Personal Friendship of Jesus Christ." In the evening he goes to Somerville to preach in his former parish, St. John's church, and then returns to his church in Baltimore for Ash-Wednesday.

The conference week has been in every way most successful. Large congregations have been in attendance, with two and three services daily. In the mornings there have been numerous requests for prayer, with special intercessions.

At the evening services a feature of the meetings has been the informal answering of questions. Each night the missioner has given half an hour to such questions, dealing with all sorts of doubts and difficulties, some of them with regard to matters of faith in general, some in connection with the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Episcopal church. The answers have been short homely in phraseology and plain and simple in their exposition of things often misunderstood. This feature of the services has been one of the most interesting parts of the week's program.

Last evening Mr. Fiske closed the course of night addresses on "The Perils of the Soul." His special subject was "The Peril of Success," and he showed that Christ's only measure of success was the accomplishment of the will of God for each individual life.

AGED FRIEND DIED HERE THIS MORNING

Mrs. Matilda Rushmore, aged ninety-four years, died this morning from the infirmities of old age. She was born in New York city in 1818, where she spent her early life. She married Stephen Rushmore, of Westbury, Long Island, a prosperous farmer, and came to this city to live after his death in 1890.

Mrs. Rushmore was a life-long member of the Religious Society of Friends and was greatly admired and beloved for her many excellent qualities. Her descendants, besides the family of her son, Dr. Edward Rushmore, of Park avenue, are her grandsons, David B. Rushmore, of Schenectady, N. Y., and Edmund Rushmore, of North Plainfield. The funeral will be held at the late home, 113 East Fifth street, Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The burial will be at Westbury, L. I.

FRANK R. HOYT DIES FOLLOWING STROKE

Frank Rogers Hoyt, aged fifty-one years, died last night at his home, 686 West Eighth street, following a stroke of paralysis on Monday. He had been more or less of an invalid for a number of years, having lived in retirement. Mr. Hoyt's wife died in Brussells in August of last year while traveling abroad. Her remains were brought to her home in this city for burial.

Mr. Hoyt was born in New York and years ago was engaged in the wholesale grain business in New York with his uncle, Jesse Hoyt. He removed to this city last September. He was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

Surviving are one daughter, Miss Dorothea Hoyt, a sister, Mrs. Bolton Bangs, of New York; two sisters-in-law, Mrs. Jesse Hoyt, of New York, and Mrs. Isaac N. Field, of this city; also a brother-in-law, William Dutcher, of Central avenue. The funeral will be held at the late home Monday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, will officiate and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

'HUMAN HEARTS' AT THEATRE TONIGHT

The stage of the Plainfield theatre will be devoted to the presentation of the popular and highly successful play "Human Hearts," this afternoon and tonight, with a company of superior excellence and strength. The author of the play is an actor of wide experience and fully understands the art of playmaking from the standpoint of both the spectator and actor. His effects are produced quickly, but none the less does he hold patent sway over the passions of his auditors. The play is too well known to require more than a passing word on the plot. The main thread of the story centers around Tom Logan, who is unjustly accused of murder, and sentenced to life imprisonment. His wife, Jeanette, who is a proud ambitious woman, runs away with an old lover, and goes to New York. Even in a woman degraded as she is, the instinct of motherhood prompts her to return to the old home to try to gain possession of her child Grace, but she is frustrated in her design and the clouds of adversity are dispelled by the sweet sunshine of a true woman's love.

BOND SURRENDERED IN NON-SUPPORT CASE.

August Webber, bondsman for Henry Johnson in the sum of $500, surrendered the bond yesterday and Johnson was re-arrested and is now endeavoring to secure another bondsman. Johnson was arrested two weeks ago on complaint of Overseer-of-the-Poor Alexander Ayres, to whom Mrs. Johnson had applied for aid. At that time the accused furnished the bond to give his wife $7 a week for the support of herself and child.

Mr. Webber believed that Johnson was about to leave town in an effort to evade the conditions imposed by Judge DeMeza.

National Bank Director Buys Big Block of Mining Shares.

A National Bank director from New York State visited the offices of the National Mining and Leasing Company at 211 North avenue, yesterday and purchased 6,000 shares of the stock at $1.50 per share, and has taken an option on 10,000 shares more. ***

Staff-Captain Palmer will be a special speaker at the Salvation Army meeting tomorrow night.

WEDS HIS NURSE

Cupid in Attendance When Michael Belatti Was Ill With Typhoid Fever.

MISS BENTON THE BRIDE.

Judge De Meza Ties the Knot at Simple Ceremony Taking Place in His Office Today.

A wedding in which the elements of romance entered conspicuously was performed this morning by Judge William G. DeMeza in his office on Park avenue. Miss Mary Bertoni, of New York city, became the bride of Michael Belatti at 11 o'clock with the parents of the bride smiling on the culmination of a real love episode.

According to the best information obtainable Mr. Belatti was ill of typhoid fever in New York a year ago and was nursed back to health by Miss Bertoni and Cupid worked over time while today's benedict was convelescing. Mutual admiration ripened into love and there you are.

The bride, pretty as a picture, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Cassio, of Rahway road. The older couple are prosperous farming people and are comfortably well off. They appeared to supremely enjoy seeing the young people married and left the judge's office showering benedictions upon him and the son-in-law and his bride.

Judge DeMeza did not exact the traditional salutation from the bride but he smiled the pleasure he felt in binding the two together for life. All the parties to the wedding reside in this city and next week the bride and groom will start on a wedding trip. Miss Gullberg, the judge's stenographer, and a reporter for The Daily Press signed the wedding certificate as witnesses.

DOUGLAS REPUBLICANS ELECT OFFICERS HERE.

The Plainfield branch of the Douglass Republican Association has been organized here with these officers: President, Isaac Turman; secretary, Frederick Chapman; treasurer, Archibald Jones. Mr. Turman, the State organizer, is now working to complete the State association. His headquarters are at 329 Berckman street.

The association is national in purpose and is being formed to bring together the colored voters of the country. Joseph W. Henderson, of Providence, R. I., is in New Jersey at present, assisting the representatives in organizing the voters of the State.

TRUANT GIVES PROMISE HE WILL GO TO SCHOOL.

On complaint of the school authorities Patrick Finnerty thirteen years old, one of the boys implicated with the disorderly crowd of eight, who were reprimanded by Judge DeMeza this morning, was arraigned on the charge of truancy.

Patrick could give no reason why he should not attend the sessions of his school, but promised to do better in the future. He is now under the care of the probation officer and a continuance of misconduct will necessitate his removal to one of the reform schools.

Buzards Go to Rahway.

Thirteen members of the Buzbards' Club were guests of the U-N-X-L-D Club, of Rahway, last night. The trip to and from Rahway was made in a large straw filled wagon. The Rahway club entertained the Plainfielders in royal fashion and on orchestra furnished music for dancing. Refreshments and cigars were served. The Plainfielders reached home at 4:30 o'clock this morning.

Miss Burd to Sing Here.

Miss Jessamine Burd, of Somerville, formerly contralto soloist at the First Presbyterian church, has accepted a similar position at the First M. E. church, commencing with May 1. Clifford A. Braider, now of the First Presbyterian church, will be the new organist.

IRVINGTON PLUMBER VIOLATED ORDINANCE

William Addis, inspector for the Board of Health, complained this morning that E. C. King, a contractor, of Irvington, was operating at a new dwelling now being finished on Leland avenue, without having a license to do the work. Judge DeMeza fined King $25 which was paid.

According to Mr. Addis King had been warned to produce the plumber who it was alleged had his place of business in Cranford, but he had neglected to comply with the request. The violation of the ordinance which provides for the issuance of a bond for plumbing work, was so evidently flagrant that Judge DeMeza imposed the full penalty provided for such cases.

King protested that he was doing the work for his father-in-law, A. Doty, and that he thought the plumbing license had been procured by Islip and Miller, of Cranford. He was unable or unwilling to explain why he continued to do the work after the Cranford firm had informed him that they had been unable to secure the necessary license.

CAR CRASHES INTO A TEAM OF HORSES

An accident which nearly proved disastrous to a fine team of horses belonging to Theodore Martin, the expressman, of East Third street, and to William Blake and C. B. Thompson, employes of Mr. Martin, who were driving the team, occurred last evening at 6:45 at the corner of Washington street and East Fifth. Just as a main line rolley car approached that corner, Thompson drove his team from Washington street onto the tracks and a collision resulted which threw the two horses and the men to the ground.

Fortunately for all concerned neither the men nor the horses sustained any broken bones, but all four were bruised so that they will be under the care of physicians for some time. Both horses were knocked down and under the fender of the trolley car while Blake and Thompson were thrown from their seats on the wagon. The wagon pole was shattered and the side board reduced to splinters by the impact.

It was impossible this morning to estimate the total amount of damage done to Mr. Martin's horses as that will depend upon the cost of rehabilitating them. The damage to the truck may be covered by $50.

As to who is responsible for the accident no one seems to be quite positive. The trolley car was 1936, in charge of Conductor No. 4712 and motorman Phillip Mulford.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF JOHN VENETTI HELD

The funeral of John Venetti, the young lineman who fell to his death from a pole at Lee place and Sixth street, an Washington's birthday, was held this morning in Cole's undertaking parlors on West Second street.

Rev. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, conducted the service in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends that overflowed the rooms. Delegations were present from Plainfield Aerie, F. O. E., and the local Electrical Workers Union, both of which contributed handsome floral pieces.

At the conclusion of Dr. Anderson's remarks, the Eagles assumed charge and conducted their ritual burial service, Worthy President Rudolph Kampf and Acting Worthy Chaplain Patrick W. Guinee occupied the stations. The body was afterward sent to Asbury Park for burial and a further service was held at the cemetery.

The pall bearers were selected from the Eagles and the Public Service electrical department employes and accompanied the body to the grave side. They were the following: Edward J. McCann, James Conway and Frank McCabe from the Eagles and Daniel J. Guniee, Charles Anderson and Joseph Marvin.

CONFERENCE WITH COUNCIL.

Van Emburgh and Kirk Go—Moy Also to Recommend That Corporation Counsel's Salary Be Cut to $1,200.

The Common Council meeting as a committee of the whole held a conference with Mayor G. W. V. Moy, last night, the latter being present upon invitation of the councilmen. Considerable time was taken up in discussing the appointment of a board of assessors, it being quite important that the board be named as soon as possible so that it may take up this year's work. The discussion finally resulted in a decision on the part of the Mayor to re-appoint H. C. Runyon assessor for the Fourth ward and Asa F. Randolph assessor for the Second ward. The other two members of the board, Messrs. H. C. VanEmburgh from the First ward and W. T. Kirk from the Third ward, will be dropped and in their places will be named Clarence B. LaRue for the First ward and George Edward Stillman for the Third ward. Both appointees are well-known here and have resided in this city for many years. Mr. LaRue is associated with his father, I. L. LaRue in the real estate business. Although a young man, he has had considerable experience in property matters and his judgment in such matters is said to be good. He is active in religious work in the city, especially in the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Local Union. He is a member of the Temple Baptist church, where he is also active.

George Edward Stillman, who resides on West Sixth street, has been a resident of this city for nearly a quarter of a century. During that time he has been employed at the Potter Press Works. At present he is superintendent of the pattern department. It is said that his judgment in real estate matters is good. The two men were selected after careful thought on the part of the Mayor.

There was also some discussion relative to the appointment of a corporation counsel, and it is likely that a name will be sent to the Council meeting Monday night. The Mayor suggested that the annual salary of the corporation counsel be $1,200 instead of $2,000 as before, and it is understood that the councilmen agreed with Mr. Moy on this point.

Nothing was said especially as to the appointment of a fifth member of the Board of Health to succeed Charles Dunham. The Mayor will take this matter up later; also the appointment of an overseer-of-the-poor to succeed A. D. Ayers. The council refused to confirm Mr. Moy's other appointees, LeRoy J. Ellis as a member of the Board of Health, and Rev. F. St. John Fitch as overseer-of-the-poor.

It is said that the conference resulted in a better understanding between the Mayor and councilmen and that it is possible that the officials will work more in harmony. The impression that the Mayor is simply a figure-head seems to be disappearing and the councilmen realize, it is said, that the Mayor has certain powers and rights in the conduct of the city government which must be recognized.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY HOLD AN ELECTION.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held its annual meeting at the home of Rev. Charles E. Nash, on West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon. These officers were elected: President, Miss Helen Armstrong; vice-presidents, Miss May S. Shreve and Mrs. Robin Brown; secretary, Miss Amy Conant; treasurer, Miss Caroline E. Demler.

Following the devotional service led by Mrs. Robin Brown, the reports of the secretary, Miss Conant and the treasurer, Miss Bessie Flanders, were read, the latter at this date being incomplete. A social hour followed the business meeting and refreshments were served. Miss Nash entertained her guests with piano selections.

Smoke But No. Fire.

The fire department received a still alarm at 7:12 last night for a supposed blaze at the home of Dr. Clawson on Park avenue. Passersby reported that smoke was issuing about all parts of the roof, but when the apparatus arrived no fire could be discovered. In the opinion of Chief Doane someone in the vicinity was lighting a furnace and the smoke settled down around Dr. Clawson's residence.

SKATERS DROWNED IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Bertha Schmidt, twenty-four years, of 69 Handy street, and Ida Benz, eighteen, of Commercial avenue, New Brunswick, were drowned last night when the thin ice on which they were skating on what is known as the State College farm, near the college grounds, gave way. The girls' two companions, Tom Cleary and Joseph Benz, brother of one of the drowned girls, were rescued and revived with difficulty. The accident has caused sadness in New Brunswick, where both girls were well known and social favorites.

The party left for the pond about 8 o'clock. The ice had been frozen solid except near a group of buildings on the outlying section of the college. Several hundred were enjoying the sport when a warning cry was heard.

The combined weight of the four had caused a coating of ice to give way, and soon all were floundering in the water, while scores of other skaters ran from the treacherous spot and gave a general alarm.

Benz managed to get back on solid ice and ran to New Brunswick, where his agonized cries to save his sister brought a score of volunteers. John Gibson and his son got a canoe and sent it out on the water. Chief Michael O'Connell, of the police department, and Coroner John C. Hubbard, after getting a long pole from one of the hook and ladder companies, hurried to the side of the pond in an automobile.

Faint cries directed them to Cleary and he was quickly hauled into the canoe. At first it was thought that he was dead, but heroic measures brought him to life in an hour. Then the men went about the pond in the canoe and the pole caught the Benz girl's dress and she was brought to the surface. The Schmidt girl's body was found a few minutes later.

The bodies of both girls were taken to their homes last night. Benz is almost insane over his sister's sad end.

WESTFIELD.

It would appear as if the troubles of the Westfield Board of Education in getting the new Second Ward School house built were not all over. It has been discovered that the paragraph on the ballots used at the last election describing the plot of land to be voted for did not properly describe the tract, but placed it on the opposite side of the street from where it was really located. The board is not going ahead with the work until this matter can be straightened out.

Funeral services of Mrs. Cornelia Hoffman were held Thursday afternoon at her late home on Mountain avenue. Mrs. Hoffman is survived by one son, Robert V. Hoffman, and her husband, Newton Hoffman.

CHARGED WITH ROBBING THE MAILS.

Charged with robbing the United States mail, Albert Kinnard, aged twenty-one years, who boards at 1117 Chestnut street, Elizabeth, William Critchley and John Higgins were arrested Wednesday. Kinnard confessed to Chief Tenney that they were implicated in the crime.

Last Saturday night a registered mail pouch from the Elizabeth postoffice was cut open and rifled of its contents, including three silver watches and one gold watch. The regular mail-carrier was off that night, and Kinnard, who is a friend of his, took his place. Although the postoffice is only five minutes' walk from the railroad station, it took Kinnard twenty-three minutes to make the trip, which gave him ample time to commit the robbery. His alleged confederates have often figured in the police courts. Critchley only recently was tried for burglary, but the jury failed to agree.

M'GRAW'S COLTS IN SECOND GAME.

Marlin, Tex., Feb. 25.—Manager McGraw gave his recruits another shuffle yesterday and the rearranged Marbleheads and Lignum Vitaes indulged in another spectacular six-round practise, the former again winning by a score of 7 to 4. The score was twice tied in the third inning, but in the fifth the Marbleheads chased four runs over the plate on a two-base hit made by a Marlin volunteer player, and a bad throw by Catcher Hartley.

Batting was practically even, but the Marbleheads profited most by the timely rapping and also put up a nearly perfect game in the field. The hitting by McKnight, Fullerton and Johnston featured the pastime. McKnight tore off a double and a triple, Fullerton and Johnston got a pair of long singles and Johnston contributed a home run.

The weather was so warm yesterday that the spectators were uncomfortable in the sun, but it was just right for the players, especially the pitchers, who cut loose for the first time with good speed and some curves. Umpire Hansell preserved excellent order, with the burley form of Sheriff Poole on the side lines to encourage him, and made a great hit with the crowd by announcing the different batteries.

Dick Rudolph, the boy from the Bronx, started off in the box for the Marbleheads, Raymond being the opposing pitcher. Rudolph threw nothing but straight ones, while Raymond tossed up spitballs frequently. The Lignum Vitaes made two runs in the first inning, McKnight leading off with a triple and Becker and Manush following with singles. Raymond was not scored on.

ODD GAME FOR THE NEW BRUNSWICK TEAM.

Members of the New Brunswick team, which is enjoying a big lead in the Elks' League, captured two games out of the three last night on the alleys of the Jersey City Elks. In the first game the Jersey City five accounted for a total of 1,010, winning easily. Here are the scores:

LIGHT DRILL FOR PRINCETON SQUAD.

Princeton, Feb. 25.—About forty men under the direction of Coach Bill Clarke, held preliminary baseball practise in the cage here yesterday afternoon. The pitching staff, consisting of Woodle, Greenbaum and Steve White, received special attention, and each spent some time serving up twisters for the batsmen to try their eyes on.

Most of the players, however, practised only lightly, with a veiw to regaining their familiarity with the sphere, and spent their time catching grounders and tossing the ball back and forth.

Pendelton, the football star, and shortstop on last year's freshman team, was out, as were Bard and Captain Sam White, both of last year's varsity nine.

RUSHES FLOUR TO CHINA.

10,000 Sacks of Gold Medal Flour Sent by Christian Herald.
(Special Correspondence.)

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 25.—Ten thousand sacks of Washburn-Crosby's Gold Medal Flour are now on their way to the relief of starving China. This gift is the equivalent of 850,000 loaves of bread and is the gift of the Christian Herald.

It took six cars to carry this immense consignment, and it is being rushed across the continent by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railways. At Seattle the sacks will be transferred to the United States Transport Buford and they will be carried to China at the government's expense.

The Christian Herald sent 40,000 sacks to China during another famine several years ago an on that occasion Gold Medal flour was also selected.

The Wise Judge.

The Complainant—You see, judge, I was a little too happy, as you might say, when I went home, and me wife was ironin'. We had had a word or two in th' mornin' an' so I steps up prepared to make peace. I said, "Let's forget th' quarrel—we were both wrong," when what does she do but shove the hot iron against me head.

The Judge—Trying to smooth it over, of course. You can't blame her for that. Go home, both of you.

BARNUM'S CIRCUS COMING HERE, BOYS

For the first time in fifteen years the management of the Barnum & Bailey circus have discovered that Plainfield is on the amusement map and will send the big tented enterprise to this city the coming spring. The first news of this fact, which will make the heart of the small boy leap to the seventh heaven of delight, was made today when agents came to town to make the preliminary contracts. The date selected for the appearance here is early in May, following the annual five weeks engagement in Madison Square Garden.

The Barnum circus was last seen in Plainfield in 1896 the tents being pitched at Second street and Johnson avenue. Since then it has frequently passed through the city over the Central, but never stopped off to delight young and old with its multitudinous attractions.

All sorts of reasons have been advanced for this "slight," but no one really knows why it was done. The show is now owned by the Ringling Brothers, who also own the big enterprise which bears their name, the Fourpaugh-Sells show and the Gollmar Brothers circus, which remains in the middle west. The Ringling anr Forepaugh-Sells have both made stands here within the past five years.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Afflicted with a tubercular condition which threatened the loss of her leg, and probably her life, Mrs. Robert Jaggard, wife of the steward of the Camden County Almshouse, suffered the amputation of her right leg above the ankle.

The Egg Harbor authorities are trying to locate the relatives of A. L. Robinson, aged sixty-four, a veteran of the Civil War, who died there several days ago. Robinson bought property in the suburbs and while arranging to improve it was stricken with apoplexy, from which he died.

Undergoing a third operation, which was deemed necessary to arrest the progress of blood poisoning, Dr. Edwin C. Towne, a resident physician at Cooper Hospital, Camden, was reported Thursday night to be still in a serious condition. The poison developed from contamination through an abrasion of the arm while the doctor was giving treatments in the hospital dispensary.

Paul Lemen, twenty-three years old, and Miss Reba C. Shultz, twenty-one years old, daughter of Richard Shultz, of 2635 South Fifteenth street, Philadelphia, had a nine hours' wait yesterday before they could get a marriage certificate. The city clerk in Camden and his two assistants could not be located. The couple went to Gloucester City and learned that City Clerk Charles F. West was away. They decided to wait for him. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. L. Rose, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church. The bridegroom is a son of a Methodist minister in Iowa.

SAYS DANCE HALLS ARE "CRYING EVIL."

Elizabeth, Feb. 25.—That the dance halls of this city are a "crying evil" and should be looked after was the statement in an address delivered yesterday afternoon to the Political Study Club, an organization composed of women, by Miss Button, who has been interested in organized charity movements in Columbus, O., and Buffalo, N. Y., and is visiting in this city.

Miss Button had been told of conditions here and expressed great surprise. In her address she advocated the extension of the social centre plan and the use of the public schools in the evening for healthful and uplifting recreation.

Mrs. W. J. Smith discussed "Pensions." Her paper referred to the abuse of the pension system, its need and usefulness, and the system in the United States was compared to that of Europe. A pension for all civil service employes and teachers as well was advocated.

Progress in the school suffrage amendment matter was reported. This is a proposed change in the election law which would give the women of the entire State the right to vote on school questions and school appropriations, but on these questions only. It is now in the hands of the School Investigating Commission, of which Senator Frelinghuysen is chairman. It was prepared by the department of education of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. C. U. Gilson is chairman. Mrs. Gilson is vice-president of the Political Study Club and presided at yesterday's session in the absence of Mrs. James Floy, who is in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Homan, of this city, have been visiting relatives at Raritan.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harden, of the borough, have been visiting relatives at South Branch.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weaner, of this city, have returned from a visit with relatives at Raritan.

The Sacrament of the Lord's supper will be observed at the First M. E. church, Sunday, March 5, with reception of members.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks were weak yesterday.

Baron Edmond de Rothchild's yacht, the Atmah, ran aground on the Cuban coast.

Troops sent out by General Navarro to attack the insurgent forces returned to Juarez.

Deputy Commissioner Flynn raided an alleged gambling house in West 45th street, New York.

A dispatch from Winnipeg said that Canada had decided to bar negro immigrants from the United States.

It was learned in Boston that Robert E. Davie, the boy banker, had been arrested in Rio de Janerio.

There was further rioting in the Theatre Francais over Bernstein's play "Apres Mol;" many arrests were made.

Theodore Roosevelt took a lost boy to a police police station in New York, where the youngster was restored to his parents.

The Cunarder Lustitania, which reached port a day late, reported the roughest weather ever encountered on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Three men were buried under a load of sand and stone and one of them was badly injured at the site of the Woolworth building, New York.

General T. Coleman du Pont, president of the duPont powder corporation, offered to give the State of Delaware without cost a highway 103 miles long, to cost in the neighborhood of $1,500,000.

It was learned at Albany that Assemblymen Seeley and Patrie had given notice that they were ready to drop Sheehan as a senatorial candidate; Sheehan's press bureau gave out a statement that the Buffalo man would withdraw in no circumstances.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's decision against the application of the railroads to increase freight rates, which caused a big slump in prices on the stock market, was deplored by many railroad heads in interviews, but bankers were not as pessimistic.

A bill designed to change the membership of the commission on new prisons, which has charge of the erection of the new state prison at Wingdale, to take the place of Sing Sing, was introduced at Albany by Assemblyman Foley, it provides that the three commissioners appointed by the Governor may be removed at his pleasure.

Congress.—Senate: In less than an hour the Senate adopted the Sutherland amendment to the resolution providing for election of Senators by direct vote, fixed next Tuesday as the time for voting on the resolution itself, made the case involving Senator Lorimer's seat the unfinished business and received the Canadian reciprocity bill from the Committee on Finance; in executive session the new treaty with Japan was ratified House: The sundry civil appropriation bill was considered.

BILLION TO RUN COUNTRY A YEAR.

Washington, Feb. 25.—They are talking of the appropriations in billion-dollar terms again this session. When March 4 arrives it will doubtless be found that the expenditures appropriated for and authorized have once more far transcended the billion-dollar mark.

History repeats itself and so does the story of the appropriations. At the beginning of each session there is heard anew the story of rigid economies to be effected and at the close of each session there is heard the story of how they have failed to be brought about. The course of the appropriations this session has been much similar to what it has been in preceding sessions.

The authorities on appropriations about the House and Senate have come to the conclusion that not much economy in the aggregate need be looked for this session. The course of the appropriations bills has been unusually slow, but those that have been passed have run along about even with those of last year. And last year the appropriations and authorizations together amounted to only a little less than $1,100,000,000. This year they will run somewhere over a billion.

Daniel VanWinkle, brother of former Mayor J. H. VanWinkle, of the borough, bookkeeper for A. B. Laing, is critically ill at his home, 28 Park place, with pleurisy and pneumonia. He was taken ill on Wednesday. A trained nurse is in charge and the relatives are doubtful of his recovery.

Gets Line on Postal Service.

Perth Amboy, Feb. 25.—Postmaster George H. Tice is making the rounds with the letter carriers in an effort to improve the service. He will spend a week with each member of the force. Local critics of the postmaster say that his method of studying the needs of the local office is one not used elsewhere. SOLILOQUIES OF A BENEDICT.

Strange how quickly one makes and forgets acquaintances in a railroad car.

When a girl gives a fellow almost every dance on her card it is a sure sign they are just engeged.

If she hasn't got a new gown, what's the use of asking her to go?

Too much theatre is worse than no theatre at all—especially when you have to do the flower, candy, etc., act each time.

Ever notice how proud a girl is when she is wearing someones else's hair?

Fine Musical Program.

Westfield, Feb. 25. — Charles Schutze, solo harpist; Miss Lottie Grimm, contralto, and Horace Britt, 'cellist, furnished the fourth musical program of entertainment in the Men's Club course in the First Presbyterian church here last night. The concert was of a high order and enjoyed by a large audience. The last entertainment will be held on March 24.

Mrs. Maria L. Acker.

Mrs. Maria L. Acker, widow of Henry C. Acker, died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Louise A. Campbell, 249 East Front street, after a short illness. She had been a resident here about two years Announcement of funeral will be made later.

O. T. Waring Much Improved.

Orville T. Waring, of Park avenue, who recently underwent a difficult operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, has improved to such an extent that he is now able to sit up and his complete recovery is expected within a short time.

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?
Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.
Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.
The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.
The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.
We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

ROYAL Baking Powder
Economy
The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.
Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.
Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.
Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.
The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

YOUNG WOMEN HOLD WASHINGTON SOCIAL

The members of the Young Women's Christian Association enjoyed a fine social last night, under the title of a Washington's Birthday party. The entertainment committee, with Mrs. Lewis Williams as chairman, was in charge.

In the fore part of the evening a shadowgraph pantomime was presented, the title being "The Modern and Mediaeval Ballad of Mary Jane." It was very funny and evoked lots of applause. The parts were taken as follows: "Mary Jane," Miss Fanny Beckwith; "Stalwart Benjamin," Miss Edith Hanaford; "Lord Mortimer," Miss Reba Kline; "Father of Mary," Miss Edith Weaver.

Following the shadowgraph the young women were divided into two groups for charade guessing, the "brown eyes," captained by Miss Edith Hanaford, and the "blue eyes" led by Miss Marion Brown. The "brown eyes" were victorious. This was followed by a cherry tree and hatchet game, the idea being to pin a cardboard hatchet on the branches. It created lots of merriment and when the last "blade" had been swung into place refreshments were served. The attendants voted it one of the most successful socials yet held at the association.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Scotch Plains, January 20, 1911

Mr. Davies, Clerk Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Dear Sir—Your communication in reference to Broad street bridge in Fanwood Township was read to the Township Committee at their meeting Friday evening, January 20, 1911, and by resolution offered by Mr. Walker, I am instructed to notify you that when work on said bridge is commenced by the Board of Freeholders the condition of roads at that point will be investigated by the Township Committee and the matter will receive their prompt consideration.

Yours Truly,
(Signed) ED. S. HAND,
Clerk.

On motion received and ordered filed.

February 1, 1911.

To the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—I submit to you the following communication I have received from the Grand Jury, which I thought you might care to have placed on your records.

The Grand Jury of Union county for the January term desires before its adjournment to make this record of its appreciation of the courtesy extended to it by the Sheriff, Robert J. Kirkland. His attendants have been efficient and sufficient. His official and personal services are remembered with much satisfaction. Under his guidance the jail has been visited in all of its parts, and the Grand Jury takes pleasure in bearing witness to the neatness of the cells, the good order of the halls, the proper condition of the buildings in general, together with the appearance and deportment of all those held in custody.

It is just to say that this speaks of the carefulness and efficiency of the warden, Mr. Dodd, and of the sympathetic assistance rendered by Mrs. Dodd. Both are commended for the excellent appearance of the jail, as for their earnest and intelligent administration of its internal affairs.

(Signed) CHARLES H. K. HALSEY,
ROBERT J. KIRKLAND,
Sheriff.

On motion received and ordered field.

CHARLES A. SMITH,
AARON D. CRANE,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
WILLIAM H. SWAIN,
BRADFORD JONES,
Committee.

Freeholder Pierson spoke about appropriations made for courts and repairs on county roads. He thought the amount appropriated for courts too much and questioned the legal right of the board to appropriate more than $17,500 for road repairs, although he knew $25,000 for road repairs was little enough. Freeholder Smith explained that the County Attorney had advised him that the board had legal authority to appropriate any sum necessary to keep roads in repair, that it would not be safe to appropriate less than $60,000 for courts, as expenditure chargeable to this account was completely out of the board's control. Freeholder Smith explained also the other items. After considerable discussion the report was adopted, all members voting in the affirmative excepting Freeholders Hennessy and Acken (2), Freeholder Krouse absent (1). Ayes—17.

Rahway, N. J., Jan. 4, 1911.

William R. Codington, Esq., Elizabeth:

Yours truly,
(Signed) HYER & ARMSTRONG,
By F. C. HYER.

Whereas said committee has made said investigation and would recommend a settlement of said claim for damages in full by the payment of seventy-five (75) dollars; therefore be it

Resolved, That the compensation of such engineer is hereby determined to be five per cent. (5%) of the cost of all construction and repair work on roads, bridges and culverts; further

Resolved, That hereafter the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County annually elect one County Engineer and that the salary of said engineer be $3,500 per annum, the same to be in lieu of all fees.

D. F. HENNESSY,

Director Cady declared the amendment not carried. After considerable discussion regarding fees and salaries paid engineers by other counties and the advisability of paying a fixed salary or 5 per cent. on the cost of work done, by Freeholders Wilbur, Meisel, Smith, Hennessy, Pierson and Acken, and after a motion made by Freeholder Pierson to lay the matter over to the next meeting was lost, the roll was called on the original resolution introduced by Freeholder Wilbur which resulted as follows: Ayes—Freeholders Cady, Crane, Darby, Doane, Gruener, Hall, Meisel, Perry, Randolph, Smith, Teller and Wilbur—12. Nays—Freeholders Acken, Fay, Bourdon Hennessy, Jones, Pierson, and Swain—7.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Plainfield.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that helps sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Plainfield woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Earnest Dorflinfier, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I hold just as high an opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills today as I have for years. The cure they made in my case has been permanent and consequently I am glad to conform my former testimonial." (Statement given January 19, 1911).

On August 28, 1905, Mrs. Dorflinger gave the following account of her experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. "The first symptom of kidney trouble in my case was a dull, heavy pain in my back and head. This was followed by a tired, languid feeling and I knew that my kidneys were gradually giving out. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised an dgetting a box at Randolph's Pharmacy, I began their use. Before long my condition improved and I continued taking Doan's Kidney Pills until I was cured."

Maude Adams in "Chantecler" at the Kinckerbocker is doing the most phenomenal business that has been done by any attraction since "Peter Pan," according to a statement given out by Charles Frohman last week. Though three weeks after its opening the advance sale amounted to $67,000. Her company now boasts of having two dramatists, Robert Carter, who wrote "The Deserter," and Helen Kraft, who has just sold a four-act farce-comedy to Witmark's. Oddly; they play the roles of the two Turkeys in Rostand's barnyard drama.

Miss Barrymore tried a novel method of rehearsing her new play, "The Twelve Pound ($60) Look," by James M. Barrie, now at the Empire, which was so successful that Charles Frohman and the managers who watched her anonunced that they would follow her plan in all of their productions. Miss Barrymore worked on the principle that a play well produced appeals equally to the eye and the ear and endeavored to test the effect on each separately.

Miss Christine Nielson, who is to alternate with Louise Gunning in singing the title role of "The Balkan Princess," at the Herald Square theatre, appeared in the role for the first time in New York city at the special Lincoln's Birthday matinee. Miss Nielson is to sing at all the regular Wednesday matinees and also at the special holiday afternoon performances throughout the engagement.

CHAPTER XIII.

A PASSING VISION.

"For God's sake," he said, "tell me exactly what has happened."

"The first we knew of anything being wrong," said Nora slowly, "was when I went to Miss Fitzgerald's room and found that both she and her maid had gone. On the dressing table I found a note for Lady Roscommon. I handed it to her, and she took it very badly."

"I suppose she said in that note that she and I were going to be married?"

"Yes; at least I understood from my lady that it was you she was going off with."

"But I asked her to meet me at the Holyhead boat this evening, and she was not there, and she wasn't on board the boat. Besides, if she had meant to come with me there would have been no necessity for her leaving the hotel before the afternoon."

"It is very strange," murmured Nora. "The hotel porter said that Miss Fitzgerald and Virginie went out together a few minutes before 8."

"I sent Miss Fitzgerald a telegram yesterday about half past 12. It would arrive about half past 1 or 2 by Dublin time. I will see whether it was delivered."

He went to the clerk's office and satisfied himself that his telegram had been delivered a few minutes after 2. And in that telegram Guy had given full directions as to the time and place of meeting in Kingstown.

When he got back to the waiting room Nora had gone, and he supposed that her mistress had sent for her. He was right. In a few minutes she came back, saying that Lady Roscommon wished to see him. Guy bit his lip. He had hoped to keep his presence in Dublin a secret from Eva's mother, at least for the present. But he felt that he had no alternative but to obey the summons.

"What have you done with my daughter, sir?" was the demand that greeted him.

"I have not seen Miss Fitzgerald for more than three months," he answered quietly.

"Can you deny that you asked her to run off with you?"

"I do not deny it for a moment. But she was not at the place I appointed for our meeting, and, what is more, she left the hotel eight hours before it would have been necessary for her to do so if she had meant to meet me."

"You incite my daughter to elope with you, and then you say you know nothing about her. And you ask me to believe you!"

"I do. Who ever heard of a man who had eloped with a girl coming to her home to inquire what had become of her?"

"Such creatures as you should be flogged."

"We were to have been married tomorrow," he went on without noticing her interruption.

"And I say I don't believe it."

"I have the marriage certificate in my pocket at this moment."

"Show it to me."

He took it out and handed it to her. Suddenly, before Guy could stretch out a hand to prevent her, she had torn it across and across, and, throwing it to the ground, she put her foot on it.

"Have you communicated with the police?" he asked.

"That is no business of yours," was the reply.

"I shall make it my business," Guy said quietly.

Lady Roscommon glared at him, but made no answer.

"And I trust," he added, "that you will put me right in the eyes of Lord Roscommon."

"Lord Roscommon need know nothing about you," said the lady, with superb disdain. "Since it seems that after all you have had nothing to do actually with the foolish child's escapade, you and your proceedings cease to be of any interest to us."

Guy bowed. "I am well content that it should be so," he said, "and if I should be so fortunate as to find your daughter I will let you know of it at once."

"What is necessary to be done will be done without any reference to you," said Lady Roscommon. "Your help and your criticism are not wanted."

"That may be, and I shall trouble you with neither. But I shall make it my business to find Miss Fitzgerald"—

"Have I not told you that your meddling is not wanted? What business is it of yours?"

Guy looked at the lady with eyes as resolute as her own.

"I think that question requires no answer," he said quietly. "It is enough for the present that I shall make it my business and that until I have succeeded I shall do nothing else."

Lady Roscommon said nothing, but turned her back on him, making a gesture of dismissal.

Guy kept his promise. After getting from Nora a description of Eva's costume and that of her maid he went to the head office of the police and gave information.

The inspector finished entering the particulars in his big book and then asked, "What relation are you, sir, of the young lady?"

"None," said Guy. "I am an English barrister. I was to have been married to Miss Fitzgerald tomorrow morning."

The inspector looked curiously at Guy, and no wonder, but he said nothing, except that the police would make inquiries and let him know the result. It was poor comfort, but what else could he expect?

He next went to the railway station and began to make inquiries on his own account, but it was all to no purpose.

He next tried the wharfs at Kingstown, the car men, the very tramway conductors, but nowhere could he find a trace of the missing girl. The only gleam of hope that came to him was afforded by a little ragged urchin, who said he had carried a bag for a lady, a young lady, who had another young lady for her companion. They had no other luggage, and they went on board the Liverpool steamer about 9 in the morning. The Liverpool steamer, Guy ascertained, was a sort of tramp steamer between Dublin and Liverpool, carrying goods and passengers. It was not an aristocratic route and might well therefore be chosen by those who were anxious to avoid recognition.

It was a very poor clew, scarcely worth calling a clew at all, but it was better than nothing. Guy gave the urchin half a crown and went to Liverpool by steamer on Monday after making inquiries as usual at the hotel to make sure that Eva had not returned. At Liverpool what little clew there was completely disappeared. No one remembered the two passengers by Friday's boat after whom Guy was inquiring so persistently unless it might be the stewardess of the steamer that had crossed on Friday, who "rather thought she remembered two ladies as might be them you was looking for, sir." But as she could not in the least say what had become of them after the boat reached the landing stage her information was of no great value.

With the perseverance of despair Guy searched Liverpool as he had done Dublin, going everywhere—hotels, railway stations, ferryboats, cab stands—and putting questions to all who would stay to listen to him. All in vain.

At last, half dead with fatigue, heart sick and hopeless, he made his way back to London. One of the first men who came to his chambers after his return was Foscombe. Guy had already made him acquainted with the fact that the girl he had hoped would be his bride had mysteriously disappeared, and his first question was, "Any news?"

Guy shook his head.

"It is very strange!"

"It is monstrous—incredible! Foscombe, at first I laughed at the idea of foul play, but now I fear—I fear I know not what. There must have been foul play of some kind."

"But you forget—Miss Fitzgerald was not alone."

"True; but her maid may have been got rid of as well. Who knows?"

"Come—that is most unlikely," said the other, with a smile.

"True. But then what could be more unlikely than that Eva herself should disappear as she has done? What I feel sure of is that if she had been alive she would have written to me long ago."

Foscombe sighed. "It seems to me too soon to give up hope," he said. The effect was the same as if he had said, "Yes, I fear she must be dead." It was evident that the lawyer took what might be called a common sense view of the affair, and the effect of what he said was to quench the last ray of hope in Guy's mind.

It was on the second day of his return to town that he was crossing the Strand near Charing Cross, about 4 in the afternoon, when he suddenly stood still, staring like a man who has seen the solid earth gape under his feet. His heart seemed to stop and the next moment to gallop like a mad thing. He was trembling in every limb, rooted to the ground with amazement. He had caught a glimpse of two faces in a hansom cab as it whirled by him, or, rather, of one face and the profile of another. The profile was that of a man. He had turned toward his companion and was bending over her in a tender, protecting way, so that his profile only was visible. The girl—was Eva!

For one instant he stood still, literally motionless with astonishment. The next instant he lost sight of her. He darted forward in pursuit of the hansom.

Foot passengers shrank aside when they saw the expression in his face; bus drivers shouted hoarsely at him as he darted across their paths, so near that it seemed as if he must be struck by the pole; hansom cab men yelled out oaths and pulled their horses back upon their haunches lest they should run him down. Guy paid no heed to any of them. A policeman who tried to stop him failed, for he ran to one side and was past the man in uniform before he could turn round. The hansom was going fast. Guy went faster. He had never once taken his eyes off it.

That was the reason that he did not see a light van coming down Cockspur street at breakneck speed. The van driver, when he saw Guy, shouted at him, but made no attempt to check the speed of his horse. And Guy heard, it may be, with his ears of sense, but the meaning of the cries never entered his brain.

The horse was on him before he had time to swerve aside. It struck him down, and the wheels of the van passed over him.

The next moment one policeman had his heavy hand on the van horse's reins, while two others were stopping the traffic and keeping back the crowd. Guy was lying in the roadway, a great wound gaping on his temple, where the horse's hoof had struck him, and his white face streaked with blood. Meanwhile the hansom and its occupants had vanished.

CHAPTER XIV.

A RASH PROMISE.

The disappearance of Eva Fitzgerald created no sensation, for it was kept a profound secret. It was given out that she was visiting friends in London.

But none the less Lady Roscommon was untiring in her efforts to find her daughter. She engaged a small army of private detectives and paid them lavishly. She was not, however, devoured by anxiety. She believed that the girl had left home in order to avoid the unpleasant necessity of refusing to marry Sir Rufus Deveril. Her insolent conduct to Guy had been something more than mere haughtiness. It had been inspired by the hope that if she insulted him sufficiently he would be deterred from holding any communication with Lord Roscommon. In this, as she believed, she had been successful, and she tried to persuade her husband that it was a mere girlish freak on Eva's part and that when she was tired of her liberty she would find her way back again.

This did not satisfy the viscount, but he felt completely helpless. The only thing he could think of beyond what his wife had already done was to telegraph to Terence to come home at once. But Terence, when he came, was as astounded, as incapable of guessing at the reason of Eva's sudden disappearance, as his father had been. Their common sorrow drew father and son closer together than they had been for years.

As a rule, Terence avoided meeting Nora, but it was impossible to be long in the house without encountering her sometimes, either in his mother's room or in the staircases or passages.

One afternoon as they unexpectedly faced each other in one of the corridors Terence put out his hand as if to stay her. She stopped instantly and gave him a reproachful look out of her splendid eyes.

"For heaven's sake, don't look at me like that, Nora!" he said in a voice low with suppressed feeling. "If you only knew what it costs me to see you go by like a ghost and never utter a word to you! Is there any reason why you should not give me a pleasant look now and again?"

The girl had dropped her eyes; now she lifted them again to his face.

"There is every reason," she said in a tone so low that he could scarcely catch what she said.

For a moment or two he gazed at her without speaking, then exclaiming "God help me, I can stand this no longer!" he rushed past her and ran downstairs, leaving the girl trembling and shaking where he had stopped her. To Nora it seemed as if he had gone to Lady Roscommon's boudoir, but she must, she thought, have been mistaken. An hour later, however, she was sent for by her mistress, and as soon as she entered the room she knew that her ears had not deceived her. Terence had been with his mother.

Lady Roscommon was striding up and down the floor, her hands tightly clasped behind her, a look of stern resolution on her face.

"Shut the door," she said and resumed her walk, saying nothing further for perhaps a minute. Then she stopped opposite the girl and said abruptly in a voice that sounded at once cold and harsh, "So you fancy yourself in love with my son?"

"It is not fair, my lady, to put it in that way," said Nora, with spirit.

"Or he fancies himself in love with you. It is much the same thing. He has been making love to you, hasn't he?"

"He asked me to marry him."

"Asked you to marry him? Upon my word, my young lady, you take it mighty coolly! And you told him that your heart was all his own, but that circumstances"—

"No, my lady," Nora burst in indignantly. "I said nothing about loving him. I only said we could never be married."

"Why?"

Nora was silent.

"Of course there are a thousand reasons against such a match," went on the lady, "but I want to know what you think."

Still no response.

"You believe that after a time the earl's opposition to such a marriage, and mine, must die away; that in time you will step into my shoes?"

"No, my lady; that is not in my mind."

The quiet self respect of the girl's tone had its effect even on the imperious woman to whom she was speaking. It was in a perceptibly softer tone that Lady Roscommon said:

"You think that some day he will marry you?"

"No, my lady, I do not. If he were ever so willing I could not marry him."

The lady gave a little laugh of incredulity.

"Why?" she asked again.

"If he has not told you, my lady, I can't," said the girl in a voice that was scarcely audible.

"Are you willing to promise that you will give him up—that you will never marry my son?"

"There is no need for me to promise. It can never take place. There is a wall between us that can never be broken down."

"Upon my word, miss, you give yourself pretty airs!"

"Forgive me, my lady. I did not mean to—to be presuming."

"Never mind. Let us stick to the point. You say you cannot marry Captain Fitzgerald?"

"Never, my lady!"

"Not if he were to ask you again?"

"Not if he were to ask me a thousand times!"

"Not even if the earl were to give his consent to the marriage?"

"Not even then. It would make no difference to me. I will promise you that if you like."

An Editorial

From the Jersey City Journal.

The Prudential Insurance Company is one of the marvels of business. Within the business life of John F. Dryden, who created the concern, it has grown to a Colossus, and it keeps increasing. Its assets at the last examination exceeded $200,000,000, and it had over $1,703,000,000 of insurance in force.

It pays death claims in excess of $50 000 a working day and never contests a claim unless fraud is apparent. The State examination showed that the Company's own appraisement was one million dollars below that of the official appraisers, a rare evidence of conservatism.

THE PRUDENTIAL IS NOT ONLY THE BIGGEST THING IN NEW JERSEY—IT IS ONE OF THE BIGGEST ENTERPRISES IN THE COUNTRY.

CITY HIGH DEFEATS THE BOROUGH HIGH

Only one point separated the North Plainfield High School team from the P. H. S. five at the conclusion of their last game of the season in the Y. M. C. A. gym yesterday afternoon, the final score being 34 to 33 in favor of the locals. Although Plainfield High clinched the interscholastic championship two weeks ago by defeating the boroughties, the interest in the game yesterday was not with abated.

For the first time the local boys have won the entire series of three games, but none of the series has been so closely contested as that of yesterday. The lead of one point gained by P. H. S. in the first half when the score ended at 16 to 15, was maintained until the end, both teams scoring an equal number of points. "Curley" Taylor, of the borough team, almost caused a panic by throwing four baskets in succession shortly after the game begun, but the locals quickly recovered and Manley and Ricketts began to get their eyes on the basket with the result that the score was soon tied and eventually passed.

It was nip and tuck from then on to the end when nearing the time limit Plainfield was one point behind. Just in the nick of time and a few seconds before the whistle blew that tne winning goal was made. The excitement attending this game was as intense as any seen in the gymnasium this season. The borough boys were defeated, but not by any means disgraced. C. Taylor and Stein starred for North Plainfield while Ricketts, Karr and Manley did yeoman work for P. H. S. The lineup :Plainfield—Manley, Ricketts, forwards; Widoson, center; Karr, Zerega, guards. North Plainfield—Stein, C. Taylor, forwards; Bailey, center; Townley, B. Taylor and Abrams, guards. Referee, Witaker; timers, Ulrich and Jackson; scorers, Ball and Clarke.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"The Girl in the Taxi," the laughing success of the present era is announced to appear at the Plainfield theatre for an engagement on Monday night. This is the play which created such a sensation in Paris and upon its production in this country scored the greatest success and achieved the longest run of any play of similar nature in New York, Chicago and Boston. Mirth and merriment holds the reins and drives with reckless pace over the hils and dales of side-splitting complications from curtain to curtain. "The Girl in the Taxi," may truthfully be said to defy every speed law, and to drive along at high speed with no regard for stop-watches or brakes. A cast of unusual excellence presents the play, and no expense has been spared in the costly production. Singing, dancing and musical specialties, interpolated throughout the piece, make of it the most delightful and diverting entertainment ever presented on the local boards. Not to have seen "The Girl in the Taxi," is to have missed the biggest laugh-producer the theatre will ever offer.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbough, of Bayonne, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Gilbough, to Jared Shotwell Kenyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Kenyon, of West Seventh street. Miss Gilbough is prominent in society affairs at Bayonne. Mr. Kenyon is associated with his father in the engineering department of the Singer Sewing Machine company, at Elizabethport. No date has been set for the wedding.

Brotherhood Meeting.

The Brotherhood of the First M. E. church held one of the most enthusiastic meetings in its history in Vincent chapel, last night. There were about forty men present and all entered heartily into the discussion of plans to increase the interest in men's work in the church. Eight new members were elected. After the business a social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

Mr. Ulrich died on February 8, and the check was received seven days from the mailing of the proof of death from this city.

Plainfield vs. Red Bank.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will meet the Red Bank team on the local court this evening, and the Plainfielders are expecting a hard game. The Red Bank five, it is said, is one of the strongest aggregations in the State with a long string of victories and no doubt the local team will have to extend itself to win. There will be a preliminary game between the Ajax and another local five.

"The Money Spinner," Tonight.

"The Money Spinner," a two act comedy by Pinero, will be presented at the Park Club, this evening, by the Park Comedy Club. The cast is an excellent one and the individual members have attained a proficiency which is sure to result in a finished performance. Early in the spring the club will give a play for the benefit of the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

Laughing Show at Proctor's.

For a real hearty laugh Blount Brothers appearing at Proctor's theatre, will provide it. They are real live comedians. Van and Davis, eccentric comedian and charming soubrette, are clever. Eddie Foyer is a polie entertainer. "The Deluge," a melodrama in three scenes, completes the bill.

LOWLY NAZARENE

Topic of Memorable Sermon by Rev. Charles Fiske at Grace P. E.

CHURCH EDIFICE WAS FILLED.

Throngs Eager to Listen to Simple Exposition of Gospel—End of Mission Finds Community Aroused.

The services yesterday in Grace Episcopal church closed one of the most memorable events in the history of that church and impressed the largest congregations ever gathered in the sacred edifice with the importance and necessity of seeking the salvation offered by Jesus Christ by an immediate acceptation of it as it is offered today and every day. Rev. Charles Fiske, of Baltimore, Md., who has conducted the services during the week just passed, indellibly imprinted upon the minds of his hearers both morning and afternoon the truths of the Gospel as testified to by the saints of every generation since Christ came to earth.

At the morning service yesterday Rev. Mr. Fiske took for his text Luke 18-37: "And they told him Jesus of Nazareth passeth by." Like all his other sermons this was one in which the very simplicity of the message made it impressive. Mr. Fiske showed that the same oportunity which was then offered to his hearers by Jesus was open to acceptance by those who now were outside the pale of salvation. It was an opportunity which should be not only accepted, but sought after. "Your opportunity," he said, "is here and now. Lent is before you and it may be your last.

Philippians 3-8 furnished the text for the afternoon sermon at which upward of 1,100 people were present. "I have suffered the loss of all things and count them but dung (interpreted as the filth of the street) that I may win Christ." By this Mr Fiske suggested the knowing, intimately, of the Saviour. He said: "You can know about men because you hear about them, but you may never know them really." You may know about Christ, but never know Him intimately at all. St. Paul had never seen Jesus in the flesh, but no one can truthfully say that he did not know Jesus and intimately, too. St. Paul was Jesus' friend and it was his great purpose in life to increase that knowledge and intimacy.'

"St. Paul accomplished his intimacy with Jesus through great sacrifice, which was one of his characteristic features. He actually gave up everything, wealth, position, health, liberty and the love of his fellowmen—St. Paul was the best hated man in all Palestine. But he was rich and happy in his great sacriefice. He had gained all by this course and that is yours today—your chance to submit yourselves utterly to Jesus.

"To be anything in this parish today it is obviously necessary that religion mold your ways. There must be an awakening to your privileges and a responding to your opportunities such as you have never before felt. Your ultimate triumph will be great and your Father which is in heaven will seem to you nearer and dearer and more a personal Comforter."

On Saturday evening the church was filled with an attentive congregation, not alone with communicants from the parish, but with members of other denominations, Mayor Geo. W. V. Moy being among the earnest listeners to Mr. Fiske's beautiful sermon on "Preparation for the Corporate Communion for Thanksgiving." This service was preceded by a service of song in which the congregation joined heartily. Mr. Fiske said that there were two aspects of the Holy Comunion, first, as a memorial and second as a corporate worship, here as well as in Paradise. He said that we are only in separate rooms while spending the time between now and eternity, but that our interests ought to be one. He took the chancel window as an object lesson, pointing out how the light shone through from the outside radiating from the lamb down through the saints and finally reaching the people of earth with the radiance disseminated by Christ. He concluded with a very searching questioning of the conscience with regard to the worshipper toward the Ten Commandments. He read each one of the commandments and asked questions as to the every-day application of them. It was an unusual and convincing service.

There is no doubt as to the effectiveness and far reaching influence the week's services have had and will continue to exercise throughout the lives of those who attended them. Great congregations in the height of the social season show conclusively the attitude of the people toward the real, live and sincere awakening that has taken place. It will be impossible for any of the people to forget the lessons taught by Rev. Mr. Fiske.

HIGH SCHOOL'S FIVE MEETS WITH DEFEAT

Weakened by the absence of several of her star players, the Plainfield High School basketball team suffered defeat at the hands of Glen Ridge High at the local High School gymnasium, Saturday afternoon, the score being 32 to 26 after a hard fought battle.

The first half disclosed the weakness of the locals, but they did not acknowledge defeat until the last whistle was blown at the end of the game. Ricketts played a splendid and consistent game for the locals, while Bartholomew and Whitney did a like service for the visitors.

The referee was C. R. Bostwick and the timer Ulrich.

SNOWBALLED PAIR WERE COMPLAINANTS

Half a dozen youngsters ranging in age from ten to twelve years, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with snowballing John Sanderson, of Woodland avenue, and E. M. Schorb, of West Front street, yesterday at the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street. It was alleged that these same boys had struck Judge William A. Coddington with a snowball while he was walking toward Fourth street on Park avenue.

Schorb acted as spokesman in the city court this morning telling how badly he felt when through a misstep while chasing the boys he fell into the mud on Fifth street, spoiling his clothes and losing his dignity and temper. Some of the little fellows spoke up and said that they were not altogether to blame as Schorb and his companion had retaliated when the fun began.

Judge DeMeza discharged the boys with a warning. Judge Coddington did not appear.

ENSIGN VAN AUKEN WEDS MISS RUNYON

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Field Runyon, of 335 East Sixth street, a charming wedding took place Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Anna Louise Runyon, became the wife of Ensign Frederic Tabor VanAuken, son of Mrs. Francis K. VanAuken, of New York city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The bride was gowned in white satin and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and orchids. She was attended by her sister, Miss Margaretta Cruikshank Runyon, as maid-of-honor, gowned in pink marquisette over pink satin, and by the groom's sister, Miss Maude VanAuken, as bridesmaid, gowned in green marquisette over white satin. Ensign Francis Warren Rockwell was the best man.

The house was attractively decorated with palms, ferns and roses. The bridal party passed up an aisle formed by ropes of smilax held by twelve friends of the bride and the couple was married before a background of palms and a large American flag.

Mr. and Mrs. VanAuken will live in Boston for the present, where the groom is attached to the United States Cruiser Des Moines.

DR. EDWARD J. WHEELER WEDDED MRS. DUDLEY.

Mrs. Luella French Dudley, widow of the late Darwin E. Dudley, of Boston, who was formerly Luella R. French, of West Seventh street, was married Saturday afternoon to Dr. Edward J. Wheeler, of Albany, N. Y. The marriage took place at the old French Homestead on Somerset street, in the presence of the near relatives.

Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, of this city, an uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony. After an informal reception the couple left on a wedding trip through the south.

The groom is chief chemist for the New York State Department of Agriculture, with headquarters at Albany. The bride is well known here. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John French, and a sister to Edward V. French, the architect of this city.

Annual Missionary Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church will be held Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The address will be made by Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Hall, of Union Theological Seminary. The offering will be appropriated to the school in Cuba and work among the foreigners. Tea will be served at 5 o'clock.

RENDERED ELIJAH

Cresent Avenue Church Quartet Superbly Sang Parts of Oratorio.

LARGE CONGREGATION EDIFIED

Preceding the Choir's Numbers, Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie Gave An Address On "The Test of "Elijah."

In the light of past performances it is not to be wondered at that the quartet choir of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church drew a large congregation last evening. Many who were prevented, because of bad weather, from hearing the quartet a month ago when selections from Rosini's Stabat Mater were sung, improved the opportunity of listening last night to parts of Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah," and went away satisfied with the music, but sorry they had missed the other.

There is no question as to the ability of the singers under Organist Alexander Russell to give a good account of themselves, under any circumstances, but given the inspiration of an appreciative and numerous audience, there appears to be no limit to their capabilities.

The music of Mendelssohn is never easy to sing and "Elijah" is not one of the simplest of compositions, yet it was rendered with consummate ease and freedom from flaw and with such volume of tone as to excite the admiration of everybody. Owing to Mr. Pilcher's absence, Harry Hepner, tenor soloist of the Portuguese Temple, in New York, sang the recitative and aria, "If With All Your Hearts," giving a fine example of cultured singing, and repeating his success in the shorter recitative later.

Miss Lillian V. Watt, soprano, excelled herself in the aria, "Hear Ye, Israel." Seldom has Miss Watt been in better voice. The aria demands a high, clear and sweet delivery to be effective and the requirements were fully met by this singer. Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto, sang with magnificent effect the arioso, "Woe Unto Them That Forsake Him." Miss Carroll's diction was perfect and such clear and pure enunciation is deserving of the highest praise. The purity and fullness of her tones throughout the aria seemed to be felt by every person present.

Of A. E. Betteridge, baritone, upon whom a large share of the evening's work devolved, sang with expression beyond criticism. It is not saying too much to declare that Mr. Betteridge never sang better; particularly effective was his rendition of the aria, "It Is Enough, O Lord." The solo requires a wide range of voice and considerable power. The singer had both and used them with discretion. Miss Elsie Goddard, assisted in a trio for female voices, unaccompanied, "Lift Thine Eyes to the Mountains," which was beautifully sung.

Organist Alexander Russell was equal to the difficult music of the program and played with keen appreciation Guilmant's "March Religieuse," for a prelude and a Grand Chorus in D by the same author.

Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, the minister of the church, gave a brief address on "The Test of Elijah" preceding the musical service.

CORNER STONE LAYING EBENEZER BAPTIST CHURCH.

The corner stone of the new Ebenezer Baptist church will be laid Sunday, March 5, with an interesting program, under the direction of Rev. G. E. Scruggs, pastor. Those who will assist include Rev. G. Jones, Jersey City; 2:30 p. m., address, "Needs of Our People," Dr. Lawson, of this city; 2:30 p. m., sermon, Rev. Dr. Vaughn, of Mt. Olive Baptist church; 4:30, corner stone laying; 7 p. m., address, "Organization," Dr. J. C. Anderson, of this city; 8 p. m., ermon, Rev. T. E. Johnson, Calvary Baptist church, Hopewell. DANIEL VAN WINKLE DIES IN 67TH YEAR

Daniel VanWinkle, for many years a well known citizen of the borough, died Saturday afternoon at his home, 28 Park place, after an illness of a few days with pneumonia and pleurisy, which began with a cold on Wednesday. His condition became serious at once and despite all medical aid he failed rapidly, his constitution being unable to withstand the diseases. He was sixty-six years of age.

Mr. VanWinkle was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel G. VanWinkle, and was born at Bergen Hill, Jersey City. He removed to Newton, now known as Randolphville, where he lived for nineteen years. From Newtown he went to the borough.

Soon after coming to Plainfield Mr. VanWinkle was associated with Mulford Estil in the harness business. Afterwards he took a responsible position with the long since dissolved clothing firm of Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., remaining there for a number of years. During the past six years he held the position of bookkeeper for the Laing Auto Machine and Repair Company.

Mr. VanWinkle possessed a strong Christian character. For many years he was a member of Trinity Reformed church, where he held the position of clerk and was a member of the Consistory. He was a teacher in the Sunday school and was also very active in the Christian Endeavor Society, being president at one time. He was admired by all who knew him for his many excellent qualities and it has been said of him that he never had an enemy. A number of years ago he left Trinity Reformed church, uniting with the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church by letter. He retained his interest in religious affairs to the last. He is survived by three brothers, John H. VanWinkle, Jacob R. VanWinkle and William H. VanWinkle; also a number of nieces and nephews.

Owing to the fact that his sister-in-law, Mrs. William H. VanWinkle, with whom he lived is quite ill, private funeral services will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, will have charge and the burial will be in North Plainfield cemetery.

MR. FOWLER MUST PAY PRINTING BILL

Washington, D. C., Feb. 27.—No member of Congress should be allowed to owe money to the government for an indefinite period, in the opinion of the House. Without a dissenting voice provision was made yesterday for deducting from the monthly salaries of Senators and Representatives any money owing to the Government Printing Office. It is an open secret that this action was taken to reach the case of Representative Charles N. Fowler, the Republican insurgent from Elizabeth, N. J., who has had an impaired account of $437.50 with that office since last summer.

Toward the close of the last session Mr. Fowler, who has been bitter at Speaker Cannon since the Speaker declined to reappoint him as chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee two years ago, delivered a long tirade on the subject. The harsh things he said about the Speaker were almost without end.

A little while later he asked "Andy" Smith, who attends to such matters for members, to have a big batch of the speeches printed for distribution to his constituents and others. The bill came to $437.50. Ever since that time the public printer, Mr. Donnelly has been calling in vain on Mr. Smith, and Mr. Smith on Mr. Fowler for the money.

Representative Cooper, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the printing committee, offered the amendment yesterday to the Sundry Civil bill which will reach the case and prevent Mr. Smith from paying the money out of his pocket.

Mr. Fowler is now in Washington. He is a "lame duck," and it will be necessary to withhold payment upon a part of his last month's salary.

Lottie Gets Sixty Days.

Lottie Copeland couldn't keep good for a whole week so this morning Judge DeMeza sent her to the county jail for a term of sixty days. William Johnson, her companion in the little spree, was fined $3 which was paid. Both people are colored. Lottie lives in New Brunswick.

COMEDY PRODUCED

Pinero's "The Money Spinner" Amuses the Park Club's Members.

AMATEURS MAKE A BIG HIT.

Walter M. McGee Scores as "Baron Croodle," as Does William T. Pelletier as "Jules Faubert"—Dance Follows.

"The Money Spinner," Arthur W. Pinero's strong two-act comedy, was presented at the Park Club, Saturday evening by the Park Comedy Club, before a capacity audience and incidentally the comedy club won fresh laurels in amateur theatricals. The cast, while not a large one, was selected with great care and each member interpreted his or her role in a finished manner. "The Money Spinner," is considered by many as one of Pinero's best comedies and during the two acts the audience was generous in its applause of the clever work of the cast.

Perhaps, the chief honors of the evening were due Walter M. McGee, who took the part of "Baron Croodle," the gambler. He was typical in the role and convulsed everyone with laughter by his antics. He make-up was so good that it was difficult for even his best friends to recognize him. Much honor is also due William T. Pelletier as "Jules Faubert." His acting was a delight, it being so true to the character.

The very difficult roles of "Millicent Boycott" and "Harold Boycott," assigned to Mr. and Mrs. Alson M. Abbott left nothing to be desired in their interpretation. Especially good was Mrs. Abbott in the second act, while engaged in a game of cards with "Lord Kengussie," John P. Myers, who by the way, made one of the hits of the evening. He was perfectly natural in the part, winning frequent applause. Miss Eva Brown, as "Dorinda Croodle," sister of "Millicent Boycott," filled her part exceedingly well. Her care-free manner as the daughter of a gambler gave evidence of her talent which she made good use of throughout the play.

The work of Mrs. Francis E. DuBois, as "Margot," the French maid, was one of the best presentations of such a role witnessed here in a long time. Mrs. DuBois was so natural in her part that every time she appeared on the stage she provoked hearty applause either through her French actions or clever speech. The entire cast was uniformly excellent and at the conclusion of the play, the women members were showered with beautiful bouquets of flowers. Prior to and during the intermission there was violin and piano music and following the play many of the younger folks remained to enjoy a dance.

QUARTET FIGURE IN A DRUNKEN BRAWL

Albert Gaub, of 248 East Fourth street, owned up to being the cause of a drunken brawl at his address yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock and gallantly paid the fines of three companions as well as his own when the court imposed the sentence of $5 or twenty days in jail each. Annie Nelson, Charles Hanson and his wife were the other three and beer was the immediate cause of the disturbance.

From the story of Patrolman O'Keefe, who with Patrolman Baeder made the arrests, there was a disturbance earlier in the day. Mrs. Hansen notified headquarters and the two patrolmen were sent to the house with the patrol wagon.

They had hardly arrived on the scene when Mrs. Hanson let fly with her hand catching Miss Nelson across the cheek with a resounding smack. "Then they mixed it," said O'Keefe. The two men immediately came to a clinch and another fight was on with the policemen trying their best to separate the combatants It took ten minutes to get the fighting, swirling mass of arms and legs separated. The whole bunch was loaded into the wagon and finally landed in cells.

In court Gaub and Hanson pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct and the women to intoxication. Each prisoner was fined $5 and Gaub settled. Apparently all differences between the couples had disappeared with the working off of the effects of the beer.

HIS BURNS FATAL

Gardener Dies in Hospital as Result of Fire at Otto Arens' Place.

THE PUMP HOUSE DESTROYED.

Joseph Dalzell, Aged Fifty-five, the Victim of Sunday Blaze—Loss On Structure and Contents Approximately $3,000.

An explosion of kerosene in the pump house on the Otto Arens' property, on Rahway road, shortly before noon yesterday resulted in the death of an employe and a money loss of fully $3,000. The victim of the accident was Joseph Dalzell, a gardener, fifty-five years old, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 5:20 this morning. More than two-thirds of his body was terribly burned and it was known as soon as he was received at the institution that his case was hopeless.

The pump house was a concrete fire-proof building located about 150 feet from the main residence. It was divided into two compartments, one holding an acetylene gas plant and the other a kerosene engine used for pumping a water supply. The engine has always been in charge of Theodore Bergman, another employe, but he wanted to go away yesterday and asked Dalzell if he would look after things. The latter complied and in doing this act of kindness sealed his own fate.

Dalzell went to the power house at 11:15 to shut off the engine. It had been running four hours and was practically red hot. The interior of the place was quite warm and the gardener mounted a step to open a window. In doing so he lost his balance, falling backward against a kerosene tank. This was upset, causing the fluid to run against the heated engine. The explosion followed the contact and wrecked the interior.

Dalzell emerged from the building with his clothing ablaze and ran panic-stricken about the yard. Other employes on the place sought to stop him but without avail until he was almost exhausted. An overcoat was then wrapped about him and the burning clothing extinguished. A hurry call was sent for the ambulance but it was over an hour in reaching the scene, making it long past 12 o'clock before the man was gotten to the hospital. First aid treatment had been given him at the house and all possible done to relieve his sufferings previous to unconsciousness alleviating his pain.

The kerosene was spread all about the interior of the building and but little could be done to save it. The downtown chemical engine and the steamer responded to a still alarm and put out what was left of the blaze. The long haul and the heavy mudded condition of Rahway road told badly on the fire horses. Both teams were almost exhausted when they reached the premises. Chief Doane's auto also felt the strain and broke down on the way. A citizen supplied his car to continue the trip.

Only the walls of the building were left standing but while practically everything inside was destroyed, the gas plant was not badly damaged. The loss is complete as there was no insurance on the building or contents.

Siegfried Arens said this morning that Dalzell had been employed on the place only two months and was the best man he had ever had in the position. He came from New York in answer to an advertisement. He was unmarried but beyond that nothing is known of him. An effort is being made to locate relatives, if he has any, and the body will be held pending the result.

KREBS TALKED ON "ABRAHAM LINCOLN."

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, H. C. Krebs, supervising principal of the North Plainfield schools, delivered an interesting lecture at the church, last night, on the subject, "Abraham Lincoln."

Mr. Krebs has made a careful study of the life of Lincoln and was well fitted to talk on the life of the Martyred President. He related many incidents showing the strong character of Lincoln in private and public life. A social hour followed and refreshments were served.

Sebring Geneology

By O. B. Leonard

As early as the middle of the seventeenth century there were living the Dutch towns of Long Island progenitors of different branches of the Sebring family. The first representative of the line in America was Jan Roelef Suebering, born in Holland in 1650. He came to Flatbush, L. I. about 1668. His marriage in 1679 was to Adriana Polhemus, and their two sons were Roelef and Daniel Sebring, the latter baptized in 1682.

Among the earliest freeholders in Brooklyn were Cornelius Sebring and brother Jacob. The former had a wife and eight children. They both moved to the Raritan Valley about 1705. Cornelius married in 1682 Altie Fredericks and had a son Johannes, who also took up land in Jersey in 1704, living formerly at Flatbush.

They had as neighbors in their Long Island home members of the Wyckoff family, Hoagland, Tunis, Ten Eycke, Vanderveer and others, with William Lupardus as preacher of the gospel from 1695 to 1702. On the list o fsoldiers in Kings county were enrolled in 1715 Johannes, Isaac and Jacob Sebring. This martial spirit so early developed in the family was patriotically maintained in their descendants who shortly thereafter moved to New Jersey. Some of the best fighting blood in our Revolutionary army flowed in the veins of Captains John Sebring, Jacob and Roelef and private militiamen Abraham, Cornelius, Thomas, George, Henry and David.

It was just before and immediately after the opening of the eighteenth century that a number of Dutch residents from the vicinity of Brooklyn, L. I., emigrated to the fertile farming lands on the Raritan river in Somerset county near the present Somerville. In this group of thrifty tillers of the soil who came to make permanent homes in this State were Roelef Sebring, Jacob Sebring and Daniel Sebring. They brought their religious convictions with them and were all prominent in organizing Dutch Reformed churches at Raritan, Six-Mile Run, New Brunswick and elsewhere. Roelef Sebring and wife, Christina, were constituent members of the New Brunswick church in 1717, and he was chosen the first elder of the society. Jacob Sebring still earlier, 1700, was at Raritan, at which church the record of baptisms begins with September 19, 1699. Daniel Sebring was elected deacon of the North Branch church organized in 1719.

On the line of religions interest in their mother church the names of John Sebring, John Sebring, Jr., George Sebring and Abraham Sebring are found as subscribers. October 16, 1785, to raise funds to pay the salary of Rev. John Duryea as pastor of the Raritan church.

By intermarriage with the VanAsdales, VanTiles, Tunison, Suydam, Manning, Clarkson and other families, some of our best citizens have honored not only the church, but civic and social relations as well.

BASEBALL.

A broken finger took Walter Johnson to Washington instead of Boston. It was not Johnson's finger, however.

A mining capitalist of Washington and a great friend of Mr. Minor, part owner of the Washington club, discovered Johnson in the wilds of Weiser, Ida. On returning to Washington he told Minor of his find. The information was communicated to Joe Cantillon along with a bunch of press notices regarding the work of the phenomenal youngster. Cantillon paid little or no attention to the matter.

Thirty days passed and Cantillon had forgotten the matter. The mining capitalist met Minor on the street one day and asked him whether he intended to do anything about that Johnson matter; if Minor did not care for Johnson the capitalist intended to tip Johnson off to John I. Taylor, of the Boston Red Sox.

Minor asked the capitalist to wait a few days while Minor looked into the matter. The club owner saw Cantillon and urged him to take immediate action.

That same afternoon Cliff Blankenship, the Washington's catcher at that time, broke a finger. He was of no use to the club so Cantillon sent him out to Idaho to look Johnson over. Blankenship brought Johnson back on the first train and he was a star from the start.

Jack Coombs, the crack slabman of the Athletics, has been chopping down trees all winter in the woods on his farm in Kennebunk, Me., and is as hard as nails. When Connie Mack first tried to entice Coombs from Colby College in Maine the pitcher refused and said that he wanted to be a chemist. "Chemistry is a hard and tiresome road to independence," said Mack. "It will take years for you to acquire anything near the competence that few short seasons on the diamond will promise you. Take my advice and join the Athletics and you will never regret the move." Now Coombs owns a 270-acre farm and rakes in the income from sterling investments besides.

Johnny Evers' great value as a getter-around-the-bases is certainly well demonstrated by official league figures just given out, in which the Trojan is showed to have walked 108 times and fanned only eighteen times in 125 games.

Harry Davis stood up like a little man the other day and remarked: "None of that St. Louis Brown stuff for mine. I'm going to stick to the Athletics as long as they'll let me, and there isn't a manager's job in the world that can induce me to leave." Noble words those. Chances are that the Mackmen wouldn't have let him go, anyway.

Hal Chase has been releasing quite a number of men. The cause is the thirty-five-player limit. It has given Hal more than a little trouble to get within the limit, for he has been obliged to release some youngsters who looked mighty promising.

Pat Donovan has to scare up a new first baseman in some manner next season, and first basemen are as scarce as diamond mines in Indiana.

Outfielder Jack Murray resigned with New York, during the past week. He never was a hold-out, despite reports to that effect.

The Brooklyn club has asked for waivers on Outfielder Dalton, with a view to giving him another year's seasoning with Rochester.

Manager Clark Griffith, of the Cincinnati team, says Chicago and Cincinnati will fight it out for first place. New York will finish third and Pittsburg fourth.
Pittsburg fourth.

Jack Gleason, the genial fight promoter, is just wild to buy a big league club, and is in mourning because he was too late to bid for the Browns. Gleason is no stranger to the diamond game, as he has had a big interest in the San Francisco club for years.

Averages don't count much in the fielding line. Lennox twice led the National League third basemen, but nobody refused to waive on him when he was sent to Louisville.

Cincinnati is anxious to dispose of Lew Moren. He was offered to several teams, but all declined to take the millionaire's son.

Stanley Robison, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, is defendant in a suit for $20,000 damages brought by Mrs. Jennie Fletcher, of East St. Louis. In a game in the Mound City on August 29 last Mrs. Fletcher was hit over the right eye by a foul tip. The lady says the accident has resulted in permanent disfigurement.

Jack Tighe, for three seasons manager of the Rock Island club of the Three-Eye League, will be in command of the Seattle club the coming season. Tighe will take with him from Rock Island Outfielders Davidson and Murphy and Pitcher Frank Dick.

Manager McAleer has vetoed the request of the Washington writers that the Washington club establish an office for the conduct of business and distribution of news, as he (McAleer) will not move from Youngston, O., to Washington during the winter.

Manager Griffith, of Cincinnati, has refused to trade Shorstop Tommy Downey to Chicago for either Foxen or Pfeister. Griffith has also turned down the propositions that Boston and Brooklyn made for Downey. The Red's manager is holding on to Tommy until he sees if Dave Altizer will burn up the ground at shortstop.

When Connie Mack first tried out Eddie Collins, the phenominal Columbia player, he played him at third base, then he sent him to shortstop, and finally to the outfield. In none of these postiions did Collins seem to fit. Finally Mack put him at second base, and after one game decided that the second corner was the place for him.

Larry Lajoie, the slugging second baseman of the Cleveland Naps, is receiving credit for inventing the play that makes the hit and run play look silly. A bluff start by the runner on first showed whether the second baseman or shortstop was going to cover the second sack. Knowing this, the batsman tried to hit the ball through the territory which would be left unguarded. Lajoie was the first man to shift the signal for covering second after the runner at first had made the bluff start, and in that way the hit-and-run developed into a double play.

There is a new patent drill on the market, guaranteed to bore through the hardest substance in less than no time. Several big league managers will buy the new drills and use them on the heads of their young recruits during the spring training time.

The Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel is planning to hold an "experience meeting" next month. Each member will be expected to bring a dollar and tell how they earned it. The men will also be invited.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Y. Bellerjeau, of the borough, who have been visiting relatives at Trenton, have returned.

Letter-carrier C. B. Stephens, of the borough, has recovered from a recent illness and returned to his position.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Sandford, of East Front street, are contemplating a pleasure trip to North Carolina.

Miss Louise M. Demarest, of Somerset street, has returned from a visit with Miss Kathryn Reed, of Warrenville.

THE FORUM.

Christian Science.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I have been asked to state why I think Christian Science is in essence from Hinduism. My reasons are as follows:

First. I met a babu (native gentleman) in the city of Bombay, India, who had been high up in the Hindu priesthood. Moreover he had been a scholar of no mean note. He knew Hinduism thoroughly. I said to him "will you kindly tell me what is the essence of Hinduism." He said, "It is to make men to cease to know and realize the difference between right and wrong, good and evil." Christian Science affirms that there is no such thing as evil; therefore since all is "good" there is no difference between good and evil, and it seems that Christian Science in its essence is to make men to cease to know and realize that there is a difference between right and wrong good and evil.

Second. I went to a Christian Science church and talked with the young lady in charge. I said, "will those high in authority in Christian Science stand by what you say in regard to Christian Science?" She said, "They will, for I am very clear in the matter."

I said, "Then tell me: what is the fundamental principle of Christian Science." She answered: "God is All." I said, "What is the second fundamental principle?" She answered, "God is Good." I said what then is your conclusion?" She answered, "There is, then, no such thing as evil."

"God is all," the first fundamental principle of Christian Science is Pantheism, which is Hinduism, and both Hinduism and Christian Science make men to cease to know and realize that there is a difference between right and wrong, good and evil.

Third. The Pandita Ramabai, one of the most if not the most remarkable and brilliant native women of India, visited this country and some friends said to her "Oh, Pandita, we have a new religion in America." She said, "what it is called?" They answered, "Christian Science." She said, "what it it like?" and when they had told her she exclaimed, "Oh, that is not a new religion at all. That is as old as Hinduism, and that is what has ruined my country." The Pandita Ramabai recognized Christian Science as Hinduism in essence.

Fourth. A young babu, or native gentlemen, of India came to this country to study. Christian Scientists tried to bring him to their way of thinking. He finally said to them, "Thirty years ago, my father left Hinduism and became a Christian. He was persecuted, and ostracized, he finally gave up family and friends and position and nearly life itself to become a Christian. Now then do you suppose that I would now go back into that which my father came out of at so great a loss and sacrifice? Never!" So again this educated native of India recognized the essence of Christian Science as Hinduism.

Madame Blavatsky borrowed her ideas of Theosophy from the Hindus, and Anne Besant borrowed her idea of her reincarnations from the Hindus and has gone over to Hinduism body, mind and soul, and Mrs. Eddy undoubtedly borrowed her idea also from Hinduism for it is the old, old mother of all the so-called new religions and "New Thought," etc.,

Let me commend to your readers the book, "Christian Science in the Light of Holy Scriptures," by Dr. I. M. Haldeman, published by Revell.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Netherwood, N. J.—The Reformed church in the Netherwood section of Plainfield seems to have become the centre of attraction. All eyes are centered on that new work, and where there is that which attracts or compels recognition there must necessarily be an unusual activity with a resultant progress. This is true concerning the Netherwood work. The work has been greatly blessed through both God and man. A spiritual atmosphere, which can only be created through an earnest, sincere and faithful service, pervades the whole work. That church with its numerous branches of activity stands out as a monument to the untiring, unceasing and loving service of its young pastor, the Rev. Royal A. Stout. When it is remembered that the Netherwood church is not yet two years old, and we see what has been done, what is being done, and what its pastor is planning to do, this will be easily realized. The latest blessing to befall this church is a gift of a set of library books, shelves, etc., which came last week from the First Reformed church, of New Brunswick. The First church is the Netherwood pastor's home church, where he attended as a boy, and out of which he went to enter the minstry. The other blessing has come in the generous loan of $1,000, without interest, from the Women's Board of Domestic Missions. The Women's Board has interested itself very much in this work, much to the joy and happiness of both pastor and people. The new library books were used for the first time last Sunday, and this gift made the children happy. In addition to his other work, Mr. Stout has organized a Men's Club with much success. He preached to the members of that club last Sunday night.

ELKS TO GATHER AT RED BANK TOMORROW

All the business places, hotels and many of the private houses of Red Bank are gayly decorated, because about one thousand Elks are coming to Red Bank to help celebrate and assist in the institution and initiatory ceremonies of Red Bank Lodge, 1,229, B. P. O. E., tomorrow.

The "baby" lodge feels highly honored at the treatment to be accorded it by the "mother" lodge, of New York city, which will send a delegation of about fifty members, including John F. Shaughnessy, the exalted ruler, and Mr. Carrol, the secretary. The exercises will be in charge of W. C. Farmer, district deputy, of Jersey City, and the ritualistic work will be done by Long Branch Lodge 742. Augustus Herrmann, grand exalted ruler, president of the Cincinnati baseball club, is expected to be present, together with other grand lodge members.

A feature of the day will be a big parade, in charge of J. B. Rue, grand marshal, on horseback, followed by a platoon of mounted police. The parade will start from the Lyceum about 7 o'clock in the evening, with the New York delegation in the lead.

TRENTON WOMAN BY RUSE ESCAPES FROM MEXICO.

Word has been received at Trenton by Joseph Ashton, Jr., a prominent merchant, that his wife, who has been visiting her brother in Mexico, has escaped from Chihuahua after many exciting adventures and running the gauntlet of danger at the hands of the Mexican insurrectos. Mrs. Ashton went to Chihuahua last December and was still there when the insurrection involved that section of Mexico. She had since been "marooned" in that city.

Several attempts were made by her to escape to El Paso in order to return to Trenton, but the insurrectos had torn up the railroad and the road leading from the city, and escape was impossible. Finally she appealed to Enrico Creel, Mexican Ambassador at Washington. Ambassador Creel interested himself in her behalf and they arranged for a relative of his to aid her in another attempt to get away from the city.

Secret plans were made and the flight was successfully made last Thursday morning at 3 o'clock, succeeding largely through the ruse of a long detour southward and the cross country trip to Eagle Pass. Mrs. Ashton sailed from New Orleans Saturday for New York.

NOT AN "ASSET."

Kansas City Judge Declares It is a Liability.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 27.—Perhaps it is because he himself owns a motor car that Judge James E. Goodrich, of the Circuit Court, decided that an automobile is a liability and not an asset.

It was in the case of J. R. Smith against J. M. Cottingham, in which Smith asks $10,000 damages for an alleged assault. Smith was asked by attorneys for Cottingham to give security for the costs of the suits. It developed, in the showing of Smith's property, that he owned three motor cars. The Court decided that other property must be shown, as the Court was not inclined to believe an automobile was an asset.

FOR A NATIONAL CELEBRATION.

The nation has constructed the Panama canal. The celebration of its completion should be national in character and the one city in which such a celebration can be held is Washington.

Today the Senate committee will give a hearing to those who will present the claims of the capital. It does not ask any vast appropriation. It does not propose to play millions against millions, as in the case of New Orleans and San Francisco. It only asks that a commission be authorized to study the situation, work out the plans and present them, in concrete form, to the next Congress. This is little enough for Congress to grant. But it will serve to pave the way for he naval review in Hampton roads and a commemoration in Washington that will attract world-wide attention, and will mark the completion of one of the greatest achievements in the history of the nation.—Baltimore Sun.

The Smoke Nuisance.

Some of the developments indicate that lack of information about the subject has hampered the movement for the abolition of the smoke nuisance.

A member of the committee which recently circulated petitions which were to be presented to council approached an influential North Side matron for her signature.

"Well," replied the matron, "I am not particularly interested. You see, my husband never smokes and none of our girls are married."—Youngstown Telegram.

Mrs. Robert Lowry, of East Seventh street, went to Philadelphia on Saturday to visit friends.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

The Decorative Art

Mr. Alberto Buccini, of New York, announces that he awaits the command of those who have an artistically decorated home to give them the benefit of his ideas and to personally execute any interior decoration that they may desire.

Artists are born not made and Mr. Buccini, whose work has received the encomium of the press and his patrons, will gladly submit references and credentials from art connoiseurs and patrons. By permission, he calls attention to his most recent decorative work in this city, that done at the handsome new residence of Mr Robert Meeker, in Belvidere avenue.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"The Girl in the Taxi," the greatest laughing success of the century, comes to the Plainfield theatre tonight. "The Girl in the Taxi" was originally produced in Berlin and afterwards in Paris. In both cities it created a sensation and ran for more than 1,000 nights. Chicago was the first city in America to witness this lively piece in its adapted form. Its success was instantaneous and emphatic, and for more than six months it proved a potent magnet to crowd the theatre where it was presented to the doors. In Boston its triumph was unqualified; the eastern metropolis vieing with the western in paying tribute in the form of overwhelming audiences for an equal length of time. New York likewise acclaimed it in the most glowing terms and greeted it as the laughing sensation of the season.

George Broadhurst's clever play, "The Man of the Hour," which left such a pleasing and lasting impression on the occasion of former visits will again be seen in this city, to the gratification of theatre patrons who are devotees of the best there is in the drama. The same care that marks all of the productions of this management is a feature of this season's offering. "The Man of the Hour" will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre Wednesday night.

The "BABY"

By EDWARD L. RECKARD

Mr. John Lloyd suffered the guilt of an eavesdropper and for the moment was deeply and regretfully conscious of his crime. He had just left his room and was coming down the steps to go to his office, where an important case awaited his attention.

He mechanically removed from his mouth an unlighted cigar and pressed his lips determinedly. There could be no mistaking the words spoken in Mrs. Melton's soft, motherly voice. Mr. Lloyd stopped still on the staircase and deliberately listened.

"Martha is coming with the baby tomorrow on the 12 o'clock train from Albany," Mrs. Melton was saying. The rustling of note paper revealed her source of information to Mr. Lloyd as plainly as if he were in the sitting room itself, and then he remembered that he had seen a letter postmarked "Albany" in the dining room while he was taking his breakfast that morning.

"And to stay a whole month!" cried Miss Edith, the one remaining member of the Melton family who as yet had escaped, through no fault of her own, the matrimonial halter.

Miss Edith was a very pretty girl, very young, so Mr. Lloyd thought, and very vivacious—probably a little too much so for the stern Mr. Lloyd. But he tolerated her because she was in the house when he took up his residence with the Meltons a year ago. He had never regretted this, as the house was generally very quiet—just as he wished it to be—and he could read and follow his other pursuits without being disturbed, except on those very few occasions when Miss Edith's vivaciousness bubbled over.

Next to babies Mr. Lloyd abominated spinsters of certain age out of pure fear of their possible designs upon innocent and unsuspecting bachelors. Had he not been immune all these long years, had he not held out against their wiles and had he not seen his best friends, one after the other, take the matrimonial line to what he considered Troubletown?

"They can have the big spare room and"—

Mr. Lloyd did not wait to hear the conclusion of the sentence, spoken in Mr. Melton's hearty tones. He stepped quietly out of the wide, old fashioned hallway into the cool morning air and moodily walked toward his law office, adjoining the courthouse at the other end of the prosperous little county seat where he had won a name for himself in the few years he had resided in Blairville.

The spare room was across the hall from Mr. Lloyd's own ample and handsomely furnished snuggery. Here hung pictures of his old home, just two or three, for he was not a sentimental man, and there were a pipe and some books, of which he was very fond—in fact, one could see all those things that go to make up the typical bachelor's quarters.

So "Martha and the baby" were to go in the spare room, were they? The doors were to bang, the baby was to bawl and all of the members of the household were to run upstairs and down again forty times an hour for eighteen hours a day and, from Mr. Lloyd's unsympathetic and pitifully deficient understanding as to babies, eighty-one hours a night, waiting on "the baby," making life miserable for the star boarder and supposedly delightful for everybody else.

He had enjoyed the utmost comfort all these months; no one bothered him; he came and went unhindered. And now was all this going to be changed just because some female was coming into the house with a baby? Not if John Lloyd knew it! He would return to the hotel in the village, at which he had been a central figure until the day he had gone with the Meltons in their big, rambling home on the hill among the maples. Hotel life had its drawbacks, but the proprietor had been under contract not to room doting mothers and leathery lunged infants within hearing of Mr. Lloyd's apartment.

The next morning at breakfast Mr. Lloyd's silence and gloom were in marked contrast with the animated table conversation regarding the visitors who were to arrive that day. Everybody was in high glee. It was Martha this and the baby that. They were going to invite neighbors by the dozens and do a hundred and one other things to welcome Martha and the baby.

He had tried a dozen times during the meal to tell them that he was to give up his room and return to the hotel, but each time the words stuck in his throat. He finally decided that he would quietly return to the house during the morning, put his things in order and later send for them with a polite note of explanation at the suddenness of his departure. He would tell them that a very important case necessitated his presence in—oh, any old place, just so long as he got away from all this turmoil.

True to his resolution, Mr. Lloyd crept into the house unobserved and placed his effects in some semblance of order for removal. With every sound from below he fancied he distinguished agonized squeals in infantile treble, mingled with the chorus of adult voices in soothing efforts to quiet the tempest. Warm and flustered for a dignified bachelor of thirty-five, Mr. Lloyd slipped down the side staircase, out on the little porch to which led the short cut up the hill from the railroad station.

None of the family had observed his burglarious entrance or hasty exit. But shades of Blackstone, what was this? A woman was coming along the narrow path over the rear lawn, directly up to the little porch—a woman in a neat traveling gown and carrying a suit case!

"Caught!" groaned Mr. Lloyd aloud, and he felt a hot glow of shame and vexation sweep over him. "Here's Martha, by all that has to do with babies, fat or lean, squealing or cooing! Caught! Doomed!"

The young woman in the traveling gown paused at the foot of the steps, gazed in amazement at Mr. Lloyd's stern and heated features and displayed from beneath a big hat the rosy face of a very pretty girl. Mr. Lloyd had not seen her profile because of the hat, and now that it came into full view he looked again and did not remove his eyes from the roguish ones that sought his so inquiringly. He did not know what to do. He wanted to escape, but then he would have made a fool of himself by running away.

"Martha, I suppose?" he ventured at last, almost impolitely, quite scornfully and very audibly.

"Sir!" The red lips parted haughtily, and the trim figure straightened perceptibly in the traveling gown at the strange salutation.

"You're Martha, Mrs. Melton's sister, of course, but where's"— Mr. Lloyd's voice dropped out of hearing as suddenly as his courage.

"I'm not Martha," she answered sharply.

"To be sure you are," insisted Mr. Lloyd, very firmly. "Where's the—the baby?"

"The what?" cried the young lady wonderingly.

"The baby—Martha's baby. Where is he, she or it, or whatever you call 'em?" Mr. Lloyd was desperate; he wanted to get at the bottom of this, find out who was who and have it over with. As boy babies and girl babies all looked alike to him, his mixture of gender was excusable.

An unmistakable girlish giggle of mirth rippled from the shadow of the big hat, and its owner let the suit case drop to the porch. It landed squarely on Mr. Lloyd's toes and for a moment made him squirm with pain.

The young woman, however, did not take notice of the pain she had inflicted. Instead of that, when Mr. Lloyd regained his composure, he saw her fairly doubled up with laughter. He was amazed at her strange behavior. Finally he addressed her sharply, "If you are not Martha, who are you?"

"I'm the 'baby,'" she laughingly said as she stood for a moment on the threshold of the door taking him in from head to foot, striving to fix the identity of her mysterious cross examiner. "I am 'baby' still, despite my advanced age and the centuries of futile protest at my mother's tender forgetfulness. Did I not do well for an infant"—this very saucily and boldly—"to travel way from Albany to Blairville all alone, only to meet a severe interlocutor barring the entrance to my aunt's home?"

"But Martha?" was all Mr. Lloyd could say.

"Is my mother, who will arrive tomorrow, I came ahead. Does this satisfy you, Mr. Impertinence? Please remove your foot from beneath my luggage and carry it into the house. Babies, you know, must have attention and attendance."

Mr. Lloyd extracted his foot with alacrity. He was not what one would call a "gallant" and therefore did not choose to carry her bag into the house for her.

Here was a fine mess! He had been aggravating himself for the better part of two days, had wanted to change his comfortable room for hotel quarters, had heard the squealing infant in his dreams both day and night and—well, "it's a fine mess," he reflected.

He had fought and won many hard legal battles, but here was a golden opportunity to prove that there are times when discretion is the better part of valor. He fled, or, to be truthful, he limped abruptly down the little path toward the village. As he collected his thoughts, being a good lawyer and a wise jurist, he decided to revise and to overrule his previous judgment as to babies.

"Girl babies eighteen years of age and upward, with rosy cheeks, laughing eyes and fluffy hair and saucy dimples," mused Mr. Lloyd, a smile playing round the corners of his mouth, "do not come within the purview of the precedents you have heretofore cited to support your case. Judgment is accordingly rendered for the infant defendant, with costs to the belligerent plaintiff. Case dismissed."

Mr. Lloyd returned to the Melton household to dinner as placidly as usual. As time progressed he learned whether his decision as to one girl baby in particular was to be affirmed by a higher court from which there is no appeal.

The Explanation.

"But, my dear Mrs. Borders," said Wiggley, "I don't understand your rates at all. You say that you will charge $15 a week for me and $35 a week for Mrs. Wiggley. Why this difference?"

"Why, you see, Mr. Wiggley," said the landlady, "you don't weigh more than 140 pounds, while Mrs. Wiggley doesn't weigh an ounce less than 200."

"But what has that got to do with it?" demanded Wiggley.

"Under the laws as they are now enforced," replied the landlady, "we charge for board by the weight."—Harper's Weekly.

A Philosopher.

"So you enjoy being married to a suffragette?" said one man.

"Thoroughly," replied the other. "Instead of keeping me awake with curtain lectures she puts me to sleep reading her speeches."—Washington Star.

NEW LINCOLN STATUE.

It Shows Our Great President Sitting on a Bench In Deep Thought.

New York.—Gutzon Borglum, the New York sculptor, has just finished the model of the Lincoln statue, which is one of the three monuments presented to the city of Newark by the Amos H. Van Horn estate.

The model will be cast in bronze and will be erected on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12, in the triangle in front of the new courthouse, Newark.

The sculptor has depicted Lincoln sitting at the extreme end of a park bench with his hat beside him, in a slightly stooped position, apparently at rest.

Lincoln Statue For Newark, N. J.

"As rest and Lincoln were almost strangers," said Mr. Borglum in commenting on his work, "it will be noticed on close inspection that the great emancipator's mind is at work. I placed Lincoln at the end of the bench because it would be unnatural for him to monopolize the whole seat. The figure shows the Lincoln of the civil war, with all the cares of his office on his mind."

The figure is one and one half times life size and if standing would be nine feet six inches high. The figure and the bench will be cast in one piece of bronze and will be, it is said, the largest single piece of sculpture ever cast in this country.

WONDERFUL ROYAL TOYS.

Crown Prince of Russia Exchanges Presents With the Infant Emperor of China.

St. Petersburg.—The little crown prince of Russia recently sent to Pu Yi, the baby sovereign of China, a toy railroad that is perfect in every detail. Little engines carry beautifully fitted express, accommodation and freight trains over three-quarters of a mile of top track. Miniature stations, block signals, switches, everything that goes to make up a complete modern railway, are included in the little czar's Christmas gift.

The toy cost the Russian government $25,000. In return for it, says the Christian Herald, the baby Pu Yi sent to the czarevitch a trained dwarf elephant and a collection of curious Chinese playthings, among which queer little manikins no bigger than the ordinary tin soldier dance queer dances and act out Chinese fairy tales. Miniature jeweled ivory men-o'-war sail about on a little glass sea that by some ingenious arrangement reflects shore lines and clouds, sky and trees, for all the world like a real harbor.

Apropos of these wonders there is in the possession of the czar a very remarkable watch. It was made by a Polish mechanic named Jules Curron. The czar had heard some wonderful tales about the inventive ability of this man, and, wishing personally to test his skill, he sent him a parcel containing a few copper nails, some wood chippings, a piece of broken glass, an old cracked china cup, some wires and a few cribbage board pegs. Accompanying this was a command to make them into a timepiece.

Within a remarkably short time the czar received them back in the shape of a watch. The case was made of china and the works of the other odds and ends. So pleased and astonished was the czar that he sent for the man and conferred several distinctions upon him.

Tendered Twenty-five-year Old Ticket.

Philadelphia.—A woman boarded a train on the Tyrone and Clearfield branch of the Pennsylvania railroad at Wallacetown recently and presented a ticket calling for a passage from Wallacetown to Pittsburg which had been issued in 1885, twenty-five years ago.

Conductor Farrell was curious to know how it had been preserved so long. He asked of the woman who had tendered it where it had been during all the intervening years, and so the woman declared that twenty-five years ago she had prepared to make a trip to Pittsburg, purchasing her ticket at that time. When the train pulled into the depot at Wallacetown en route to Pittsburg a friend disembarked for the purpose of visiting her, which made her own trip impossible then. On going home she put the ticket away. Finding it the other day, she decided to obtain her money's worth and took the long planned journey.

Love Letters Buried With Her.

London.—A maiden lady of Hanley who died at the age of more than ninety years asked shortly before her death that her love letters should be buried with her. Her relatives found several letters dating back some of them to the thirties with the ink almost faded. Her last request was complied with.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"Very good. I will hold you to that. You may go now."

Nora moved slowly to the door and had almost reached it when her mistress' voice arrested her.

"Stop one moment. You have acted very well over this affair—supposing that you keep your word, which I have no doubt you mean to do—and in return I may as well remove from your mind a misconception which I believe you entertain with regard to my son. He tells me you have been foolish enough to connect him in some way with the death of your stepfather. He had nothing to do with it."

"But—but—my lady"—

The room seemed to be turning round. She was forced to stagger to a seat. It was so evident that she was on the point of fainting that Lady Roscommon looked at her curiously, but the danger passed away. Nora sat silent for a few moments collecting her thoughts.

"You do not believe me?" the lady exclaimed.

"Ah, madam, I wish I could. But I have seen proofs—proofs that would satisfy any one. I know that he came in about the time my father was found and that his clothes were all wet and muddy. And there are other proofs stronger than that. When I charged him with the murder of my father, he did not deny it."

"He did not murder your father!"

Lady Roscommon screamed rather than spoke these words, advancing her face at the same time so near to Nora's that the girl involuntarily drew back. "I tell you he did not. I know who fired the shot that killed him. It was not Terence—not my son. Never dare to say such a thing again."

A new joy shone on the girl's face. She could scarcely believe her own ears. But it never so much as occurred to her to doubt that Lady Roscommon was telling the truth. Her words had the ring of sincerity. Nora rose from the chair and said, "May I go now, my lady?"

"Yes, and remember what I have said—my son is as innocent as you are yourself. You can remember that, if it is any comfort to you. And remember your promise."

CHAPTER XV.

"ALL FOR YOUR SAKE."

Lady Roscommon was very much relieved when on the following morning Nora came to her and of her own accord said she wished to give up her place.

"I must say I think you are right and show a very proper spirit," said her mistress. "Apart from the subject I spoke to you of yesterday, your conduct has been all that I could wish. I will write myself to one or two of my friends and ask them if they require a maid." And, having made this handsome offer, Lady Roscommon congratulated herself on being well rid of a troublesome subject.

Nora knew very well that her mistress wished her to go at once, and she was tempted to slip out of the house without any further meeting with Captain Fitzgerald, but she made no effort to avoid him when next morning he stopped her on the stairs. Taking her by the hand, he gently led her to a window seat where a curtain hid her from any one passing up and down the stairs.

"You saw my mother last night, didn't you, Nora?" he asked in a tone that was scarcely louder than a whisper.

"Yes," said the girl, and unconsciously her voice sank to the same low tone as his.

"And you are convinced now that—that my—that I am not a murderer?"

"Yes; I am sure you are not."

"Will you marry me now, then, Nora?" he said gently.

She shook her head and looked up at him with a gaze that had in it as much sorrow for him as for herself.

"Why won't you? Do you mean that you can't care for me?"

She hesitated a moment, for she did not wish to make ill blood between mother and son if she could help it. "It is not that," she said faintly.

"Nora, I don't understand you," he said after a pause. "But there is only one question I want to have answered. If you answer it one way, make your mind easy. I will see to the rest. If you can honestly say 'No' there is an end of it and I will not willingly speak to you again. The question is, Do you love me, Nora?"

"I am afraid I do love you better than I should, but I cannot marry you. I promised Lady Roscommon that I would not, and I can't go back on my word."

"But what made you do that, Nora?" cried the young man, dismayed.

"I thought then that—that you had killed my father."

"But in that case your promise can't be binding."

"I gave it of my own free will. I can't break it," the girl said simply.

Captain Fitzgerald did not try to shake her resolution; much less did he rave and scold the girl and tell her that she did not know what love meant.

"I think this is a matter that can be set right, Nora," he said quietly. "Don't lose heart."

"I am going away. We had better say goodby now," she said.

"Going away! Were you turned away?" he asked, his brows contracting and an angry gleam darting from his eyes.

"No, no!" cried Nora, glad to be able to reassure him, though the sign of his anxiety was sweet to her. "Lady Roscommon never hinted at such a thing. I said of my own accord that it was better that I should go. And so it is."

Naturally Captain Fitzgerald could not see the reason for this, but he thought it better not to try to argue the point just then. He took her small white hand as it hung by her side and pressed it for a moment to his lips and then hurried off in the direction of his mother's room.

"'Mother," he said abruptly, "what have you been saying to Nora?"

"Do you mean my maid? I told her what I said I would tell her—that you were not to blame for her stepfather's death."

"But in spite of that you got her to promise that she would not marry me."

"She did promise, but whether she did or not is of little consequence. Such a marriage is not to be thought of. Her father was a small tenant farmer, and at present she is my waiting maid."

"Whatever she may be, she is the girl I mean to marry."

"You dare to say that to me, Terence? Fortunately she has given me her word that she will not marry you, and I can assure you that I will never release her from that promise."

"I think you will, mother."

"What makes you say that?"

"Because if I cannot marry her I shall marry no one."

A dangerous gleam flashed from Lady Roscommon's eyes, but she said nothing. Time, she thought, would be sure to weaken his resolve.

"Mother," he said suddenly, "have you ever thought it possible that that old dandy you wanted to marry Eva to may be responsible for her disappearance?"

Lady Roscommon started violently.

"The idea is ridiculous. They were to have been married in a month or two. Why should he want to run away with her?"

"Are you quite sure that they would have been married in a month or two? I believe Eva hated him."

"That has nothing to do with it."

"Perhaps not. All the same, as you say we have exhausted all other clews it seems to me that it would not be amiss to find out what Sir Rufus was doing on the night my sister disappeared. And if you won't do it"—

"You may spare yourself the trouble," said Lady Roscommon, with something of scorn in her voice. "I had inquiries made, and I found that Sir Rufus Deveril was in town at the time and did not leave for at least a fortnight afterward."

"It seems to be rather odd," said the young man quietly, "that the suitor you persuaded, not to say forced, Eva to accept should be a man you could think guilty of the crime of abduction."

Lady Roscommon stared at her son in amazement.

"You are hard to please, my son. First you suggest a certain course of action, and then, when I say it has already been followed, you are not pleased. But you can surely understand that in my bewilderment I took all means of tracing the poor girl that occurred to me, though some of them were no doubt a little absurd when looked at calmly. Surely you can understand that."

"Yes, mother; certainly I can," he said absently. Then abruptly—

"Mother, why did you make Eva accept that old roue, Sir Rufus Deveril? I can't help thinking that if my father had been more a man of the world he would never have allowed it. The man is bankrupt in character as well as in money"—

"He is at least a gentleman," broke in his mother angrily. "The Deverils come of one of the best families in the north of England."

"But they are no better than the Kildares of Mayo."

"That makes no difference," said the lady impatiently.

"Not to me. I thought perhaps it might to you. I want to know why you were so eager about the match."

"Then you shall not know, ungrateful boy!" cried his mother with sudden vehemence. The passion glowed in her eyes, on her cheeks. Her voice trembled with it. Terence fell back in his chair amazed.

"Do you mean that I have anything to do with my sister being engaged to marry that man, directly or indirectly?"

"And if I say that it was entirely on your account, for the saving of your whole life from ruin, what then?" she said, facing her son.

He looked at his mother steadily and her eyes fell before his.

"Aren't you speaking just a little wildly, mother? It seems to me that you want to make out that everything you do is done for my sake."

"So it is, God help me, so it is!"

"Was it for my sake you allowed yourself to be mastered by that unhappy wretch that—that was shot in the park—that you submitted to his insolence, his extortions, when a word from the police would have ended it all?"

"Yes, Terence, I did it all for you! I would sacrifice everything, everything, to you, for your safety and your happiness. And yet you put a girl no better than a kitchenmaid before me!"

A knock came to the door. It was repeated before Lady Roscommon could command her voice sufficiently to say "Come in!"

The door opened, and Nora, her face white, her eyes full of fear and anxiety, her cheeks stained with tears, stood on the threshold.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE RING WITH PINK PEARLS.

"Come in, child, and don't stand staring there," said her mistress impatiently. The girl entered the room and closed the door.

"Well, what is it?"

"If you please, my lady, have you missed anything lately—a ring or a brooch?"

"I? No. But you ought to know that as well as I do. What do you mean?"

"I found these wrapped up inside a pair of stockings in my trunk. I don't know who put them there, but they aren't mine. I thought I had better bring them to you."

She laid a ring and a small cameo brooch on the table. The ring was set with pink pearls. And the moment they were seen Lady Roscommon and her son cried out with surprise. Both the ring and the brooch they knew well.

"These jewels belong to Lord Roscommon's collection of gems," said the lady coldly. "We shall expect you to explain how you came by them."

"I was afraid you would think that I had stolen them, my lady," said Nora quietly, "but, indeed, indeed, I can tell you no more than I have said already. I was taking my things out of my box to pack them when I thought I felt something hard and with a sharp edge in one of my pairs of stockings. I unrolled them, and the ring and the brooch fell out. I haven't even searched to see if there are any more jewels like them among my things. I thought it better to come straight to you."

"Well, we had better go and look or—stay a moment. Come with me, Terence, you can come too, if you like."

She led the way to a small cozy room on the ground floor, and there she found his lordship fast asleep.

At the sight of the ring with the pink pearls he was wide awake in a moment and shaking with apprehension. Having examined the ring and the brooch, he tottered to the library, where stood the safe that guarded his treasures. He unlocked it with a key which he took from his watch chain, but his feeble hands were unable to pull open the massive iron door. His son pulled it open for him, and the viscount plunged his arms inside.

"All gone! All gone!" he moaned, turning a drawn and scared face to his wife. "Only these left out of a treasure worth a king's ransom." He scarcely seemed able to understand when Nora told him where she had found the ring and the brooch.

"Found them in your trunk!" he exclaimed when the meaning of the girl's words had forced itself in upon his mind. "But you keep your trunk locked, don't you?"

"As a rule, sir—my lord, I mean. But sometimes I have left it unlocked."

"And you want me to believe that some time when your trunk happened to be unlocked some person went and hid these things among your clothing?"

"That is the only way I can account for my having found them where I did." This was said with an unconscious dignity that stopped the next words that were on the peer's lips. He muttered something inaudible and then fell to admiring the sheen of the pink pearls.

"They are lovely," he said, speaking as if to himself, "but there were far finer things in my collection—oh, yes, far more beautiful and twenty times as valuable! Yet this ring is worth something. It is worth at least £20. Do you mean to tell me," he said, turning fiercely on the girl, "that some unknown thief would toss away a ring of that value on the mere chance of throwing suspicion upon you?"

Nora was silent, but for the first time her lover interposed:

"Perhaps the thief, whoever he may have been, did not know how valuable the ring is. I should never have guessed that it was worth so much, pretty as it is."

"Pretty! I suppose every stone is alike to you so long as it looks pretty. Why, my uncut rubies were worth forty times as much as this ring, and only an expert could have told what they were. I shall never see them again, my splendid rubies! Nor my Fitzwilliam diamond, nor the sapphire necklace, nor the emeralds that every court jeweler in Europe has heard of! I might as well never have had them. They are gone forever!"

"Don't lose hope, father," said the captain encouragingly. "We don't know the thief; we don't even know when the jewels were stolen, but they won't be easy things to dispose of. If the emeralds are as well known as you believe they are, surely no jeweler would buy them, for he must know that they were stolen."

Lord Roscommon staggered to a seat, his gray head bent, his outstretched arm still trembling. It seemed as if he had grown ten years older in as many minutes.

"Don't you think we should send for the police, father?" asked the young man after an awkward pause. Lady Roscommon gave vent to a short, satirical laugh, but no one asked the cause of her amusement.

"You may as well, but it will be of no use—not the slightest use," said Lord Roscommon. "The police never do find out things."

"We'll give them a chance, at all events," said the young man.

"I agree with your father that it is not of the slightest use," broke in Lady Roscommon. "They will order the servants to turn out their boxes, as if, supposing any of them to be guilty, the thief would be such a fool as to put the stolen jewels in her trunk."

This was said with a side glance at Nora, and her lover burned to say something in reply, but a look from Nora restrained him. It seemed as if this irritated the lady, for she next said, as calmly as if the person she was speaking of were a hundred miles away instead of standing at her elbow:

"If you do consult the police you will have to put up with what they do, and I fancy that after the idiotic ceremony of turning out the servants' boxes their next step will be to arrest the person in whose box part of the stolen property was found."

Both Nora and her lover started. The girl's face became ashy white, the young man's fiery red.

"Mother, you can't think what you are saying!" he burst out. "The police would only laugh at you if you were to suggest such a thing, which I am sure neither you nor father would ever dream of doing. Whoever heard of one who had stolen anything coming voluntarily to give it up on the eve of leaving the house forever!"

"Possibly she saw that the theft must be discovered soon and thought she would take this clever way of putting the police off the scent."

Captain Fitzgerald's face was now as white as Nora's.

"Mother, if you wish that I should ever speak to you again you will say no more," he said in a low tone.

"Am I to be dictated to in my own house by my own child as to what I may say and what I must not say?" cried Lady Roscommon angrily. "I say that suspicion always attaches to the person who is found in possession of stolen property, and as Nora Kildare was found with the things in her trunk she has to clear herself of the suspicion that falls upon her. What have you to say to that?"

Another appealing look from Nora, and the young man resolutely shut his lips, only opening them to say:

"I think I had better keep anything I have to say until the police are here."

"You may go," said Lady Roscommon, turning to Nora, and almost before the girl had left the room she said to Terence in accents as bitter as a spiteful temper could make them:

"You intend to set yourself up against me, then, to make yourself this girl's advocate?"

"I think it is my duty to defend her. I should think myself unworthy of the name of a man if I did not. But I see no reason why I should set myself in opposition to you unless you make up your mind, in spite of common sense, that she must be guilty and become her accuser. But why do this, mother?" he added in a softer tone. "Why meddle in the matter at all?"

Lady Roscommon seemed as if she would answer him; then, apparently changing her mind, she closed her lips firmly and walked abruptly out of the room.

On the following morning two inspectors of the Royal Irish constabulary arrived at the castle and investigated the matter.

Lord Roscommon told them that the key of the safe hung always on his watch chain and that there was no duplicate of it. He had inspected his treasure immediately after his return from London and had found it intact, and he had not opened the safe since until yesterday.

One of the inspectors had heard of the disappearance of Eva, and he hinted, respectfully but unmistakably, that perhaps the young lady had taken the jewels with her. The viscount was furiously angry, but the suggestion had been made in such a guarded way that he could not resent it without seeming to bring Eva's name into the affair of his own accord.

As for the notion that Nora had been the culprit or had been privy to the theft the inspectors scouted the idea and departed, leaving things exactly as they had found them. Nora began quietly to make preparations for leaving the castle.

She was kneeling in front of her box, her poor belongings scattered on the floor. It had been arranged that she was to leave for Dublin by the night mail.

At the bottom of her trunk she found an old account book that had belonged to her stepfather. Why she had spared it when the rest of his things were sold or given away she scarcely knew—probably it was with some idea of making use of the blank pages, for the book was strongly bound in leather and furnished with a clasp. It had no special associations connected with it, and it seemed hardly worth carrying away. Almost mechanically she opened it to see whether it was likely to prove useful. A few of the pages were filled with old farm accounts, the greater part of the book being still unused. But between the accounts and the blank pages were several pages filled with writing in pencil.

They were in her stepfather's handwriting, and, glancing carelessly through them, the name of Lady Roscommon struck her eyes as with a blow. She started and began to read.

Soon the color left her face; her eyes were glued to the pages till the last line was reached. Then she sighed, dropped the book into the trunk and sat there some moments in a profound reverie.

GALLOWS MESSAGE A PASTOR'S THEME

"A Message from the Gallows" was the subject of a sermon delivered by Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire at the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening. Mr. Maguire declared that the present attitude of both church and State was antagonistic to the welfare of both criminal and suspected criminal and as a contrast he showed the attitude of Christ to the thief who was crucified with Him on the cross at Calvary.

Mr. Maguire took for his text the well known words of the dying thief and said in part:

"Our whole system of dealing with the criminal is wrong. Let a man be once convicted of a crime and he is incarcerated and hounded until there is no end to the persecution heaped upon him. Any suspicious circumstance is laid at his door and instead of help he is placed beyond the pale of uplift. He is branded forever and there is no chance for his rehabilitation.

"It is an outrage to hound out the life of such a man, or to put it in the hands of twelve men who are not familiar with the reasons for his incarceration. What do the twelve know of the law? Our method of dealing with the criminal is wholly wrong and it ought to be changed. Our aim ought to be to improve the man through kindness and help him to regain his place among his fellows.

"The man on the cross, perhaps as great a criminal as could be raised in those times was not saved by his morality nor by his othodoxy. There were three steps in his conversion, repentance, faith and confession. These three attributes should characterize the repentant sinner of today. And we shall have a different sort of society when this feeling is understood and practiced."

Junior Exhibition Tonight.

The Junior department of the Y. M. C. A. will hold its annual gymnastic exhibition at the association, this evening, to which the parents and friends are invited. The boys will go through their various "stunts," after which the parents will be the guests of the boys' secretary.

UPSALA COLLEGE CHORUS PLEASES

An appreciative audience of about two hundred people gathered in Coward Hall, Saturday night to enjoy a fine program presented by the Excelsior Chorus of Upsala College at Kenilworth. The proceeds from the affair will be placed in a fund for the new edifice which the Swedish Lutheran church proposes to build this summer. As soon as the weather conditions permit, ground will be broken for the church on East Sixth street, between Richmond street and Carlton avenue.

The program was as follows:

Welcome address, Rev. John Eastlund; songs, Herliga Land and Long Live Our College, Excelsior Chorus; piano solo, Miss Alice Werme; recitation, Miss Gerda Julin; vocal duet, Miss Esther Swenson and Carl Lund; song, Krigarne, Excelsior Chorus; recitation, George Pfeil; violin solo, Harry Johnson; recitation, Miss Esther Swenson; song, Bjornebergarne, Excelsior Chorus; vocal solo, Miss Edith Swenson; songs, Stidentsang, and Sof i ro, Excelsior Chorus.

The program was rendered in artistic style and the student songs and national airs of old Sweden were especially well given and highly appreciated by the audience. After the entertainment a diagram of the foundation of the proposed church building to be erected on East Seventh street, was shown and an appeal for contributions to defray the expense of laying the foundation was made by the pastor. A generous response followed, several hundred dollars being subscribed in a few minutes.

The erection of the new church will provide another temple of worship in the city and give the Lutherans of the Scandinavian countries a church home in this their adopted country.

Planning for State Convention.

The ministers and Sunday-school superintendents of the city will meet this evening at the Y. M. C. A. to discuss preliminary plans for the entertainment of the State Sunday-school convention to be held in this city in November.

Mrs. Percy Hamilton Stewart, of West Eighth street, entertained a dinner party at the St. Regis Hotel, New York, on Friday night.

ELIZABETH'S FIVE IS BEATEN HERE

The Red Bank five having cancelled the game with the local Y. M. C. A. for Saturday night at 10 o'clock in the morning, Physical Director Whittaker after much hustling succeeded in getting the Elizabeth team to come here. No doubt a better game resulted, judging from the reports from Red Bank. Plainfield won the game by a score of 33 to 30. Both teams were very evenly matched and it was nip and tuck from start to finish. Stine and Ricketts did the best work for Plainfield each scoring five field goals, while the latter in addition made three goals form foul. John Fritts also played a fine game, scoring three field goals. The lineup:

Plainfield—forwards, Stine and Ricketts; centre, Fritts; guards, Gavett and Newmiller.

JEFFERY'S BOYS GET ANOTHER MINK

Fred and Dick Jeffery, with several other trappers at Berkeley Heights, traced a mink and then agreed among themselves to "play fair." Accordingly each one set a trap and had his choice in locating it. They agreed that if the mink got trapped, it should belong to the one who set the trap, and the Jeffery boys were the lucky ones. This capture is of a darker color than the last mink and is of greater value in consequence. The boys caught a large 'possum two miles distant the same morning.

Trapping is good sport but many miles have to be covered each day and there are many disappointments. To get up at dawn and foot it over the hills, with the thermometer near zero, the wind howling and fingers tingling with the cold, is not as comfortable or romantic as it reads. It takes more than passing ambition and "get there" for a boy to get out of a warm bed and go trapping, but like all others who are successful, they forget the hardships and disappointments when upon approaching the traps, feeling sure as usual that "there is nothing doing" they find a beautiful mink held firmly by the little metal device known as the jumper trap.

An address will also be delivered by Dr. L. O. Howard, chief entomologist of the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

Among those who will attend will be the executives of Newark, Elizabeth, Montclair, Glen Ridge, Bloomfield, Nutley, Belleville, Orange, West Orange, East Orange, South Orange Township, Irvington, Milburn, Harrison, Arlington, Summit, Springfield, Caldwell and Verona.

NIGHTMARE WAR

"Lord, Deliver Us From the Jingoists" Says Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring.

NO TROUBLE WITH JAPAN.

"What We Needed was to See Things From Japanese Standpoint" Says Presbyterian Minister.

"International Peace," was the theme of an interesting discourse by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning. His text was "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the Sons of God." In part, Dr. Herring spoke as follows:

"It is not said, you will notice, 'blessed are the warmakers, for they shall receive a place on the roll of honor of God's heroes,' but blessed are those whose ambition it is to keep nations at peace with one another. Let us have that sort of war that makes us battle with our own sins, with the wickedness in our own individual lives and in our civic life, and with everything that stands opposed to the best interests of the common people. We shall have abundant opportunity in such a contest for the development of self-sacrifice, self control and holy doggedness, but let us have peace among the nations.

"Men long for international peace more than ever before and such a longing receives commendation from our Lord and Master. He taught that we should love all men and that we should teach this spirit of love to all nations. The spirit of patriotism does not mean that we should hate all foreigners for the Lord loves the Japanese. They have a place in God's thought and in God's plan. To my mind the Lord means to bless the world through the Japanese and as they apprehend Jesus Christ and His message no doubt they will present Him to the world in a new light and we shall have a larger vision of His glory.

"The Lord loves this nation. He has bestowed upon us exalted privileges. The great plan of God for us will not be realized in our warships, but in our manifesting to the world the spirit of good-will and peace. We need to pray continually as a nation, 'Lord deliver us from the "Jingoists" and keep us from getting excited until he know the exact truth of things.' We have had a wonderful vision of warships, and we have seen Japanese war vessels take the Philippines, Guam, Hawaii, our great Panama canal, and our whole Pacific slope, and we have seen Japanese guns on the Rockies. The vision has been a nightmare, but now the morning has come, and the nightmare has vanished into thin air for which the Lord be praised.

"Our eyes have been opened to this fact that what we needed was to see things from the Japanese standpoint and have respect for their natural feelings of sensitiveness, and so by an unanimous vote the Senate has omitted from the new treaty the clause bearing upon the question of Japanese immigration. She has asked the United States to have faith in her in that she will not permit this country to be flooded with Japanese coolie labor. The appreciation of Japan is seen in this remark of a Japanese cabinet officer that 'the United States will never have reason to regret this fresh manifestation of confidence in Japan.'

'Our vision is not now that of armies but a vision of other hosts of whom Ruskin writes:

"'Nay bend aback the lances point
And break the helmet bar.
A noise is on the morning winds,
But not the noise of war.
Along the grassy slopes
The glittering hosts apepar;
They come, they come, how fair their feet,
They come that publish peace.'"

CIPPI'S CELEBRATION LANDS HIM IN COURT

Giuseppe Cippi, dressed in the togs in which he attended a christening yesterday morning, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, charged with being drunk and disorderly. Cippi's high silk hat was crushed, his Prince Albert coat looked as though he had been taking a mud bath and the fancy vest he wore looked like a mucn soiled table cloth.

Cippi was found by Patrolman Dobson on the railroad tracks near the freight-house, surrounded by a mob of bows who were snowballing him and raising such a disturbance that the neighborhood was in an uproar. The excitement ceased when Cippi was carted off to a cell. Judge DeMeza imposed a fine of $3 this morning.

QUARTET CHOIR FOR FIRST M.E. CHURCH

Clifford A. Braider, who will be the organist at the First M. E. church after May 1, succeeding J. E. Skiff, who has held the position for several years, has completed arrangements for a quartet to succeed the present chorus choir. The quartet will consist of Mrs. June Bilby, of New York, soprano; Miss Jessamine Burd, of Somerville, contralto; Alexander McGowan, of Orange, tenor, and Raymond McGee, of this city, bass. Mr. McGowan is at present the tenor at the First Presbyterian church. Mrs. Bilby is a pupil of J. Dennis Mehan, of New York, and is said to have a sweet voice.

Mr. Braider will be succeeded at the First Presbyterian church by Bert Harold, of this city, who has played the organ there on several occasions. A quartet choir will be continued, but the names of the singers will not be announced until later.

It is understood that there will be changes in the quartet at the Crescent Avenue church next year, but no official announcement has been made as yet. Miss Hazel Hetfield, contralto soloist at the First Baptist church, it is reported, will resign on May 1 to accept a similiar position in a New York city church.

Harbingers of Spring.

Spring approaches with determined signs. This morning shortly after daybreak a flock of hundreds of blackbirds was observed circling about the East End of town finally resting on the tops of trees in the neighborhood of the Mead estate on East Front street. Later a pair of robins were seen near the Norwood avenue bridge across Green brook. It must be so that the ground hog failed to see his shadow on February 2 and that the backbone of winter is broken.

Funeral of Miss Hammal.

The funeral of Miss Mary T. Hammal, who died at Savannah, Ga., last week, was held in St. Mary's church this morning. A requiem mass was said by Rev. The parents are now dead but there are two sons and a daughter living, one son in New York and the others at Portchester, N. Y.

9 BURGLARIES IN ONE NIGHT

Entrance Gained Through Unlocked Windows in Homes in East End Where the Loot is Small.

No better comment on the inadequacy of the city's police protection at night can be made, it is said, than the story of nine burglaries committed within a radius of four blocks at the East End of the town early this morning. The homes of John Cartwright, 209 Jackson avenue; William Touchon, 134 Johnston avenue; Mrs. M. Wall, 126 Johnston avenue; F. Hartpence, 135 McKinley place; District Court Clerk Horace Adams, 249 Johnson avenue; Elias Pangborn, 254 Jackson avenue; J. C. Hanson, 251 Jackson avenue; F. J. Smith, 126 Netherwood avenue; F. L. Caldwell, 123 McKinley place, and James Caulfield, 103 Jackson avenue, were the homes entered.

Jewelry, clothing and money amounting in all to about $100 was taken from these houses without the inmates being aroused and some of the loot, notably clothing, was strewn about the different places visited by the burglars.

According to the police entrance was gained in every case through an unlocked window or door as there was no evidence that jimmies or other tools were used to force entrance. From Mrs. Cartwright's place two coats, some jewelry and $3.50 in money were taken; sixty cents in change and a watch were secured from the Touchon residence; Mrs. Wall lost three gold rings and a silver mesh bag containing $4.75; a gold ring was stolen from Mr. Hartpence while Horace Adams was the victim to the extent of a new overcoat and $10 in money.

From the home of Elias Pangborn nothing was missed, but a part of some stolen stuff from other homes was found in the yard, evidently not thought worth taking. A like state of affairs was discovered at the home of Mr. Hanson. The house had been thoroughly gone over, but nothing was missing.

The burglars evidently got hungry when they arrived at the home of F. S. Caldwell, for the remnants of a pie or two were found on the kitchen table and crumbs were scattered about the floor. At Caulfield's, on Jackson avenue, similar evidences of an appeased appetite were found but nothing of value was missing.

Chief Kiely put his detectives on the trail of the thieves as soon as the wholesale looting was reported and he hopes to land the burglars before the day is over.

A single patrolman has nine miles of territory to cover in the Netherwood section at night so that it is easy for burglars to operate with impunity in the district south of the tracks in the east end, where a policeman rarely visits.

MRS. ANN AISTON DIES IN EIGHTY-FIRST YEAR.

Mrs. Ann Alston, aged 80 years, died this morning at the home of her niece, Mrs. Alexander Martin, 663 East Sixth street. She had been ill for some time. Mrs. Alston had been a resident of this city about fifteen years, removing here from Brooklyn. Her husband died about ten years ago.

Mrs. Alston was a member of the Home department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, and Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of the church, will conduct the service at the late home tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The burial will be in Greenwood cemetery.

Clevely to Remove.

E. H. Clevely who, for the past twenty-two years, has conducted a restaurant on North avenue, opposite the railroad station, will vacate the property April 1 and on that date will open a quick-lunch room at 179 North avenue, next to J. T. Vail's real estate office. The store he has leased was formerly occupied by the Plainfield Typewriter Exchange. David T. Kenney owns the property where Mr. Clevely is now located.

Rogers, Abraham K. Holder, Fred Moffet, Thomas Callahan, James Wheeler, Elmer E. Barrett, Richard J. Fletcher and Frank Shepard. Frederick Happle, of Fanwood, was also chosen as a petit juror.

DIME SOCIAL HELD BY LYDIA CHAPTER

Everything was disposed of at good prices and a good sum realized for the benefit of the chapter. There was a sale of cake and candy and a feature was a salamagundi party in charge of Mrs. H. M. Woodward, Mrs. Harry Purcell, Mrs. L. R. Williams and Mrs. E. A. Laing.

The cake table was in charge of Mrs. William Hutchcroft, Mrs. William Eviland and Mrs. Harry Uhler, while Mrs. A. E. Force and Mrs. Clayton M. Nagle. During the evening there was an informal program comprising vocal solos by Harold Leadbitter, Miss Zeta Voorhees, Mrs. Robert Giddis, of this city; Mrs. J. R. Smith, of Newark; also recitations by Mrs. William Haddin and piano solos by Miss Anna Warnock. Mrs. Clayton M. Nagle was chairman of the program committee, assisted by other members of the chapter.

M'CUTCHEON ESTATE SOLD FOR $125,000

The most important realty deal in this city in a long time has just been closed, the large and attractive estate situated on Plainfield avenue, between Sherman and Pemberton avenues, running back to Stillman avenue, for many years occupied by former Mayor Evans, and more recently by Robert Mc Cutcheon, has been sold to John McMorrow, of the McMorrow Engineering and Construction Company, of Broadway and 157th street, New York. At present he has a home at Far Rockaway. The tract comprises twelve acres. The purchase price was $125,000.

Mr. McMorrow will take possession of the property in June, Mr. McCutcheon is now preparing to vacate. The new owner's plans are not known, but he will doubtless further improve the property.

TO SHOW PICTURES OF 'PASSION PLAY'

Henry Ellsworth, traveler and lecturer, and one of the best known authorities on Oberammergau and its world-famed "Pa sion Play," will give an illustrated lecture on the "Passion Play," at the Plainfield theatre, Monday afternoon and evening, March 6, under the auspices of St. Mary's R. C. church, and for the benefit of the new convent. Mr. Ellsworth has lived at Oberammergau every summer for the past eleven years, nearly four years in all. He is personally acquainted with every villager.

Mr. Ellsworth has a fund of authentic information on everything pertaining to the "Pa sion Play." He says that he was personally present at a conference in the village in 1900, when an American offered the villagers $500,000 and all expenses to come to the United States and give a series of performances for ten weeks. They replied that "there never was enough money coined in the history of the world to cause us to give our Passion Play any place except in our own village of Oberammergau." Last summer Mr. Ellsworth was in Oberammergau during the five months of the "Passion Play" season and witnessed twenty-four of the fifty-nine performances.

PLAN CONVENTION

Arrangements for State Sunday School Association Annual Sessions.

HERE NOVEMBER 14, 15 AND 16.

Meetings to Be Held in First Baptist Church—Appropriation for Speakers — Nominating Committee Named.

Representatives from twelve of the local churches and Sunday schools met last evening in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian Association and made preparatory arrangements for the annual State Sunday school convention which is to be held in the First Baptist church, November 14, 15 and 16 next. It was commented upon as the most enthusiastic meeting of the kind ever held in the State, and the visitors, representing the State association were much impressed by the vigor with which the various matters of the convention were taken up.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, presided and told of the appointment made last year at Atlantic City to hold the next convention in this city. George E. Hall, superintendent of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school, was chosen chairman, and F. E. Smith, superintendent of Trinity Reformed Sunday school, secretary.

Rev. S. D. Price, of Camden, corresponding secretary of the State association, stated the purpose of last night's meeting and incidentally referred to Atlantic City's boardwalk as a detriment to a good place for the business of a gathering such as it is proposed to hold. "There is too much board walk there," he said "and it is almost impossible to get the people away from its enticing attractions."

A resolution appropriating $500 for providing speakers in November was passed. There will be 2,370 Sunday schools represented at the coming convention and it is proposed to entertain the 275 delegates at a banquet on the last day of the convention at the Park club, although this latter point has not been definitely settled.

Among the speakers to be heard are Rev. Clellan B. McAfee, pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn; Philip E. Howard, of the Sunday School Times; Professor E. P. St. John, Ph. D., of Hartford Theological Seminary. The theme of all these speakers will be "The Sunday School in the Home."

It was decided that the First Baptist church should be the scene of the convention and announcement was made that accommodations for at least 250 delegates would have to be made. Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the junior department of the First Baptist Sunday-school was chosen general chairman and two members of each school will be appointed to assist him in the arrangements. The nominating committee, which consists of George E. Hall, F. E. Smith, W. D. Murray, F. E. Church and Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, will have power to appoint chairmen of sub committees.

It was learned last night that George E. Hall, chairman of the State association's finance committee, will represent the State at the National convention to be held in San Francisco, Cal., on June 20 to 27 next. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Hall and they will leave Plainfield on June 13, going to Chicago, whence they will take the trip through Yellowstone Park and other points of interest along the route, arriving in the Golden Gate city in time for the opening of the convention.

Messrs. Tullar and Meredith, the well known evangelists, are expected to be present at the November convention and will have charge of the music. There will be a specially trained chorus to lead the singing.

Before leaving last evening Rev. Mr. Price declared that he was certain from present indications the convention would be the greatest ever held in the State. L. H. Koehler, general State secretary, was equally optimistic. Among those present were representatives from the First Baptist, First M. E., Trinity Reformed, First Presbyterian, Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, Congregational, Grace M. E., Seventh-Day Baptist, Netherwood Reformed, Park Avenue Baptist, and Monroe Avenue M. E. churches and Hope chapel, including Revs. Charles L. Goodrich, Royal A. Stout, Dr. C. M. Anderson, Ora J. Shoop, Edwin Shaw and Samuel D. Price, of Camden.

Complaint About Crosswalks.

There have been many complaints regarding the condition of the crosswalks throughout the city. In many cases the walks are so deeply buried in mud that they cannot be seen; others are almost impassable on account of the mud, while in some sections there are no crosswalks at all.

RELATIVES FOUND

LONG SEARCH SUCCESSFUL.

Young Woman Resigns Her Position as Telephone Operator at Local Exchange—Lawyer's Efforts Rewarded.

After believing for eighteen years that she was alone in the world without kith or kin, Miss Emily Mosher, a young women living on Race street, at the home of Mrs. Sarah Laible, was happily surprised a few days ago to learn that she had a sister, brothers and other relatives who had been trying for a long time to locate her. The information first came in the form of a letter from a lawyer at Easton, Pa., asking for conformation of several facts about herself in order that she might be restored to her family and share in an estate. She complied to the best of her knowledge and it was more than sufficient to establish her identity. On Saturday last, one of her three brothers came to Plainfield and if any doubt exists in the minds of anybody that they were related, an ordinary glance at the features of the two would remove it.

Miss Mosher has been employed as operator at the local telephone exchange and immediately resigned her position, she left for Easton yesterday and will make her home there in the future. Besides the sister and brothers, all of her relatives with one exception, are older than she, her new-found relatives include a grandmother, aunts, uncles and cousins. She was one of the happiest individuals in the world when she had finished meeting them all.

The story of Miss Mosher's disappearance from her relatives dates back to the death of her parents in 1893 when she was but four years old. The family was then living at Trenton and Emily was taken in charge by an aunt who had become estranged from all the rest. This aunt afterward placed the child in an institution for orphans but refused to disclose where it was. She remained there twelve years and all that time was taught to believe that she was absolutely alone in the world. Six years ago she was placed in charge of Postmaster Henry Garretson, of Dunellen, and remained as a member of his family until she secured the position at the telephone office last year, since then she has lived with Mrs. Laible.

The aunt who placed her in the orphanage recently relented when the remainder of the family besought her to reveal Emily's whereabouts and give the name of the institution. The records were searched and showed that she had gone to the Garretson home. Correspondence was commenced from that point with the result that the girl was finally restored to her own.

Miss Mosher is an attractive young woman and had many friends here and in Dunellen who will be greatly pleased to learn of her good fortune. Besides finding her relatives she will come in for considerable money in the division of an estate.

DUNGAN IS JUDGE OF CIRCUIT COURT

Governor Wilson today submitted to the Senate the nomination of Col. Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville, as a Judge of the Circuit Court to succeed Wilbur Heisley, of Long Branch. The appointment has been anticipated. The new judge is one of the best known lawyers in the State. He was formerly prosecutor of pleas in Somerset county by appointment of Governor Werts, the last Democratic executive previous to Governor Wilson.

Mr. Dungan has been prominent in the National Guard for more than fifteen years having joined its ranks as a private twenty-five years ago. For the past four years he has been the commander of the Second Regiment. The Governor also appointed William C. Dana, of Hackensack, and George W. Perkins, of New York, as members of the Interstate Palisade Park Commission.

OPEN NEW ROOMS

Local Equal Suffrage League Marks Event by a Public Reception.

STATE ASS'N HEAD SPEAKS.

Mrs. Laddy's Talk Preceded by That of Mrs. John Rogers, of New York—The Rooms to Be Open Every Day.

The doors of the new rooms of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield were thrown open for the first time yesterday in their new quarters in the Frost building and a continual stream of members and friends of the league was pouring in from 3 o'clock until nearly 7 in the evening. It was estimated that nearly 200 women attended the house warming and reception and the members were warmly congratulated on the acquisition of the rooms.

Mrs. Clara Laddy, of Arlington, State President of the Equal Suffrage League and Mrs. John Rogers, of the New York State League, addressed those present in the earlier part of the afternoon after which tea and coffee and cake and candy were served. A general discussion was had as to the advisability of accepting the invitation extended by Mrs. Rogers to join in the monster demonstration to be made in New York on April 29 next. The speaker urged the women of Plainfield to take a more lively interest in the coming event. "Democracy," she said, "is what we heartily believe in and we expect to win our greatest victories in the coming years through the appeal to popular agitation to our cause. We have found after 40 years of quiet work that success comes much too slowly, and we believe that politics of the militant sort are necessary to bring about the reforms so much needed in the world.

"The working women and girls, the social evil and everything which in the present day tends in anyway to hamper the growth of the moral welfare of the States ought to have the sympathy and help of all educated women. It has been demonstrated beyond cavil that women are eminently qualified to bear the burden equally with men of the affairs of State. So it is for the benefit of the country at large that we would assume the work. Beyond all this our factory laws must be changed. The reasons are so obvious that I need not enlarge upon the subject but I trust that the women of this beautiful city will clearly see their duty and do it."

Mrs. Rogers afterwards said that she would like to have delivered a speech from the top of a soap box in the street at some convenient corner. She would undoubtedly have had a large audience.

Mrs. Clara Laddy spoke briefly anent the objects of the New Jersey association and incidentlly paid a high tribute to Mrs. W. H. Riley, mother of Champlain L. Riley, who has been one of the most faithful workers for the cause for years. Mrs. John H. Dennett and Miss Inez Mifholland who were expected to speak sent regrets. They are watching the equal suffrage bill which is now in committee at Albany and dared not leave their posts at so critical a time. William L. Saunders, who it was announced would address the women, was unable to be present.

Mrs. F. W. Wallace, chairman of the refreshment committee, was ably assisted by Mrs. Maxwell Perkins, Mrs. M. F. Elderton, Mrs. Schroeder and Mrs. A. B. Jones. Mrs. E. F. Feickert and Mrs. Champlain L. F. Riley composed the committee of arrangements and reception. The rooms were tastefully arranged, placarded and decorated with the flag of the league and lithographs of Washington and Lincoln.

The rooms of the league will be open daily and the working girls of the city are cordially invited to make use of them. Visitors were present from all the nearby towns and the afternoon was a thoroughly enjoyable one for all who attended.

Woodmen Hear Lecture.

Members of the Modern Woodmen of America were entertained last evening in Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall by a lecture delivered by E. F. Burns, national lecturer of the organization. Mr. Burns told of the value of membership in the organization and of the splendid sanitarium in Colorado for the sick members of the organization. Upward of 100 persons were present.

Gifts for Clan.

TYPEWRITER PLANT MAY LOCATE HERE

The Chamber of Commerce will hold its March meeting Thursday night when business of considerable general interest will be discussed. It is expected that Julius Keeler, of the Typewriter Company, will attend the meeting and have something to say regarding his efforts to bring his factory to this city. Mr. Keeler has visited the city a number of times and has held frequent conferences with members of the Chamber of Commerce relative to his plans.

There will also be a discussion of the proposition of government by commission. Charles J. Fisk has recently become interested in this idea and it is understood has communicated some facts to be presented at the coming meeting. The plan has a number of supporters in this city and doubtless the discussion will be productive of some good.

Judge Ulrich, as secretary, will also have several other matters of more or less importance to present and the final report of the banquet committee will also be received and passed upon by the members.

FATHER'S TROUBLES SOLVED BY NURSERY

A rather hard proposition came before City Judge William G. DeMeza this morning when Emilio Helalla, an Italian of Terrill road, was arraigned on complaint of the school authorities for not sending his eleven-year-old daughter to school.

It was learned that DeLalla has recently lost his wife and that the care of a four-year-old child had devolved upon the little girl, Maria, who has been attending the Lincoln school. Delalla has three other children all of whom attend school regularly. He told the court this morning that owing to the death of his wife he was much in debt and could not afford to hire a housekeeper and in fact was at his wits end to know what to do.

It was finally arranged that the youngest of the children should be taken care of at the Day Nursery and thus allow the little girl of whom complaint was made to attend school as before.

DENY LICENSE TO GLOEKLER

By Unanimous Vote Common Council Refuses to Renew License for Saloon at Front and Somerset.

The adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, furnished a mild sensation, for the city fathers refused to renew Christian Gloekler's application for a saloon license at West Front and Somerset streets. During the past week or two there has been more or less talk regarding the possibility of Mr. Gloekler's losing his license and in certain quarters it was predicted that he would be "turned down." The nine members present voted against the application.

While no reason for refusing the application were given in open meeting, the chief cause was the presentation of three affidavits from as many boys showing that they had bought liquor at the saloon, and that therefore, the proprietor was guilty, it is alleged, of violating the law in selling to minors. It was further said that the first information of alleged violation of the law came to the Council through a member of the license committee and that upon being investigated by the police and Mayor Moy, the officials became satisfied in their own minds as to the violations.

Of the nine members of the Council, it is said that only two were willing to vote for the renewal of Mr. Gloekler's license and that all the rest were unalterably opposed to the renewal. The fact that it has been what has been called a "bad corner" also entered somewhat into the decision of the Council to refuse to again issue a license for the place. There have been many complaints made about the conditions around this corner, it being a favorite spot for street loafers much to the annoyance of people who use Front and Somerset streets as a thoroughfare.

As Mr. Gloekler's license was not renewed he will be obliged to close his saloon at 11 o'clock tonight. In the opinion of one of the councilmen it is exceedingly doubtful whether another saloon will ever be licensed again to do business at Front and Somerset streets.

It was nine o'clock before the meeting was called last night, the councilmen being closeted in the ante-room for more than an hour considering the application of Mr. Gloekler. The affidavits sworn to by the three boys, who are said to have purchased liquor in the saloon, were presented and discussed at much length. It was decided in the caucus that the aplication should be refused.

All the other applications, eleven in all, were granted by a unanimous vote of the nine members present. The absentees were President R. I. Tolles and Councilman John E. Dunn, of the Fourth ward, who is ill. The successful applicants are as follows:

Eastern Bottling Company and Frank Linke, wholesale; Henry F. Windham, Hotel Waldorf; Peter Floersch, formerly Hotel Iroquois, now Queen City Hotel; Alexander Riley, Hotel Kensington; Jacob Blimm, Jr., Farmer's Hotel, and the following for saloon licenses: G. J. Weinman, 213 Park avenue; Michael F. Watson, 211 Grant avenue; Ellsworth C. Westcott, 115 East Front street; Alexander D. Findlay, 123 East Second street and John and Frank Clark, 456 West Third street.

After the granting of the wholesale licenses, Councilman Buxton, who was acting president pro tem, gave those present an opportunity to speak for or against the granting of any license. Out of the large number of persons in the lobby, including lawyers, liquor dealers and their friends, not a single one had anything to say in reference to the matter and the licenses were granted without any further comment. Councilman W. W. Wilson, as chairman of the license committee, reported all applications, under a suspended order of business, after a resolution was passed putting the members on record as opposed to increasing the number of licensed places or granting any new applications. As soon as the license matter was disposed of the crowd in the lobby quickly left the room and the other business of the evening was considered.

The building in which Gloekler's saloon has been located is one of the city's landmarks. It was erected about 125 years ago and has been used for a great many purposes. Jerusalem lodge, F & A. M., was in-

INSTRUCTION CAMP APPEARS ASSURED

In the statement just issued Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., said that so many favorable replies had been received from officers of the National Guard with reference to the establishment of a camp of instruction that there seemed to be no doubt that such a camp would be held. The proposal for the camp for this State came from the United States Army authorities on the theory that such a school for the study of military tactics would be very valuable for the New Jersey militia.

The camp will be held next summer under the direction of the Department of the East, under the command of General Frederick Grant, U. S. A.

General Sadler has sent letters to the First and Second Troops of Cavalry, Batteries A and B Field Artillery and the Signal Corps Company, requesting them to notify him at once of the number of officers of each organization who desire to attend the schools of instruction which have been established at Forts Leavenworth and Riley, Kansas. Last year the officers of Battery B took advantage of the school on instruction at Fort Leavenworth and the marked improvement shown in their work at Gettysburg maneuvers which was superior to that of any other battery, was the result of the instruction they received.

SURE, YOU KNOW HOW TO RUN A NEWSPAPER

George Ade says about every other fellow you meet thinks he could run a good hotel, and we have come to the conclusion that about every one you meet could run a fine newspaper, remarked Eugene L'Hote the genial editor and publisher of the Milford (Ill.) Herald, editorially in a recent issue of that bright and interesting paper. Men will take the liberty to tell you how to run a paper, asserts L'Hote, when they wouldn't think to hinting to the merchant how to conduct his store or to tell the preacher what to preach. They pay good money for schools and don't know whether Johnny is learning the rule of three or how to hold a cigarette gracefully, but when it comes to the newspaper, sizzling cats, there's where they all get off.

During the past week a friend wanted to know why we don't try and run a paper a little more along the lines of how Christ would run a paper. We don't know how that would be. In the first place if Christ was back on earth we don't believe he would go into the newspaper business at all, and if he did we are sure he wouldn't come to Milford to do it. If our friend had wanted is more on a religious plane we could tell him frankly that it wouldn't pay. There is not an editor or a preacher that could tell the truth for thirty days and stay in the community in which they live. If our friend doubts this let him try telling the absolute truth for just one week and see where he lights.

We never were much to "soft soap" or "blarney" anyone. In fact, our bluntness and honesty of speech has cost us many friends. Tell the truth! We aren't going to do it, yet we believe there would be a better understanding with humanity, many times if people had the courage to do it. A Kansas editor announced he would try for one week and he is still in the hospital. He didn't get past the first day. The following item appeared in Monday's issue and now the boys are getting out the paper. This is what he said: "Married, Miss Sylvia Rhode to James Cannaham, last Sunday evening at the Baptist church. The bride was an ordinary town girl who don't know any more than a rabbit about cooking and never helped her mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty by any means and has a gait like a duck. The groom is an up-to-date loafer, has been living off the old folks all his life, and don't amount to shucks nohow. They will have a hard life while they live together."—Western Publisher.

he did not talk business with the tall twirler, but expected the matter to be fixed up at the club office today.

Rube Vickers is the first of the Baltimore Orioles to arrive in the Monumental City. The big fellow has blown in from his home in Watervlied, Mich., where he has been since the season closed, last September. Rube is ready to begin spring training. Vickers is anxious to take in the trip to Hot Springs, Va., and says Dunn will not regret sending his twirlers there to get in shape for the preliminary games. Manager Dunn is willing to ship Vickers to the springs as soon as he desires to go.

Jocko Halligan, a former member of the Skeeters and for a time an umpire in the Eastern League, may land a job as indicator handler in the New York State League. Halligan has received an offer from President J. H. Farrell and will most likely accept the terms.

GOLF.

When the snow disappears from the mountainside much in the way of improvement will be done on the links of the Essex County Country Club, of West Orange. Some of the holes will be shortened, others lengthened and in two or three instances greens will be shifted to more desirable locations.

David Hunter, the club's professional said yesterday, that the sixth tee would be pushed back and a trap dug, so as to penalize a poor second shot. An increase of 100 yards has been planned for the eighth hole, where the tee will be put back that much, making the total about 380 yards.

The present long 500-yard tenth hole up the side of the mountain may be cut down 100 yards. This would be made possible by the shifting of the ninth green to the right. If the tenth were reduced to 400 yards it would make a fine two-shot hole, whereas in its present length no one can possibly get home in less than three shots.

The eleventh fairway down the mountain will be widened by cutting down more trees. Distance lost through the shortening of the tenth hole can be regained at No. 15, where the plan is to put the tee back fully 100 yards. Two good shots would then be required in order to reach the green. At the fourteenth the plan is to make a new green fifty yards further on, so that a full second shot with wood would be required to carry the ravine.

SPORTS
News and Notes

BASEBALL.

Eighteen members of the Chicago National League baseball club, under the direction of Manager Frank Chance, left the Windy City Sunday for West Baden, Ind., to begin training for the 1911 season. Half a dozen players will join the team at West Baden, and the recruits will meet the club at New Orleans next Saturday, making in all thirty-four men in camp. Neither Pitcher Overall nor Catcher John Kling have advised Manager Chance when they will report, but it is expected they will join the team early in March. Starting March 5, exhibition games will be played in New Orleans, and then the team will begin a tour northward, playing games in the principal cities, and reaching Chicago April 7 for four exhibition games.

The difference existing between Lefty Russell and Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, will likely be patched up today, when the famous southpaw is to have an audience with the leader of the famed world's champions. It has been predicted by the Philadelphia diamond scribes that Russell will come to an agreement with the Philadelphia club and will sign a contract before he departs from the Quaker town. It is believed Mack will likely give Russell the same contract which he offered him when he joined the Athletics last fall, which called for $2,100, which is equal to about $350 per month.

Hans Wagner has been notified that he will be excused from jury duty if he shows the court his signed contract with the Pirates and states that it is his wish and intention to start for West Baden with the team. It is said in Pittsburg that the management of the baseball club arranged to have the Flying Dutchman drawn for jury duty in order to make him sign up promptly, instead of worrying all the fans by withholding his autograph until the last possible minute. Hans says he will comply with the court's conditions.

The hitting of pitchers in the game between the All-Americans and All-Nationals Sunday was the feature of a verdict for the former, 5 to 3. McQuallan, of Cincinnati; Summers, of Detroit, and Clark, of Chicago, each had a home run to his credit. Donovan, of Detroit, played the first bag, and presented himself in a new role of monologist to the large Sunday audience, which he entertained with a cross-fire of comedy. Bush, the Detroit shortstop, showed class in Sunday's game, having chances which were handled in mid-season form.

Earl Moore, the star mound artist of the Philadelphia Nationals, who is the only member of Manager Dooin's players list who has not yet signed a contract for the coming season, reached the City of Brotherly Love yesterday afternoon and had a talk with the Phillies' bustling leader. Manager Dooin later stated that he did not talk business with the tall twirler, but expected the matter to be fixed up at the club office today.

PASS OVER VETO

City Fathers by Resolution Empower Committee to Employ Counsel.

ON JUDGE COLLINS' ADVICE.

Common Council Also Receives a Veto on Its Ordinance to Extend Kensington Avenue—Some Minor Matters.

Mayor Moy returned with his veto, to the Common Council last night, the resolution passed recently by the Council authorizing the finance committee to engage legal counsel when necessary, as a temporary measure, stating that in his opinion it did not comply with the city ordinances and if passed would permit every committee of the Council to employ legal counsel. He also returned without his approval the ordinance to extend Kensington avenue, claiming that there is no real need for the improvement, that the method would be an expensive one for the city, that residents are against it and that one property-owner had threatened to get out an injunction against the city if the improvement was made.

The Council took a short recess following the receipt of these communications from the Mayor and returning to regular session, Mr. Mygatt stated by way of explanation that Judge Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City, drafted the resolution empowering the finance committee to secure legal counsel, that he had been acquainted with Mayor Moy's objections and that he had informed the committee that the resolution was drafted in proper form. Mr. Mygatt then moved that the resolution be passed notwithstanding the Mayor's objections. This was done, all the members except Mr. Holt voting in the affirmative. No further action was taken regarding the Kensington avenue matter.

Prior to taking the recess, Mr. Holt offered a resolution providing that the Mayor be empowered to employ legal counsel, it being intended to change the authority from the finance committee to His Honor. Mr. Clay objected to the adoption of the resolution on the grounds that it had not been considered by the committee and nothing more was heard of it, the original resolution being passed.

The affidavits containing the oaths of the commissioners of assessments were received and on motion of Mr. Mygatt were ordered filed. Walter L. Hetfield communicated with the Council regarding a property at 1135-1137 Earl street, in the First ward, stating that a deed had been overlooked in the transfer of a part of the property, and requesting the Council to adjust the matter in the interest of clients represented by himself. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

A communication from the New Jersey State Charities Aid requesting the Council to send a representative to the State meeting, was filed. P. H. Batourette was granted an auctioneer's license and I. H. Shrager was granted a junkman's license. The bonds of Hezekiah Hand and Edward Willis, as constables, were filed.

Funeral of Francis R. Hoyt.

The funeral of Francis Rogers Hoyt was held at the late home on West Eighth street, yesterday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock and was very largely attended by relatives and friends, including a number of former business associates of Mr. Hoyt. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, conducted the service. A quartet comprising Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Miss Etta Rayberf, soprano; W. J. Tallamy, tenor and William Holmes, baritone, sang several selections. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Planning Work for Young Men.

Under the auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, an open meeting was held in the association hall on Grove street, last night, to discuss plans for carrying on a general work in the interest of the young men of the city. Judge William Newcorn addressed the young men, explaining the objects of the proposed work and it was decided to hold another meeting next week to elect a board of managers to carry out the plans.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

stituted there in 1818, and in later years it was the home of the Plainfield Union, one of the town's first papers. A. L. Force, editor and proprietor of The Daily Pres, learned the rudiments of the printing business in the place with this concern.

The building was first opened as a saloon shortly after the war of the Rebellion and has been continud as such ever since. The first proprietor was a Mr. Millbee, who afterward sold it to Joseph A. Blatz. In 1871 the latter disposed of the business to the late Charles Smith, father of Charles Smith, of Craig place. The son succeeded his father in 1880 and conducted it for twenty years. Mr. Blatz then took possession of the place again, having retained the property, and held the business for two years. He sold the building and business to Mr. Gloekler in November, 1902.

Mr. Gloekler said today that the act of the Council had cost him a great amount of money. The stock of liquors he has on hand is valued at $6,000 while in adidtion he has between ten and fifteen thousand cigars.

DROP THE INQUIRY ON AN EXPLOSION.

While the State law fails to specifically cover the case, Prosecutor Mott stated yesterday that he had assumed authority to stop the manufacture of fireworks in Belleville, under conditions similar to those that were brougt to light in the explosion of Thursday last, in which three persons were killed.

Mr. Mott announced that he had decided on his course following a conference yesterday morning with Chief Flynn, of Belleville, and C. Albert Gasser, inspector of the Newark bureau of combustibles and fire risks.

Mr. Gasser made the examination of the Belleville ruins Saturday, at the request of the prosecutor, and took with him to the court house yeserday morning several specimens of the output of the plant. According to Mr. Gasser, the only explosive used in the manufacture of fireworks at the plant was gunpowder, and this only in various compositions that did not include high explosives.

The State law restricts only the storage and manufacture of high explosives and gunpowder in its elementary form. It was the opinion of Mr. Mott, therefore, that official action could not be taken under the statute.

Sabbath Observance.

Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, postponed the hearing in the case of the city against John Consoli until next Monday morning. Consoli was arraigned on charges of violating the Sunday closing ordinance and claimed membership in the Seventh-Day Baptist church. His store is on Somerset street.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

John Teeling, aged nineteen years, died yesterday morning at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Teeling, of Front street. He had been a sufferer for a long time but bore his affliction with admirable resignation. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be made in Elizabeth.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church held a rehearsal last night, of the entertainment to be given on March 24. It is entitled "The District School of Blueberry Corner," and promises to be very amusing. It will be conducted by Miss Ella Boice and Mrs. J. Newton Apgar.

Theodore Zeller, who has been detained at home because of an injury to his foot, received at the Levering and Garrigues shop, was able to return to work today.

Joseph Penrose has purchased Charles S. Day's meat market in New Market and will personally conduct it. Possession was taken yesterday.

The W. A. Woodruff house on Front street, has been rented to T. J. Gledden, of Plainfield, through the agency of Robert L. Pierce.

George W. Day, of the Call, attended the editorial association meeting and banquet at Trenton yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Schenck spent yesterday in New York.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

William Horan, of Plainfield, drunk and disorderly, was taken care of by marshal Geo. Rabig last night, and was put in the "cooler" to sober up. Judge Clarke and Horan will have a heart to heart talk today and the township treasury will probably be enriched by $5 and the usual cost.

The date of the baseball club's dance is March 31 and not March 1 as announced. Tickets will be out within a few days and as everyone is interested in the game, there should be a brisk sale.

Miss Anna Buchmann, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Buchmann, of Mountain avenue, has returned to her home at Elizabeth.

The sidewalk on Park avenue has received a covering of crushed stone, which, when packed, will make the walk in good condition again.

Miss Lillian Carmody, who has been visiting the Misses Southard, of Cook avenue, has returned to her home at Jamaica, L. I.

Lynus Walpole, of Westfield avenue, is spending a week with relatives and friends in the New England States.

ELIZABETH TO HAVE A NEW ARMORY SOON

Addresses by State, county and city officials and men prominent in the military affairs of the State marked the breaking of ground for the new battalion armory to be erected in Elizabeth, at Magnolia avenue and Walnut street, Saturday. The first spadeful of sod was turned by Miss Louise Helen Collins, daughter of Brigadier-General Dennis F. Collins, of the Second Regiment.

In the absence of Mayor Alfred A. Stein, who was unable to be present because of a previous engagement of several weeks' standing, Edward Nugent, president of the City Council and acting Mayor, represented the city and expressed the hope that those in charge of the armory would not hesitate to open its doors for social entertainments for Elizabeth charitable institutions.

At the opening of the exercises, Rev. Otis A. Glazebrook, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, and formerly chaplain of the Second Regiment, offered the invocation. The exercises closed by the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by the Liederkranz Society. The committee which arranged the exercises was composed of Major William B. Martin, Colonel Robert L. Paterson, General Dennis F. Collins, Captain Conrad Hall and Captain Robert J. Montgomery.

State Architect George E. Poole, Fred Kilgus, of Newark and Colonel N. Y. Dungan, representing the Second Regiment, were among those present.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

George Broadhurst's clever American play, "The Man of the Hour," which left such a pleasing and lasting impression on the occasion of former visits, will again be seen in this city, to the gratification of theatre patrons who are devotees of the best there is in the drama. The same care that marks all of the productions of this management is a feature of this season's offering. "The Man of the Hour" will be the attraction at The Plainfield theatre, tomorrow night. So well and favorably know, the play hardly needs more than a brief mention to insure the usual packed houses that have greeted it at every performance in the past. The enviable reputation of the play and its more than uncommon popularity is due entirely to the fact that it is by general consent the best American play yet written.

HOW TO TELL GOOD MEAT.

Good beef has a reddish-brown color and contains no clots of blood. Well-nourished beeves furnish a flesh which, while raw, is marked with spots of white fat; it is firm and compact. Old, lean animals furnish a flesh which is tough, dry and dark; the fat is yellow. Veal is but slightly reddish and has tender white fibres. The fat is not distributed through the lean, as in beef. The same is true of mutton. In well-nourished animals white fat accumulates along the borders of the muscles. Pork is rose red and has fat distributed through the muscles. The lard it white and lies in heavy deposits under the skin.

To Renew Crepe.

Stretch the crepe over a bowl of boiling water, holding it smooth, but not too tightly, and moving it about as the steam throughly penetrates it. Fold while still damp in the original creases and place under a heavy board to dry. This will make the crepe look almost as well as new, and is a way which I have tried often, and always with successful results.

BOYS AS ATHLETES AT THE Y.M.C.A. GYM

The gallery of the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium was crowded to its capacity last evening to watch the gambols of the little fellows, members of the Boys' department of the association, and incidentally enjoy the athletic exercises. The boys went through gymnastic exercises that almost turned their parents upside-down just to watch them, and many complimentary things were said about Physical Director Whittaker.

It is said, and perhaps, truly, that the parents of many of the youngsters are not aware of the splendid training that is being given to their sons at the Y. M. C. A., not alone physically, but morally. Defects of physique as well as mental obliquity are sometimes eradicated through the good offices of the men who have the boys in charge and the cost to the parents is infinitesimal when the actual good results are noticed. One woman who had two boys on the floor could hardly believe that they were hers when she saw two youngsters in their natty athletic togs, go through a series of stunts calculated to try a trained gymnast. "I had no idea they were so limber," she said.

Sixty-one boys lined up for the manual exercises accompanied by piano music played by Ernest Stevens. Dumbbells were used in this exercise making the building resound with the rythmic claps of the ends. Tumbling, jumping the horse, buck jumping and pyramids were executed with precision and the ease born of good instruction and practice.

The leaders in these stunts were boys who have become proficient in all branches of athletics. They were James McNamee, George Leighs, Fred Dickerson, Craig Blair, Walter Scribner, Raymond Manley, Andrew Hetfield and Valentine Goldsmith. Following the gymnastic display a relay race, volley ball, and a basketball game between the boys of the senior class and the leaders of the juniors followed. Many of the parents of the boys took occasion to inspect the boys' rooms on the second floor of the building and barring the fact that they found them cramped for the number they care for were much pleased with the display.

Miss Lillian Danielson, daughter of Dr. J. E. Danielson, of Gardiner, Ulster County, N. Y., is visiting her cousin, Miss Lillian A. Force, of Duer street.

The interdenominational committee of all the evangelical churches will meet tomorrow morning in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church to arrange for the jubilee for foreign missions.

THE SILVER FLAGON

A Wonderful Treasure It Held For Many Years

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Great-aunt Hannah squinted horribly, so when with almost her last breath she looked earnestly at her three grandnieces and gasped, "The silver flagon is for you—it has never been opened—you know the legend," not one of us really knew to whom the heirloom rightfully belonged.

In the library the two executors conferred amiably together. In the kitchen the servants discussed the legacies they had received.

In the long parlor Amelia, Fanny and I sat in front of the glowing grate fire. On the white marble mantelpiece above our heads stood a pair of precious Dresden vases, a Wedgwood clock and a Chinese fan. In the center, directly under the painting of Mrs. Dorothy Fabyan, was the silver flagon, flawless in shape and perfect in its chaste design of vine and leaf and clustered fruit. Its polished surface gave back a distorted reflection of our three faces, ruddy in the firelight.

No mention had yet been made of Aunt Hannah's belated disposition of the family heirloom. It was not mentioned in the will, and its ownership must be settled among the three of us.

It was Amelia who broke the long, awkward silence by reaching up a graceful arm and taking the silver flagon from its resting place.

"I am the eldest," she apologized, settling back in her chair, "and I am quite sure that Aunt Hannah meant me to have it. She looked at me." Amelia's tone was coolly defiant.

"She looked at me, too," said Fanny in gentle protest. "I am sure she looked at me, did she not, Esther?"

I shrugged my shoulders helplessly. "I thought she looked at me." I murmured feebly.

"No one could gaze in three different directions at one time," said Amelia impatiently.

"Aunt Hannah could," I announced loyally.

"For shame, Esther Fabyan!" they cried in duet, and then they turned their backs upon me and fell into whispered converse over the probable contents of the bone of contention—of course I mean the silver flagon.

The tall silver stopper fitted snugly to the neck, and around it was a thin stream of red sealing wax.

The silver flagon had once been the property of Mistress Dorothy Fabyan, our sweet ancestress, and tradition had it that within its polished interior the fair Dorothy had secreted the precious jewels which her rich husband had lavished upon her. When she was dying she had given the flagon to her young daughter, saying:

"Guard well the flagon, daughter, and when you have reached years of discretion you may break the seal and learn the contents—rubies and diamonds and pearls. Let no other woman steal it away from you! It contains what all women desire and but few attain. It will be yours."

"And it belonged to you, mother, dear?" the young girl had timidly asked as she stroked the delicate, withered cheek.

Dorothy Fabyan had smiled proudly ere she closed her beautiful eyes forever. "Aye, it was mine for a season," she said.

The young daughter had died in her teens, and the silver flagon, with its seal still unbroken, passed to a distant branch of the family, gay townspeople, who took small notice of Cousin Dorothy's bequest save to thrust it away on the top shelf of a cupboard and forget its existence.

And thus it had come down to us, the last of a long line. At times its history had been forgotten, and for years it would remain merely an ornament on sideboard or mantelpiece. Again some new owner would look longingly at the seal, yet hesitate to break in upon the secret it had concealed.

Aunt Hannah had owned it last, and she was so choice of it that never did vandal finger touch its surface or careless dust cloth even approach its throne on the white marble. No hand save Aunt Hannah's own came in contact with the silver flagon.

And now Amelia and Fanny turned it this way and that and gently tapped the stopper, guessing idly at the contents.

Amelia looked longingly at the red seal. "I believe it contains the old Fabyan jewels—it was never known what became of them after the war. I have heard that Dorothy Fabyan stripped the gems from their settings and concealed them somewhere. It is likely she hid them in this flagon. How strange that no one has cared enough about them to investigate its contents!"

"Suppose we leave the seal unbroken," I suggested.

"Why should we do that?" asked Fanny, with wide open eyes.

"It never has been opened," I said lamely. "So many of the Fabyan women have owned the flagon and respected the seal of its contents, why should we open it?"

"Because its ownership must be decided among us," replied Amelia firmly. "The Fabyan women passed the flagon down from mother to daughter, leaving the secret to be discovered by the one who cared to open it. I confess that the curiosity of all my ancestors seems concentrated within me at this very instant, and open the flagon I must!"

"Me, too," added Fanny.

"I suppose that is the best way," I agreed. "We are the last of the race, and none of us is married. Let us at least satisfy our curiosity."

"Besides that, we must divide the contents or decide upon the ownership of the flagon, since you will not recognize that I have an individual claim," Amelia drew a silver penknife from her pocket and opened a shining blade.

"Or that I have a claim," put in Fanny decidedly.

"Or mine," I added.

"We must compromise." Amelia's voice was growing colder, and involuntarily I drew nearer the grate and poked the fire into greater warmth. "Let us divide the contents into two parts and call the flagon itself a third part, each of us to agree to be entirely satisfied with her share. Do you agree?"

"I do," said Fanny promptly.

"Sight unseen?" I queried.

Amelia nodded emphatically.

"Very well. I agree."

"I am the eldest. I shall take first choice," began Amelia, with a slight flush on her lovely face. "I choose half of the contents of the flagon."

"I am next," cried Fanny eagerly. "I will take the other half of the contents. And you, Esther, what will you choose?" she asked magnanimously.

"I—I will take the silver flagon," I responded humbly, and they seemed very well satisfied.

We gathered about Amelia's chair as she chipped at the sealing wax with her penknife. She flung the crimson bits into the fire, and it made little white hot sheets of flame that darted up the black mouthed chimney like a short life that is quickly burned out or a woman's fragile beauty that flares for a brief period and then dies away, leaving gray ashes.

When the wax was broken and the stopper had been with difficulty loosened from the slender neck of the vessel in turn we peered down the slender orifice and saw nothing. We shook the flagon and heard nothing. We turned it upside down, and nothing happened.

"It is empty," said Amelia, with a white face.

"Perhaps the jewels are stuck fast to the bottom," I suggested. "You know they have been interred for a century."

"Get your curling tongs, Fanny," commanded Amelia, darting a hostile glance in my direction.

I looked into the glowing coals, wondering at the magic of possession that had seized upon us three cousins who had been loving friends from childhood. Here we were wrangling over the possession of a silver flagon to which we had scarcely ever given a thought in our busy lives. Thanks to Great-aunt Hannah, we were rich beyond our wildest dreams, and still we could not be satisfied without prying into Dorothy Fabyan's silver flagon!

Fanny returned with the long silver tongs that were used to wave her straight black hair. "They should reach to the very bottom of the jug!" she cried excitedly.

Once more we bent above the silver flagon while Amelia thrust the tongs carefully down the slender neck and after a painful interval drew forth a folded slip of yellowed paper covered with fine pointed chirography.

Fanny and Amelia leaned back pale and breathless while I spelled out the spidery words that explained how Dorothy Fabyan, that clever housewife of so many decades ago, had discovered a most wonderful complexion wash—"Cleopatra's Balm of Beauty" she called it. To this marvelous face wash she ascribed her own exquisite beauty. The ingredients were almost impossible to obtain in those primitive days, and she had even sold her precious jewels to obtain the necessary elements of the balm. Now, she passed the secret of its making to her own daughter and afterward down to the coming generations of the women of her family, and, as if the mere possession of the recipe sealed within the silver flagon could impart a magic spell upon its owner, the Fabyan women had been famous for their wonderful beauty—all save poor Great-aunt Hannah and myself.

"What greater jewels doth any woman possess," concluded the old, old letter, "than diamond eyes, teeth of pearls, coral cheeks and ruby lips? These jewels you will find sealed within my silver flagon."

I ran my eye over the carefully compiled directions for "Cleopatra's Balm of Beauty," and ere I reached its close Amelia uttered a little angry cry and snatched the bit of paper from my grasp. In an instant it fluttered into the fire, and my exclamation of distress brought both girls to my side.

"You could not care for that silly recipe, Esther," wondered Fanny. "See, you have the beautiful silver flagon, while we have nothing. Yet we hoped for gems."

"Jewels you both have a-plenty," I said mournfully. "Look there!" I turned them about till they faced the tall pier glass set between the long windows, and there they stood regarding their beautiful faces in charming embarrassment while I bent above the silver flagon and stared defiantly at the reflection of my own plain features in its polished surface.

"Great-aunt Hannah never knew either," I marveled, thinking of her homely face and the contrasted beauty of her unselfish life.

"Poor old Esther," comforted the girls, poised on either arm of my chair, and as their kisses fell warmly on my uplifted face I seemed not to care that I had lost a heritage of beauty. My heritage of love was still my own.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

A sharp, perfunctory knock at the door, and as the girl struggled to her feet the door opened and Lady Roscommon came in.

"So you are there? Why did you not come when I rang?" She did not wait for an answer, but went on: "But I did not come here to scold you. I have been thinking over the matter, and I can't see that there is any necessity for your leaving in such a hurry. Don't speak—hear me out. I made a promise to your stepfather that I would see that you were provided for, and I should not be easy in my mind if I were to allow you to go away without knowing that you would fall into good hands."

A sound escaped the girl's lips, and Lady Roscommon instinctively stopped.

"I think I know why you made that promise," she said in a harsh, unnatural voice.

Lady Roscommon started and turned pale. Her lips parted as though she meant to speak, but no sound came from them. "What—what do you mean?" she stammered at length.

Nora made no reply, and her mistress gathered courage to say in a high pitched, rather flippant voice: "I can't make you out at all. You are quite changed from what you were. I suppose it is because you are going away."

"I understand now why my father was killed," said Nora in a low, agitated tone, her eyes fixed on those of her mistress. The lady's eyes did not quail, though she became paler every moment.

"I don't understand you," she said calmly. "I don't understand why you should say that."

"I have been reading just lately something my father wrote before he died. It is about you, my lady. I know all that my father knew."

The lady gave an inarticulate gasp and sank down on the bed that stood behind her.

"You know— What do you say?"

"I know what my father knew."

In the second or two that had passed Lady Roscommon had done something to regain the mastery of herself.

"Or imagined that he knew," she managed to say with tolerable composure.

"No, he could not have imagined such a thing. Why should he? If it hadn't been true you would never have given him money to keep your secret. And he would have been alive now."

"You are talking nonsense, Nora—great nonsense. And as for the secret you say you have discovered, it is pure romance—a wicked, slanderous falsehood. I deny every word of it—understand that! But I promised your father that on account of my old acquaintanceship with him I would not see his stepdaughter left friendless or destitute. You must at least let me give you some money, so that you can live comfortably till you find another situation."

"I will take my wages, if you please, my lady, and my fare back to London, but not a penny more."

Lady Roscommon rose and left her without a word.

That night Nora departed from Castle Dare.

Captain Fitzgerald did not remain long after her, but rejoined his regiment in London, hugging to himself the thought that perhaps he might have the good luck to meet Nora in the street some day.

CHAPTER XVII.

HER HANDWRITING.

Guy Lorimer was not killed, though he came close to the gates of death. By slow degrees he recovered his strength, but even after he was physically convalescent the depression caused by grief was worse than many an illness. For hours the poor fellow would sit brooding over the letters he had received from Eva, trying to gain some clew to her strange conduct.

From time to time Foscombe would come in and try to cheer him, and by degrees he let the agents whom he still kept engaged in hunting for Eva report to Foscombe in the first case. He had got sick of hearing of clews which always, after enough money had been spent on them, turned out to be absolutely worthless.

The only man he would have liked to see was his old friend Brooke, but he had never managed to find him at home, and so, except Foscombe, there was no one that knew of his trouble. Men saw that he had lost all his keenness for work, and said to themselves that he was going all to the mischief, and so forth. They did not know that he was broken hearted.

One morning toward the end of August Guy went round to his friend Foscombe's office to inquire for news and was shown into Mr. Foscombe's private room. The lawyer had not arrived, and Guy sat down to wait.

From his chair he could see the morning's letters as they lay face upward on the solicitor's desk, ready for him to open, and in complete absence of mind he began poking them about.

Suddenly he uttered a cry. One of those letters was addressed to Foscombe in Eva Fitzgerald's handwriting!

In an instant he had seized the letter and pressed it passionately to his lips. He ran his finger under the flap of the envelope to tear it open, then paused. The letter was not addressed to him. He had no business to open it. True, it was inconceivable that Eva could have anything to say to Foscombe that he might not hear, but it was only a minute or two of waiting. In three minutes—in less—Foscombe would be in. It would be better to wait and allow him to open it himself. He could not remain still, and paced up and down the room in a fever of impatience. Finally he seized his hat and set out to meet Foscombe. He would at least be able to hurry him and get the letter opened a few seconds earlier.

He met his friend just as he reached the street.

"We have found her!" he cried, gripping him by the arm. "There is a letter from her for you lying on your desk. Come, man! Come along!" And he began to drag him up the stairs that led to the office.

"But—surely not!" gasped Foscombe, his face expressing wonder, incredulity and pleasure at the same time.

"You mean, she would have written to me. I dare say the letter will explain. Perhaps the detective who found her gave her your address, and she wrote to you to break the news to me. It may be bad news. But, thank God, she is alive, and we have found her!"

"There must be some mistake," persisted the lawyer as Guy dragged him up the stairs.

"No mistake at all! As if I didn't know her handwriting as well as I know my own! I was sorely tempted to open the letter, I can tell you. But as I knew you would be here almost at once I waited for you."

To this Foscombe made no answer. He panted a little, as though out of breath, when the last stair was surmounted, and Guy rushed into the office before him. He darted upon the letter and thrust it into his friend's hands.

"There, man, open it! Open it!"

The lawyer took the letter and gazed intently for an instant at the address and shook his head.

"I'm afraid you are wrong, my dear chap," he said as he tore open the envelope and turned at once to the signature.

"Yes, it is not from her. It is from a client of mine."

Guy was staring at him with eyes full of astonishment.

"Will you let me see the signature?" he said quietly.

"I would gladly let you see the whole letter, my dear fellow, but I fear that even to show you the signature would be to violate professional confidence. Surely you don't doubt my word? But I can excuse you doubting any one after such a cruel disappointment."

"I'm so certain that Miss Fitzgerald addressed that envelope that I'm afraid I must insist on seeing the signature to the letter. To show it to me can't possibly violate professional confidence, and at any rate I can't leave you till I do see it."

"My dear Lorimer, it pains me beyond measure to refuse you, but you wouldn't have me betray a client? Yet, stay. I can easily satisfy you that this letter"—he slipped it into his pocket as he spoke—"comes from another person altogether."

He went to the door, which stood open, and called out, "Mr. Fletcher!" Fletcher was the name of his managing clerk. He walked a few steps along the passage that led to the clerks' room, Guy remaining where he was.

A few seconds passed—half a minute—a minute.

Another minute slipped by, and Guy walked impatiently into the outer office.

"Where is Mr. Foscombe?" he asked one of the junior clerks.

"Mr. Foscombe has just gone out, sir."

"Gone out? Where is Mr. Fletcher?"

"Mr. Fletcher has not been here today."

MOTOR TRUCK BOON TO HORSE HE SAYS

F. L. C. Martin, of the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company, agents for Alco automobiles and Alco three and five-ton trucks, with headquarters in this city and Newark, thinks that the motor truck is a boon to man in that it allows him to be kind to the horse. It is distinctly the horse's friend. Mr. Martin said yesterday:

"A transportation company operating in a large city has estimated the falling off in efficiency of its teams and horses to be at least 60 per cent. in the hot summer weather when the thermometer ranges between 95 and 100 degrees in the shade. No one wishes to be cruel to horses under such conditions, and it does not pay to be cruel, even if the temptation to do so is strong.

"For several months in the summer, in climates where the weather is likely to be warm, goods pile up and wait for moderation in temperature, or the work must be done at night, with its attendant inconvenience. On the other hand, in slippery weather, teams must be doubled up, and it is not unusual to see one or more members of a four-horse team down on the slippery pavement while negotiating a heavy load.

"I recently saw a four-horse team hauling two tons of structural steel, with three of the four horses down on the ice, when a five-ton motor truck, loaded to its full capacity, passed by with no trouble at all. Then again, in the congested traffic in large cities and especially in Newark with its narrow streets, horses are too slow to get about. They start their loads slowly and must manipulate carefully in order to retain their footing, especially if the weather conditions are unfavorable as we have had them the last few weeks.

"A motor truck starts quickly when an opening is made in traffic and gets going instantly, is under more perfect control and makes more mileage in dense traffic than horses can make, although the motor truck may not be able to use more than a small proportion of its available speed.

"The motor truck shows its greatest advantage over horses when hauling heavy loads over considerable distances, where speeds are more effective. Every horse must necessarily be comparatively slow, and they are already outclassed in cases where mileage counts most. The motor truck will exert an influence more important than is comprehended today in the increase in the capacity of streets, as well as in the long-distance hauling for which they are supposed to be most perfectly adapted.

"I believe that the surface of the motor truck field has not been more than scratched, and that the builders of reliable and durable trucks are certain to have their hands full in supplying the demand which is rapidly coming upon them. Success will come to those who are wise enough to build their trucks upon the principles which have made the steam locomotive so satisfactory and so serviceable—that is to say, those who appreciate the necessity for the best design, the best material and the most careful manufacture."

THE MEANEST THIEF OPERATES IN BORO.

James Hurley, of Hurley place, just off Belmont avenue, in the borought, aged and respected resident, is forced to relinquish his small truck farm of five acres on account of the depredations and stealings therefrom. Last Saturday night some unknown individual took twenty-five chickens from the place and on Sunday the thief made way with the rest of the flock which recently consisted of seventy-five. Mr. Hurley is past eighty years of age. He and his wife, who is also aged, are the only occupants of the place. Whoever it is that helps himself knows this. Bags of potatoes and almost everything else have been taken from the place.

Mr. Hurley has now decided to rent the place and take up his residence in a more settled part of the borough.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD HOLDS MONTHLY MEETING.

The Borough Board of Education held the regular monthly meeting last night, but transacted little beyond routine business. The reports of the fire drills and attendance were received and approved and bills to the amount of $4,200 passed. The March salaries were included in order to close up the year's account. Adjournment was taken to Monday night, when the coming year's budget will be made up.

The borough's annual school meeting will be held Tuesday night, March 21. The appropriation will be voted upon and four trustees elected to fill the expired terms of E. S. Boyer, E. T. Wilson, Rev. George A. Warner and E. A. Lowe.

The pastor's classes for boys and girls will meet in the study of the Crescent Avenue church, tomorrow afternoon.

Preparatory services will be held at the Crescent Avenue church tomorrow night. The Session will meet afterward to receive any who contemplate joining the church.

MYSTERY ENSHROUDS THIS INTRUDER'S ACTION.

The MacClymont property at 78 Washington avenue, which is unoccupied at the present time, was broken into by someone early this morning. Shortly after 6 o'clock one of the neighbors heard the crash of glass, but thought nothing suspicious about it at the time. Later he made an investigation and found that a cellar window had been smashed for the purpose of gaining an entrance.

Chief Weiss was notified and found that the intruder had dropped into an empty coal bin and after prowling about had made an exit the same way. The tracks in the coal dust on the floor were very small and pointed much like those of a woman. There was nothing in the house to steal and the affair is somewhat of a mystery.
